Although, by mid November, Hagie eventually received DRA results, they only listed the levels and not the actual DRA reports, which had been previously requested. Then, after a couple of failed attempts to have a second meeting, a follow-up meeting was eventually held on January 22, 2007, since the issues involving the scheduling of the students and the use of pull-out methods by Ziznewski had not been satisfied or reconciled. Ziznewski did choose to speak at that meeting, which was also attended by ETEA president, Myron Fouratt in place of the building representative, Diane Keane. At the outset of that meeting, Ziznewski once again challenged the authority and validity of Hagie and Capraro to oversee her BSI program, which issue was immediately clarified by Dr. Traficante. She also questioned the necessity of reading specialists to complete a DRA report and, in the process, she gave a lengthy presentation on her opposing viewpoint. She questioned the reliability of the DRA even though she was told that the assessment was required by all reading specialists (P-5). She never produced the lesson plans and, instead, she asked Fouratt whether she had to show her lesson plans to the supervisors at all. He indicated that he was to explore that matter further even though the supervisors indicated that they could review the plans of all tenured and non-tenured teachers.

Further training was conducted with the reading specialists and all of the teachers after the start of the 2007-2008 school year. On September 28, 2007, both elementary supervisors and Deborah Bredahl conducted a meeting with the reading specialists and the literacy development teachers (LDTs), at which time the documentation and program materials for the BSI program were shared with the parties along with a specific instruction regarding the use of the DRA as the uniform learning assessment tool. The expectation was for the DRA to be produced at the end of each marking period for all Summer Literacy Academy/BSI students. They were also instructed in writing that all reading specialists should be working with their students by October 15 (P-11) and that it was expected that all data generated with reference to the affected children should be presumptively available for review at that time. In fact, on October 3, 2007, Hagie and Capraro wrote to the reading specialists and LDTs, at which time they were given further instructions and clarifications regarding all of the students from each school to whom they were signed in order to make sure that there was no question about who would be included in the BSI programming and assigned to them. Yet, just two days later, on October 5, 2007, Young wrote to Bredahl and advised that Ziznewski was not working closely with the first grade teachers regarding the students assigned from their classes to her and was challenging the need and requirement to take those assigned students. It was indicated that she did not plan to take those additional students and she stated that it was her entitlement to decide whom to take into the program (P-13).

Thereafter, on October 26, 2007, third grade teacher Kerry Peters wrote to Young and expressed upset with having been screamed at by Ziznewski while she was in the middle of instruction in her classroom with her students. At that time Ziznewski challenged the need to service the Peters children (P-22). She reappeared later at the same classroom and became argumentative with Peters, all which was once again conducted in the presence and hearing of her students. Peters felt demeaned and humiliated by the actions of Ziznewski.

She was also aware that the second grade teacher Jennifer Figueroa had complained in January, 2008, about the lack of attention to her identified BSI students by Ziznewski. One student A.P., who had been in the Summer Literacy Academy and had been recommended by his first grade teacher for BSI assistance, and who was, pursuant to the reports of Figueroa, one of the poorest readers in her class in second grade, was nonetheless unilaterally dropped from the BSI program in September by Ziznewski because she had claimed that he was a good reader (P-26). Subsequently, Ziznewski apparently and purportedly tested A.P. on December 11, 2007, after which time she nonetheless failed to advise any faculty as to the results which, according to Ziznewski, was in direct contrast to the previous assessment levels which Figuaroa had scored for him. None of that information was ever shared by Ziznewski with the faculty prior to a confrontational meeting which took place on January 16, 2008, at which time Ziznewski invited herself to the staff meeting with the parent and acted acted arbitrary, rude and unprofessional with the staff there (P-28).

On March 4, 2008, Hagie was still forced to remind Ziznewski to send in her DRA reports for all children who had attended the 2007 Summer Literacy Academy as well as the recently assessed levels of her assigned BSI students (P-36 and 37). Those results had been due at the end of January, 2008. Although she eventually sent in the levels of the assessments, she nonetheless failed to send the DRA reports even though she had been so instructed. This failure denied Hagie the opportunity to timely monitor those children. Further, at the same time, Hagie was told by Young that Ziznewski was now advising that she could not service any of her students even at this late date until she completed her assessment assignment. Hagie felt that Ziznewski should have submitted the report in January and yet, by that admission to Young, she had yet to complete the January assessments, which represented a gross violation of her responsibility. Hagie felt compelled to put Ziznewski on notice regarding her requirement and responsibility to perform ongoing assessments of her students and to maintain accurate records of the information derived (P-41). Ziznewski's response was to make it clear to Young that Hagie was "not her boss" and that she did not believe in the assessment (P-42). Hagie viewed this as being insubordinate conduct by her. Young then ordered Ziznewski to provide Hagie with six samples of DRAs from first grade and six samples from the second grade. When she was finally given the opportunity to review the samples, Hagie found huge discrepancies of up to a full year from Ziznewski's results versus the daily results of the Summer Literacy Academy teachers as well as the running records of the classroom teachers generated during the class year (P-52). She did an extensive charting of the students from their respective matriculations commencing in the autumn of 2006 through the mid year of 2008 for the ten students, all of whom who had been at-risk pupils from the Summer Literacy Academy program from Marshall School and were all BSI students, as a result of which she made the observations and determined the findings regarding the significant differences between Ziznewski's results and those of all of the other teachers. In the process, she indicated that she had more faith in the results of the reporting from the Summer Literacy Academy since that reporting was done every day for a three week period of time, during which time they were using the same testing instrument all the time. She also noted that the first marking period ended in the second week in November, 2007 but she did not receive the DRAs from Ziznewski until well after it, even though other reading specialists had given her their results in a timely fashion.

The significant contrast in the testing results demonstrated the following. Regarding J.B., Ziznewski had tested him out at the two to three grade reading level, even though the running record placed him only at the first grade level. His otherwise tested lack of progress was consistent with the results obtained the year before. She concluded that the Ziznewski levels were highly elevated and that it was impossible to have achieved such success given his history. The overall conclusion was that the Ziznewski results were inaccurate and inappropriate for this child. They were not believable since two years of classroom teachers and the summer DRA's by other teachers were totally to the contrary.

Regarding A.P., through the the first grade he was still a very weak learner. Yet, Ziznewski found him to be at the three to four grade level versus the other teachers who recorded him as being only at the first grade level. Once again, it was her conclusion that the Ziznewski results were tremendously inflated based upon A.P.'s lack of real progress. Further, A.P. was not even picked up for BSI services by Ziznewski in September, 2007, despite his low scores to date.

The child X.T. was found to be one full year apart on the learning level and his classroom performance did not reflect the Ziznewski test results.

The child S.A. was in the second grade but Ziznewski recorded him as being in the third to fourth grade level, which Hagie found to be inappropriate for this child.

The child L.A. was only in grade two at the end of the spring 2007 but was recorded as been in the fourth grade level by Ziznewski.

The child K.V. exhibited almost a year's difference by the end of 2007 with Ziznewski's results being inflated and elevated.

Another child named A.P. experienced one to one and a half grade level differences, with the Ziznewski results being the inflated test results. At the same time, she conceded that only the children A.K. and G.S. were found to have more consistent test results since they were at least found to at least be in the same grade year, although Hagie nonetheless still noted a significant deviation within the year's span for each of them. Overall, the Ziznewski test results did not give the district the correct reporting of information in order to provide appropriate services for these children or to even properly determine whether the correct children were still receiving services since most of her recorded reading levels would have caused those children to be removed from the BSI program even though they nonetheless still needed such services. Reading specialists deal with the most "at-risk" children and she was not reliable in reporting information about them. Further, if Ziznewski was reporting the students at inappropriately elevated DRA levels, then she was not providing instruction to them on the appropriate levels with the educational materials that she reported that was using at the time. This would illustrate Ziznewski's inappropriate base line for purposes of instruction.

In addition, she was also not following Edison's BSI instructional mandate. She continued to challenge the use of the Lindamood Bell program as late as February 5, 2008 (P-34) and she still persisted in requesting additional copies of novels for use with her assigned children, even though as a reading specialist, her direct instruction time was limited each week and her time was "meant to be spent meeting the assessed needs of the BSI children to support their acquisition and the use of the skills and strategies to become more proficient readers", according to Hagie in response to her request for them on February 7, 2008 (P-35).

Problems regarding the reporting by Ziznewski started in the 2006-2007 year, when the second reporting phase was due. At that time Hagie first observed rather high, and therefore suspicious, test results being generated by Ziznewski. However, since it was the first year in which they used the new testing instruments, she did nothing to intercept her at that stage regarding those high scores. However, early in 2006 and prior to her discovery of the testing discrepancies being generated by Ziznewski, there was a general staff meeting to discuss the DRA's and the approach that Edison's supervisors intended to take regarding their administration and execution.

But, by October 23, 2006, even though Hagie was reluctant to express her evolving concerns about the elevated test scores being recorded by Ziznewski, the two supervisors found that no student instruction had been yet started by Ziznewski, which was another significant problem. As a result, Hagie and Capraro wanted a meeting with her to review her teaching status with the children assigned to her (P-4). Ziznewski had approximately 50 students assigned to her that first year. This was a serious concern since all indications were that instruction was being denied by Ziznewski by as early as the third week in September, 2006. Her first responsibility was the administration of the DRA's for her first and second grade students, which were to be coupled with the running records. The running records were utilized as assessments for the kindergarten through second grade students and these concepts were not new to the district. They had already been around for approximately eight years and there were many workshops conducted regarding its use and implementation. The running record as part of the assessment of a reading ability is a snapshot in order to evaluate comprehension, fluency, and the decoding of different types of compound words. and it involves reading behaviors to help the classroom teacher know what to teach. The DRA has a stronger basis to determine fluency and comprehension. The building principal assigns the children to the reading specialist based upon the recommendations of the respective classroom teachers, and the reading specialist then establishes the scheduling of push-in sessions with each child. Reading instruction is supposed to begin by the third week in September, at which time the principal then signs off on the individual reading specialist schedules. Concurrent with the introduction of the DRA concept, Fountas and Pinnell became the standardized, published leveling system of all books used by the Edison and was meant to correct the system used by Edison up to the time, which had not been consistent across the board (P-53).

Several concerns were generated early on in the 2006-2007 school year about, which necessitated a meeting with Ziznewski in order to discuss the instruction provided to students who would be identified for BSI at Marshall. The meeting was called by the supervisors was conducted with Ziznewski, Young, and Diane Keane, on October 25, 2006, the results of which were reported by Hagie in her letter memo to the parties dated October 25, 2006 (P-5). Hagie was genuinely upset with the conduct exhibited by Ziznewski, which included her refusal to answer any questions, the fact that she unilaterally determined to tape record the proceeding, the use of the Post-it Notes by her, her challenge to their authority as supervisors over her, as well as her refusal to provide any of the requested items (i.e., the lesson plan book or copies of the DRAs administered to students who had attended the Summer Literacy Academy). In addition, Hagie noted that, not only did Ziznewski not even begin to meet with her students until October 16, but, according to Young at that meeting, all instruction to date had been in a pull-out setting, despite the program guidelines and the preference of Young that Ziznewski push-in to first grade classrooms. Once again, she stressed that Ziznewski did not confirm or deny those statements at the meeting.

She noted that the 2007-2008 school year began with a written instruction from Hagie and Capraro to all of the reading specialists and literacy development teachers on October 3, 2007, in which they were advised that the reporting of the DRA levels for all children who had attended the 2007 Summer Literacy Academy were due for each marking period, as opposed to all other students who were to have their DRA's done only in January and June of the year (P-12). Barely two days later, she was already aware that Young was complaining about the attitude of Ziznewski, who had come screaming into his office the day before and claimed that she was being harassed by fellow teacher Mrs. Sica and that she did not plan to take additional students. Hagie understood that Ziznewski's acts constituted a willful failure to provide services to designated students. She was also not working closely with the first, second and third grade teachers regarding the BSI students who had been selected for that year (P-13). She subsequently became aware of concerns being generated by third grade teacher Kerri Peters, who complained to Young about several upsetting encounters she had with Ziznewski on October 22, 2007 (P-22). Hagie expected Young to follow up with any problems with her accordingly. She later became aware of further complaints against Ziznewski which were brought by A.P.'s classroom teacher, Jennifer Figueroa, in January, 2008, relative to her failure to adequately serve as the BSI needs of A.P. (P-59), as well as by Young after Ziznewski acted highly unprofessionally and negatively at a meeting which Figueroa had attended along with the mother of A.P. in January, 2008 (P-28).

In addition, Ziznewski was supposed to provide her DRA reports by January, 2008, but Hagie was forced to ask for them on March 4, 2008 (P-36), which she only got by March 17. However, in the process, Dr. Traficante was forced to give Ziznewski three days away for her reading specialist teaching assignment in order to complete them. Although other teachers have also been periodically excused from instruction to complete assessments, none of them have ever been excused in order to complete a report. This type of lack of timely filing has never occurred before in Edison, according to Hagie. She put Ziznewski on notice about her failings in that regard accordingly on March 7, 2008 (P-41). Thus, it was only upon receipt of that information late in the school year that she was able to begin her charting of the ten students who had been assigned to Ziznewski at which time she was able to determine the huge discrepancies in the test score results by Ziznewski versus the other teachers, as noted hereinabove (P-52). Thus, although she had had some evolving concerns about some of those students somewhere in the mid fall 2007, she was not able to compare the results adequately until receipt of the data in March, 2008, at which time she was then able to see the true discrepancies, which she characterized as being much more outlandish than any other instructors' assessments in other unrelated students' matters where some minor discrepancies had been noted by her. And, in any case and adding to her concerns about Ziznewski's overall performance, she has never been provided with the DRA reports (i.e., the actual reading assessments) of any of the students from Ziznewski at any time despite her requests to the contrary. She has only received the levels from her for the Spring 2007 and in Spring 2008. Further, Ziznewski persisted in challenging her authority as being her supervisor or "boss" when Ziznewski complained to Young on March 10, 2008, at which time she made it clear to Young that Hagie was "not her boss" and that she did not believe in the assessment. Further, Ziznewski had indicated to Young, as he described it, "strongly," that she would not respond to Hagie's memo that she had directed to her. Rather, Ziznewski insisted that Young be her "messenger." (P-42).

Jennifer Figueroa

Jennifer Figueroa has been employed by Edison as a second grade teacher at the Marshall School since September, 1999. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree in psychology from Rutgers University (Livingston College) in 1995 and thereafter received her certification as an elementary education teacher at Keane University in 1996. Her first two years at Edison were spent as a first grade teacher, after which she moved on to and has remained a second grade teacher. She teaches all subjects in her class which averages 21 to 22 students per class. Some of her students receive BSI. She has no aides in her classroom this year, although she has had aides there in prior years. She described her classroom environment as having the typical noisy and quiet times, although she tries to maintain a focus throughout the day. Her policy is that if any adults do come in, she expects them to maintain a quiet demeanor and to be as low key as possible in order to avoid distracting the children.

She has known Ziznewski in her capacity as a reading specialist at Marshall for four years. On October 9, 2006, she complained to Young about having been bullied by Ziznewski after she had had two encounters with her on September 28 and October 6, 2006 (P-155), and overall she had felt uncomfortable about the outcome.

The first incident occurred around 9:30 AM at which time Ziznewski unexpectedly came into her classroom and motioned for Figueroa's paraprofessional, Dawn Normant, to go into the hall with her, after about five minutes of which the conversation there between the two of them there became loud enough to disrupt her class. As a result, Figueroa was forced to go over and closed the door to block the sounds. When Normant returned, she told Figueroa that Ziznewski had asked Normant to go into the hall to discuss Ziznewski's health problems. Figueroa felt it had been a distraction to her students but she did not say anything about it to Ziznewski at the time.

However, later that day and after school, at approximately 4:00 PM, Ziznewski entered the library at a time when Figueroa was speaking to fellow teacher Ami Hoffman. When Figuaroa completed her discussion with Hoffman, she moved on to speak to Ziznewski after she verified there was no one else in sight, at which time she told her "Carol, I don't appreciate what happened this morning. Don't come to my classroom and take people out of the room. You interrupted instruction time and you take services away from my students." Her voice was calm but firm. Ziznewski responded in a raised voice: "It's not like I do this all the time so I don't see what the big deal is." They both exchanged some additional basic comments in an elevated voice and the interaction ended. However, at approximately 4:15, Ziznewski sought her out and approached Figueroa while she was in another teacher's room and asked to speak to her privately. They adjourned to Figueroa's classroom at which point Ziznewski "chewed" her out in an elevated voice about the manner in which Figuaroa had approached her originally. At that point, Ziznewski tried to close the door and Figueroa said that she did not feel comfortable with the door closed, so she proceeded to open it. Figuaroa did not like the raised tone of Ziznewski's voice or being trapped in her own classroom. Ziznewski then yelled at her: "If this was such a problem you should have told Dawn to come back in." Figuaroa responded: "I would think that closing the door would give you a hint." They exchanged additional heated comments, during which Ziznewski got defensive and eventually walked out after Figueroa's husband momentarily popped into the classroom to pick her up for dinner. Figueroa was upset about the encounter and immediately notified Young about that incident.

This was not the first time that Ziznewski had yelled at Figueroa and had caused her embarrassment and upset. During the 2004-2005 school year, Figueroa, in addition to her classroom duties, was also assigned as an authorized computer technician at Marshall. At some point, Ziznewski had a student bring a note to her classroom and interrupted her during her instructions near the end of the day. Figueroa diverted her attention and gave a basic solution reply so that she could return to her class instruction. But then Ziznewski popped in and yelled at her that it was a problem with her printer, which incident occurred in front of the students, Mrs. Normant, and the special education teacher, Judy Richmond. Figueroa was speechless but then recomposed herself and offered to get a free moment to address Ziznewski's problem. The actions by Ziznewski embarrassed her to be yelled at by another adult in the front of the children. She felt that this could confuse the second graders and she also felt that Ziznewski was totally unprofessional. Figueroa does not believe in yelling at children. It is humiliating for the affected child and inappropriate for other children to also hear it. Thus, she was concerned for them being affected by this conduct by Ziznewski. Figueroa was so directly upset by that incident and the outlandish conduct by Ziznewski that she determined to quit her computer technical job at the end of the school year. At that point, Ziznewski was not yet assigned as the reading specialist for Figueroa's classes so she was able to avoid any further contact with her except as part of the I&RS Committee.

However, the second incident which caused her to speak directly with Young occurred on October 6, 2006, at which time Figueroa had wanted a child in her class (R.B.) to have BSI services after she had run her own running record which demonstrated the need for it. By that time, Ziznewski was assigned as the only reading specialist at Marshall to do those services, so Figuaroa approached her to get those services for the child. As she intended to explain the need, Ziznewski constantly interrupted her and cut her off. She then stated to Figueroa: "My schedule is full. I have too many students." (P-155 at page 530). Ziznewski refused to service the students in her inclusion class. In attempting to continue that part of the conversation, Ziznewski told her that years ago an inclusion class would not receive BSI services. Ziznewski then indicated that she wanted an observer present but rejected Young as being that observer. Ziznewski had a confrontational attitude with her at that time. Figuaroa was upset. She felt intimidated being talked at the way she was and was also upset that a child who had dire need would not be getting needed services and in a timely fashion. Although R.B. eventually did get services by November, he, like the other students who had need at the time, were denied such services for the two months of September and October. This further upset her since struggling students were not getting help in a timely fashion. In addition, she was forced to provide services by herself within the classroom, which meant taking time away from other students in the process. That last confrontation with Ziznewski made her feel uncomfortable approaching her about any other children's needs anymore. On October 9, 2006, Figueroa requested Young to convene an Affirmative Action Investigation regarding the actions by Ziznewski in bullying and harassing her on more than one occasion (P-176 at page 596). Although she eventually was directed to Assistant Superintendent Dr. Banks as a result of her complaint, she has no idea what happened with her request for an investigation, although the results of that request by her are contained in the report of the assistant superintendent, which involved complaints from others as well (P-155).

Ziznewski never approached her again for the rest of that school year until May, 2007, at which time an issue arose regarding the child S.A., whom Ziznewski found to be two grade levels above Figueroa's assessment and whom Figuaroa had recommended for the Summer Literacy Academy. Figueroa had determined him to be level H, while Ziznewski determined him to be at level 38-P., which is equivalent to the third and fourth grade level. Figueroa knew the child as having been new to the district and she had had dialogue with his parents about him during the course of that year. As a result, and having seen him every day that year, she knew that he could not have gone from a starting point of kindergarten to first grade (when she received him into her class at the giving of the year) to Ziznewski's reported 3-4 grade level in one year.

As a result, when the school year 2007-2008 began, she felt it necessary to write a letter to Young on October 29, 2007 (P-176 at page 594) regarding the need to provide BSI services for a student who had been identified as having been a struggling reader, being the child A.P., by both his first grade teacher on her exit evaluation at the end of the school year, as well as because of his attendance at the subsequent Summer Literacy Academy. She did not go directly to Ziznewski about getting the services in light of her experience with Ziznewski's confrontational attitude the year before as well as having overheard Ziznewski yell at students the year before in a confrontational tone as well is in the hallway, which actions and noises adversely affect classroom instruction. Instead, she wrote to Ziznewski on October 12, 2007 (P-176 at page 595) and asked Ziznewski if they could jointly meet with Young to discuss the concern about her BSI students since Figuaroa understood from her colleagues that Ziznewski had already begun services for their children but not hers. She noted that she had been compelled to seek the intervention of Young regarding any further contacts with her because Ziznewski's overall attitude had created such anxiety in Figueroa that she was forced to undergo medical attention for headaches and stomach problems as a result of the stresses and hostile work environment to which Ziznewski has persistently subjected her over time. But instead of coordinating with the presence of Young, Ziznewski unilaterally popped in and interrupted her during her classroom instruction on October 12. But Ziznewski never then engaged the issue further with Young and Figueroa, despite their efforts thereafter. Ziznewski stated that she had no BSI students in Figueroa's class, which was incorrect since the students A.P. and P.S. had been identified as such there. And it was the responsibility of the reading specialist to contact the classroom teacher about servicing specific students, which Ziznewski failed to do. Suzanne Capraro later confirmed the qualifications of A.P. and P.S. to receive those services in the one on one meeting which Capraro had with Figueroa on November 13, 2007 (P-25). And Young never said that Ziznewski did not have to service either of the students or that they did not require services.

Regarding P.S., Figueroa had performed a running record on him and had observed him repeatedly, and, in the process, she noted that his problem was comprehension and, as a result, he had a strong need for BSI. When he never got it at all from Ziznewski, Figueroa determined to spend extra time with him, which took time away from her other class responsibilities and which forced her to avoid other children who are more up to grade level. She felt that someone had to suffer in order to assist this child and that translated into the other children not receiving the full benefit of their own services because of her need to divert her resources. In January, 2008, P.S. was reassessed and he had made such sufficient gains from her efforts that he no longer need BSI.

She also challenged the findings of Ziznewski regarding A.P., whose DRA on him indicated that he was a level 28 which is equivalent to the third grade. Figuaroa did not find that believable because he was a struggling reader who had come into her second grade class reading at the first grade level. He had also been a Summer Literacy Academy student the summer before. He had had problems with fluency (i.e., "reading like you speak", as she described it). He was limited to reading word by word and slowly. As a result, his comprehension had suffered. When Figueroa failed to get reading specialist services for him from Ziznewski, she gave him more attention herself, which, once again, was to the detriment of the others in her class. She noted that Ziznewski never approached her to give A.P. any services even though he was mandated to have them. And the same time, Figueroa never understood that Ziznewski had too many students and that, as result, she could not service A.P. accordingly. Nor did Ziznewski ever show up any of the initial meetings which were scheduled to discuss him. Figuaroa was also at the meeting on January 17, 2008, at which time Young ordered Ziznewski to immediately provide services for A.P. in her BSI program for two days a week (P-28). It was at that meeting that Ziznewski "interceded" and contradicted both of the teachers, Figueroa and special education teacher Sandy Pellicane, in front of A.P.'s mother and stated that her analysis of him was that he was a good reader, even though she had not worked with him that year (other than purported testing on December 11, 2007, which in any case she never shared her test results with any of the teachers.). In addition, she had absolutely no supporting documentation to reflect her viewpoint. Ziznewski also criticized Figuaroa's work in front of the parent and claimed that A.P. might have other problems. That surprised Figueroa since there was no other information supplied about any other needs by Ziznewski. Figueroa knew that he did not have any hearing problems or any learning disabilities since she had checked with the school nurse and knew there were no such deficiencies. And, curiously, although Ziznewski claimed that A.P. was a good reader, she also indicated that she intended to bring up his case to the I&RS Committee which, according to Figueroa, appeared to be a direct contradiction. After that meeting on January 17, 2008, of equal concern to Figueroa was the fact that even though Young had ordered BSI services to be started, Ziznewski did not initiate them until two weeks later and never provided the BSI schedule to Figueroa, even though she is supposed to provide it. Instead, for the rest of the year someone would do a "pop-in" for Ziznewski at the Figueroa classroom to get him for the pull-out BSI sessions with Ziznewski.

Finally, Figuaroa attended a Marshall School staff meeting on February 14, 2008, at which time several of the teachers expressed specific concerns regarding what they perceived as being bullying, harassments and intimidating behavior by Ziznewski, her determination to pick and choose students with whom she would work based upon her own personal teacher relationships and ideologies, as well as for her failure to comply with Edison instructional policy and BSI programming (P-178).

It is noted that during the course of the cross-examination of Figueroa (who counsel for the district had advised was pregnant) on December 9, 2008, she became so emotionally distraught with what she said were facial expressions being made by Ziznewski and directed at her at the hearing that this tribunal had to take a brief recess in order for her to recompose herself, this occurring after the tribunal had previously instructed counsel for Ziznewski to have her refrain from making any facial gestures at any witnesses (none of which was observed by this tribunal since I was focused on compiling my bench notes and examining exhibits at the time). It is also noted that this was the second instruction which had to be given to counsel since, during the course of a prior examination of Joan Hagie in November, Hagie had also expressed upset and emotional distress with what she perceived as being threatening facial gestures by Ziznewski at her. As a result of the second warning, in which this tribunal suggested that one remedy would be to remove Ziznewski from the courtroom but allow her to listen in through a live audio transmission in another courtroom, her counsel volunteered another solution, which was to have Ziznewski turn her chair around 180° and face away from both the bench and the witness box during the remaining examination of Figueroa, which was done. The remaining part of the Figueroa examination continued on in that fashion.

On cross examination she indicated that, although a one level difference of opinion regarding the skills of a child is a possibility, the classroom teacher's opinion usually controls the need for BSI. And, except for her problems with Ziznewski, she has never had any such disputes with any other teacher. She was forced to go to Young in order to get a resolution of the conflict over her two recommended students for BSI, at which time Young decided in favor of Figueroa's determinations and directed Ziznewski to take her students.

Kathleen A. Sica

Kathleen Sica is a regular education first grade teacher employed by Edison at the Marshall School and has been employed since 1995. A 1975 graduate of Trenton State College (now, The College of New Jersey), she was previously employed by the Rahway Board of Education for twelve years, where she taught grades kindergarten, three, six, and basic skills for three years. While at Rahway, she worked with BSI kindergarten through second grade students in reading and shared a special class there with two other BSI teachers during that phase of her teaching assignments. She possesses a certification in elementary education (K through eight) and has taken fifteen credits in professional development education courses. She was voted "teacher of the year" at Marshall five years ago. In 2006-2007, her class included special education students and other students in need of services in addition to her regular education students.. The special education students did a pull-out in the morning session and a special education teacher did a push-in in the afternoon session. During the 2007-2008 school year, the class was an inclusion class, which consisted of Sica, an aide for one special education student, and the special education teacher for all of her special education students.

As a classroom teacher at Edison, she has participated in identifying children in need of BSI, which occurs at the beginning of the school year, when the classroom teachers must do assessments and perform running records. Reading inventories are most useful to assist in an analysis of identifying the children who may be struggling. She has conducted this type of analysis on an annual basis since 1995. She recalled that on November 13, 2007, she met with supervisor Suzanne Capraro to discuss the criteria for her being part of the BSI program. Her concern was that certain students met the criteria but were not been provided such services at that time, including the child identified as A.G.. Her concern was that Ziznewski was supposed to be servicing them and, although she had given Ziznewski a list of such students early on in the class year, she never got a response from her. She had also spoken to Ziznewski about A.G., who was the only one of her class whom she did not take.

However, on October 7, 2007, Ziznewski challenged her at a meeting held then about the need to provide services at which time Ziznewski stated that she already had enough students in her classroom. The meeting took place in Ziznewski's room, at which time Sica felt it was necessary to bring in another teacher, Mrs. Garabatto (a first grade teacher) to be a witness since Ziznewski had previously been hostile to Sica. That meeting began with Ziznewski yelling at her that the assessments were invalid, even though Sica merely wanted it to know why A.G. wasn't being taken. She never even got an answer from her at that meeting. Sica left the meeting upset because she had been treated unprofessionally by Ziznewski and she never showed her any reason why A.G. should not have been taken. She complained to Young on the same day about the way she was treated by Ziznewski (P-176 that page 588) because she felt that Ziznewski had been disapproving, argumentative, and hostile to her, which caused her a great deal of stress and which resulted in her need to seek medical attention. Sica then participated in an Affirmative Action Investigation regarding Ziznewski in October, 2007 based upon that confrontation (P-176). At that time she not only discussed what had transpired regarding A.G. on October 7, 2007, but she also recited the interactions she had had with Ziznewski prior thereto during the weeks of September 21 and September 28, 2007 (P-176 at pages 589 through 591).

During the week of September 21, 2007, Ziznewski was negative and argumentative with her after Sica had left a list of five students in her school mailbox whom she felt needed BSI. In a negative manner, Ziznewski entered her classroom and announced something about not taking all five, if any, of her five students. And then toward the end of that same week, Ziznewski stated to her in an argumentative manner that Sica's student's and should not be serviced by BSI since Sica had extra help in her class. In numerous disapprovingly loud responses, Ziznewski then rambled on and on about a document which purportedly stated that Sica's students would not be serviced by her since she already had extra help in her class (even other instructors had specific assignments for certain students). She never produced the document she was referring to and the more Sica asked her what she meant, the louder and more aggressive became the responses by Ziznewski. She felt hostile tension emanating from Ziznewski and was so upset that she reported the incident to Young the next day.

The week of September 28, 2007 represented another difficult and upsetting series of encounters with Ziznewski. During Sica's review of several student individual folders, she discovered a document in the file of W.R. which indicated that he had been referred to the I&RS Committee in kindergarten at his previous school. When she shared that information with Ziznewski the next day, Sica was told by her that she hadn't seen it in the office file and appeared annoyed about the new information. Later that day, Sica had another confrontation with Ziznewski about her students, during which time Sica described Ziznewski's responses as being "condescending" and her behavior as being "unprofessional and abusive" after Ziznewski engaged in a "disapproving rampage" about the assessment being unreliable and invalid (P-176 at page 590). At some point during that exchange, Sica felt it necessary to take a few physical steps backwards, yet only to be "badgered" again with additional comments from Ziznewski about assessments, criteria and other matters. Sica tried to keep her composure, took a breath, crossed her hands on her stomach, and faced Ziznewski, at which time Ziznewski mocked her. Although, at some point, Ziznewski apologized she did so by referring to her displeasure with her assessments, which, according to Sica, no one had ever criticized other than Ziznewski. She described this incident as illustrating how it was impossible to communicate with Ziznewski on any level, and it was further demonstrated by another incident a couple of days later in which Ziznewski rolled her eyes and looked away from Sica in an annoyed fashion as Sica was attempting to clarify an incident which was then ensuing between some boys and girls in the bathroom area.

Sica also noted that B.V. and A.G. were also the subject of her concern and appeared to be a good fit for BSI in accordance with the guidelines which they had received in 2007 (P-25). But A.G. never got BSI services through Ziznewski the entire year so Sica responded by servicing him herself and she also got the after-school literacy academy involved since he was a struggling reader and could only read one word at a time. But in the process, she did not initially press Young about her concerns because she understood that Young was having his own issues with Ziznewski even early on in that school year and, further, because she felt that, at least in the case of A. G., she was providing at least some basic services for him along with the after-school academy. He had been readily accepted into that program since he needed substantial services. The previous year he had gotten ESL and had a maximum need for support. He also later attended the Summer Literacy Academy after that year with Sica. A.G. remains a struggling reader even to this day.

She also challenged Ziznewski's announced use of "batch testing" regarding several of her recommended students in November, 2007, including A.G.(P-24). Batch testing is not used to determine entitlement for BSI since it does not give a broad view of the students' individual reading needs. Ziznewski's use of batch testing for A.G. claimed that A.G. was above the cut off line for such services. However, it only demonstrated the Ziznewski was wrong. Sica saw the ongoing need for him in her classroom. She never understood why Ziznewski refused to take A.G. at all since all of the data and running records pointed to the contrary. In fact, his running record, which Sica performed in April, 2008, revealed that he only tested out as being "E" under Fountas and Pinnell, which meant that he was at the beginning of first grade even at that late date (P-96). The running record is based upon the objective analysis and the questions are so clearly asked that it does not allow for interpretation.

On cross examination, she admitted that she did not recall how many times she had met with Ziznewski regarding students during the 2006-2007 school year. However, during the 2007-2008 school year, they met approximately five to six times during which times there were confrontation between them most of the time as she attempted to discuss and focus in on certain students. Ultimately, Ziznewski took all of her students except for A.G. Prior to the 2007-2008 school year, she had never filed any formal complaints against Ziznewski but felt compelled to do so at that time because of her actions which kept escalating during that school year. It got so bad that Sica preferred not to go past Ziznewski's room in order to avoid any potential confrontations. She and many of the other staff attempted to avoid her for the same reason. Since the departure of Ziznewski from the school this year there has been no shouting by other teachers in the hallway and the overall atmosphere has been calm and cooperative.

Mary Schaefer

Mary Schaefer is employed by Edison as a first grade teacher. She received her Bachelor's degree in elementary education from Keane University in 2000 and her Master's degree in reading and fluency from Northern University in 2006. She began her employment at Edison in September, 2001 as a long-term substitute teacher. Thereafter, she became a fulltime teacher commencing in September, 2002 at Marshall School and has been assigned there continuously as a first grade teacher. She possesses a New Jersey certification in elementary education for the grades K through 8.

She got to know Ziznewski, who came to Marshall as a reading specialist in 2004, at which time Ziznewski had students from Schaefer's class assigned to her for BSI instruction. Commencing in that first year of interaction, Ziznewski sent a memo to Schaefer on November 19, 2004, at which time Ziznewski disagreed with the various prior year's teacher referrals or the recommendations by Schaefer for BSI instruction for various students (P-1). Schaefer did not agree or disagree with Ziznewski at the time. The school had just started in the district for the year and she wanted the opportunity to assess the parents, get her own assessments of her students, and verify what it meant to "exit" students, as suggested by Ziznewski in her memo. However, she was surprised that, after having had prior basic discussions with Ziznewski regarding the students, Ziznewski manifested these early positions regarding the non need for BSI instruction of the students. Schaefer wanted to see the actual tests and not just the results, but Ziznewski said it was confidential as to each child. She then relented but only showed Schaefer one child's test. But then, she was surprised to see that Ziznewski only showed her a California test, known as a C. B. test, which was very old. She later found out that the Terra Nova testing would have been more appropriate, and when Ziznewski found out about that she became very upset with Schaefer and yelled at her for ten minutes in Ziznewski's room. She then persisted by following Schaefer on into the hall where she continued to shout at her. At one point she kept yelling at her and stated that this was the sole criteria and "this is how it is!" Ziznewski never did show her the test results of the other five students even though Schaefer wanted to see those tests and how they were being administered by her. She also wanted to know whether there was a verbal component in them. In addition, Ziznewski refused to service three of her students after November 29, 2004. As a result, on November 30, 2004, Schaefer wrote to Young about the need to keep the three students in BSI at least through midyear in order to ensure a secure foundation for them and to increase their confidence levels (P-2). But they were nonetheless exited out at the end of November after Young determined they should come out since he claimed that their scores looked pretty good, to which Schaefer objected. She nonetheless went along with his decision. She had no other disagreements with Ziznewski during the 2004-2005 school year and no further contact with her then. But she did not feel that Ziznewski was collaborative (which Schaefer steadfastly believes in) and Ziznewski routinely employed and possessed a verbal voice attack approach.

She had no interactions with her in the 2005-2006 school year, during which time Ziznewski did take all of her assigned students. She also avoided any interactions with her during the 2006-2007 school year, although she noted that during that year, the first grade hallway atmosphere where she worked was uncomfortable for everyone because Ziznewski was always yelling at some one there or from her room.

The 2007-2008 school year was a different matter, however. On October 5, 2007, Ziznewski entered her room during a lesson in order to pull four students to read a book to them. When Schaefer asked if the students were the BSI students that she should be taking and if any of those students were from the list that Schaefer had provided to her on October 2, Ziznewski became irritated and her voice started to rise in the immediate presence of the least one student. Schaefer felt uncomfortable with that scenario. She allowed Ziznewski to take four students with her, none of whom were the four she previously recommended or who had been recommended by their prior kindergarten teachers. Ziznewski returned twenty minutes later and wanted to engage in a discussion about the four Schaefer children, but again the time was not conducive to a conversation because Schaefer was right in the middle of a class instruction. During that brief conversation, however Ziznewski mentioned having assessed one of her new students, A.O., twice in September at which time Ziznewski had determined that A.O. did not qualify for extra help. However, Schaefer was surprised because she did not recall the child ever being pulled from her class to be assessed and, as a result, she privately wondered how she had made her determination. The conversation ended when Ziznewski suggested that Schaefer send her the assessments that she had completed on her students but told her to keep in mind that the running records were still not truly valid assessments. She later told Young that she felt uncomfortable working alone with Ziznewski inasmuch as she did not like the tension generated by her or the need to be defensive when presenting her student assessments. She also did not appreciate the condescending matter by and Ziznewski's reaction to her question about the students program, which she viewed to be "unsettling" (P-15) as well as her overall sarcastic tone with her (P-17).

On October 16, 2007, Schaefer wrote to Young and indicated that she had recommended four new students for BSI based upon her own assessments in addition to the four she recommended based upon the prior year's teacher recommendations but that Ziznewski never took them for servicing. The new students were E.H., D.J., A.O., and E.P. (P-60). Although D.J. was in the first grade, she assessed him as only being at the kindergarten reading level (P-69). Ziznewski did not take D.J. for BSI but she not know why, so Schaefer provided him with her own instruction. Regarding A.O., although she was in the first grade in October, 2007, she was only at the "A" (Fountas and Pinnell) reading level or kindergarten level (P-68) but Ziznewski failed to take her even though Schaefer put a note in her mail box at the beginning of the year requesting the services. On October 5, 2007, Ziznewski refused to take A.O. because she told her that she would have had too many students in her class as a result. Schaefer helped the child in an extra group of instruction which she supplied herself along with the other three students as a result and included that special group in her regular class day, thereby depriving other students of other instruction time.

E.P. was also at the "A" level and Ziznewski never taught her the initial requested BSI instruction even though the child was already having problems in that she lacked confidence as early as September, 2007 (P-99). And, although she did take her on later in the year she never shared any test results with Schaefer. Ziznewski was very negative and yelled at everyone or used sarcasm and condescending comments to her as well as others, in addition to the recited incident noted above. Schaefer even heard her yell at Young and other first grade teachers while children were present during school time as well as in after school settings where both parents and children still were about the building. She also refused to share test results. She never took the recommended child E.H. either, who was also at the bottom of the reading level along with the other three, but curiously and by contrast, Ziznewski did take children with higher reading levels, such as M. V., G.C., A.K., and R.U., all of whom had been on the original request list by Schaefer in addition to the above mentioned four students. Schaefer wrote to Young on January 17, 2008 (P-62) and expressed her observations about Ziznewski's selective determinations regarding whom she would teach.

In addition, she raised concerns about the inconsistencies in the BSI instruction that Ziznewski was giving since, even by that date in January, 2008, the students had not been receiving consistent instruction from her due to her either being absent, arriving late, or working on something else during the scheduled times. She also failed to provide any feedback regarding the students' progress. In that regard, Schaefer kept a running record of the absences and lateness of Ziznewski from the period of October 5, 2007 through January 18, 2008 (P-62 at page 154) on her own initiative and for her own personal records and peace of mind because she believed the services were needed for those children after the October 5 incident. In reviewing those records, she noted that she had calculated that Ziznewski was late 9 out of 37 sessions and was a "no show" 18 out of 37 sessions. She only provided ten full sessions of the 37 sessions. Ziznewski never approached her about making up either her lateness or no show sessions. Thereafter, starting in the January, 2008, Young told her to monitor Ziznewski's attendance thereafter. Although she found this to be uncomfortable, she nonetheless followed orders. The formalized typed up list was given to Young by her in January, 2008 (P-62), but the follow-up orders were only contained on her "sticky notes", which were not provided until March.

On cross examination, she conceded that some of the absence days were satisfactory, where workshops or child testing diversions were acceptable excuses for non attendance by Ziznewski. Yet, she noted that if Ziznewski chose to test one child, the others were nonetheless deprived of services by her and she never offered any makeup to compensate for that, even though it was Schaefer's understanding that she should have done so. At the same time, she acknowledged that she was aware of no protocol which would provide for makeup sessions if the reading specialist was absent due to illness.

When further scrutinized regarding her summary of the attendance record of Ziznewski, Schaefer noted that even if she was five minutes late for a session, Schaefer gave her full credit for the session, even though Ziznewski never offered to make up any of those times. She recorded her arrivals by using the classroom clock. Further, even though she did challenge Young at the beginning of the year about there only being 40 minute sessions two days a week, which is in violation of the Program Content Policy of Edison (P.-181), Young only told her to document the actual attendance of Ziznewski and not to bother herself with the apparent conflict in the district policy and school's schedule of services.

The child G.C. was another problem which Schaefer encountered with Ziznewski. Two meetings of the I&RS Committee were convened regarding her on January 24 and March 20, 2008. G.C. had not been a good reader in the Schaefer class so they had attempted a number of interventions after the January meeting to assist her, including a suggestion that earphones with music be employed. That procedure was tried for three days but was discontinued at the request of the parent in accordance her meeting which Schaefer on February 7, 2008. However, Ziznewski always said the G.C. had no difficulty reading but she presented no evidence to that effect at the January meeting. Further, Ziznewski never discussed any progress with Schaefer about the child. She acknowledged that, although it is okay for professionals to disagree at the I&RS Committee meetings, any disagreements should be backed up with appropriate documentation, none of which was ever supplied by Ziznewski despite her overt challenges to the team. In addition, it was her opinion that Ziznewski failed to provide any type of testing as late as March, 2008.

As a result, on January 28, 2008, Schaefer requested supplemental instruction for her (P-56) for even though she she had been assigned instruction from Ziznewski because there was still no progress noted in her by that point. She had been one of the four children for whom Ziznewski had failed to provide full services, pursuant to the running record of Ziznewski's abysmal attendance at her scheduled meetings, as noted hereinabove by Schaefer. As a result of that request, Jennifer Figueroa was assigned and commenced to provide after-school instruction for G.C. and collaborated with Schaefer in order to provide continuity for her, in marked contrast to the lack of such collaboration by Ziznewski up to that point.

After the I&RS Committee meeting in January, Schaefer scheduled a follow up meeting with the mother of G.C., which was held on February 7, 2008, which turned out to be an upsetting event for Schaefer. She was surprised and extremely uncomfortable that the mother surprisingly invited Ziznewski to attend, but Schaefer allowed the meeting to continue despite her discomfort and surprise. She felt ambushed by the manner in which Ziznewski verbally attacked her and questioned her about the use of the headphones in the presence of the parent, which, as noted above, was only attempted for three days before it was discontinued at the request of the parent. She was upset that Ziznewski, who was also a member of the I&RS Committee which had approved its use, failed to support the intervention recommendations of the committee. It was Ziznewski's "ambush" approach to challenging the use of the headphones with the parent present which particularly upset Schaefer. (P-57). Ziznewski was adamant about the use of the headphones, even though she had never brought up any problems with reference to the reading level of the child, never challenged the use of supplemental instructions or the use of the headphones at that committee meeting. Schaefer felt that the parent no longer trusted her as a result of that exchange. Later that day, she wrote to Ziznewski and requested a copy of the notes which she had written during that parent meeting, but she never got a response from her. (P-57 at page 143).

The I&RS Committee conducted a follow-up meeting on March 20, 2008, with the parent and which Schaefer characterized as being extremely stressful, uncomfortable and embarrassing. Ziznewski constantly interrupted the presentation by Schaefer about the child having difficulty in reading. She heavily verbally attacked her in front of the parent even though Schaefer, as well as the other staff members present, including Figueroa and Hoffman, among others, had significant documentation to support the ongoing lack of reading concerns and lack of progress of the child, while Ziznewski produced absolutely nothing. Schaefer felt that Ziznewski was heavily responsible for influencing the parent's distrust of her. But at the same time, Ziznewski admitted that she did not have any DRA's because she had not administered the assessments even at that late date. All she produced was a paper with six words which she represented was a writing sample. And, although Zisnewski then promised to complete the DRA by the next Monday and share it with the committee, she never did. In her opinion, Ziznewski did not appear to understand what the running record was. In addition, Ziznewski appeared to deflect the parent by encouraging the parent to bring in books that G.C. could purportedly read at home and have them compared by Ziznewski to what the school authorized to be used on her behalf, which Schaefer saw as being negative and contrary to the mandate of the I&RS Committee, as well as Edison policy. As a result, Ziznewski undermined the teachers' ability to work well with the parent. Ziznewski then proceeded to leave the meeting and steal away to her classroom with the parent, as if they were in collusion. Ziznewski never shared any follow-up information with either Schaefer or any other team member about the progress of G.C. at any time thereafter. Later, in May, 2008, there was a third I&RS Committee meeting with the parent, who had with her a member of her community. Ziznewski was no longer in the district by that time. That meeting went much better at which time the parties all agreed that G.C. had made some progress but that some work still needed to be done to assist her.The meeting was calmer and professional, even though there were still some barriers with the parent who persisted in not believing that her child needed help and who later strongly and negatively challenged the role of Schaefer in the process in a letter which she and her husband sent to Acting Superintendent DiMuzio on June 9, 2008 and which had been copied to Young (P-48). In response, Young sent his own letter to DiMuzio on June 11, 2008, in which he totally disagreed with the content of the parent letter and who suggested that Ziznewski had a personal vendetta against Schaefer and may have been involved in writing that extensive letter (P-49).

On cross examination, she admitted that, although her discomfort affected her ability to communicate with Ziznewski, she had no real fear for her own safety. Regarding the October 5, 2007 incident, she indicated that this was the only one to one confrontation she had with Ziznewski, but she indicated that she never engaged in any other meetings with her based upon her history, which went back to the one on one incident which occurred in 2004. Thus, she never discussed the needs of her children with her, although she contends that the needs of her students were never compromised by that failure to have any more direct one on one interaction with Ziznewski. Her focus continued to remain with them and she provided services for them in her class even though that caused an overload in her class in order to compensate for the lack of direct contact with Ziznewski. Although, on further cross-examination, she conceded that some of her total figures regarding the absences and tardiness of Ziznewski do not completely compute with the time that she jotted down at the time, she nonetheless felt that she was accurate in the recording of those times when Ziznewski failed to provide timely services to her students.

Kerry Peters

Kerry Peters is employed by Edison as a third grade teacher where she has been employed at the Marshall School since December, 2004, having first started there as a second grade teacher. Previous thereto, she had been a kindergarten through grade two teacher in the literacy enrichment program starting in September, 2003. She has been a third grade teacher since September, 2005. During the 2007-2008 school year, BSI was provided outside of her classroom by Ziznewski. However, although she had referred four additional students for BSI, including S.A., A.G., R.B., and Y.C., none ever got any services provided by Ziznewski. During the course of her efforts to get the attention of Ziznewski to provide such services, Ziznewski encountered her during unscheduled visits in her classroom during instructional time, which caused sizable disruptions in the classroom, and all such conversations lead Peters to believe that Ziznewski was not open to taking her recommendations into consideration when deciding which students would receive services (P-25).

On October 22, 2007, Ziznewski entered the Peters classroom twice on an unscheduled basis and disrupted instruction again. During the second of those two encounters, Ziznewski became argumentative by raising her voice whenever Peters attempted to explain her recommendations about S.A. and then vigorously pointed to the scores in order to emphasize her points. Peters became very uncomfortable when Ziznewski raised her voice and continued to speak at her in a condescending tone during that conversation. Peters felt so uneasy that her pulse began to race and she became unnerved. Students could hear the confrontation, after which Peters had "knots" in her stomach and was highly embarrassed and humiliated. She nonetheless forced her way through the remaining class even though she felt like she would otherwise have cried with upset. She viewed this as a hostile and highly unprofessional exchange. Ziznewski never agreed to take S.A. and never offered to collaborate with her regarding any of the other students either.

Later, on November 13, 2007, she had her scheduled professional conference with supervisor Suzanne Capraro, who reviewed her assessments regarding the children and agreed that all of them met the criteria for BSI, despite the elevated test results having been registered by Ziznewski. For example, although Peters had tested S.A. as being at the second grade level, Ziznewski determined him to be at the third/fourth grade level (P-52). She tested A.G. at the first to second grade level, while Ziznewski tested him at grades three and four. As a result, S.A. never got services from Ziznewski in 2007-2008, even though the BSI instruction was supposed to start two weeks after the start of school. And, although she agreed on cross examination that the reading specialist's recommendation has a role in the process of a child getting BSI, that recommendation does not rise the same level as the recommendation of the classroom teacher. She anticipated that any differences could be worked out, but she was unable to effectuate any such resolution with Ziznewski. Consequently, she was forced to approach Young in the last week in October, 2007 regarding S.A., at which time Young said that he would handle it. Yet, Peters heard nothing further from him and, as a result, Peters determined to give S.A. more services within her classroom. Similarly, after her meeting with Capraro, she had been assured by Capraro that she would also take her concerns "into consideration" about S.A. but she never received any follow-up from her either. She conceded that she never thought to follow up and contact Capraro further about it. When asked why she did not go back to Young at that point, she indicated that she felt that it would just put more fuel on the fire relative to the discord generated by Ziznewski since she had felt so unnerved by the prior conversation with her. That conversation had "rattled" her and had made her become fearful. That one incident was so significant as to cause her to not want any further confrontations with Ziznewski, who had caught her completely off guard by her verbal assault (P-22). She conceded that her own comfort level precluded her from approaching Ziznewski again even though she was aware that it was her obligation to get services for her children. That is why she resorted to her own in-class instruction for the child as a result at which time Peters continued to measure the progress of S.A. throughout 3rd grade. He did progress through her own efforts even though there was absolutely no way that S.A. was at the third and fourth grade reading level at the beginning of grade three or at the four to fifth grade levels by midyear, which had been so stated by Ziznewski. Once again, on cross examination, she noted that she had never been so confronted by any other colleague in her teaching experience. She acknowledged that she never got medical attention for her upset, however.

Suzanne Capraro

Suzanne Capraro is an elementary supervisor at Edison in the pre-K through fifth grade class levels in which capacity she is responsible for supervising the students in and among eleven different school buildings in the district. She also observes non-tenured teachers in certain schools, which includes the Marshall School. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree in English and a minor and secondary education from Boston College and her Master of Arts degree as a teacher of English at the Teaching College of Columbia University. She also has earned fifteen credits beyond a Master's degree which includes twelve relative to her supervisor's certificate and three other general credits. She possesses certificates of teacher of English and supervisor. She started her employment in Edison 1993 and initially served as an English teacher, followed by an assignment as a staff development trainer. She became a supervisor in August, 2004. Her offices are located at the central Board of Education office along with fellow supervisor Lois Hagie. They jointly observe and plan in-service training days, oversee curriculum projects, and meet with literacy teachers, curriculum resource teachers and reading specialists in order to help them in their professional development. The role the reading specialist is to assist the classroom teachers relative to the reading needs of a child. In that regard, she would expect cooperation between the classroom teacher and a reading specialist in order to maintain an ongoing flow of information regarding the children. She was responsible for such programming for the 2006-2007 school year but was on maternity leave between January and April, 2008 during the ensuing 2007-2008 school year.

She has known Ziznewski for a period of time. During the 2006-2007 school year, Ziznewski came to her attention in her capacity as a supervisor of reading specialists when she received information from Dr. Traficante and Young about some students not having been seen or serviced by Ziznewski. Reading specialists are considered on the level of elementary school teachers, and they are teachers. As a result, on October 23, 2006 she and Hagie wrote to Ziznewski about the need for a meeting with her relative to children who had been identified for BSI by their classroom teachers and yet were not being serviced, which meeting was to take place on October 24, 2006 (P-4). At that time they requested certain documents to be produced at the meeting relative to BSI services since there were some issues about Ziznewski's teaching schedule not be completed timely by a certain date. That schedule is supposed to go to Deborah Bredahl who is responsible for funding the program. There was also a concern about the requirement to "push-in" versus "pull-out" children pursuant to the district guidelines regarding first graders and the need for pull out of second graders. They had been advised that Ziznewski had solely decided to pull out the first graders in violation of those guidelines. She also noted that during the 2006-2007 and 2007-2008 school years, reading specialists were responsible to generate the DRA's. As a result, they also wanted to see her lesson plan book to ensure that instruction was being provided by her.

The meeting took place on October 24, 2006 (P-5) and it was conducted at the office of the Principal Young. Capraro began the meeting by discussing those concerns with Ziznewski. She reminded her that the start date for such services was supposed to be late September or early October. Ziznewski refused to answer anything verbally regarding the issues raised by her and only resorted to writing down comments on Post-It Notes which she passed through her representative, Diane Keane. Although Capraro was surprised to see that Ziznewski was taping the session, she was nonetheless not uncomfortable with it being so taped. Ziznewski did not comply with the request to supply three or four of her DRA's or her lesson plan. Through her notes and note passing, Ziznewski then asked what authority these supervisors had over her and she was told the answer. The entire meeting lasted fifteen minutes and Capraro felt that no progress had been made in order to get a resolution of the concerns regarding the children. The meeting was a waste of time. She and Hagie were frustrated after the meeting that they failed to generate any dialogue about the schedule or the children. There was no immediate agenda for further action identified at that time except there was a follow-up meeting initiated and scheduled by Young for November 28, which meeting did not take place until January 22, 2007, due to several scheduling delays on the part of Ziznewski.

At the outset of the January 22, 2007 meeting (P-10), Ziznewski once again challenged the validity of the supervisors overseeing her BSI program, which Dr. Traficante then clarified, even though it had been done so at the prior October meeting. Capraro was surprised that there was another challenge to her authority. No lesson plans were produced by her even though Young had written Ziznewski on November 22, 2006 (P-7) to produce them as well as four copies of her DRA's. In fact, she never produced them the entire school year despite the instructions to the contrary. At the same meeting, Ziznewski then challenged the need to complete the DRA's by reading specialists, even though there already was a policy in place in the district that required that reading specialists were to use the DRA. She nonetheless still questioned the reliability of the DRA.

Thereafter, an instructional staff meeting was conducted on September 28, 2007 by Bredahl, Capraro and Hagie, which was attended by Ziznewski. The number two topic on that agenda was the issue of the DRA (P-11). Thereafter, Capraro and Hagie sent a memo to all reading specialists and literacy development teachers on October 3, 2007 (P-12) and advised them that they wanted the reporting of the DRA levels for all children who had been accepted to attend the 2007 Summer Literacy Academy for each marking period. The staff was specifically ordered to report the DRA levels for all children with whom they worked in the next reporting periods of January and June. She noted that if a supervisor requests to see the testing or the DRA levels, the reading specialist is expected to produce them. She also indicated that the leveling system which the district utilizes is accurate (P-53). The Edison running record was created based upon that leveling system which is a system of books created by Fountas and Pinnell and which had assigned a grading level to each of the books. Edison totally relies upon that system and additionally has created its own rating system itself, both of which systems have interfaced. Consequently, Edison expects teachers to use Fountas and Pinnell as one of the measures since the Edison had signed onto it along with other assessment tools.

On November 13, 2007, Capraro then met with the Marshall school teaching staff regarding BSI information and to clear up any confusion about the guidelines, which meeting had been suggested by Dr. Traficante since there was an apparent discrepancy between what the bulk of the teachers believed and what Ziznewski understood to be the impact of the DRA (P-25). She met with Ziznewski as part of her schedule with the staff at 9:15 AM on that date. She noted that the meeting had originally been meant for late October, 2007 after school but it was abruptly canceled when Young announced that he had been verbally attacked by Ziznewski earlier that day. Dr. Traficante then told Capraro not to stay in the building that day as a result. She rescheduled the meeting on the November 13 date accordingly during the regular school day and conducted it in small group sessions. She utilized the BSI guidelines for each of the sessions (P-181). At the various meetings, some of the teachers asked what the criteria were to allow for BSI, at which time she advised them to check with their respective building principals and that the students were to be recommended by the classroom teachers. Ziznewski was the only reading specialist at Marshall. She was assigned grades one and two and if time allotted, she would be assigned additional students in grades three through five. However, there would be a limit to the number of students that she could handle and the building principal (Young) would be responsible to set a priority list for her. In addition, she planned to meet five to six times per year with the twelve reading specialists to whom she was assigned in the district at which time she would allocate approximately one and a half hours of consultation for each of them per each session. She has been Ziznewski's supervisor since August, 2004.

Capraro had no specific negative incidents with Ziznewski during the 2005-06 school year. However, there arose an initial conflict in October, 2006 regarding Ziznewski's scheduling problems, to which she testified hereinabove, and of which she only became aware through Young. As a result, the October 2006 meeting with her was most unusual in light of the lack of any prior such interactions and her surprise that Ziznewski totally refused to cooperate with them at that time. She never observed her in her classes, and nor did Lois Hagie. They rarely worked with observing tenured teachers. On a formalistic basis, the DRA was introduced during the 2006-07 school year for the first time. In each case, each instructor would be able to select a book for the individual needs of a child but it had to be based upon the instructional level of that child.

She acknowledged that she felt that she had had a good professional relationship with Ziznewski but nothing more since she was reluctant to inquire of her much more than that due to her having observed Ziznewski being argumentative to others on some occasions, including the October, 2006 meeting. As a result, she did not want to get into a one-on-one situation with her.

Martin Smith

Martin Smith is the supervisor of world languages and bilingual education at Edison, in which capacity he is in charge of the "English as a Second Language" program (ESL). He received his Bachelor of Arts dual degrees in psychology and human communications in 1978 from Rutgers College and subsequently obtained two other majors at Rutgers, including Spanish. He also received his M.Ed. degree in educational administration and supervision from Rutgers and a Bachelor of Arts degree from Rutgers in French and a Bachelor of Arts degree in speech communications, a Master of Arts degree in speech communications from Temple University and his Ph.D. ABD ("all but dissertation") in speech communications from Temple University. He received his teaching certification-alternate route program from The College of New Jersey in 1988 and his French major-teaching certification at Rutgers University and Universite' de Tours, France in 1996. He possesses certifications from the State of New Jersey in the areas of Spanish (K through 12), teacher of French (K through 12), supervisor, principal, and superintendent (chief school administrator). He has held the job as supervisor at Edison at its ESL program, world languages and bilingual education since September 30, 2000, after having been a supervisor of similar programming at the Princeton Regional High School between 1996 and 1999, after having previously served as a teacher of Spanish there between 1990-96 as well as Saint Joseph High School, Metuchen, between 1984-1999. Prior thereto he was a graduate assistant at Temple University where he taught undergraduate courses between 1978 to 1982. He was successfully recruited by Edison away from Princeton. He has served six years in the "chairs" as president-elect (two years), president (two years), and immediate past president (two years) of the Foreign Language Educators of New Jersey and is a member of the New Jersey Standards Revision Committee for World Language Revisions for the third time, among other state professional educators organizations. As a speaker, he is active in two national professional organizations and serves on two national board of directors, including the Northeast Conference on the Teaching of Foreign Languages and the National Association of District Supervisors of Foreign Languages and is a member of the executive board of the Joint National Committee for Languages and the National Council for Languages and International Studies . He is the recipient of numerous grants and awards dating back to 1992. (P-183).

At Edison, his job as supervisor includes the oversight of the entire ESL program, the filling of positions, observations of staff, and oversight over and maintenance of the ESL and bilingual program requirements under the New Jersey Code. Both of those programs offer instruction in grades K through 12. There are several magnet schools for that purpose, including four out of the eleven elementary schools. In 2006-07, and 2007-08 the Madison Primary School, Madison Intermediate School, Washington School, and Woodbrook School served in that capacity. Each student receives two periods each day with a certified teacher five days per week in 40-45 minute blocks of instruction. It was his assessment that the children in that program benefit from ESL because they overcome the isolation which they would otherwise experience in the regular classroom without the benefit of that language instruction, it gets them more fully engaged, and propels them into engaging other subject areas. In order to effectively channel the children in need of such services, they must be identified within days of a student's entry into the school system. This process includes a screening at all grade levels at Edison. All students who speak other than English at home must be screened and the enrollment form indicates whether English is spoken at home or not.

The triggering screening document is called the Observation Rating Sheet (ORS). In the non-magnet schools, the reading specialist is responsible to undertake and complete the ORS, while in the magnet school, the ESL teacher does the ORS. The ORS is an initial screening conversational instrument which is meant to separate fluent English native speaking students from those who cannot engage in those skills. Data is important to determine English language proficiency. Three steps must be followed in order to identify students in need. The first step is to identify all students who speak a language other than English at home. The second step involves the tester developing an initial screening instrument (the ORS) to determine and separate those students who are fully reading proficient versus those who are not. Thirdly, if there is any doubt there are three state approved instruments which the district can rely upon and utilize for further testing. Edison has chosen the Maculitis II ("MAC II") programming as that second level testing tool. Thus, the ORS is definitely not the final step in the process for any child that they cannot determine is fully proficient in English. He has provided training for reading specialists regarding ORS starting in 2001-02, at which time he and his office provided the training program to all district reading specialists, especially new specialists within the district. The specialized training program was repeated in the 2004-05 year.

The information which is obtained through the ORS testing is recorded on the screening form of Edison (P-65) and has to be completed by the reading specialist or ESL teacher, as appropriate. In 2006 and onward, Marshall School was not a magnet school, therefore Ziznewski was required to fill it out. She was always permitted and free to call him to ask questions about it. The form must be completed within 48 hours after registration by, as in the case of Marshall School, the reading specialist. In addition, there is the autumn ORS testing document but is only a summary sheet, which also must be completed by the reading specialist. In 2006-07, Ziznewski, as the reading specialist, was required to place the completed ORS in the cumulative student folder and the school secretary would then contact the magnet school to proceed to the next step, as appropriate. The bottom of the screening form indicates, in relevant part: "Note: Forward completed form to appropriate office (elementary)...for data recording and final disposition. One copy of this form is to be retained in the student's folder after recording program participation and standard score and NCE score in computer. Forward one copy to the ESL/BE supervisor for your school." (R-65, page EBOE00158). He further indicated that a sample of the ORS test which was used in 2006-2007 was illustrated at exhibit P-100,page EBOE00327. This was the same form that was in use when he arrived in 2000 and is and still is used by the district today. He also noted that, the third step in the MAC II process is administered by the ESL teacher only after step two is completed by the reading specialist. At the same time he noted that the actual ORS test sheet is not required be placed in the student folder, but the screening form (P-65) is the instrument the district then uses to pursue and process any further required activity on behalf of the child.

He first met Ziznewski when he conducted his first training session as supervisor in 2001. Thereafter, the September, 2006, during the third week of school, a teacher at Marshall stopped him in the hallway of the school and identified a student, A.G., whom she felt might be in need of ESL. As a result, he went to the Marshall School's main office to check on the status of A.G's form, where it should have been located. But he found no forms there at all. He asked Principal Young to check on the status of the form and have it placed in the folder. Young wrote him on September 26, 2006 (P-64) and indicated "After our conversation, I immediately went down to Mrs. Ziznewski and questioned why she had not placed an ORS in the second grader's folder as you had directed. She became enraged and said she is going to submit a grievance against you. I indicated this ORS must be completed, placed in the child's folder, and determine whether he needs further testing. Mrs. Ziznewski does not want any further testing. I questioned why no child in a school has been in need of further testing. She again indicated she had called the ETEA office, feeling she is being discriminated against by you. She also feels you should not be questioning her judgment."

Approximately one week later, in early October, 2006, he received a call from the literacy coach at Marshall with reference to several other children. At that time he also re-checked on the status of A.G. and discovered that there were still no forms there for him or the other children either. This was his first contact with Ziznewski since 2001. Then, on October 10, 2006, Young wrote to Ziznewski and identified 58 children into whose folders she was to place the ORS screening results after the screening process had been completed and as recommended at the Edison Enrollment Center. She failed to do the screening for all them or place them in the folders for one and a half weeks as of the end of September. She nonetheless claimed that she had done all the testing and found none of them to need services and, further, that it was not her job to put them in the folders (P-122). She failed to produce the ORS rating sheets (P-65) in any event. His office never saw them produced and had asked her for the screening forms. She nonetheless claimed that she had them and they should trust her in stating that the testing had been done and that all of the students had passed. They then ordered her to produce them but she failed to do so. As a result, he instructed Mrs. Randy Hook to perform the ESL MAC II testing on October 13, 2006, which resulted in nine students found to need it. There were no ORS scores in the folders of eight of the first graders (P-116), even though it had been recommended at registration that they needed to be screened. In addition, A.G., in grade two, was found to need ESL. They were all kept at Marshall School because the year was already under way and Mrs. Pandit, who was in another school teaching those services, was pulled into Marshall and was paid for extra time as result of this extra assignment. At the end of 2006-2007, the Federal WIDA testing results regarding English language proficiency revealed that many of the students had had questionable transition results and, therefore, he concluded that Mrs. Hook had correctly diagnosed the group of students as having needed ESL services services in the prior October.

He noted that the child N.C. had been screened by Ziznewski, although she failed to provide evidence of having tested him. Mrs. Hook nonetheless determined that he had needed services after she had completed the MAC II testing of him and after Ziznewski had failed to produce any evidence of having done it (P-100). N.C. was administered the MAC II because his initial ORS scoring of 20 required it.

J.V. had received an ORS of 15 (P-101) which required him to undergo ESL instruction when the MAC II testing by Mrs. Hook demonstrated that need. He had no reason to doubt her scoring there. and, even by the end of 2007, he still needed further ELS based upon his score results (P-122). R.R. scored an ORS testing by Hook of 20 and was still not English proficient at the end of the year. Therefore, R.R. needed services (P-102). M.V. scored an ORS of 20 by Hook, which indicated that he was not English proficient, and had he not been provided these services in the year, he would not have even moved along as he did (P-103). M.K. was noted as requiring ESL testing based upon his enrollment form (P-104) and when that form was transmitted to Marshall, Ziznewski was required to do the initial testing. Yet, she never produced any evidence of a form having been completed by her or having been placed in the folder. Smith also noted that at the end of 2006-07, M.K. was still developing but he had needed services at the beginning of that year.

S.V. registered an ORS of 15 and was therefore eligible for ESL. He noted that Mrs. Pandit did the end of the year testing, although it was all scored by an outside agency. A.G. received an ORS of 16 on the retest by Mrs. Hook on October 14, 2006 (P-106 at Bates page EBOE00373), which qualified him for services, even though Ziznewski had previously tested him on September 7, 2006 and indicated an ORS of 23 (P-106 at at Bates page EBOE00379). The further follow up MAC II testing of A.G. on May 10, 2007 (P-106 at Bates page EBOE00381) revealed a standard score of 615 which, when contrasted with Hook's MAC II testing results of 501 of A.G. on October 13, 2006 (P-106 at Bates page EBOB00376) indicated that Ziznewski's result was questionable and its validity was wrong based upon that further testing and the data points during the year, which had shown that he had had need for services. He observed that A.G. was determined to need further ESL services during the 2006-07 school year based upon the ORS and MAC II test results. And based upon his review of the overall testing results by her, his conclusion was that Ziznewski appeared to be biased against placing any child in ESL which went counter to the district's position of preferring to provide services when there was any doubt about the success of a child. Although different teachers may experience some deviations in their ORS test results, it is nonetheless universally stressed in the district's teacher training that only fully proficient English speaking children are to be screened out. The results from the D.B. scores did not appear to comport with that approach at all. (It is noted procedurally that the testimony of Smith ended at 12:30 on this day of hearing, March 4, 2009, in order to allow Ziznewski to go to an eye doctor for an emergency appointment after she had complained of discomfort at the hearing. The matter resumed on the next scheduled day, March 5, 2009, accordingly.)

On November 13, 2006, Young wrote to Ziznewski about attending a meeting on November 21, 2006, in order to review the ESL screening program (P-120). She was asked to bring copies of the ORS testing results which had already been completed, despite the fact that there had been a wait of two months for the production of her ESL Bilingual screening forms. They were requested in order for them to confirm her compliance with the program and that she was to have placed all of the 58 screen forms in the appropriate folders. It was the responsibility of Ziznewski to ensure that they were placed in those folders. In that regard, on October 10, 2006, Young had already written to Ziznewski and had told her that it was "imperative" that an ORS form be located in each of the 58 student folders and that it was her responsibility (P-119). This had yet to be done by her by the time of the November 20, 2006 meeting, however.

The meeting took place on November 22, 2006. In attendance were Dr. Traficante, Smith, Young, Ziznewski and her ETEA representative, union president Myron Fouratt. At that meeting, Smith clarified that the district had clear-cut procedures to conduct ORS screening, that it was the responsibility of Ziznewski to ensure compliance and that the children were to be identified appropriately based upon the data which had been developed in the district. He rejected Ziznewski's claim that they should trust her judgment and not respond to district policy in that regard. When she was asked by Young to produce the requested documents, Ziznewski told them that they were in the trunk of her car and that they should nonetheless trust her and not challenge her professional judgment. Young instructed her to provide them by December 1, 2006, and followed up with a letter to her on the same date in which he made the same demand (P-121). In addition, Smith was surprised that Ziznewski challenged his authority as being the ESL supervisor so the district leadership in attendance clarified the role of Smith. He observed that he was confused by her challenge since they had met many years before and it had never been a question about his authority at any point up until that meeting. Smith further advised her at that meeting (and Young stated in his follow-up letter to her) that the execution of any ESL parent waiver letter must only occur between the ESL supervisor and the child's parent and that Ziznewski should not put herself in the middle regarding whether children should be in the ESL process at all. He indicated that she nonetheless violated that mandate later on when several complaints came from the ESL teacher, Mrs. Pandit, about her interference there.

The matter involving student D.B. is a direct case in point, who was registered on March 21, 2007 as an incoming kindergarten student for the 2007-08 school year (P-112). The ORS test result for the child was 12 (test scores between 5 and 20 require MAC II screening). It was administered by another teacher on May 16, 2007, after it was determined in April, 2007, that further incoming kindergartners would be better served by being tested by someone other than Ziznewski who had, notwithstanding the November 21, 2006 meeting, failed to test such children. Although Smith was not initially involved regarding D.B., he did so intercede when he received a letter from the father, C.B., who requested a waiver for services on May 5, 2006 (sic, more properly 2007) (P-124). Smith called the mother, who then agreed to have the services. But then the Spanish teacher, Mrs. Zazanis, called his office and advised that the family was confused about conflicting information with reference to the need for such ESL services. In the process, they determined that Ziznewski had contacted the family and advised them not to take the services. This was in direct contravention of the previous order from November 21, 2006 to her not to get involved. A letter from Ziznewski to Young, dated June 6, 2007 confirmed her acknowledgement of her involvement in that matter (P-124 at Bates page EBOE- 00452).

The meeting was held on June 15, 2007,with the same parties present from the previous November, 2006 meeting. This meeting was called by Dr.Traficante. At that meeting, they wanted to know why she had intervened. She continued to insist that the ESL services were not necessary for the child and acknowledged that she has spoken to the father. She continued to disparage the ESL program, that it was a waste of time and that children did not need it. She stated that she was simply acting in the best interest of the B. child and the family in order to keep the child in the same school with the other two children in the family (i.e., the other two children were already at the Marshall school but D.B. would have been otherwise placed at the Washington school for ESL services, where they generally took place as a magnet school). She then admitted that she had told the parents that their child did not need ESL. According to Smith, it was also evident that Ziznewski demonstrated a lack of understanding regarding the ESL program. She claimed that she was acting as a child advocate who only sought to assist a parent who wanted to keep his children together at Marshall. She was ordered to not communicate with the family any further.

Smith met with the father on June 18, 2007. Also present was Dr. Traficante and Dora Ramos, a Spanish translator and an attendance secretary in the district. He found that since the original letter request by the parent had come to him in English, Smith assumed that the father was fluent in English (P-124 at Bates page EBOE 00451). But it became readily apparent that he was not and that he needed the letter translated for him. At that point the father stated that Ziznewski had approached him in a restaurant and the told him not to have his child go into the ESL program. He then told Smith that Ziznewski wrote the several letters (P-124 at Bates pages EBOE00448, 450 and 451 and asked him to sign them). The father also told him that he had a voicemail message from Ziznewski in which she told him not to place the child in ESL and that Smith did not know what he was doing. They all proceeded to hear the voice mail, which was played at the meeting, and it was the voice of Ziznewski in English. As a result of that conference, the father agreed to place the child in ESL, which commenced in September, 2007.

On cross examination, Smith was asked about the subjective variables which can attach to ORS screening instruments. He responded by stating that in the ORS, the criteria or the rubric indicates how the child should be scored based on the criteria used. Each set has five options and, although there could be a subjective reaction by the teacher to what a child says, nonetheless, the tracers are clear. But evn if there is any doubt, the tester is told to rate the child lower on the scale. Further, the training which they perform reflects the uniformity they expect of each tester. Thus, there is a clear distinction between the scores of four and five, regardless of the tester, with only very slight variables even being allowed at that point. He also noted that, although during the 2006-07 school year the ORS basic form was changed, the ORS screening test was not. In any case, the MAC II, which is administered by people other than Ziznewski, is the instrument which is used to actually place a child and not the ORS. Instead, Ziznewski, just like the other reading specialists, was responsible to initially go through all the enrollments to see if ORS screening had to kick in the first place. Those enrollments usually came over to the reading specialist in batches or groups since they were based upon a blocked enrollment. Thereafter, ESL teachers would then work during the summer in order to intercept any late enrollees after the blocked dates. On October 6, 2006, the Young ordered Ziznewski to provide him with a copy of all the students for whom she had done ORS testing since the beginning of school in September, 2006, and he expected that information by the end of work that day (P-117). Thereafter, on October 10, 2006, Young reminded Ziznewski that was her responsibility to have the ORS forms in each student folder (P-119). In an undated file memo Young noted that, although 48 kindergarten children were identified as needing ORS, none were put in their folders. Then, after Randy Hook retested them, nine of them were determined as requiring ESL. And, at that time, there were still no ORS forms in the folders of the children who had been screened by Ziznewski and, in any event, none at all were identified as requiring ESL with the exception of B. A.-V. (a kindergarten student).

He was not aware of any similar problems having occurred with Ziznewski prior to the 2006-07 school year. Yet, the failure by Ziznewski to produce the forms as requested and so ordered raised initial suspicions in her, which then led to further scrutiny regarding her management of her responsibilities in that area. And the result was that they discovered various specific discrepancies regarding her administration of the ORS. For example, as previously generally discussed hereinabove, on approximately September 15 or 20, 2006, a teacher had stopped Smith in the hallway at Marshall by popping out of a classroom at which time she raised a question regarding the reading status of A.G. He then checked and found that there was no form for A.G. from Ziznewski in the child's folder. He checked with Young, who then approached Ziznewski about the missing information. Young later reported that, as a result of that confrontations, Ziznewski threatened Smith with a grievance. He once again stated that he never saw any form regarding A.G., even by the end of December, 2006. In the interim, he saw Ziznewski several times between the last week in September through the time of the November 21 meeting when he was in the Marshall building, at which times she always told him to "trust" her even though he asked her to produce the results for all of the students three or four more times. She claimed that she had performed all the tests and they had all passed. She also told them that it was not her responsibility to put them in the folders. He disagreed with that assertion, even though he acknowledged that there is not a specific written policy by the district.

Instead, each school created its own protocol. Any minimum, it was his opinion that she was being obstreperous since there was, according to him, a "practice throughout the district" to ensure that they are put in the folders.

He conceded that he was not her supervisor. Young was. All he wished for was that she would follow the policies about the ORS testing and coordinate them with Young. Young specifically told her at the November 21 meeting that she might be sanctioned with subordination due to her failure to comply with the folder requirement. (In fact, according to Smith, ultimately she did get sanctioned with the withholding of her increment, although he acknowledged that he had no role in that discipline. Instead, it apparently arose after she meddled in the J.B. matter.) He also noted that, during that November meeting, Ziznewski persisted in questioning whether any students even needed ESL services. She also "fashioned herself" as being a parent advocate at that meeting and told them that she had been talking to parents which caused Smith to illustrate to everyone present a sample waiver letter to parents which indicated that such concerns be directed only to him. (This was also noted in the Young letter to Ziznewski on November 22, 2006, at P-121). They had previously come to the belief that Ziznewski was trying to circumvent the waiver process by talking directly to the parents and her admission about that was confirmed by her at the meeting. Thus she was put on notice about non-interference by her in the future at that time. Yet, she persisted in meddling in the D.B. matter in May-June, 2007, as indicated hereinabove. Smith noted that the father, with whom he met in June, 2007, told him that Ziznewski had told him that he should rewrite the letter and request a waiver (P-124 at Bates pages 448 and 450). And, despite every prior warning to the contrary, Ziznewski exhibited inappropriate actions when she discussed placement issues with the parent. She should not have approached the parent to say that the child should not have been placed into ESL, according to Smith.

The November 21, 2006, meeting also caused Smith great concern with the responses by Ziznewski. She gave hostile and combative answers to the production of the forms and this suggested to him that services would not be provided by her appropriately. In addition, she was also very directly hostile to Smith and even expressed reservations as to what his role was in the process. She was generally resistant to following the procedures and she was advised in writing again to provide the completed ORS forms. He had never attended any meeting with anyone where a staff member was warned about facing consequences if the member did not comply. Ultimately, Ziznewski was relieved by Dr. Traficante of her ESL responsibilities in April/May, 2007, because of the continuing problems with her ability to service ESL.

On further cross-examination, he admitted that he was not aware until the examination of him at the due process hearing that A.G. got BSI in addition to ESL since during the first year of a child's entry into a school system, usually BSI and ESL are not concurrently administered. Instead, they may be ordinarily consecutively scheduled with the ESL process being presented to the student first. However, that exclusivity is not an absolute, as evidenced by what apparently happened to A.G.

Finally, he noted that at no time did Ziznewski ever advise that she actually had produced or even placed any folders in any student's file, despite her protestation that Smith should "trust" her. He never saw any results from Ziznewski regarding the ORS, but only from Mrs. Hook. Overall, She was always arguing about the need to provide any ESL services for any child. She screamed and yelled at Smith regarding his role over her as well as the instruments they used in order to screen the children.

Dr. Maryann Banks

Maryann Banks Ed.D., has been employed by Edison in the duel capacities as Assistant Superintendent and Principal of the John Adams Middle School since October 01, 2007. She possesses a Bachelor of Arts degree in English from Wooster College (1971), a Master of Arts degree in education administration with a principal/supervisor's certificate from Seton Hall University (1979), and her Doctorate in Education (Ed.D) in educational administration from the Rutgers Graduate School of Education (2000). She holds New Jersey educational certificates for principal/supervisor, school administrator, teacher-instructional with endorsement in English and teacher of grades K through 12.

She previously served as a teacher of English in the junior high school setting and then the senior high school component of the Elizabeth school district between 1971 and 1989, and a supervisor of English at the Freehold Regional High School District (at Howell High School) in 1989, before becoming employed by Edison, first as assistant principal at Edison High School starting in December, 1990, principal of the John Adams Middle School in 1994 and assistant superintendent for administration and technical operations at Edison between January, 2005 and October 2007, where her primary focus was personal matters, the handling of grievances, as Section 504 officer for the district and technical hardware, and especially Internet services. In her current job, her primary responsibility is that of principal at the Adams School with some superintendent responsibilities.

She has not known Ziznewski personally except in the current matter. In that capacity she is aware of the request for a doctor's note by Young from Ziznewski on October 30, 2006, regarding three consecutive days of absence in October when, by contract, she was supposed to submit such a note from October 11, 12 and 13, 2006 (P-143 at Bates page EBOE00483). She understood that Ziznewski had not yet submitted a note for three days by that time. Young issued a follow up request on November 20, 2006 (P-143 at Bates page EBOE00482) but she failed to comply. As a result, Young then wrote to Banks on November 29, 2006 regarding that failure to comply (P-143 at Bates page EBOE00481). Young then wrote to district superintendent, Mrs. C. Toth, on November 30, 2006, at which time he indicated that Zliznewski only eventually produced one note to him but that it only covered the absence for October 12, 2006. Further, it was dated November 6, 2006 and was not delivered until the end of November in any case (P-144). Young had also indicated that Ziznewski could not comprehend why the information regarding the absences was requested by him and the superintendent even though he had quoted the union contract language to her. Further, she never did provide absences for October 11 and 13, 2006, despite the instruction to do so. Banks believed that Ziznewski knew fully well about the absence reporting procedure and was deliberately stonewalling compliance even though (1) Young had reminded her about it twice,(2) all employees get a copy of the employment contract via the building union representatives, (3) and there was a union representative available to alleviate any concerns or doubts she may had had about the requirement.

Banks also served as the Affirmative Action Officer which required her to ensure that building principals be required to carry out protections and safeguards for the benefit of everyone associated with the school environment in order to prohibit harassment, intimidation and bullying under the policy of the Board of Education in place at the time of the incidents involving Ziznewski (P-154). As part of her responsibilities she has also been required to undertake investigations herself in accordance with the policy. Her investigations would begin with her requesting a letter relative to the harassment, followed by a confidential interview with the "victim." A copy of the policy is distributed to the staff members individually each August, in addition to which there are two full copies in the library and the central office of each school.

On January 2, 2007, Young advised Banks in writing that he had acknowledged Ziznewski's birthday in a standard happy greeting "certificate" which he had circulated to her to commemorate the occasion, just like he had traditionally done with all other professional staff (P-147 at Bates page EBOE00488). Upon his return from the Christmas holiday break, he found it to be to be torn to pieces on his desk (P-147 at Bates page EBOE00489). In relevant part in his note he stated to Banks:" I'm getting concerned about her attitude toward me. It's not healthy to say the least."

Prior thereto, on December 12, 2006, Banks had written to Young and told him to give Ziznewski a notice to attend an Affirmative Action Investigation on December 20, 2006, and have her sign for it and to return it to the personnel department. He responded by advising Banks that Ziznewski refused to sign off on receipt of that notice (P-145). This is a standard procedure that Banks employed, which Ziznewski disregarded. A brief meeting was held on December 20, 2006 at the Education Center but it was cut short when Ziznewski advised that she felt uncomfortable proceeding without an attorney after being told about various complaints against her. Once having been told about the basic substance of the complaints, Ziznewski laughed as if it was ludicrous and commented "it's against me?" At that point, Banks stopped the meeting and told her to coordinate any efforts with her own attorney and an attorney, Mary Smith of Wilentz, Goldman and Spitzer, on behalf of the district. Yet, even though Banks stopped the meeting at that point at her request, Ziznewski still wanted more details. As of January 4, 2007, however, Ziznewski had yet to advise of any attorney representation, even though Banks had advised her on December 21, 2006, to have an attorney contact Smith no later than December 29, 2006, in order to arrange a mutually convenient time for the parties to meet (P-146). Banks was forced to write her accordingly to remind her of that requirement at that time (P-148), which note she did sign for on January 8, 2007. Eventually, on March 8, 2007, Smith confirmed a meeting for March 20, 2007 (P-150) with Ziznewski's then attorney, Stephen Klausner, with Banks also confirming that meeting in writing with Ziznewski (which she did acknowledge receipt of) the various complaints which are the subject of that investigation.

In particular, Jennifer Figueroa had complained about not getting services for children from Ziznewski and that, in the process, she was subject to bullying tactics by her (P-155 at Bates pages 511 and-513). Ziznewski had, well into the school year, failed to set up the teaching schedule for BSI for the Figueroa children. Further, Ziznewski sparked the confrontation in Figueroa's classroom. She met Figueroa on just one occasion but came to the conclusions that (1) there could be a problem if children were not being serviced by her,(2) that when pressed, Ziznewski appeared to have become confrontational, and (3) that Banks was offended that Ziznewski had referred to her and Dr. Traficante as being "bitches". Banks indicated that she was hurt because she had always tried to be fair with people and this was an unfair characterization.

She also interviewed Sandra Pellicane who, as the Marshall building union representative, had been forced to intervene in an argument between Ziznewski and special education teacher Adrienne Sviderskis-Carroll regarding the preference of the latter to keep the door to the library classrooms closed in order to ensure privacy for her special education classes, while Ziznewski insisted upon keeping the door open because she claimed that she was claustrophobic. Pellicane also witnessed Ziznewski's intimidation of a new teacher, Mrs.Rokosz the year before and acknowledged that she was aware that students did not receive services from her. Pellicane also knew about the confrontations she had had with Figueroa, felt that it was quiet building when Ziznewski was not there, and was aware that she refused to let other teachers use the school computer, which Ziznewski claimed was "her" computer (P-155 at Bates pages EBOE00513-514).

Diane Keane another teacher in the school and an ETEA representative at Marshall, was also interviewed by her, who told her that although she never personally witnessed any of the confrontations between Ziznewski and Sviderskis-Carroll, she was nonetheless aware of them and have heard about them, as well as how Ziznewski having had a confrontation with Figueroa. But Keane also indicated that she was very surprised when Ziznewski had refused to speak during a meeting that had been called by elementary supervisor Suzanne Capraro and instead of responding to the supervisor, Ziznewski wrote Post-it Notes and passed them to Mrs. Keane, who then addressed those comments to the supervisor.

Dr. Banks also interviewed Ami Hoffman, the curriculum resource teacher, who had an office in the library classroom areas which were jointly utilized by Ziznewski and Sviderskis-Carroll. She personally witnessed the ongoing battle over the status of the library door between them and told them both to "knock it off". At one point she actually saw Sviderskis-Carroll break down and cry when Ziznewski yelled at her in front of Svidserskis-Carroll's classroom of students. Hoffman described Ziznewski as having a "Jekyll and Hyde" personality and that she appeared "disturbed". She also hoarded the use of the library computer as if it was her own. Hoffman expressed concern about any retaliation from her. Later on, Banks was advised that Ziznewski had, in fact, approached and confronted Hoffman after the investigation (P-155 at Bates pages EBOE00516-517).

Principal Gerald Young complained in his interview that he had been very upset when the Ziznewski made inappropriate, derisive comments to him and his secretary regarding his religious life, in particular, that he was a "hypocrite" for having taken up the gifts to the altar during the Catholic mass at the same parish which they both attended. Young had previously written a letter to superintendent Carol Toth on November 30, 2006, in which he cited Ziznewski with having made horrible comments about his spirituality which left him "devastated" (P-155 at Bates page EBOE 00538).

Spanish teacher Emily Zazanis filed a complaint against Ziznewski on January 10, 2007, and was interviewed eight days later by Banks. She shared library classroom space with Ziznewski, Hoffman, Zviderskis-Carroll and Donna Savell. She complained that Ziznewski created an unsavory climate and environment in the library to due to her negative attitudes with the other staff as well as her repeated loud, disrespectful and inappropriate language to Mr. Young. She often so talked loudly on the phone that Zazanis could overhear her conversations about having been the "victim" of other people's complaints. She was so upset at one point that she spoke to Ziznewski about it, who then "flipped" and claimed that Zazanis did know how she had been treated by the others. She also overheard Ami Hoffman remind Ziznewski to be more respectful to Young, but Ziznewski responded by saying that "he doesn't respect me." Although she tried to be diplomatic with Ziznewski, she was told bluntly by Ziznewski that Young had lied about her and to her. She also observed Ziznewski's emotions change quickly from being defensive (crying) to becoming angry. Further, Zazanis was upset with the way Ziznewski repeatedly spoke to Young. She almost appeared to "bark" at him. Zazanis reminded her that she had overheard Ziznewski yelling at Young and cautioned her about being careful of her own surroundings in the library (P-155 at Bates pages EBOE00 517-521).

Based upon all of the foregoing complaints, Ziznewski was ultimately interviewed by Mary Smith on behalf of the district and in the presence of her then attorney, Steven Klausner on March 20, 2007. At that time, she denied failing to provide educational services services, did not recall any confrontations with anyone (but maintained that she was attacked by others), denied having made the "bitch" comment or having derogatorily referred to Martin Smith as "Uncle Marty." In that last regard, she only defended that comment by stating that Martin Smith was apparently the uncle of some staff member in the district and that she had only expressed surprise when she found out that one of the other two chairs was his knees. Ziznewski also claimed that Sviderskis-Carroll was the catalyst of the problem the library and that Ziznewski primarily did not want the door closed because she does not want to be accused of sexual misconduct (P-155 at Bates page EBOE00522). Banks found that comment to be odd and bizarre on its own merits but, in addition, it was an unbelievable, and since there are always other adults present in the environment anyway. She also denied hoarding the library computer. She also claimed that Young was the attacker and she denied making any disparaging spiritual comments about him.

Subsequently, on March 23, 2007, Ami Hoffman filed another complaint with Dr. Banks after Ziznewski confronted her a day after that meeting about confidential information which had been discussed during the prior interviews and even though the parties had been cautioned not to discuss this matter any further, except with their attorneys. Upon receipt of that complaint, Dr. Banks contacted Ziznewski to arrange to meet with her and an association representative immediately in order to discuss the matter but Ziznewski declined to participate in such a meeting without her attorney. Dr. Banks also warned her not to participate in any level of retaliation against anyone, this having occurred after Young had written to Dr. Banks on the same date and advised how Ami Hoffman had come to him very upset when Ziznewski confronted her in a hostile fashion (P-152) and how Ziznewski was then hostile with him when he attempted to discuss this matter with her and her union representative. She never did respond to Dr. Banks, either with or without an attorney.

Based upon all of the foregoing, Banks concluded that (1) Ziznewski did act in an intimidating manner with other staff members on numerous occasions, (2) she was disrespectful to Young and had yelled at other co-workers in the presence of schoolchildren, (3) had violated and disregarded administrative directives regarding keeping the library door open, failing to shut off her cell phone during her classes and failing to allow others to use the school computer. She was issued a Written Reprimand on April 24, 2007, regarding harassment, intimidation and bullying based on the complaints filed by the others (P-156), which she signed in the presence of Young but refused to either open or read, even though he indicated to her that she was to read the content of the letter in his presence and sign it. She told him that it should have been sent to her attorney instead.

Subsequently, on June13, 2007, Hope Blecher-Sass, a literacy coach in the school, wrote to Dr. Banks and complained about being confronted by Ziznewski relative to why she was now doing the screening of the ESL students in Marshall instead of Ziznewski (P-160). Dr. Banks met with her on June 15, 2007, due to her expressed fears about being forced to come forward in light of what she perceived as being a hostile work environment being perpetrated by Ziznewski at Marshall and who, in the process, was interfering with Blecher-Sass's initiation of services on behalf of students to the ESL program and well as in her own role on the I&RS Committee. Her concern was the Ziznewski was eroding morale there and this concern was shared with Dr. Banks as a result.

She also conducted a meeting with Diane Keane and Sandra Pellicane on June 15, 2007, after they both indicated that, as education association representatives, they were similarly concerned with eroding morale at Marshall because of the conduct by Ziznewski (P-162). As a result, Banks notified Ziznewski of another Affirmative Action meeting on June 19, 2007 (P-164), at which time it was her intention to discuss with her the complaints raised by Keane, Pellicane, Blecher-Sass, and Hoffman. Ziznewski refused to sign for the letter and did not accept it, according to Young, who had been ordered to have it personally delivered to her (P-163). It had to be sent by ordinary and certified mail to her at her home as a result. Thereafter, on June 20, 2007, Young wrote to Superintendent Toth once again and complained about Ziznewski's ongoing negative attitude to him and others at the school. He did not want her back in his building for the next year as a result (P-165). As a result, Dr. Banks wrote to Ziznewski on July 3, 2007, advised her about her persistent and ongoing negative impact upon the district, her disregard of Banks' prior directive to refrain from engaging in any inappropriate conduct in the workplace, and, as a result, indicated that she was making a recommendation to the Edison Board of Education through the superintendent to withhold her employment and adjustment increments for the 2007-08 school year (P-166).

On cross examination, she stated that even in her capacity as a building principal she would ask for an medical excuse notes from her staff if they were out for three days or more. It is the obligation of the teacher to certify that the absence resulted from personal illness pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18 A: 30-4, although she acknowledged that there is no other written policy, other than the superintendent's policy, which dictates that requirement. It was her opinion, however, that Ziznewski disregarded the principal's directive to produce it which was the violation against her. And, she not only failed to comply with an order she also delayed in producing any documentation with reference to it or a portion of those absences in a timely fashion.

At the same time, she agreed that the birthday card incident which had been reported by Young was not actionable by the district as constituting a form of harassment under its harassment policy as it was so generally defined (P-154). Further, she conceded that Ziznewski's failure to sign the Affirmative Action Investigation appearance notice was not actionable by the district at that time (P-145), although in the future it could be considered insubordination.

But, she noted that references made by Ziznewski with reference to Martin Smith as being "Uncle Marty" was a sign of disrespect, and not one of affection, even though it was not actionable by the board at the time and on its own individual merits then. Regarding the dispute regarding the status of the doors to the library, although she knew of no Board policy regarding such matters, she viewed an open door as been distracting to classes inside, especially where there were special education classes under way, such as was the case here. Further, Young had written a memo which ordered that all doors be closed for the special education and physical education classes.

It also became apparent to her that virtually every Affirmative Action complaint filed with her in this matter had the common thread of Ziznewski not providing services to students. And when a teacher would ask to get services for one's students but would get screamed at by Ziznewski, that act would constitute harassment and bullying under affirmative action. She found that the interference by Ziznewski was the basis for these confrontations. In addition, Ziznewski breached the Affirmative Action program confidentiality requirements when she confronted Ami Hoffman after the round of interviews conducted by Dr. Banks in March, 2007. Hoffman was so upset by any further anticipated confrontations by her that she was forced to hide at the end of the day.

AMI HOFFMAN

Ami Hoffman is employed by Edison as a curriculum resource teacher ("CRT"). She received her Bachelor of Arts degree in sociology from William Paterson College in 1995 and her Master of Arts degree in early childhood and curriculum from Kean University in 1999. She possesses New Jersey Department of Education certificates for supervisor, elementary education (K through eight) and learning development teacher consultant (LDTC). All of her employment has been at Edison commencing in 1996, when she started as a long-term substitute at the James Madison Elementary School followed by seven years as a fourth grade teacher at the Lindeneau School and continuing on as a CRT at the Marshall School since September, 2004. Upon her assignment at Marshall, she met Ziznewski who, as a reading specialist there, did the development reading assessments (DRA's) for the students. During the 2006-07 school year they were assigned to share the library for their respective programs due to space limitations within the building. Hoffman had an office within the library. It was while they were there that Ziznewski verbally held the announced belief that running records were not valid and also complained to Young about the volume of her DRA's. As a result, Young asked Hoffman to help her with them. She frequently heard Ziznewski argue with Adrienne Sviderskis-Carroll (who also shared teaching space in the library) about keeping the doors open verses shut. Since Sviderskis-Carroll was teaching special education, she wanted the doors closed in order to allow her children to concentrate. Ziznewski opposed having the doors kept closed and, as result, the dispute continued. Hoffman tried to avoid as much contact within the library as possible (even though she have her office there) due to the constant arguments between the two of them, although it was her personal opinion that the doors should have been kept shut in order to avoid distractions to the special education students. Hoffman did discuss the door problem with Young and Dr. Banks, the latter of whom interviewed her on November 15, 2006, as part of an Affirmative Action Investigation (P-155 at Bates page EBOE00516). Hoffman described the interactions between the two teachers as being a "battle." She was aware that Young had issued a memo which required that the doors be kept closed. At one point, she observed that Sviderskis-Carroll was in tears when Ziznewski yelled at her in front of her students. She described Ziznewski as being "like Jekyll and Hyde" in that she would take out her aggressions on every one if she was having a bad day.On one particular occasion, she also observed Ziznewski yell at Young in the library. Hoffman was so upset by it that she later complained to Ziznewski about being uncomfortable with her actions. Anyone there could have overheard the yelling by her.

Ziznewski's declared nonbelief in the running records as a concept caused many of the teachers to ask Hoffman do every single second running record in order to validate children's admission into the Summer Literacy Academy. When she would attempt to discuss these concerns with her, Ziznewski would tell her that she did not believe in them even though it was still Edison district policy to honor and give credence to the running records.

In that regard, she knew the student A.G. as being a new student at Marshall who was in the second grade class of Mrs.Malloy. Hoffman did a second running record and agreed that he needed help since, in January, 2007, she scored him only at the grade one level even though Ziznewski had scored him as being at the DRA score 28, which was equivalent to the grade two-three equivalent level. She maintained that there was no way that A.G. was at Ziznewski's recorded level.

In mid school year (January) 2007, student A.P. had a running record of K,1, while his DRA was "E". Yet by the end of the year, the Ziznewski DRA testing placed him at the end of second grade, which was also not possible. In mid school year 2007, the running record for S.A. was first grade, although Ziznewski's DRA recorded him at the two to three grade level, which was also not possible, according to Hoffman, since by the end of 2007 he was still only at the first to second grade level versus the third to fourth grade level which was then recorded by Ziznewski. The midyear running record for another child identified also as A.P. placed this child at the first grade versus the Ziznewski DRA which placed the child at two to third grade level. Her opinion was that A.P. could not read at the higher level. The running record for K.V. in 2007 placed the child at the one to two grade level but Ziznewski's DRA placed the child at the two to three grade level. The child L.A. recorded a mid year 2007 running record of first grade while Ziznewski's DRA recorded her at the two to three grade level. By May, 2007, the running record scored her at the one to two grade level while the DRA had her at the third to fourth grade level. Hoffman noted that L.A. was an ESL student in her estimation even though Ziznewski had determined that she was not appropriate for ESL. She also noted that she had personally observed some of the students in Mrs. Gerber's class even though Ziznewski has scored them out of ESL. She was aware that Young had ordered a second ORS screening by another teacher from another school and all those students were determined to be ESL eligible. At some point in 2006-2007, Ziznewski wanted to know why Hoffman was doing the same job as she. Hoffman felt that Ziznewski was upset that she was reassessing her assigned students by using the running records. She also became aware the fact that at some point Ziznewski had told a second grade teacher, Toni-Ann Hooker, to not go to Hoffman.

Hoffman also felt that Ziznewski treated the computer in the library as if it were her own. She complained to people about using it even though it was in a common, open area and accessible for their use, in contrast to Hoffman's computer, which was behind a door and for which people asked her permission to use. She actually heard Ziznewski yell at others about using it and, as a result, Hoffman believed that every one "felt afraid" to use the common computer. She recalled one particular incident in which Ziznewski complained in her presence about the band director having used the computer in her area when she found a printout of a band schedule there.

In addition, Hoffman felt that the teachers' morale was low because of the actions of Ziznewski. They had to "tiptoe" around her to avoid her and feared recommending their children for BSI. Hoffman also felt it necessary to engage in such avoidance tactics herself because she did not like confrontation or the need to justify herself with Ziznewski, whose tone was often one of yelling, in a raised tone, and confrontational. Teachers also did not like to bring their children's issues up to the I& RS committee for fear of being berrated by Ziznewski who would often challenge the recommendations but failed to offer any realistic, relevant proofs in contradiction.

Overall, she felt that Ziznewski was "disturbed" because she was uneven in her responses from day to day. It would then translate into it being either a good day or a bad day accordingly for all concerned. She reported her concerns to Dr. Banks in November, 2006 as well as during the course of an interview regarding an Affirmative Action Investigation in March, 2007.

On March 23, 2007, at 2:00 PM, Hoffman approached Young and was upset that Ziznewski "demanded" to meet with her that day in order to discuss the results of her interview with Dr. Banks from the previous November. Hoffman was so upset that she hid in the office bathroom as the office secretary announced the arrival of Ziznewski there. She did not want to argue with her. Hoffman felt upset, humiliated and distraught, mostly due to the raised voice by Ziznewski, which bothered her immensely. Ziznewski's calling for her into the office to the secretaries embarrassed her and she was concerned for her own safety and was uncomfortable with her work environment as a result. She cried and called her husband. A second complaint by her and a follow-up investigation investigation was generated by the office of Dr. Banks on March 26, 2007, even though Hoffman had briefly met with Ziznewski in the interim and agreed to be cordial with her. On cross examination, she estimated that during 2006-07, there were between five and ten times when she felt intimidated by Ziznewski.

However, the problems persisted into the 2007-08 school year even though by that point the library was reconfigured and restored to its former self and Ziznewski was reassigned to a separate room in the building, room 106. Finally, on February 14, 2008, Hoffman and other teachers met to discuss the ongoing problems regarding Ziznewski, including concerns that students were still not being serviced by her and that teachers were still being embarrassed by her at the I&RS meetings, these comments being made by principally by Figueroa and Pellicane who had concerns of about A.P. and how they had had Hoffman re-assess him, the results of which were in contrast to Ziznewski's results. Generally, at the I&RS meetings, Ziznewski persisted in berating the teachers, although she "did not knock down" the children themselves. However, she repeatedly and routinely insisted that the children had tested out too high and therefore did not warrant BSI instruction. Hoffman contended that her actions in testing out the students so high represented a rejection by her of appropriate services for them and that Ziznewski was not supporting the teachers regarding the needs of each child. She also stated it was the manner in which Ziznewski voiced her objections that was very objectionable.

On cross examination, she acknowledged that she had had no problems with Ziznewski in either the 2004-05 school year or the 2005-06 school year. But, she became aware of problems when teachers began to approach her about the need for BSI and Ziznewski's refusal to help provide such services. This started in approximately October or November, 2006. She recalled having been asked to do retesting of approximately ten to fifteen students from the Summer Literacy Academy program whose results were at variance with the Ziznewski results. Her results were more consistent with those running records of the others than with the DRA's done by Ziznewski.

She acknowledged that she knows of no district policy regarding an open/closed door policy in the library. No one ever complained to her about the need to open the hard-pulling, noisy doors to the library. But, she witnessed one to two heated discussions between Ziznewski and Zviderskis-Carroll about the door dispute. She also acknowledged that she did not find the open door to be disruptive to her, although she conceded that she was not teaching children herself, which could otherwise reasonably account for the concerns raised by the special education teacher. At the same time, however, the slamming of the door banging itself was disruptive. She also did read the memo from Young which said that the doors should remain shut when student teaching was under way.

JOSEPH DREW

Joseph Drew has served as an administrative substitute at Edison since February, 2008, where he was asked to do oversight in their guidance department. At that time he was asked to conduct a meeting with Figueroa, Pellicane, Hoffman and Susan Stoltenberg on February 14, 2008 relative to concerns pertaining to Ziznewski

(P-178). During the 2007-08 school year, he had been principal/ administrator of an Edison middle school from which he retired in June, 2008. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree in business from Trenton State College in 1973 and his Master of Arts degree in administration supervision from Rutgers University in 1976. He possesses New Jersey Department of Education certifications as teacher-business and marketing education (K through 12), guidance counselor and principal. He was previously employed as a teacher in Plainfield between 1973 and 1974, before becoming employed by Edison as a teacher coordinator of marketing and distributive education between 1974 and 1992, a guidance counselor in a middle school and high school between 1992 and 2001, and as principal of the Thomas Jefferson Middle School between 2001 and 2008.

The meeting which he conducted on February 14, 2008 was called at the behest of acting superintendent John DiMuzio since some teachers had had some complaints as indicated hereinabove. He indicated that he was only the scribner of their of their concerns and that he merely forwarded that report back to DiMuzio. The complaints which they raised against Ziznewski included:

1. Students were not being properly serviced by her. She picked and chose them based upon her teacher relationships and her own ideology.
2. Her belief system took precedence to the district initiatives such as ESL.
3. She disregarded district policy regarding latenesses.
4. She berated, discredited and embarrassed others in front of parents, students and peers.
5. Staff members were fearful of her due to her irrational outbreaks, emotional Swayze behavior and erratic behaviors that resulted in the teachers feeling uncomfortable around her and going out of their way to avoid her.
6. These teachers felt that the district had not followed through on solving the problem regarding her and had been led to believe that Ziznewski would not return to their building in September, 2007.
7. Her membership and service on the I&RS Committee was seen as being negative and detrimental to the school.

8. They were concerned that the complaints and concerns which had been raised by various staff personnel were not held in confidence the previous year. As a result, she targeted those who did come forward and others were now were fearful about saying anything because of the backlash from her.

JOHN DIMUZIO

John DiMuzio has served as the acting superintendent of schools for Edison since November, 2007. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree in health and physical education from Missouri Valley College in 1967, his Master of Arts degree in administration and supervision from Kean University in 1972 and a Master of Arts degree in health and physical education from Montclair State College in 1984. He possesses New Jersey Department of Education certificates as principal, supervisor, chief school administrator, teacher of physical education, health and drivers education (K through 12). He began his employment at Edison in 1969 as a teacher of physical education at the J.P. Stevens High School, served as the chair of the Department of Physical Education at that high school between 1972 and 1984, was supervisor of health and physical education for the District between 19841988 as well as its director of that department between 1988 through 1997, was principal of the Herbert Hoover Middle School between 1997 and 1998 and director of personnel for the District between 1998 and 2007, before assuming his current post with the District. As acting superintendent he works with teachers, supervisors, staff, and handles such areas as budget issues, bonds, and concerns of the entire Board of Education for the 14,300 students within the District. He oversees approximately 2000 employees currently.

He first got to know about Ziznewski after receiving various complaint letters about his in his capacity as district director of personnel starting in approximately September and October, 2007. He did not know her before then. Upon receipt of the various complaints from the staff members, he interviewed them through October, 2007, and recorded their concerns, which are reflected in his report regarding an Affirmative Action Investigation all of which occurred after Gerald Young had gotten a letter dated October 7, 2007, from teacher Kathleen Sica who claimed that she had been verbally harassed by Ziznewski during the weeks of September 21 and 28 as well as October 8, 2007. Based upon his investigation, he concluded that Ziznewski had acted inappropriately on six occasions.

The first complaint was by Sica and related to Ziznewski being negative with her about taking three children for BSI instruction and being verbally harassed by her in the process, which she characterized as being abrasive, hostile responses by her (P-176 at Bates page EBOE00580 and "Exhibit A"-EBOE0588-591).

Complaint number 2 was by Mary Schaefer in her letter dated October 10, 2007, in which she reported an "unpleasant incident" which had occurred on October 5, 2007, at which time Ziznewski became irritated and raised her voice in speaking to Schaefer in front of her students. Ziznewski then re-appeared twenty minutes later to engage in a further discussion in the presence of students, which timing Schaefer also found to be inappropriate, patronizing, unprofessional and her physical presence was "unsettling" ("Exhibit C"-EBOE00592). DiMuzio began to see a pattern emerging about BSI children not getting required instructions from Ziznewski and, further, that the teacher was being once again harassed by her as Ziznewski refused to take seven of Schaefer's students for BSI. Ziznewski's response was that it was too much work for her.

The third complaint was by Diane Keane which was received on October 18, 2007, in which she complained that she observed Ziznewski screaming at a "meeting" in the building, which she subsequently was advised was not actually a meeting but a session which Ziznewski held with two first grade teachers. She was shocked with a display by Ziznewski and that she had heard no responses from the other the teachers during that exchange, but just Ziznewski's loud voice.("Exhibit D"-EBOE00593).

A fourth complaint came from Jennifer Figueroa, dated October 29, 2007, who indicated that she had been very upset about the hostile work environment and the fact that services were not still being provided to her BSI students by Ziznewski, as well as her indication that the harassment against her by Ziznewski had continued from the previous year dating back to October, 2006 ("Exhibit E"-EBOE00594-597).

The fifth complaint was by Toni-Ann Hooker in her letter dated November 1, 2007, who was extremely upset with remarks made by Ziznewski directed to her in which she accused Hooker of having "jumped on the bandwagon" against her and her announcement that Ziznewski threatened a lawsuit against her in retaliation. ("Exhibit G"-EBOE00601).

The six complaint was a second complaint by Diane Keane, dated November 2, 2007, who was extremely upset when she observed Ziznewski yell at Hooker in the presence of her children at her classroom at 8:55 AM. This made Keane upset for the rest of the day (P-176 at Bates page EBOE 00584).

In addition, Gerald Young filed complaints regarding his upset with her in which she had humiliated him on October 16, 2007, in the hallway of the school and which was done in the presence of parents, students and staff in the area ("Exhibit I"-EBOE00603).

He interviewed Ziznewski on November 15, 2007, and a follow-up interview was conducted by Board attorney Mary Smith on January 4, 2008, in the presence of her then attorney Mark Lawrence, who had gotten ill early during the first meeting. Ziznewski "basically" denied every accusation even in the face of all of the individual complaints by the various teachers. She failed to acknowledge any responsibility for her conduct. After reviewing all of the complaints and considering all of the concerns of the parties, he concluded that she was guilty of misconduct. He found that all the complaints were credible and all of the complainants appeared to be genuinely upset with the hostile environment which she generated as well as the failure to get services for their children from her. He further concluded that there was an ongoing problem in that school. He also was concerned that Young was upset that this type of an attitude was going on in his school and that it was detrimental to the children's education. In the process, he discounted the replies by Ziznewski since so many complaints had come forward and all of those complainants appeared to be genuinely upset. Further, her demeanor when he discussed it with her was one of total belligerency regarding all the teachers and what they had said about her.

On cross-examination, he noted that some of the complaint letters came directly to him while some had been sent to Young, who then had them forwarded to him. It also did not strike him as being strange that virtually all of those complaints were generated within a three week period. Regarding the Keane complaints, although she was not confronted directly by Ziznewski, he found that Ziznewski's actions witnessed by Keane were nonetheless hostile to the general environment, which had resulted in and caused Keane significant upset. He had no idea if the superintendent of schools did anything in response to his Affirmative Action report because it was not yet his job as of October, 2007. But then another teacher complaint was filed in either January or February, 2008 which he then turned over to Joseph Drew to act upon. He never determined which students did receive BSI. That was the job of Dr. Traficante. Martin Smith also did an investigation regarding the ESL problems.

However, by April, 2008, he had another role when he preferred new charges against Ziznewski because he concluded that children were not receiving appropriate services based upon the information being supplied by his professional staff at the time. In addition, Ziznewski had previously received a halt to her increment, which can be viewed as a first step in such discipline. He also noted that on July 3, 2007, Dr. Banks had written to Ziznewski about her misconducts up to that point and put her on notice about her actions. This constituted counseling regarding her actions as a prelude to tenure charges (P-166).

DiMuzio also discussed the Harassment Policy of the Edison Board of Education, which had been adopted on September 26, 1986 and revised on January 21, 2003 (P-154). It was his opinion that Ziznewski had violated proper school conduct by her harassment and intimidation over fellow staff members at the school. In relevant part, the policy states "Harassment, intimidation, or bullying, like other disruptive or violent behaviors, is conduct that disrupt both a student's ability to learn and a school's ability to educate students in a safe environment. Since students learn by example, employees, staff members, vendors or the visitors and students themselves must demonstrate appropriate behavior, treat others with civility and respect, and refuse to tolerate harassment, intimidation or bullying." (Bates page at EBOE00505). In that regard he felt that the mental stresses which the fellow teachers were experiencing constituted harassment. Educationally, he felt that the Marshall School would be better without her there as a result. Thus, her inefficiency in providing services was not just the only issue against her. The whole school environment was deteriorating and was not conducive to learning. That is why he initially suspended her with pay, effective April 15, 2008, after which he filed the tenure charges.

Toni-Ann Hooker

Toni-Ann Hooker has been a second grade teacher at Edison since the 1996-97 school year, after having served as a substitute teacher/paraprofessional handicapped preschool teacher between September, 1995 and 1996. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree in elementary education from Keane College in 1995 and possesses a certification as a teacher of elementary education, grades K through 5. She started as a first grade teacher at Marshall in the 1996-97 school year and has been assigned to the second grade there since then.

She got to know Ziznewski, who came to Marshall as a reading specialist, whose function was to pull out students for more concentrated work based on their individual needs. Over time she felt hesitant to discuss children's issues with her and felt intimidated in the way Ziznewski spoke to her. On November 1, 2007, she wrote a letter "To whom it may concern" regarding Ziznewski's treatment of her (P-176 at Bates page EBOE00601). In that letter she noted how, at 8:55 AM on that date, as she attempted to greet her children at the school, Ziznewski approached her from the library area and stated that she felt that Hooker had "jumped on the bandwagon against her." She also threatened to sue her, as Ziznewski told her to hire a lawyer. She found it extremely difficult to compose herself in order to teach that morning, her heart continued to pound and her hands would not stop trembling. She felt panicked, threatened and vulnerable.

The incident occurred as she had stood outside of her classroom (P-185) and as they both stood approximately only 5 feet away from each other, which she characterized as "conversational" distance. Children were passing by her and entering their classroom at the time. She noted that all of this activity occurred in the middle wing of the school which is where the first and second grade classes are clustered. Although Ziznewski's conversational tone started out satisfactorily, it increased in volume and got so loud so that it caught the attention of the children, some of whom later asked her "Is Mrs. Z. mad at you?" and "Are you OK?" She noted that she said nothing in reply to the challenges by Ziznewski. She was not only upset for her children being exposed to those actions but she felt upset for being yelled that after having been threatened by Ziznewski.

Then, later, at approximately 10:45 AM, as Hooker walked her children to the library to pick out books, Ziznewski approached her again, this time with her students behind her and began yelling again. Hooker got her children to the library, had them seated and then she turned them over to a resource room teacher so that she could get to the main office. At that point Ziznewski told her not to go to that office and "complain about me." She was forced to recompose herself in order to make it through the rest of the day and reported her concerns immediately thereafter. In the process, she had seriously contemplating taking a half day off because of her upset, but she drew upon her professionalism to make it through the rest of the day.

Prior thereto, in October, 2007, she heard a lot of yelling in the building, after which Diane Keane came out from Room 102 and asked if she had heard the commotion which was going on inside the room. Hooker said she had thought it was Ziznewski on the phone but was told by Keane that two other teachers (first grade teachers Sica and Garabotto) were in Ziznewski's classroom and were being yelled at by her. Ziznewski had an aggressive tone to her voice and her volume was extremely loud. They both then packed up and left the building, but in the process, she asked the head custodian to make sure that everyone got out of the building. She later found out that there had been a dispute between Ziznewski and the two teachers about BSI services regarding some of their children. She documented the event to Mr. Young after Kathleen Sica asked her to do so. Young then wrote to Superintendent Toth on November 12, 2007, and memorialized the concerns raised by Hooker and Keane as well as their meeting with DiMuzio relative thereto (P-175). She knew that her "To whom it may concern" letter would go to Young and then be passed on elsewhere based upon her knowledge that Jennifer Figueroa had told her that she had done the same.

In addition, Ziznewski did not service all of Hooker's children consistently due to her periodic latenesses and nonappearances. This was done so much that the children only received one half of their expected scheduled services from Ziznewski. But she was fearful to challenge Ziznewski as a result of the history they had between them as well as the constant rumors about Ziznewski's confronting of fellow colleagues. It was the frequency of Ziznewski's non-participation in servicing the students that was the problem. Most of the time she received notice about the "no shows" by Ziznewski through the Young, who announced on the P. A. system that there would be no general instruction to all of her children by their reading specialist for the day. But then there are also times when she just did not show up so Hooker took it upon herself to absorb the children into her daily schedule.

She acknowledged on cross examination that, prior to the October incident, she had had no personal problems with Ziznewski, although that she did have prior concerns at I&RS committee meetings where she could not get BSi services for her children due to the resistance by Ziznewski, who consistently reported DRA levels three to four times higher than her own. There was also raised voice verbal resistance by Ziznewski at those meetings when she disputed Hooker's findings. And, although she never asked to see Ziznewski's DRA's, Hooker did have her own proofs to support her position at those meetings. She noted that she wrote the November 1, 2007, memo because she had felt threatened by the lawsuit threat and she did not believe that she had done anything wrong to deserve the threat. She and numerous of her other colleagues also found it necessary to sidestep Ziznewski's room by going other ways throughout the school or keeping their own doors closed in order to avoid contact with her. In fact, during the 2007-08 school year, Hooker would even detour through the new construction area at the school in order to avoid her.

SANDRA PELLICANE

Sandra Pellicane is a special education teacher at Edison, where she has been employed since 1986. Although she previously serviced all grade levels at Marshall, she has most recently been assigned to just the second grade level. In 2006-07, she conducted the pull out resource room for math and language arts and in 2007-08 she was the in-class special education teacher with the classroom of Jennifer Figueroa. She obtained her Bachelor of Arts degree from (then) Trenton State College in 1967 in the area of deaf and hearing impaired for grades K through 12, and thereafter taught for three years at the Katzenbach School for the Deaf, followed by part time teaching thereafter for a period of time as she raised her family. She had received her Teacher of the Deaf and Hearing Impaired certificate 1967 and her Teacher of the Handicapped certificate in 1985. As indicated hereinabove, she returned to full time teaching in 1986 when she joined the Marshall School staff.

The overly crowded nature of Marshall caused her room assignment in the 2004-05 and 2005-06 school years to be a "station" in the school library, which was divided into three sections, with Ziznewski having almost one half of the total area and where she and another teacher, Mrs. Rohan, a special education teacher, split the remaining portion of the room. She had first met Ziznewski in approximately 1990 at which time Ziznewski was a part time reading specialist. But she had no real involvement with her until Ziznewski returned to Marshall in approximately 2004 or 2005, at which time the shared room arrangement took place for two years. Bookcases divided the individual "rooms" with the one between her and Ziznewski being approximately 5 feet tall are the others being only 4 feet tall between her and Rohan.

Pellicane would start her day there at 9:10 AM, which was the same class room start time as Ziznewski. Pellicane would frequently arrived at 8:35 AM before commencing her official classroom duties. It was not a quiet space since all three teachers teach at five to six children there and might be teaching all at the same time, depending upon their respective prep periods. It was her understanding that all of three teachers would be expected to attempt to cooperate due to the noise levels. However, notwithstanding that understanding, Ziznewski would frequently use her cell phone during the class day. It was not unusual for her phone to ring four to five times per day. Pellicane found that practice to be very annoying and disturbing to her as well as for her children, who would themselves call out and say that Ziznewski's phone was ringing. She would tell them to just ignore it. She finally felt compelled to ask Ziznewski to tone it down and to change her distinctive ring. Although she did change the ring, she nonetheless persisted in using the phone on a daily basis. Pellicane felt that her actions were very unprofessional. In addition, the persistent daily use loudness of Ziznewski on those phone calls made Pellicane almost feel like she was forced to "eavesdrop" since she was able to hear a large amount of the discussions during those calls, which included matters involving the mother of Ziznewski, as well as her students at Middlesex County College (where Ziznewski apparently worked part time) as well as her own children. Thus, when her request for cooperation failed, Pellicane, who was also a union representative at the Marshall School building, went to Mr. Young and asked him to re-issue the cell phone policy, which he did do by circulating a paper copy policy and then announcing it over the public address system. But that failed to get any positive results and Ziznewski continued to use the cell phone, which continued to be disruptive to her and her class. On cross examination she indicated that, by contrast, Rohan's phone rang only rarely and those instances only occurred on her prep periods or during lunch, so none of it interfered with or disturbed Pellicane or her class. She also noted that it was the persistent ringing of Ziznewski's phone and her constant talking on the phone about private matters which disturbed Pellicane. It was clear that she was not talking about student business. Rather, she talked to lawyers and others, including her family, on issues relating to the illness of her mother leading up to her mother's eventual death.

In June, 2007, Pellicane and another teacher, fellow union representative Diane Keane, complained to Young about Ziznewski having "bullied" another teacher, Melissa Smith-Zeichner after she had come to them in their union capacity and was upset about having been screamed at by Ziznewski (P-162). Smith-Zeichner is a niece of Martin Smith, the Edison World Language (ESL) supervisor. Ziznewski had blamed her for having "ratted" on her to Martin Smith about not having provided ESL services.

Pellicane noted that, although Ziznewski never challenged her directly, other teachers at Marshall had been so compromised by Ziznewski and they complained to her and Diane Keane, who were the union representatives assigned to that building at the time. She felt that Young should handle the complaint situations since the problems were above their job descriptions, so they filed an Affirmative Action complaint on June 15, 2007 (P-162). They were just attempting to keep the building calm under the circumstances. It was her opinion the Ziznewski's challenges were inappropriate. She was always yelling at people and the union representatives just wanted to keep the building together. Ziznewski was, as she wrote it, " eroding the morale in the building." (P-162 at Bates page 561).

Further, she was concerned that children were not being properly serviced by her. Ziznewski also had a negative impact upon the faculty and school environment because she would show up late for class approximately two to three times per week, at which point student schedules would be pushed up and around, which further upset the faculty. Some latenesses would occur during the afternoon classes at which time the children would have been assembled there in her part of the room (P-187) and would be fooling around in the absence of Ziznewski. As a result, she would send the children back to the regular classes at which point Ziznewski would get angry that her children were not in her class. This practice occurred approximately twice a week for a month. After Rohan and Pellicane broached the subject with Ziznewski, however, her afternoon tardinesses did end.

Although she never had any direct confrontation with Ziznewski, she recalled an incident which occurred sometime in approximately May or June, 2007 at a time when Pellicane was outside of the office of Young at approximately 4:15 to 4:20 PM. All of a sudden she heard Ziznewski "screaming" from inside the office of Young although she could not recall the exact words that she stated. She heard no response at all from Young. The tirade lasted for approximately five minutes. She was concerned whether she should call for help from someone, which she then determined not to do at the moment. Instead, she later spoke to Diane Keane about it and did later speak to Young to make sure that he was okay. She did not speak to Ziznewski about it.

On July 11, 2007, Pellicane and Keane received an e-mail from Ziznewski in which she expressed concerns about purported harassments by them or their daughters-in-law before Dr. Banks (P-168). Pellicane did nothing in response to this e-mail except to give it to Dr. Banks. This e-mail upset her because she had understood that her concerns in her Affirmative Action complaint, which she had previously filed with the administration on June 15, 2007, were to be confidential. She noted that she and Keane stopped being union representatives in the 2007-08 school year because they had felt too much pressure by Ziznewski as well as the complaints by the other teachers which took them out of the classrooms too much and took them away from the responsibility over their children. (Pellicane is now a representative again but her union job issues are only very "soft" [presumably meaning that they are less intense] since Ziznewski is no longer there.)

On January 17, 2008, Pellicane participated in a conference regarding the child A.P. since she was the inclusion special education teacher in the classroom with Jennifer Figueroa. A.P. was a struggling reader, even though Ziznewski felt that he was not eligible for BSI. Pellicane disagreed and felt that he struggled. In addition, he had been recommended by Mrs. Schaefer from the first grade the year before. The meeting on January 17, 2008, was embarrassing. Ziznewski contradicted Figueroa in front of the parent. Pellicane felt that it was wrong to disagree with another professional in front of a parent. Pellicane also felt that A.P. needed the extra help and concurred with Figueroa but neither Figueroa nor Pellicane chose to argue back at Ziznewski in front of the parent. They were both embarrassed by her actions there. Then, late sometime later on, Ziznewski brought in a tape recording sampling of A.P.'s reading which she presented to the members at an unscheduled time at an I&RS meeting even though A.P. was not even on the agenda schedule for that meeting. Pellicane felt that it was inappropriate to do so. Young asked Ziznewski to stop the tape, to which she then complied.

She later participated in a special meeting with various teachers on February 14, 2008, at which time eight listed comments regarding the inappropriate actions by Ziznewski were discussed (P-178). She felt that Ziznewski was involved in backlashing and bullying other teachers.

Adrienne Sviderskis-Carroll

Adrienne Sviderskis-Carroll is a special education teacher at Marshall where she has been employed since August, 2003. She initially started as a second grade special education teacher but moved on to the fourth grade commencing in 2004. She has been on personal leave since June, 2007. She obtained her Bachelor of Science degree from William Patterson University in 2003 in the area of teacher of the handicapped. She possesses certificates as a teacher of the handicapped and elementary education, grades K through 5. During the 2006-07 school year she was a fourth grade resource room and in-class support teacher for part of the year. In February, 2007, she was assigned to the resource center in the library where she taught math and language arts. The library was divided up into class centers that were separated only by book stack dividers which were no more than 5 feet tall. She was assigned three children who were very easily distractible, both visually and hearing-wise. In September, she was assigned the front area of the library by "default" after she found that Ziznewski had already claimed the middle zone upon her arrival prior to the commencement of the school year. She had originally offered to have Ziznewski have the front area since Ziznewski claimed to her that she was claustrophobic. Gerald Young had also told her about the claustrophobia. Ziznewski nonetheless chose the middle area instead and set up her classroom there. The distractible nature of the front area caused Sviderskis-Carroll to complain to Young who told her to "wing it" without partitions at the beginning of the school year, which ultimately arrived by the end of September, 2006.

Eventually, she felt compelled to close the hallway door in order to also help with the noise, since that was also disturbing to her children. Everyone agreed to her preference in that regard except for Ziznewski, who persisted in reopening the door and keeping it open, which was based upon her continued explanation that she was claustrophobic. Sviderskis-Carroll had offered to exchange the areas early on but Ziznewski had rejected that offer. She also recalled that on several occasions Ziznewski would stand outside the rear door of the area and talk on the cell phone, which she understood was in violation of school policy. And her cell phone would ring sometimes even before Ziznewski got to that location. Those incidents occurred "way more than ten times". Ziznewski talked while her children were present and distracted them. She would frequently get a barrage of comments from her children who stated that "the phone's ringing. The phone's ringing." As a result, their ability to concentrate and learn was greatly impacted.

Regarding the ongoing door problem, every time she closed the library door, Ziznewski would get up and open it. She would also begin humming, making loud noises and tell her that the door was to remain open, all this occurring in the presence of her children, who would ask her why Ziznewski was "yelling" at her. Ziznewski also referred to her students as "those kids" in front of her students, which she connected as being derogatorily done by her.

On October 20, 2006, as Sviderskis-Carroll was talking privately to Ami Hoffman, Ziznewski approached, listened in and then "leered" at her. She viewed this as a "final straw." She was very upset and was forced to leave the area in order recover her composure. Upon her return, however, the door opening problem began again and the unrelenting cell phone ringing started up once more. On cross examination, she indicated that she felt that Ziznewski was trying to intimidate her in order to have her "back down" regarding her expressed concerns regarding the door and cell phone usage. Her perception was that Ziznewski was trying to bully her so that she could continue to do what she wanted to do.

Her supervisor also spoke to Ziznewski about it and Mr. Young sent a memo on October 26, 2006 to her, Ziznewski and the physical education teachers, in which he indicated that: "Due to the distractability of the special education students in the library, it is necessary to keep the library and gym doors closed at all times throughout the entire day..." (P-136). However, Ziznewski persisted in keeping the door open, which practice continued throughout the entire year. This also occurred even though she was aware that, on November 3, 2006, Young wrote to Ziznewski and warned her that cell phone usage by teachers was prohibited when students were present and had ordered her to discontinue the practice immediately. In addition, he reminded her that he had previously advised her in a memo on October 26, 2006, regarding the necessity to keep the library door closed and that her failure to keep the outside door to the library closed could be a basis for her insubordination (P-139). In addition, she knew that virtually every day, Mr. Young would make the morning announcements over the loudspeaker system at which time he remind teachers about not using cell phones during the day. On cross examination, she acknowledged that the library doors pushed outward, were very heavy, and made typical disturbing noises.

She was interviewed as part of an Affirmative Action Investigation on November 2, 2006, at which time she recited her ongoing concerns regarding the persistent door problem and cell phone usage by Ziznewski (P-155 at pages 514-516). In that interview she had indicated that on more than one occasion, Ziznewski had "gotten in her face, screaming at her" in front of her children and that even her students were intimidated by Ziznewski. She also indicated that she was teaching under a great deal of stress and that the blatant disregard of administrative directives by Ziznewski was very frustrating.

On October 23, 2006, Ziznewski had also made an issue about the fact that one of the computers in the library was for her exclusive use. Ziznewski also referenced the students of Sviderskis-Carroll as being "those kids" in a condescending manner once again in her discussion about her exclusive use of the computer with the library paraprofessional. Further, on November 1, 2006, Ziznewski's cell phone rang four separate times after she had placed it in Hoffman's office while Hoffman was away for the day. She definitely recognized the phone ring as belonging to Ziznewski. But she was baffled about the fact that the phone was there since Hoffman had previously told her that she was not aware that Ziznewski was placing her phone in her office in her absence. She personally recognized and saw the "stuff" belonging to Ziznewski in the Hoffman office on that date.

On further cross-examination, she indicated that, although she had started registering complaints to Young about Ziznewski in September, 2006, she none the less stopped publicly citing any of her complaints after Christmas. She felt it was futile and draining upon her and her ability to service her students. At the time she thought that there was a lack of enforcement from her perspective as a teacher, even though Ziznewski appeared to violate rules of the school which she personally followed. As a result, she felt that the disregard of those rules by Ziznewski represented a huge breakdown in the system and caused a morale problem to persist.

Gerald Young

Gerald Young is employed by Edison as an elementary school principal and he has been assigned to the Marshall School since 1992.He possesses a Master of Arts degree as a supervisor and administrator which he received from Rutgers University in 1962 after receiving his Bachelor of Arts degree in history, German and elementary education (K. through 8) from Rutgers College in 1955. He also possesses 30 credits from the Graduate School of Education there. He additionally has certifications in grades K. through 8 as a teacher as well as administrator and supervisor, with a principal's endorsement. He has been employed by Edison since 1957. Marshall is a K through 5 school and contains approximately 525 to 540 children. The grades are segregated into various wings.

He has known Ziznewski as being a veteran of the Edison school system, as well as being a fellow church member as well as a neighbor in the adjacent community of Metuchen. She arrived in his school during the 2004-05 school year and assumed the role of a reading specialist there.She was the only reading specialist at the time along with approximately 25 other teachers. She taken over from another reading specialist who had family problems which had forced that specialist into a part time position. However, since Marshall needed a fulltime reading specialist, Ziznewski was reassigned to Marshall. It is such an important job that they must have one on site during the entire school day.

He noted that there is a strong need for BSI, whose students are pulled out to receive specialized help by the reading specialist in such areas as coding of words, comprehension as well as fluid reading in order to help give support to the classroom teachers. Reading specialists are required to work primarily with grades 1 and 2. He feels that he generally has a harmonious school of staff members, although this was not always the case. The arrival of Ziznewski caused a significant amount of tension to escalate over time starting with her arrival of 2004. Her increased shouting and yelling became "bombastic" especially for the children and especially if she did not want any certain child in her room. After awhile, many of the teachers became afraid to get involved with her and the tension became "horrific", especially after 2007, at which time harassment issues were brought up and the district's Affirmative Action Officer had to get involved. Ziznewski would run up to Young and yell at him when something did not go her way. She also did not believe that she had two supervisors and only insisted that Deborah Bredahl was her supervisor. Sandra Pellicane could not take it. Some of the teachers were even forced to take off in the afternoon when it got so out of hand with the tensions generated by Ziznewski. Since he had developed a personal pride in the atmosphere and success of Marshall over time, he even personally went home "in tears" many nights as he saw his "building collapse."

The first part of the year of 2004-05 as Ziznewski was reassigned there was a pretty "calm" year initially but then things went down hill later on in the year as Ziznewski started to present negative attitudes there. The next school year became horrible, heated, argumentative and a "travesty" and it got so bad that Young indicated it was difficult to describe the extent of it. Young said that he had tried to give Ziznewski a chance to acclimate and he was sensitive to the need to adjust. Therefore, he tried to give her some initial slack in order to make the transition into the environment. He had taken her at his school at the specific request of the superintendent who had told him that it would be a "fresh start" for her there.

However, during the 2005-06 school year, problems arose rather quickly. A major problem was that communications by her with others began to break down. In addition, she began to have problems coming to work on time and providing some services pursuant to her authorized schedule. He became aware of a problem which occurred between Ziznewski and Mary Schaefer in 2004 regarding the failure of Ziznewski to provide BSI services for six of the Schaefer children. In particular, Schaefer had demonstrated to him that the test results registered by Ziznewski appeared to be excessively high in contrast to the prior tests scores administered by other teachers. Young was especially "shocked" about the student L.O., who had just been exited from the BSI program by Ziznewski. Other students also had problems in the same realm such as AM and V.Q. (P-1). Schaefer had told him that of the six students, three and had made progress but Schaefer wanted to continue BSI services until the end of the year in order to ensure a secure foundation and to increase their confidence levels in the areas of reading, writing and class participation, which concerns she had shared with Ziznewski. As a result, he talked to Ziznewski during the year about some students not having been serviced from BSI.

The school year of 2006-07 began with additional problems regarding Ziznewski, which involved her failure to timely meet with her assigned students by the middle of October, and which concern developed after he had received complaints from teachers six weeks into the year about their respective children not getting such services from her. They were supposed to start getting such services from Ziznewski within two to three weeks of the start of the year. Yet, he was forced to write to the assistant superintendent, Dr. Banks, on October 18, 2006, at which time he expressed his concerns about those delayed services (P-3). This occurred after he had spoken to Ziznewski about getting the program started, at which time she had responded that it was "complicated". He did not understand that answer since he knew that in past years it always been worked out much earlier. Further, the Ziznewski schedule should not have been a problem at all. This represented the longest delay he had ever witnessed in his entire time as an educator. He sent the memo to Dr. Banks because her inaction was beyond acceptable limits at any time.

Further, it was supposed to be a push-in program, but Ziznewski wanted a pull-out program there, even though he had told her that it was a push-in program and that it was part of Board policy. Accordingly, he directed her to push in those students, at which point she then said that she could not do it due to a sore back. He offered her an accommodation (i.e., a special chair) which she rejected. He recalled that he only relented after she brought in the medical note. Besides, the teachers did not like her ongoing "belligerency" in their classes anyway so it was just as well that she pulled out the students. He wanted to maintain harmony in the school. But he nonetheless told her that he still wanted her to aim to get back into a push-in setting.

Problems also began to arise in 2006 regarding the failure of Ziznewski to recognize the role and authority of her supervisors, Suzanne Capraro and Joan Hagie. Capraro and Hagie were elementary school supervisors over Ziznewski and, in that capacity, they represented both Young and the assistant superintendent, Dr. Traficante. He indicated that the supervisors have always overseen the reading specialists as well as the rest of the teaching staff and, as a result, any failure to respond to their supervision would be insubordination and a violation of school policy. Although Ziznewski persisted in insisting that Deborah Bredahl was her supervisor, Young indicated that Bredahl is only a tester and color and coordinator of titled/funded programs and merely sets up program guidelines for such areas as BSI. Further, Bredahl could not be considered any one's supervisor because she does not have the authority to observe, which authority, by contrast, both Capraro and Hagie possess, among other responsibilities.

Young participated at the October 24, 2006, meeting with Ziznewski at which time she appeared quite upset during the whole meeting. It was not productive because Ziznewski refused to participate in any conversations with either of her supervisors. There was no positive exchange of ideas. Ziznewski failed to respond to any of the questions which were proposed by the supervisors and she also refused to comply with the request to produce samples of her assessments and her lesson plan books. She persisted in utilizing Post-It Notes and hand them to her union representative, Mrs. Keane to verbalize for her. She was very hostile. The meeting did not go well.

On November 22, 2006, he wrote to Ziznewski in an effort to set up a follow-up meeting regarding the conference topics which had been articulated by the supervisors

(P-7). He indicated that the follow-up meeting was necessary because various teachers had complained to him that their students were not being pulled out on time, the schedule by Ziznewski was not being followed, and she was not even coming in on some days in order to service the children. In that memo he ordered her to bring her lesson plan book and four copies of the DRA's which she had administered. As of December 11, 2006, however, Young wrote to Dr. Traficante that they had had two cancellations of the second meeting by Ziznewski, although as of that date, at least, the BSI program was finally "functioning." (P-9). In that memo he further stated "I would like you to consider rescheduling the next meeting after the holiday break. Mrs. Ziznewski will only present us with a litany of lies and place blame on the teachers and me..." He also noted that, at least as of that point, it was not so much as believing anyone else versus Ziznewski, but, when so many others had complained about her, this appeared to be a pattern of not providing BSI services as well as teachers not being able to talk to Ziznewski. He also found it necessary to file his own Affirmative Action complaint against her after she announced publicly in the Marshall School main office that he was a hypocrite about taking up gifts at their mutual Catholic Church even though at the same time he was going after her and against her professionally. This pronouncement by her upset him greatly.

The second meeting was finally conducted on January 22, 2007, at which time Ziznewski was very hostile once again and proceeded again to wants again challenge the authority of the supervisors. She did not feel that she had to show the lesson plans to the supervisors. Nor did she provide the requested documents again. He viewed this as being a violation of an order from him.

During the rest of the year teachers kept coming in to him on a regular basis and frequently crying and expressing physically sickness about the conduct of Ziznewski against them. This included teachers such as Figueroa, Schaefer, Sica (who on one such occasion wanted to go home from school but then elected to stay), Keane (who got upset over hearing Ziznewski screaming at another teacher in the hallway), Hooker, Zazanis (who had overheard Ziznewski yelling at Young), and Peters.

The 2007-08 school year also involved increased tensions and disruptions by Ziznewski. On October 5, 2007, Young wrote to Bredahl that Ziznewski was not working closely with the teachers from grades 1, 2 and 3 regarding their BSI requirements and that she did not plan to take additional students from Sica (P-13). In the process, Ziznewski had become antagonistic and had come into Young's office screaming about Sica. During the early part of the year Sica had spoken to and written to Young many times about the "irrational nature" of Ziznewski (P-15). Then, on October 16, 2007, Young called a meeting with Figueroa about her concerns for students her not being serviced. At that time, Figueroa advised that she was upset with Ziznewski and about not getting anything done by her. His intention was to meet with them both in order to get some answers regarding the complaints by Figueroa. He had also seen Ziznewski raise her voice against Figueroa and Schaefer at times but they never raised theirs in return. He set the meeting with Figueroa, Ziznewski and himself for October 26, 2006, which he had directed her to attend, but she told him that she did not want to go, and, as a result, it never took place. As a consequence, he wrote to the superintendent, Ms. Carol Toth, on October 29, 2007, and advised her of the failure of Ziznewski to appear and respond to his order in that regard (P-23). He then set up another meeting for the next Thursday, which Figueroa was willing to attend in order to get her children serviced. However, Ziznewski failed to meet again. This was insubordination. Then, on October 30, 2007, Ziznewski burst into Young's office and implied and yelled at him about having been picked on by other people. She stormed out of his office after a 30 minute angry tirade at him (P-174).

He also discussed Schaefer's problems with Ziznewski and her BSI children numerous times (P-60). He also encouraged Capraro to come to the school to discuss any questions with all the staff on November 13, 2007, since he had felt the need to have her meet with everyone (P-25). In the process he wanted to have answers given to all their problems in their respective prep periods. But problems persisted. On January 17, 2008, Schaefer wrote to Young about the lack of services for several of her children to date, in which a number of them had not been receiving consistent services from Ziznewski. Schaefer reported that Ziznewski was supposed to be in at 8:45 AM, but was arriving late, even though her assigned "duty" was between 8:45 and 9:00 AM.

By district policy, the reading specialist was to be available to discuss unique problems during that time. Thus, all of the teachers knew that Ziznewski was supposed to be there. But she failed to consistently follow that requirement at least for the period of the middle of October through the end of October, 2007, during which time teachers complained that she was coming in late at approximately 9:15 to 9:30 AM. Young noted that there was no record of her timely attendance during that period and she never gave any explanation for her non-swiping of her access card for that period of time, even though he had sent her a memo on November 14, 2006 in which she reminded her that she did not swipe her card in any of the mornings as required by the superintendent (P-141), and notwithstanding the collective bargaining agreement which only referenced afternoon swiping. He did note that she had upon occasion called in that she would be late. He admitted that he encouraged Sica to keep a record of the absences and latenesses of Ziznewski. On January 17, 2008, he wrote to Dr. Traficante about Ziznewski not carrying out her schedule. There were also times when he would stop by to see her at her class, but she would not be there. When he later would ask her about it she would say that she had been out "visiting teachers" about their students during those times. However, he indicated that any such visitations should have happened in the morning during her 8:45 AM duty.

On numerous occasions, he heard Ziznewski announce that she did not believe in the DRA's. The mid year report was due in February but in March, 2008, Hagie wrote to Ziznewski and advised her that she had failed to report her midyear DRA levels in a timely fashion (P-37). The supervisors relied upon the need to have the DRA reports filed timely. He felt there was no reason why she could not have completed them on time since she had had many years of experience to meet these needs. When he asked her about her lack of compliance she shut him off by turning away from him. As a result, on March 6, 2008, Dr. Traficante wrote to Young and directed him to put Ziznewski on notice regarding her obligations to service BSI students and still complete her assessments at the same time (P-38). Further, included in this directive would be a notification to her that any attempt on her part to refuse to do her job would be reported immediately to the Acting Superintendent for further action. He sent that notice to her accordingly on March 7, 2008 (P-40). He then reported to Acting Superintendent DiMuzio that, after having given her that notice personally, she became quite angry and questioned how this could be done. She also announced to him that Hagie was not her boss and that Young was going to be in a lot of trouble because she intended to report "this situation" to the Commissioner of Education. He viewed that reaction by her as being presented to him in an intimidating matter. He then noted that, as late as March 10, 2008, Ziznewski made it clear that she still did not view Hagie as being her boss (P-42). On March 10, 2008, Hagie reported that Ziznewski refused to speak to her so he wrote her to indicate that the assessments had to be submitted to Hagie before March 17, 2008 (P-44). He further advised and recommended that she should take off three specific dates and release time to complete the task. Then he wrote her a second memo on the same case in which he further ordered that he wanted six sample DRA's from first grade and six samples from second grade which were to be forwarded to Hagie along with her assessments (P-45). He felt forced to write another letter to her on March 18, 2008, in order to explain the reason for the conference, which was scheduled with her for March 19, 2008, even though he previously had written her of the purpose of the meeting on March 13, 2008, which was that Hagie would then be present to discuss her DRA assessment procedures and answer any questions she had (P-47). He felt that she was being obstinate even at that stage in refusing to acknowledge the status and authority of Hagie.

At the meeting held on March 19, 2008, there was a discussion about the DRA's and her failure to follow the district procedures about the timeliness of following them. Some of the DRA's were still not completed, even though Ziznewski professed that she still had did not have enough time to complete the DRA's and despite the fact that, district-wide, others had completed their deadlines and, further, despite the fact that he had even provided her with three additional days in order to complete them. In addition, she had received help from Ami Hoffman in order to complete them at that point. Even at that stage, however, Ziznewski still challenged the use of DRA's and running records, even though these were well established district programs. Dr. Traficante once again raised the great concern that her inflated assessment results deterred supplemental instruction which was to be provided by her as a reading specialist (P-51).

The situation involving cell phone usage by staff members was also addressed by him in his testimony. He indicated he copied all staff members on the use of all phones and a prohibition of it during instruction time in light of the fact that a teacher had reported the Ziznewski was using it during instructional time. He also sent notices to parents as well as to staff and announced it periodically over the public address system. Yet, Ziznewski persisted in violating that policy, which was based upon the renewed complaints from other teachers who were affected by and offended by her flagrant disregard of the policy. In particular, on November 3, 2006, he specifically noticed Ziznewski not to use her cell phone when children were in class.

Young knew the child identified as A.P., who had been referred to Ziznewski for a period of time but who had insisted that he had better reading levels than others had tested him at (P-63). Jennifer Figueroa was particularly concerned about the status of that child and, as a result, on January 16, 2008, Young told Ziznewski that A.P. was in need of BSI and that his parents were concerned. He instructed her to begin BSI with A.P. immediately (emphasis added) and that he would be monitoring it (P-26). He noted that Ziznewski had already dropped him in September, 2007 and had denied him services since then. The meeting regarding A.P. was held with Ziznewski on January 17, 2008, which Young described as being "one of the most embarrassing parent-teacher conferences in my 53 years in education." (P-28). Ziznewski openly contradicted both Figueroa and Sandra Pellicane in the presence of the mother of A.P. even though both of them had indicated that A.P. did not read fluently and needed BSI. He felt that Ziznewski acted in a highly unprofessional manner. The other two teachers did not respond in kind and kept their professional bearing. The parent was confused after hearing her comments which, according to Figueroa, were misleading. She then indicated she intended to bring up the case of A.P. to the I&RS committee. Young was concerned that she would continue to bash Figueroa. At no time did Ziznewski indicate that she would work cooperatively with the classroom teacher.

He then wrote a memo to Dr. Traficante on January 29, 2008 (P-31), which he described as a "tough" letter by him since he had to mention how insulting Ziznewski had been to him when she popped into his office in an agitated state at one point and called him a "liar." He characterized her presentation as being a "tirade." Once again, she indicated to him that she was going to the Commissioner of Education. He noted that his office is not a sound insulated room and is accessible to earshot of lots of people, including parents and visitors. This merely added to the embarrassment of the moment. Figueroa wrote him on January 13, 2008, and once again recited the concerns about Ziznewski still failing to provide BSI services for him (P-59). He viewed this as being insubordination since she had disregarded his order to provide BSI for A.P.

He was also aware of the need for services for the sisters A.N. and A.N., grades two and one, respectively, for whom he had to ask for emergency supplemental instruction from Dr. Traficante on March 11, 2008, after Ziznewski had failed to provide BSI for them and even though their respective teachers had asked for this service (P-46). He had advised Ziznewski to provide for them in March but they still needed immediate after-school instruction. The approval for the extra help was authorized on March 13, 2008 (P-58). Ziznewski did not want to provide BSI for them but wanted to put them into the I&RS Committee first. She did relent, however, when Young told her to implement BSI and when he sought the supplemental instruction.

The problem regarding the ORS scores represented another extreme difficulty with Ziznewski. On September 26, 2006, Young wrote to Martin Smith and advised that after he had gone down to see Ziznewski and questioned her why she had not placed an ORS form in a second grader's folder as Smith had directed, she became "enraged" and told Young that she was going to submit a grievance against Smith because she felt that she was being discriminated against by Smith and that he should not be questioning her judgment. Young told her that the ORS must be completed, placed in the child's folder and to determine whether he needed further testing. However, Ziznewski did not want any further testing. Then, October 3, 2006, Young wrote to Ziznewski and asked her to forward to him on that same date all the ORS assessments she had completed on the new students for that year. He further indicated that those assessments should correspond to the request for an ORS assessment provided to the school upon each student's registration (P-66). All ORS folders must be in the files in the health office. He wrote her again on October 6, 2006, and indicated that he had to have from her a copy of all the students for whom she had done ORS since school began and he expected that information to be submitted to him before she left the building that day (P-117). He indicated she never complied with his directive to produce them at any time. He confirmed her noncompliance on October 10, 2006 (P-118). He thereafter ordered her again on November 22, 2006, to produce those results by December 1, 2006 (P-121), which she similarly failed to do.

He also ordered her on November 13, 2006, to attend a meeting on November 21, 2006, in order to address concerns pertaining to ESL screening, ESL program procedures for parent contact and for her to bring the ORS testing results which she had already completed (P-120). At that meeting, Ziznewski was once again extremely abusive and generated highly unprofessional conduct against primarily Martin Smith, who, by contrast, maintained a professional level of response. It was determined at that meeting that a number of students should have had ESL but the testing by Ziznewski failed to provide proper screening for them. She was invited to get her reports out of her car but she failed to do so and never produced them to Young at any time, despite his directive in that regard. At the same meeting, Young also reiterated the fact that Smith is the ESL program supervisor for all students in the school. Smith then indicated that the ESL parent waiver letter discussion must occur only between him and the child's parent.

This parent waiver letter issue emerged involving the student D.B. And it also created significant problems. Ziznewski had given D.B. the ORS and then told the father that D.B. should stay in the Marshall School and not go to Washington School, to which he had been previously assigned by the district. She admitted that she had told the parent of D.B. that the child should stay in Marshall and then, after Young told her not to do so, she persisted in pursuing that by saying that she would continue to talk to the parent and express her views if he approached her.

On June 15, 2007, another meeting was held with Ziznewski at which time it was brought up that she had in fact interacted with the parents of D.B., despite the prior November orders of Young to the contrary. Further, it was determined that, even though Ziznewski had conducted an original ORS which did not indicate the need for further assessment, the second screening, which was conducted by another teacher, indicated that the student did in fact need further screening. The father of D.B. had expressed confusion about what was going on based upon his ongoing interaction with Ziznewski, who, at that June meeting, also announced her self-appointed role as a child advocate. Young viewed her self pronouncements as being interference and an indicator of poor judgment. Further, her determination to continue discussion with the parent was an act insubordination as a result of their prior November conference. Accordingly, Young indicated that he would request the superintendent to make a recommendation to the Edison Board of Education to withhold and her employment and adjustment increments for the 2007-08 school year (P-125).

He also viewed her as being insubordinate regarding her failure to provide doctors' notes for three consecutive days for October 11, 12, and 13, 2006, pursuant to Article XX, page 44, item 5, of the Collective Bargaining Agreement of the teachers union (P-138), which he asked her to produce on October 30, 2006. He has to remind her again to produce the doctor's notes on November 20, 2006 (P-142) but she then only produced a note for the date of October 12, 2006, and not for the other two days. She never did produce doctors' notes for those other two days, in violation of policy and a direct order from him.

He also cited her with failure to swipe in with the use of her entry card for the period between October 16 through 30, 2006, pursuant to the requirements set forth by the superintendent of schools (P-141 and P-190), as indicated hereinabove. He periodically checked her required usage of that swipe card after October as well and she still rarely used the procedure. He also noted that she refused to sign for an Affirmative Action Investigation appearance envelope when he was asked to deliver it to her in December, 2006 (P-145), as well as his intent to deliver another confidential letter to her from Dr. Banks, dated June 19, 2007 (P-163). He felt that her actions in this regard were unprofessional. When he attempted to deliver the June letter and delivery receipt, she was abusive with him. He acknowledged that, although he may have made a mistake in attempting to present that letter to her in the library at the end of the school day since it was in the presence of others (which could have been a source of embarrassment), upon reflection, he thought perhaps that he could have done better by delivery of that notice to her in his office, except that the environment there was not any much less private.

He also felt that she exhibited highly inappropriate conduct when, on November 30, 2006, Ziznewski went to Young's secretary and indicated her that Young was a "hypocrite" for bringing up the communion gifts to the priest in their local Catholic church. Both he and his wife were "outraged" that someone would question his spirituality and he filed a complaint with Superintendent Carol Toth because of their upset and requested that some action be taken against Ziznewski for making those comments in school regarding his religious life. He then stated "I have been devastated by these remarks." (P-155 at page EBOE 00538). He also noted that Emily Zazanis, the Spanish teacher at Marshall School, also complained to Dr. Banks, assistant superintendent at the time, on January 10, 2007, for the manner in which Ziznewski had verbally abused Young on December 21 and December 22, 2006, at the school. She had indicated she was very upset by the conduct of Ziznewski against Young.

Young further made reference to an incident about the conduct by Ziznewski, which shocked him about his presentation to her of a routine birthday card/certificate, which he gave out to all of his staff members on a regular basis. Upon his return from Christmas vacation, he found his birthday greetings to Ziznewski ripped up and torn into pieces (P-147).

On March 23, 2007, he wrote to Dr. Banks and reported an incident regarding extreme upset expressed by Ami Hoffman, who had just had a confrontation with Ziznewski at approximately 2:00 PM on that date. Then Ziznewski was hostile with Young after school in her brief meeting with him as he attempted to present a letter from Dr. Banks to her, which she blamed upon Hoffman. Her body language was very threatening and she threatened to call Superintendent Toth about Young. He felt this was not good behavior by her after she had caused significant upset to another teacher earlier that day, which was a form of harassment. He then wrote again to Superintendent Toth on June 20, 2007, and complained once again about her intimidating outbursts of anger at individual teachers as well as his upset in having Ziznewski return to his school for the next year since the morale of the staff had been so damaged by her (P-165). But she was reassigned to him for the next year anyway, and her negative attitudes persisted. He admitted that he was still upset with her presence at Marshall in the 2007-08 school year since her attitude was eroding his school. Teachers were fearful to be in the same environment with her. Toni-Ann Hooker complained on November 1, 2007, that Ziznewski had threatened her with a lawsuit. Diane Keane was similarly verbally assaulted and threatened by her on the same day. Further, Young was then personally badgered by Ziznewski in his office about the incident. He reported this to Superintendent Toth on that same day (P-172) and on November 12, 2007 (P-176).

As a result of all of the above, Ziznewski was ultimately suspended from her teaching duties by March/April, 2008. At some point she called the school to inquire about her personal belongings having been shipped to a central warehouse. She had been told not to go back to the Marshall building, but at 7:00 PM she showed up anyway and waited to allow for her entry by anyone exiting or entering the building. As a result, she was nonetheless able to gain access to the building. He did not cite her with trespass even though she had screamed to him that he should "go rot."

On cross examination he indicated that there is nothing in writing to state the limit of the number of students who can be handled by any reading specialist. However, it is a practical issue. He supposed that she might have approximately 35 to 40 students in any given week. The issue involving Ziznewski not servicing the Schaefer children timely in 2004 could not involve him initially questioning the findings by Ziznewski, except that he was concerned that the scores appeared to be high even at that point (P-1). But he initially allowed Schaefer to take care of the problem herself and he did not recall if he even ever broached the subject with Ziznewski that year. However, after September, 2005, he claimed that he periodically did mention complaints to her about her not coordinating with teachers generally, and in particular, Figueroa. He tried to mediate meetings in order to address those concerns, but those attempts would frequently fail when Ziznewski would fail to show up and/or cooperate at those meetings. Then teachers would not even want to meet because of their fears of hostility from her. As a result, the problems began to build in the 2005-06 school year as a result of those teacher concerns. Ziznewski would get agitated and defensive I have when specific children were mentioned to her. Young contended that he did get involved and told Ziznewski to meet with those teachers to work out the servicing schedules and he also did tell her that he wanted certain children to be put into her program and to get started with programs as soon as possible. He primarily wanted the first and second graders serviced first, in accordance with district guidelines for push-in versus pull-out requirements. Yet, he did try to accommodate her by giving her the option for pull- out right from the first year that she was there because of her claimed back problems even though he indicated that he was not aware of any Americans with Disabilities Act request by her, as so contended and challenged of him on cross examination. He also noted that when he saw even her first tentative schedule, he was concerned that she should take more children and he told her to go back to the teachers in order to accommodate more children in the program.

In any event, Ziznewski did not have the right to refuse to produce the DRA results when the she was ordered by her supervisors no matter what her personal belief may have been about the viability of the DRA's or not. He did tell her to get certain children back in BSI, but she persisted that their test results were too high and that she stated that she was in charge of that program. She resisted him. As a result, the after-school academy helped facilitate the needs and servicing of children who needed help starting in 2006-07, despite the failure on the part of Ziznewski to provide regular class services for them.

Ultimately, he did recommend a withholding of her increment after he had been denied getting her transferred out of his school because of the devastation she was causing there from a staff morale standpoint. She did not fit into his school's "climate" and, as a result, he thought it might not be the best interest of and the best mix to have her continue there in 2007-08. Thus, when she stayed and there was no improvement in her working with other teachers, he felt that the withholding of the increment was a necessary next step or progression since she was not acting professionally. And, when the withholding of the increment failed to get her attention to improve, he did not disagree to prefer new charges or that it would be necessary since so many teachers have complained about her. Her failure to cooperate on a routine basis was a huge negative factor at the school. Thus, although he tried to reason with her on numerous occasions, she became increasingly defensive, angry, and hostile with him too.

Regarding her latenesses issues, he indicated that ultimately he could 'dock" a person for coming in late. However, he never did that with Ziznewski although he did discuss it with her. Even the upper grade teachers complained that she was getting away with latenesses. He also was concerned that she was periodically not available and on station even during many of her established scheduled periods and was thereby denying children their rights to receive their education during their assigned periods. Regarding the complaints by others about her failure to properly and timely attend her classes, he contended that the majority of the time in 2006-07, she did not start her classes on time (P-3). Sometimes she would call in that she was stuck in traffic. On other times, he was advised that she had slipped in the back door.

He was also aware through the "grapevine" that Ziznewski attempted to prep T. C., the parent of the G.C., in an effort to attack Mary Schaefer, even though he viewed Schaefer as being a "master teacher" (his term), who possessed an excellent track record, was very caring and embraced all of her students' needs. He also felt that Ziznewski was quite downright abusive to Schaefer, and Ziznewski appeared to have a vendetta relative to the BSI program. The main issue involving C.s child involved the continued matriculation of G.C. in BSI versus the parent's demand for the child to receive tutoring instead. The parent had heard glowing reports from Ziznewski about the progress of the child, even though in the classroom Schaefer had found the child to be faltering. Ziznewski got the parent riled again Schaefer so that she would ultimately claim that the Schaefer was incompetent. Further, Ziznewski kept getting involved with the parent in order to push that agenda and he felt that Ziznewski was very involved in the letter which T.C. wrote to Acting Superintendent DiMuzio on June 9, 2008 (P-48).

On further cross-examination, he acknowledged that in the staff performance assessment for Ziznewski for the period ending on May, 2007, he did recommend an increment for the period of 2006-07 (P-159). However, at the same time, he did express concern regarding her ESL and ORS screening and for better communications by her. And then, by October, 2007, he nonetheless felt compelled to advise Superintendent Toth about her escalating hostile and negative attitudes (P-171). He took no other action other than to attempt to persuade and plead with Ziznewski to use better decorum, and he discussed with her his great concerns about her attitude to him and his staff. He had told her that she should reform her attitude during the year. Thus, in order to avoid any further confrontation with her, he had an after-school academy created to supplement the services for students who were the subject of conflict between Ziznewski and the other teachers. This was further meant to defuse the increasing hostility which she was generating against them and keep them apart from her. Although he did order her to provide direct services to some students (such as A.G., whom she nonetheless failed to eventually service), and, although he could have ordered Ziznewski to service all of them, he instead chose to take the lesser course and, unfortunately, spend money at additional taxpayers' expense in the process in order to assist each and every one of the children who was affected. As a result of those additional efforts and redirection, A.P. was an example of a student who did not get needed services from Ziznewski but only got them through the after school academy.

On further cross-examination, he estimated that he had approximately ten to fifteen confrontations with Ziznewski in each school year. She would belittle and demean him. He did speak to his supervisors about her and he did file a harassment complaint against her accordingly. Nothing came out of that complaint other than Ziznewski being called in to address it. He did not believe that any discipline was ever meted out against her as a result of his complaint and upset.

T. C.

T.C. testified on behalf of Ziznewski. Her children go to Marshall School. In the 2007-08 year, her daughter G.C. was in BSI with Ziznewski. On January 16, 2008, Mary Schaefer met with her at a pre conference before a scheduled I&RS meeting regarding G.C. A week later, Schaefer called her at her employment at Lord and Taylor about concerns she had regarding G.C. in reading. Schaefer was her first grade teacher at the time and G.C. had been in BSI since approximately October, 2007. Her first language is Greek, although both Greek and English are spoken at home. She had never been in ESL and no one had ever recommended it. She contends that G.C. is proficient in reading English.

The meeting was held on January 24, 2008, and included several teachers, including Ziznewski, the school nurse, and Schaefer (who came in later), among others. Since Schaefer had previously said she had referred her to the I&RS committee, T.C. arrived with documentation about her daughter and how she was an individual. Schaefer brought a list of G.C's behaviors but nothing about her reading (P-29 at the EBOE00051 and 52). Prior to this, T.C. was not aware of any behavior problems with her daughter other than that she was slow to complete class work. It was an intimidating meeting. She was "shocked" by the Schaefer list and it created anxiety in her household because she never had had any prior information about it. There was no closure after that meeting, although they did agree to the use of ear phones and to have Schaefer work more closely with her at that time. She was so focused on the paper that she did not recall any Ziznewski comments, except that Ziznewski was a little in favor of G.C. and her belief that that her daughter's comprehension was up to speed. It was not a confrontational meeting, however, although she felt it necessary to speak again to the guidance counselor, Mrs. Stultenberg, the next morning since there was no real closure. As she dropped her child off at school on that day, she wanted to discuss the lack of closure so Stoltenberg brought in Ami Hoffman and later called in Young, which meeting took one-half hour. There was no real closure again, but just empathy expressed at that time.

A second meeting was held with Schaefer on February 8, 2008, between approximately 8:30 and 9:00 AM (and she did write to Schaefer immediately thereafter on the same date.)(P-35). She also enlisted Ziznewski's presence when she saw was in the hall upon her arrival, but Schaefer got confrontational with her. T.C. was upset about the use of the earphones and G.C. having cried when she was forced to wear them. T.C. was very "livid" that Schaefer did not respect her daughter's upset of having to wear the earphones or their "Greekness." The meeting lasted approximately fifteen to twenty minutes and she did not recall Ziznewski saying anything during it. However, Schaefer showed body language that demonstrated that she did not want Ziznewski there.

A parent/conference was then held on February 26, 2008, at which time her husband was also present along with Young and Schaefer . The subject of ESL came up but nothing came of it. Ziznewski was not at that meeting. She did not recall that meeting as being confrontational. But she was aware that Ziznewski, as a reading specialist, did not subscribe to Schaefer's assessment's of the G.C's reading ability. Rather, she viewed Ziznewski as her advocate.

A second I&RS meeting was held on March 20, 2008, which included Ziznewski, Stoltenberg, Hoffman, Schaefer, Figueroa, Young, some special education people, and a doctor "Shondra". They were the same players from the prior I&RS meeting.

She then wrote to acting superintendent, John DiMuzio, on June 9, 2008, about her frustrations with Schaefer and what was going on with her daughter at Marshall (P-48). She felt that Schaefer was unprofessional, never gave her facts, harassed her daughter with the earphones and channeled her efforts regarding her behaviors but not her reading. She observed that Ziznewski felt the G.C. was in a higher reading level than Det Schaefer. She personally concluded that Ziznewski was more correct after outsourcing her research to others about running records, reading levels and "stuff like that." Overall, she felt that her daughter was not challenged enough so she wanted to advocate for her herself. She believes that Ziznewski challenged Schaefer's results at the meetings but never got confrontational with her.

On cross examination, she indicated that her one major frustration stems back from G.C.'s typical act of answering a question with repetition, which she attributes to her Greek culture and which Schaefer seemed to fail to understand. She acknowledged that G.C. did work with Figueroa in accordance with a suggestion from Young during 2007-08 to help her with reading and math, this being in order to get a different teaching perspective. Most of that additional help occurred after school and lasted for approximately an eight week period of time. As a tutor, Figueroa was good, but she was not her child's advocate, although she noted that by the end of the school year, G.C. was a different (i.e., better) child from what she had been in the beginning of that school year. Figueroa now has G.C. in her class and she has been doing very well.

She also claimed that she had a private expert, Elaine Thomas, perform a DRA on G.C. and it was in direct conflict with Schaefer's running record on the child. She understood from the school meetings that Ziznewski had performed a DRA on her daughter but it was never produced, even though she had asked for it (which she later admitted on direct examination only occurred when she sent her June 9, 2008 letter to Di Muzio. But she never wrote a second letter to the school superintendent or to the Board of Education in order to get that information). She based her understanding about the status of a Ziznewski-generated DRA upon the fact that Ziznewski had said in a parent/teacher conference at the end of that year that she had performed the testing and she took it on good faith that Ziznewski had performed such a test. At the same time, she does not "remember" and "doesn't recall" if she ever had any conversations with Ziznewski about Schaefer. Further, at the January 24, 2008, I&RS meeting, Schaefer did present one view regarding G.C.'s reading achievement and Ziznewski presented another view. But T.C. was not concerned about the contradictions between the two of them.

She did ask Ziznewski to attend the meeting with Schaefer on February 8, 2008. The whole meeting was very upsetting to her. She admitted that she briefly talked to Ziznewski at the conclusion of the meeting relative to her concerns and she left after the bell rang. She did most of the talking up to the entrance to Ziznewski's classroom. They continued to talk at the location and she "vented" before she left. She then stopped at the office of Sandra Edwards to "vent some more" about the use of the ear phones.

On re- cross examination, she admitted that G.C. needed confidence in reading and not that she had a specific need. Figueroa provided that confidence in order to build her reading ability. She also admitted that G.C. had also had a difficult reading experience with Mrs. Gerba in kindergarten. She went along with the help that Edison claimed it would provide her at the time. But, instead, she got upset at the I&RS meeting when the focus shifted to a discussion of G.C.'s distractions and behaviors that had not come up before. She feels that Schaefer never challenged her daughter enough. T.C. is still working on her confidence in reading skills and she is slowly developing, despite the district's claims to the contrary. Ziznewski was more of an advocate and was pro-active, although she was only a small part of the entire equation regarding G.C. She admitted that either Hoffman or Stoltenberg recommended G.C. for BSI for the 2008-09 school year.

Donald Tarr

Donald Tarr is a field representative for the New Jersey Education Association (NJEA). The Edison Township Education Association (ETEA) is a local unit of the NJEA. He is familiar with the collective bargaining agreement between Edison and the ETEA, particularly the sections regarding absences and the striking of swipe cards (R-9). There is no requirement for personnel to swipe in at the beginning of the day and, if Edison had wanted to do that, they would have had to negotiate it. They did not do that, however, and he knew of no negotiations or discussions to change the printed swiping language as contained in an agreement.

Yet, on cross examination, he was shown a memo from Dr. Capraro to all principals in Edison, dated March 25, 2004 (P-190), which stated, in relevant part: "Please remind your teachers that they are to swipe in and swipe out whenever they leave or return to the building." That memo was copied to Myron Fouratt, president of the ETEA. Tarr indicated that he never saw it, was never aware of any discussions about it, and is not aware of any grievance ever having been filed by Fouratt with reference to it. Fouratt never discussed it with him either.

On March 19, 2008, he attended the meeting regarding a discussion of Ziznewski with Young, Hagie and Dr. Traficante regarding DRA's, at which time they also discussed "outstanding" tests which had not been purportedly turned in by Ziznewski. He was asked by the new local president Amel Ferlicchi to represent Ziznewski since he had not able to attend himself and he needed someone with some knowledge to attend. This request came approximately a couple of days before the meeting. He only knew that his role was to be there and that was all, although he admitted that there had been some memo sent to Ziznewski before hand which alluded to some testing problems.

At the meeting he raised a question regarding whether the DRA, as an instrument, had been adopted as Board of Education policy. He never got an answer to it directly. Instead, the answer was that assessment (Emphasis added) is a Board policy. There was no direct mention about the DRA, however. Ziznewski did not provide and nor did she offer to provide any DRA assessments to them at that time, even though there had been some discussion about her failure to turn in some DRA results. It only involved a discussion about discrepancies for eight students for whom she had turned in DRA scores only, consistent with the memo from Dr. Traficante to Ziznewski, dated April 2, 2008 (P-51), which he had previously seen. Ziznewski challenged why they were using DRA's and not some other instrument as well as whether it is even research based or not, this challenge occurring after Dr. Traficante brought up the subject. Hagie then re-emphasized that it was research based. He acknowledged that Hagie has some partial responsibility over reading specialists as a supervisor, this occurring during the course of a discussion as to what the supervisors did and him subsequently finding out that both Hagie and Dr. Traficante were Ziznewski's supervisors. Although he was shown the Pearson Learning Group DRA literature (P-14) and it being represented by the district's counsel that the information had been distributed at that meeting, he never recalled having seen it there.

There was also a discussion about certain students and whose test results were accurate, as well as why Ziznewski's test results were not. At that time there were some "figures" thrown around which indicated there was a discrepancy in assessments scores. He recalled no discussion about how they would be resolved. There was also a discussion about running records and how long they had been in effect, as well as the validity of the running records. He admitted that the DRA is for the use by reading specialists but he does not know who uses running records. There was also some mention that some test results had not been submitted by Ziznewski, who was given some additional time to complete them and then submit them to Hagie for her assessment. The district believed the test results of the other teachers, but not Ziznewski, based upon the fact that other teachers got different test results.

Tatiana Charapova

Tatiana Charapova was employed by Edison between 2001 and 2005, at which time she was the subject of a reduction in force (RIF). She worked with Ziznewski for one year at Madison Intermediate School in 2002-03, where she taught ESL and science/ social studies for ESL students. During that year, they shared a room, where they had many discussions regarding ESL and U.S. education. Ziznewski had a special library to help Charapova's pupils with different reading levels. She had no conflict with her that year. Rather, they worked well together.

Charapova is a teacher of foreign language. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree in 1975 from Kalmyk State University, Russia, in the areas of foreign language and world literature, as well as her Master of Arts degree from the same institution, as well as some administrative degree. She came to the United States in 1993, at which time she sent her education documents to the World Education Association for evaluation, as a result of which she received a temporary teaching registration for noncitizens in 2001. She then commenced her teaching instruction at Edison. Subsequently, she received her standard education certification from New Jersey in 2006. She became a United States citizen in either of 2007 or 2008.

She recalled an incident which happened with a teacher named Dahlia (?)and Ziznewski, the former of whom screamed at Ziznewski in the presence of her children. Charapova was uneasy with that confrontation. She was generally isolated from the mainstream school and did not have much contact with other teachers, so she does not know how Ziznewski got along with them. On cross examination, she acknowledged that the incident with Dahlia happened most likely in the beginning of the 2003-04 school year and that she probably actually started in October, 2002, not 2001, and she previously testified. She then conceded that the name of the teacher was Dahlia Mirrione, who worked with mainstream children as a curriculum resource teacher (CRT) only during the 2003-04 school year at James Madison.

The incident occurred at approximately 10:00 AM. Charapova "assumed" that it was about a reading schedule. She did not hear the actual initial quiet conversation between Ziznewski and Mirrione, but the outcome was that Mirrione stood up ("jumped with such attitude") and was so angry that she screamed: "You are the number one in the list that I hate!" Mirrione then looked at Charapova in leaving the area. She did not hear anything from Ziznewski.

Prior to her RIF, Charapova got involved in a dispute with her school principal, Mrs. Fox, who, on September 25, 2004, threw all of her educational materials in the garbage can, along with the library materials supplied by Ziznewski, at which time Fox told her that she had no money for such things. Charapove asked Ziznewski to help her get replacement materials accordingly.

In May, 2005, when she was about to be laid off due to her impending RIF, Ziznewski told her to speak to Mrs. Toth, Dr. Traficante, and Mrs. Fox, and then she and others recommended her to Donald Tarr, who gave her more tips to get a resolution regarding the employment situation. Ziznewski then decided to go speak on behalf of Charapova to Tarr herself in order to allow for a meeting with the Board of Education, but it never took place. Ziznewski then contacted other people who also worked in the district to help Charapova and to contact an NJEA attorney. She did get a response from Dr. Banks, who was the district's Affirmative Action Officer at the time.

She was sent to the office of an NJEA. attorney after which Fox "blew [her] off." After a two week break, Ziznewski then helped her write a letter to the Division on Civil Rights. But her removal took place in any event. After her departure, she visited Ziznewski at Marshall School more than ten times (as many as fifteen), starting with the summer after her removal and then going into the school year. Principal Gerald Young was very nice with her and was very nice with Ziznewski too while she visited. Ziznewski invited her to visit with her at her school since "Mr. Young was so nice." When school was in session, Ziznewski would also call her after meetings or after school to tell her when she was available. She would meet her after 5:00 PM on those occasions, and either Young or his secretary or Ziznewski would let her into the school. Ziznewski also helped to write a letter to Myron Fouratt, first in handwriting and then drafting it and then typing it on Charapova's computer. Ziznewski also collaborated with a couple of other teachers regarding her problems until approximately 6:30 PM when the custodial would want to clean out the building.

Carol Ziznewski

Carol Ziznewski has been employed by Edison since 1973. She received her Associate of Arts degree from Middlesex County College in 1968, her Bachelor of Arts degree in elementary education (K-8) from Kean College in approximately (as she could best recall it when she testified) 1972 (despite the joint stipulation entered in this matter which stipulated that date as being in 1973), her Master of Arts degree as a reading specialist from Kean College in 1975 and her Master of Arts degree in public administration from Kean College in approximately 1996 (and despite the joint stipulation of facts which stipulated those dates as being 1976 and 1994, respectively.). She is presently starting her Doctoral program in educational leadership in urban studies from Kean University. She has attended various conferences, participated in the State Academy for Teachers, and the Academy for Advanced Professional Development. She possesses New Jersey Department of Education certificates for elementary education (K-8), reading specialist (K-adult), supervisor, and principal.

Her employment history with Edison is as follows (this being based upon her varying and sometimes confusing and/or contradictory extensive testimony at two separate hearing dates as well as the submission of her revised resume on May 5, 2009 at hearing (R-10B), and notwithstanding the joint stipulation of facts which had previously been submitted in this matter at the commencement of the hearing.)(J-1). The parties persisted in examining her employment background at length for reasons never fully explained to this tribunal, although, presumably from the standpoint of the Board, it was to demonstrate that she did not even have an accurate grasp of her own background information. She was an elementary school teacher at the Martin Luther King Elementary School (grades 4-6) between 1973 and December, 1989; and thereafter a reading specialist at the Lincoln School (K-5) and James Madison Primary between January, 1990 and June, 1990; Marshall School (1990-91); James Monroe (full responsibility) and the Franklin School (assisted) between 1991-92; third grade teacher at the Monroe School (1992-93); reading specialist at Washington School (1994-96); chief reading specialist at Monroe School and assisting reading specialist at Franklin School(1996-97); primary reading specialist at Lindeneau School and assistant as reading specialist at Lincoln School (1997-98); reading specialist at Lincoln School and Marshall school (K-5) (1998-2000); reading specialist at Madison primary (2001-02); reading specialist at Madison Intermediate School (3-5) between 2002 and 2004; and reading specialist at Marshall (2004-08).

She has also been an adjunct professor at Middlesex County College where she has taught the fundamentals of education, abnormalities (disabilities and gifted), student practicum teachers as well as observing students looking to become teachers, as well as lower track reading curriculum. She also had prior teaching experience at Saint Mary's School, South Amboy, before coming to Edison.

Starting in 2004, she indicated that Superintendent, Dr. John Capraro, wanted an experienced reading specialist at Marshall which was a Title I school (i.e., federally funded needy children program) and she was the most senior reading specialist to go there. She had previously worked for Young as a reading specialist. Upon her arrival in 2004, Young told her that the first grades had already worked out their schedule and that she would identify fourth and fifth graders for BSI only. She did not service grade two that year.She serviced approximately 6 to 7 children for each of the four first grade classes, the three fourth grade classes, and the three fifth grade classes.

She wrote her memo to Schaefer on November 19, 2004, in which she expressed her concerns regarding the status of the Schaefer children since she had had nothing to look at when she arrived there (P-1). The teachers had already identified the needy children. She felt that these children were all good readers and only three had bad test results, so they were the only ones to get BSI. They were the children identified as C.S., A.M., and V.Q.. But Schaefer resisted her opinions. She did not want to take out the top three from the program but Schaefer offered her no documentation to support it even though Young agreed to take those three out. Ziznewski felt that she had a grueling schedule. She was supposed to teach six periods plus lunch and prep periods. The morning sessions were 30 minute periods, during which time she saw the children five times per week. But her schedule did not coincide with the other teachers' schedules. She claimed that 9:10 AM was her official start time and that she was there as scheduled. During 2004-05, only Schaefer questioned the test results which she had administered. And, during 2005-06, she did not recall any students' testing profiles being questioned. However, in 2006-07, she received a note from Young in her box before school started in September relative to her assignments. She indicated she had reviewed all the children's folders in August to intercept problems regarding incoming students to see if any of them needed BSI or not.

She also maintained at her initial testimony that she never had any problems with Sandy Pellicane ever (Emphasis added). Later, however, in her testimony on August 18, 2009 (day 31) she expanded and modified that prior statement as follows. Her relationship with Pellicane was initially cordial starting in 2004-05, during which time they would chat, be personable, and be cordial. Pellicane would even borrow her cell phone if hers did not work. In 2006-07, Ziznewski even offered to help her set up her "room" in the library classroom which several of them shared. Yet, during the same 2006-07 school year, Pellicane, along with Diane Keane, had filed an Affirmative Action Investigation complaint regarding Ziznewski and the way she had treated Melissa Smith-Zeichner on June 15, 2007, when they allegedly observed Ziznewski scream at her to get out of her room because she had business to take care of. In addition, she indicated that Pellicane complained about the generally negative attitudes of Ziznewski throughout the school and throughout the school year, including the way she still screamed at Young. When confronted with that information, Ziznewski indicated that she had not been aware of that complaint (P-162) and that she failed to understand how Pellicane could have understood the status of the school because she was not much in school that year and could not know much about the environment then as a result.

During the 2006-07 school year, she started in the library with Pellicane, Mrs. Hickey, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Zazanis, and Mrs. Sviderskis-Carroll. Her job was to identify the needs of the children. Young gave her a note to take the first and fourth grade classes` and, as result, she reviewed all the grade test results in order to evaluate the needs of those children, even though she only got limited grade assignments. This occurred because she was responsible to identify all children who needed BSI. During the year, current teachers might also recommend children on an ongoing basis and nine of ten times the children would go into the program. She indicated that she did nothing at variance with the classroom teachers that year. Problems did the not occur until the end of the 2006-07 year. During the beginning of this school year she structured her first schedule on September 23, 2006, but it was not completed because at some point Young told her that she would not be doing the upper grade (fourth grade) and that her instruction would be limited to the first grades and perhaps some second grade classes too. Accordingly, her instruction began in September with group lessons in the classrooms where she saw the students and teachers. Official remediation did not begin until October 5 with the first and second graders. In that regard, she disagreed with the letter which Young sent to Dr. Banks on October 18, 2006 (P-3), in which he indicated that she had not yet met with reading groups as of October 18, 2006. However, she offered no proof to contradict that assertion.

When she reviewed the notice of a conference issued by Suzanne Capraro and Joan Hagie, dated October 23, 2006 (P-4), she indicated that she could not "swear" that this was the memo that she got regarding the proposed October 24 conference since she never got any prior memos from either Capraro or Hagie, it being her understanding that the coordinator for basic skills was Deborah Bredahl for several years and that she was the only person who had worked with her in that regard up to that point. She only admitted that she knew that Capraro and Hagie were elementary supervisors, but they were only supervisors over classroom teachers and not reading specialists.

Her review of that October 24 conference report (P-5) was that it was not an accurate recitation of that meeting. Her contention was that she used a "portfolio assessment document", and not a traditional lesson plan booklet, which has been reviewed periodically in prior years. She did not know if she brought any portfolios with her at the time and does not know why not. She had no explanation for it. She admitted that she did not bring the DRA's and she understood they were not even yet due. She thought that they were only due sometime late in the first marking period but she did not really know the date when they were otherwise due. She also indicated that she was "confused" about the need for the meeting and taped it because she was concerned that she had been warned to bring an ETEA representative. At the meeting, in any event, she did not wish to respond to any of the questions because her union president, Myron Fouratt wasn't there and his substitute, union representative Diane Keane, had told her that she was uncomfortable being placed in a position of trying to determine why there was sudden attention being placed upon her. She only recalled having used one Post-it Note during that session and not more than one as so indicated in that report summary. She did not recall either Hagie or Capraro saying anything about being her supervisors at that time. She also did not recall Young ever saying that teachers were concerned about her teaching did not start until October 16. In any event that was not correct. As far as she was concerned everything was fine in her building.

She sent a memo to Young on November 22, 2006 (P-8) in which she challenged what had happened at the October 24 meeting, as well as memos generated therewith much of which she viewed as forms of harassment and intimidation. She also indicated that she was "confused" as to why Young was requesting her DRA's since he did not involve her in the administration of the DRA for the Summer Literacy Academy program identification. Regarding kindergarten registration procedures and the administration of the ORS, in the spring prior to any given school year, the Central Office would call to advise who was to get the ORS. She started doing that procedure in 1990 but was never questioned about her testing until 2006. Her usual procedure was that she would screen incoming kindergarten children by talking to them upon entry and then making an evaluation about their eligibility for ESL. She admitted that perhaps maybe "one or two" only slipped by her in 2006-07. Her "intention" was to use these test results to help the kindergarten teachers in September. She admitted that she had no role in the MAC II testing.

By December 11, 2006, Young was complaining to Dr. Traficante about her in a memo (P-9) which stated that Ziznewski was presenting a "litany of lies" in which she was reportedly placing the blame on the teachers and him, which she said was incorrect. She claims that she had no warning of any problems with him up to that point and contended that she was designated by him as the "school teacher in charge of the building." She was relieved of that job in October, 2006.

Regarding Young's Affirmative Action complaint, she was interviewed about it in March, 2007, and nothing seemed to have happened as result of it. Instead, she and Young often talked about religion and several topics relating to it. However, she recalls that Young claimed that she had offended him and his wife about bringing up the gifts to communion. However, during a "discussion" in his office, she contends that it was not confrontational and she does not know that she said anything to offend him. She denied yelling at him and she did not raise her voice. In addition, she contends that her program was functioning properly from the beginning of the school year and that Young was wrong that it was only finally functioning by December 11, 2006.

She attended the conference on January 22, 2007, which included Fouratt, Young, Hagie, Capraro, and Traficante. She did not recall being told to bring anything to that meeting (P-10). She did everything that she was supposed to do but she did admit questioning the reliability of the DRA's at that meeting. She denied ever stating that she was being verbally attacked on "all fronts" since she maintained that was not her type of language. Instead, she viewed this meeting by Dr. Traficante as being "apologetic" for past abuses of her.

Regarding the September 28, 2007 meeting (P-11), it was run, as such meetings had always had been run, by Deborah Bredahl and no one else. She also maintained that October 15 is the last date to submit BSI data for Federal funding purposes, as noted at bullet number 5 in that document, which reads "reading spec assignment (Oct.15 data)."

Regarding the DRA reporting levels memo, dated October 3, 2007 (P-12), she did not start handing in the DRA levels in January, 2007 because she was given an extended period to hand them in because she merely "forgot" to get them in timely. She also admitted receiving excused time but does not know why it was given to her under the circumstances.

She also reviewed the letter from Young to Bredahl, dated October 5, 2007 (P-13), in which she admitted that he claimed that she was having trouble with Sica but only with her for part of the year, as well as with Schaefer. She felt that Young wrote this letter memo to Bredahl because Bredahl was the only one in charge of the program at the time.

Ziznewski believed that the trouble with Sica was that Sica felt that every child deserves "help" even though Sica had a lot of help already in her class and despite the fact that she had just a couple of children in need there versus other teachers who were alone with many more children in need. She serviced three Sica children. Ziznewski went by the recommendations of the kindergarten teacher from the year before. But Sica did not want to talk about the children but only about the program itself. She then stated that sometime during the 2007-08 school year she started to take children into her program, although she doesn't recall when that occurred specifically. She did not become aware of the Affirmative Action Investigation relative to Sica until December, 2007 (P-176). But she noted that in 2006-07, Ziznewski did have dealings with Sica although she did not know that any complaints had been made by Sica initially. It was during the 2007-08 school year that Ziznewski did have discussions with her about some children could be referred by first grade teachers. Sica recommended none when Ziznewski presented her list in September. However, some time at the end of September or the beginning of October, Sica presented a list of five children for BSI and they did meet to discuss them, which meeting occurred right before Ziznewski was scheduled to go to a three day conference. Ziznewski reviewed the kindergarten running records, the paperwork from the other schools, and other documents. She then got the list the same day of that meeting, which occurred after a faculty meeting. She noted that she had already pre-reviewed their records that she did with all incoming students. She denied being argumentative and loud at that meeting, however, as alleged by Sica. She indicated that all five children were discussed a little bit at that time. In addition, Ziznewski was going to investigate A.G. a little more since he had not been in either ESL or BSI in his prior school in New Brunswick and there was a form in his record from there with which she was not familiar. Ultimately three to four children went into the BSI program, plus some "little girl" who had been previously recommended for special education and E. L., whom Ziznewski was surprised had not been recommended by Sica. Further, Young had previously told Ziznewski not to provide E.L. with services in his kindergarten year.

Ziznewski further indicated that Sica would shout out names of children in her class (in violation of privacy requirements) and that Ziznewski felt harassed by Sica as a result. She found it odd and disconcerting that Sica failed to recommend some children in favor of others who really needed it. Ziznewski claimed that Sica also sent out children to her at her classroom when she was not yet ready for them, which she viewed as another form of harassment by Sica. She also claimed that all of her discussions with Sica on September 21 and 28 and October 8, 2007, were civil. She also denied the allegation that she ever announced or declared to anyone that she had any document which allowed her to refuse to take children and which indicated that, it even though a teacher recommends a child into BSI, Ziznewski does not have to take them if all other criteria point to non need.

Regarding bullet number three of the same Affirmative Action Investigation (P-176), which asserted that three children had not been serviced by Ziznewski as of October 15, 2007, she felt that it was more "inaccurate" than "accurate," in that she "did start" such services, although she presented no proof in support of it. She volunteered that it may have depended upon how many holidays and staff "diversions" affected her start time. In any event, she was not aware of any directive which mandated when such services were to begin.

On or about December 22, 2007, Ziznewski was given a notice to attend the meeting regarding the Affirmative Action Investigation, although she still did not know that complaints had been filed against her at the time. She figured that was about her own ongoing complaints about others, but when she raised that to Dr. Banks, Banks said "No." It was about her and Ziznewski was surprised. Banks gave her the choice to either speak then or to get an attorney. It was not until her attorney, Mr. Feintuch, gave her the report of that Affirmative Action Investigation (P-176) that she ever even knew the specifics of the Sica complaints, and even despite her prior attorneys' involvements before she had hired Mr. Feintuch to represent her.

She also commented upon the letter from Schaefer to Young, dated October 8, 2007 (P-15), regarding an incident which occurred between them on October 5, 2007, which she never saw before the litigation commenced in this matter as well as the portion of the Affirmative Action Investigation (P-176) which involved the Schaefer complaints against her. Her opinion was that Schaefer mischaracterized what had happened in the classroom. Schaefer yelled at her, and not the reverse. Schaefer "yelled" out the child's name instead of her. She also denied that she ever returned to Schaefer's class later that day. She maintained that Schaefer "lied" in writing to Young. Similarly, she reviewed the memo which Schaefer also prepared regarding the October 5, 2007 incident (P-17), which is a narrative version of the encounter on that day. Ziznewski only recalled "parts" of the recitation by Schaefer contained in that memo, then admitted to this tribunal that the second incident/encounter did occur, but then continued to deny it once again. She reinforced that second denial by saying that she never recalled ever being in the presence of Schaefer twice in one day ever. At that point, she referred to pages four and five of her personal diary and copies were made available by this tribunal at the time. No other proofs were shown by her with reference to that incident.

She denied that she refused to take 7 of the Schaefer children, as alleged in the Affirmative Action complaint by Schaefer (P-176 at 581). Instead, she did take approximately four children who had been recommended by their kindergarten teacher. She admitted that Schaefer did give her a list on approximately October 2, 2007, with her own list of students also. She also admitted that she did not take some of children whom Schaefer did recommend, including one "Spanish child." But she denied ever refusing to take the 7 children because there were too many students in her program already.

The meeting which Young attempted to set up with her for October 17, 2007, regarding her BSI programming and complaints by Figueroa, was never held because Ziznewski was at a workshop on that date (P-18 and 19). In addition, the meeting which was reset for October 26 (P-21) was also not held because she did not think it would be productive. By that date, she admitted that Figueroa was all over her with complaints about her handling of BSI. (This admission was so indicated and corroborated in the letter from Young to Toth on October 29, 2007.) (P-23). Instead, Ziznewski wrote to Young about A.P. and another student and advised him that they were not eligible for BSI because they were very bright.

It is noted that in her testimony on May 5, 2009, Ziznewski then expanded her prior response regarding the meeting which was never held with Figueroa, which she now contended had been set for October 16, 2007, and not October 17, and despite the fact that she had previously indicated that she was at a workshop at the time. She did not attend the session because she had attempted to resolve the issues with Figueroa alone via a letter exchange. The Figueroa letter had been circulated to various levels of the school administration. Ziznewski was thus "perplexed" by this "barrage" by Figueroa. Figueroa never responded to her request to resolve it. And somehow Mrs. Garaboto got involved and tried to resolve it but she does not know if she or Figueroa had gotten Garaboto involved in the first place. The letters which she got appeared to suggest that Figueroa had wanted a meeting, but Ziznewski did not understand why the meeting was necessary. Several dates were set up but a three day workshop was in the middle of the attempted scheduling. She contended that the meeting had been reset for October 17, 2007, but Garaboto had instead asked for documents regarding these children. The meeting was changed to October 26 by Young and she acknowledged that she received a memo from Young which set up that meeting. She also admitted that she did not attend that meeting because she thought that Figueroa now had a different agenda and she wrote to Young to explain that. She then noted that she was never written up by Young about her refusal to attend that meeting. She also indicated that she was never advised about any rescheduled meeting after the October 26 meeting even though Young told Toth on October 29, 2007 (P-23) that he had so advised her. She contended that she never received any such notice about any such meeting.

Regarding Incident Number 1 on September 28, 2006, which was cited by Figueroa in the Affirmative Action complaint report (P-176 at EBOE 00597), Ziznewski denied the way it was explained by Figueroa. She denied ever calling for Mrs. Normant to leave the Figueroa classroom. Instead, Normant had been at the doorway but went back into the classroom. Ziznewski only directed a brief question while she was there and then Normant came out voluntarily. Figueroa angrily closed the door. Later, Figueroa approached her in the library angrily and loudly and Figueroa "went crazy." It was her opinion that Figueroa's "problems" have been projected onto her. She recalled that Young never got involved as as result of that incident.

She also commented upon a letter written by Kerry Peters, the third grade teacher, to Young on October 26, 2007 (P-22) regarding an incident which occurred between Peters and Ziznewski on October 22, 2007. She recalled visiting Peters' room to see if Peters was feeling satisfactory after having had an illness, at which time Ziznewski also asked how certain students were doing. Peters contends in her letter that Ziznewski got very hostile with her and argumentative. Ziznewski denied any such encounter or raising her voice at all and she further contended that she did not have any discussions approximately a week later as so represented in the Peters letter. She then denied visiting with Peters on October 22 other than to discuss her health. She then admitted going back a second time on that same day but only with the permission of Peters. On the next Monday, she only recalled going to the Peters classroom, possibly at 9:05 AM, which was the only one time that she was there at that point although she then admitted probably also going back after lunch and giving her the recommended students Terranova test scores. However, she denied raising her voice and/or getting hostile with Peters at any time, even though she admitted that she and Peters did discuss the test score results. She was very much aware of the fact that there were children in the hallway. She then recalled that Young had told her that Peters had written a letter and was complaining about her, but she claimed that she just wanted to get together to clear things up. She never saw the letter and had no idea why it would be copied to Superintendent Toth, Hagie, Capraro or DiMuzio. She then volunteered at the hearing that running records are not good because they are too subjective and that they take away from too much instructional time. Instead, she prefers to expose children to a wide variety of literature.

She then supplemented her prior testimony at the May 5, 2009 hearing in this area by indicating that she had already taken Peters' student, A.P., for services, although other child, S. was not to be taken. The child R.B. was another matter. She explained that R.B.'s parents and R.B. himself did not know why he was in the special group so she not see the need for him to be in the program. He also had exited BSI at the end of second grade so she told Peters that he did not need it. Peters complained about the disruptive nature of Ziznewski's purported interruptions in her classroom to discuss R.B.'s placement in an unscheduled visit. Once again she denied that she ever raised her voice. Instead, she merely directed Peters' attention to the test results. Further, this conversation only took a few minutes and Peters did not appear to be upset at the time. Peters only observed that his writing was not good. Therefore, Ziznewski did not see this as being an incident at all. There was no disruption since the classes were changing at the time anyway. She indicated that she tries to grab people at such times and does not try to be disruptive with anyone. In addition, Peters did not complain to her about being upset at the time.

Ziznewski attended the Capraro meeting which was held on November 13, 2007 (P-25), at which time Ziznewski discussed: (1) how there were a lot of problems with BSI; (2) that she wanted to know why Bredahl wasn't there, to which Capraro told her that Dr. Traficante wanted her to meet with her instead; (3) Ziznewski said that she had offered to have the individual students referred to her if any teachers had any problems or concerns about them, but Capraro turned away from the subject and; (4) Ziznewski told her that she would want any input in order to make the program better for everyone. She indicated the only thing that changed was the addition of the "Read 180" program (which is a total pull-out replacement program whose names were taken from the BSI list), but that only affected grades 4 and 5 in any event. Ziznewski had no fourth or fifth grade classes in 2006-07. In 2007-08, she serviced three fifth grades at one time and then it was reduced to only two. As to the fourth grade classes during the year, she had perhaps five or six students from there. However, she does not recall any of their names. The Read 180 program took her para-professional from her and it also added more students to her roster. She asked Young what he wanted to do, so he checked with Bredahl and then told her to reduce her first grade time allotments in order to fit in the third and fourth grades.

Ziznewski further indicated that she had no problems with the BSI program prior to 2006. If there was a difference of opinion between her and a classroom teacher, for the most part she would take the child and then show them the difference by showing the data to Young, who could then act upon it. She recalled that in 2007-08, there was some discussion as to how many children should be in BSI. Sica had only one child, A. G., whom she wanted in the program. He was not placed, however. Instead, Sica was going to bring him to the I&RS Committee. Ziznewski had batch tested him. B.O. was another child there, but he did go. G.S. was also tested by her. However, since she did so well in the summer academy, they chose not to put her in BSI even though Ziznewski mentioned that she should go.

Schaefer had only one child, A.C., but she did not go into BSI. Figueroa had two students in her second grade class, A.P. and P.(?). She knew they had been both recommended by first grade teachers but their June DRA's were high and above grade level. In the prior year 2006-07, Figueroa had a child named J.P., for whom Figueroa wanted basic skills, but then she stopped sending him for it. She contended that there were only a total of eight students in need over a two year period.

At this point, Ziznewski admitted that running records were accepted protocols for kindergarten and first grade students although she did not know when they were started for that use. On January 16, 2008, Young wrote to Traficante regarding a dispute relative to the Figueroa student, A.P. and his need for services (P-26). Ziznewski objected to him getting services since his records were to the contrary. She disputed the fact that Young ordered her on that date to begin BSI with A.P. or to even do it "immediately." But yet, she contended that she took him anyway. She also contended that Schaefer never recommended BSI for any students even though she indicated that others had claimed in their testimony that Schaefer had done so. By doing so, she maintained that they were mistaken and had "lied" about it.

She agreed that the meeting with the parent of A.P. on January 17, 2008 was an embarrassing meeting but it was because Figueroa was telling the mother that A.P. was the worst reader in her class and that Pellicane agreed with that. She felt that the blame for the embarrassment lay with them and not her. Instead, she was trying to be conciliatory with the parent about there possibly being some potential problems at home, such as hearing problems. Ziznewski listened to Figueroa's concerns and took notes. She felt that Young stopped the conference because Figueroa was attacking Ziznewski, particularly when Figueroa contended that A.P. could not read. Ziznewski was "shocked" by Figueroa's tesing results, which were at the same level as A.P.'s prior test results at the Summer Lieteracy Academy the preceding summer. She also indicated that at the end of grade 1, Schaefer did not recommend BSI for A.P. as an intervention, despite the representations to that effect in the letter from Young to Dr.Traficante, dated January 17, 2008 (P-28). She had no reason to believe that Young would criticize her by saying that he was concerned that Ziznewski would continue to "bash" Figueroa. She denied that she bashed Figueroa at the meeting, although she admitted that she did contradict the other teachers during the course of the discussion regarding the reading status of A.P. and that this occurred in the presence of the parent. She denied ever stating that she would not working cooperatively with the classroom teacher.

She also commented upon the notes of the March 20, 2008 I&RS meeting regarding G.C., which were made by Schaefer, which also made reference to the prior meeting held regarding the child on January 24, 2008, at which time there had been a discussion regarding the use of ear phones for G.C. and how it was to be implemented. G.C. had been in the BSI program run by Ziznewski at the beginning of the 2007-08 school year. She agreed that, at that first meeting in January there had been discussion about G.C. having been in the BSI program, at which time Ziznewski said she was doing well, even though Schaefer had never related any problems to her prior to that January meeting.

At the February 7, 2008 meeting, Mrs. C. was upset that Schaefer was still insisting that G.C. use the headphones pursuant to the I&RS Committee recommendations. The mother was furious about Schaefer's insistence and told Ziznewski after the meeting that she was going to put an end to "this." Young discussed the issue with Ziznewski and she claimed that she was not even sure the G.C. had to use the headphones for one week, as alleged by Schaefer. She also insisted that the I&RS committee had only made a "suggestion" about the use of the headphones and not a mandate. Besides, if it was not working, Schaefer should have stopped it. She admitted that she injected herself into the dialogue regarding the use of the ear phones.

Ziznewski was also directed to the January 28, 2008 letter from Young to her in which Young advised her that he had received complaints from Sica and Schaefer that she was not consistently implementing the BSI program for their students and that, further, he would personally monitor her instruction time to guarantee that the BSI program was presented pursuant to her previously submitted schedule to Bredahl in October, 2007. He also made reference to the fact that, pursuant to the conference which he had held with her, Figueroa, Pellicane and the parent of A.P., the child A.P. was to receive BSI reading from her on a weekly basis with the other second grade students on her schedule (P-30). She did not recall that document and denied getting it; however she commented that Young never questioned her about her absences in providing timely services to children at that time. She claimed that she needed the release from Young to allow for services to be provided for A.P. even though there was no protocol which required it. She then admitted that she would have "accepted" that January 28, 2008, letter as an authorized sign-off for that purpose if she had received it. Once again she denied getting receipt of it, yet she acknowledged that, at the prior meeting with the parties, including the parent of A.P., Ziznewski had understood that A.P. would receive such services.

She did admit having a meeting with Young on January 29, 2008, at which time he accused her of having canceled her classes in order to attend workshops, that she was not following her schedule and that she was supposed to be in her classroom instead. (see letter from Young to Dr.Traficante, dated January 29, 2008, P-31). She contended that she had gotten permission from Mrs. Hoffman to attend, however, and she denied that she went into a "tirade".

At this point, it is important to note that, at the testimony which she presented on May 6, 2009 (day 27 of the hearing) she admitted and stated that she did tell Young that she was going to the Commissioner of Education, this being based upon her belief that she would have the Commissioner evaluate the work that she had done. However, when she resumed her testimony on May 19, 2009, and after several intervening witnesses testified on her behalf (day 28 of the hearing), she then denied having told Young that she was going to the Commissioner of Education, which was directly contradictory to her prior statements at hearing.

She also admitted that she and Young did have an argument about her canceling a class the day before at which point Young had told her that she did not have his permission. She responded by saying: "that's a lie. I did have permission." She denied calling him a liar, however. She felt that Young's challenge was "bizarre" since she felt that he knew that she had been at the workshop.

She also denied having taped the A.P. conference, which was alleged in the Young letter, and claimed that she had verbally told Young at some point that she had not taped it. She did not indicate when and where she told him that, however. She also indicated that, notwithstanding Young's failure to provide the sign-off regarding A.P., she nonetheless unilaterally determined to provide those services herself in January, 2008 because that was her (her emphasis) authority as a reading specialist. Prior thereto, she had made another determination that A.P. had not needed services since he had not received a recommendation from his prior teacher (Schaefer). She then admitted that A.P. had been in the Summer Literacy Academy the previous summer, which would have pre qualified him for BSI services, but she did not know he had actually been in it at the time. She also noted that she had had A.P. during the 2006-07 school year for BSI and had exited him at the end of June, 2007, based upon his performances that year and his DRA results. She had no role in his placement in the summer literacy program. That recommendation traditionally comes from the classroom teacher and, secondarily, from Mrs. Hoffman. She is never aware of the attendees at the summer program until October of the next year.

Regarding her desire to order novels for her children in the BSI program, she indicated that it was within the parameters of the district's BSI program for her to do that. She had previously ordered novels and there had been no problems in that regard in the past. Yet, she was chastised in February, 2008, for resorting to ordering such novels even though she uses more advanced primers to scaffold children into higher levels of reading by using more advanced novels like she had done before.

It is noted that, when her direct testimony resumed on May 19, 2009 (after allowing the couple of witnesses to testify out of turn), Ziznewski immediately indicated that Hagie is not her supervisor and that authority is not contained in any document anywhere. Thus, she challenged the supervisory role of Hagie (and implicitly, Capraro) once again by stating that there is no specific curriculum for reading specialists so she creates her own book list based upon her understanding of the classroom environments. She denied that she was ever told that she exceeded her scaffolding role at any time, although she acknowledged that it was brought up to her by Hagie in a memo dated February 7, 2008 (P-34). But she claims she never got any such instructions from her prior to that date. She also challenged Hagie's determination that her role was only to support the classroom teacher and disputed why Hagie would cite the use of "high quality children's literature in the regular classroom setting" in that memo. She was "shocked" by this approach since she feels that the district's goal relative to high quality literature should be across the board and not limited to merely the classroom.

Ziznewski also challenged the claims by Schaefer regarding the administration of services to a number of her students. On January 17, 2008, Schaefer wrote to Young (P-27) and claimed that it had been her request for Ziznewski to take four of her students, G.C., A.K., R.U., and M.V., but Ziznewski maintained that it had been the recommendation of the kindergarten teacher instead and, in fact, Schaefer did not want Ziznewski to even take R.U., even though she did. Ziznewski did admit that she chose not to take three other students listed in that letter whom Schaefer had wanted to receive BSI services, being D.J., E. P. and A.O. As to those three, she had reviewed their records and had batch-tested E.P. and A O. (this being probably in late October or early November according to her best recollection), as a result of which they did not qualify. After that there was no discussion about them. She denied that she failed to meet with Schaefer's children consistently and that she was either absent, arrived late or working on something else during her scheduled time, as alleged in the letter from Schaefer to Young. Instead, on certain dates, the children were not available to get the instructions because of changes in their class schedules or, in addition, Schaefer would not even know that Ziznewski had taken the children upon her return from lunch break. During her absences, her aides were in charge.

She acknowledged that, on March 4, 2008, Hagie sent an e-mail to Ziznewski in which she reminded her to send her DRA reports for all children who had attended the 2007 Summer Literacy academy as well as the recently assessed levels for her BSI students (P-34). She admitted that she may have "goofed" on a deadline to produce the DRA's, although she had no specific recollection as to when Hagie had wanted them in. She also noted that this was the first time that was required to be done 3 or 4 times for the summer literacy children and indicated that she did some of the first set earlier in the year, although it was late because she had injured herself. She attributed the late submission of the March DRA's, however, to her secretary who was delayed in processing them, since they had been done prior two March 19, 2008 by her. They were all ultimately submitted during the week of March 12, 2008 and some later on. She had approximately 40 students to submit including some second graders and some third graders as well as possibly ten from the prior summer school. Ultimately, Young relented and allowed her some time in order to complete them (P-44), which were the days of March 12 through 14, 2008.

At the same time, although she admitted that she did meet with Young prior thereto on March 7, 2008 (P-40) regarding the issue of the servicing of the BSI students, she denied that she said that Hagie was not her boss or that she threatened to report the situation to the Commissioner of Education.

The meeting to discuss her handling of BSI was held with her on March 19, 2008, but she disputed the summary of Dr. Traficante with reference to it (P-51). She denied that her test scores were inflated and that she did not support the program of the students at their appropriate levels. She made connections with the children, who were not exposed to vocabulary beyond their reading levels. She also felt that either the teachers or she should be able to determine when to move the children up or not. She denied that she failed to adhere to district procedure for screening and assessing the student with whom she worked. At the same time, she contended that the first due date for reporting DRA's was either November 14 or December 3 but she had no recollection as to when she had submitted that batch. As for the January 30, 2008 submission date, she thought that perhaps the submission date was actually February 8 (see P-54, page EBOE00096). But they were not actually received until March 19, 2008.

An I&RS meeting was held on March 20, 2008 regarding G.C., which was attended by the parent, Mrs. C. and other staff members, a summary by Schaefer of which is contained at exhibit P-50. Ziznewski was not aware that Schaefer had had concerns about G.C. at all until her name appeared on an agenda list for that date. It is that letter he stated: "Mrs. Ziznewski was instructed by me to begin BSI with [A.] immediately"

She also generally denied the accuracy of the entries made by Schaefer regarding Ziznewski's attendance in class for the period of October 5, 2007 through January 18, 2008 (P-62). In particular, she referenced the following:

Date	Her position
October 5, 2007	She denied only taking the children for twenty minutes and the "incident" so mentioned was Schaefer actually screaming her about the child R. G. She took the children the entire time.
October 8, 2007	The school's schedule had changed and the school day was shortened, thereby reducing her classes to 30 minutes. It was an early dismissal day and the children were at gym or music.
October 9, 2007	She knows that she had may have been a "little late" for class but she "probably" kept them a little bit later to make up for it.
October 12, 2007	She admits that she was a "no show" because she had to go to the Central Office regarding a second Affirmative Action Investigation.
October 15, 2007	She agrees that she attended that class from 1:10 to 1:50 PM.
October 16, 2007	She has no idea why she got to class at 9:20 AM, which is after its official start time.

October 22, 2007	She thinks that she may have arrived at 1:10 and not 1:15, so she disagreed with that entry.
October 23, 2007	She thinks that the children may have been late from their mornings setup in their home room.
October 30, 2007	She denied a "no show" although she may have been at testing, as noted in the Schaefer list.
November 2, 2007	She admits being absent but was at another Affirmative Action Investigation session at the Central Office.
November 12, 2007	She thought that she was there on time and denied being late.
November 17, 2007	She did not recall arriving at 1:45 PM but perhaps, if she did, it was due possibly due to a lot going on with music shows.
December 21, 2007	She has no knowledge why it was listed that she arrived at 9:50 AM except that there was a music assembly in the morning.
January 4, 2008	She admits a "no show" because she had to go back to the Central Office for another part of an Affirmativ Action Investigation.
January 14, 2008	She admits a "no show" due to being at a writing workshop.

She has no idea when or why Schaefer started or stopped her time list on her. But regarding any latenesses, she denied any impropriety. If she was delayed, she would call in. Latenesses to her means after 8:45 AM. However, in 2007, at times Young would let her come in late due to her injury and the need for physical therapy in the morning. But it would not impact upon their classes. Further, she was not required to "strike in" with a slash card. Instead, the procedure was to sign in on a sheet with an initial upon one's entry during the start of the day as well as at the end of the day. She only used a strike card if the door was locked but there was no requirement to strike in. She did not know if there was even a requirement to strike out at the end of the day and claims it was no issue about it at the Marshall School. One only used the strike card when the door was locked on the way in. She then said that she did strike out anyway at the end of the day because Young wanted the custodians to know who was still in the building. She admitted that there were occasions when she came into school late, but she was never got disciplined or admonished by Young on those occasions. She never missed a class due to her lateness. The only time that she had a problem regarding coverages occurred when she had a physical therapy requirement for an injury during the 2005-06 school year. But if she did not meet her classes, she advised the main office and got approval. She acknowledged that she was supposed to be in school at 8:45 am but might have traffic delays.

Regarding Martin Smith, the ESL Supervisor, she first met him when Young asked her to call him back in September-October, 2006. It was unclear to her why Smith wanted to speak with her other than the fact that Smith had called and wanted to know about the second grader, A.G., who had been tested by her for ESL. So, she returned the phone call to Smith and explained that she had only been following procedures, that she had screened A.G. on the ORS, and that he was doing well. His family had just arrived from Serbia. As a reading specialist, her role was to screen children for ESL using the ORS, which is a district-wide assessment. She was not really a part of ESL. However, she would test children who the Central Office told her would need it as transfers or as incoming new students.

Regarding kindergarteners only, during 2004-05, she would test the incoming kindergartners in February prior to their subsequent matriculation in September for 1 day at the Education Center in accordance with a list prepared by others. Officially, that process did not change up to her departure in 2008. No complaints came until 2006-07 when she was directed to Smith who claimed that she had not filed parent waivers (i.e., those who did not want their children in ESL). Young used to handle them previously. She explained to Smith that A.G. did not even require a waiver since he had not scored well enough to qualify for it, since he has scored approximately 22. In September, 2006, she does not even recall how many children to whom she had administered ORS testing. After that Smith discussion, she felt that it was satisfactory and that Smith was otherwise satisfied with her claim that A.G. scored so high. But then Figueroa complained that she wanted him back in first grade or in ESL. Upon her return from an absence, Ziznewski was very confused regarding several messages from A.G's aunt in Florida about A.G. been very unhappy. She found out that, in her absence, Smith had had the child and other children pulled in for testing by other teachers who came up with lower scores. All of her score results were in the library computer and she did not believe that she had to put them in any Central Office or main Marshall office and never saw any procedure to require it.

She denied having any discussion or conversation with Young with reference to the ORS on September 26, 2006, even though Young wrote an e-mail memo to Smith about having had a heated conversation with Ziznewski (who became enraged and threatened to submit a grievance against Smith) immediately prior thereto (P-64). When shown a memo from Young to her dated October 3, 2006 (P-66), in which he asked her to submit to him that day all of the ORS assessments she had completed on new students for the year to date), she could not recall getting the memo. She claimed that there was never a time when Young ordered her to produce all of her ORS assessments although she then admitted that sometime in October or November she was told to produce ORS assessments and told to bring a representative with her, which meeting she thought occurred occurred sometime in October, 2006. (She was later corrected by her attorney when shown the summary of the meeting held on November 21, 2006 (P-121).

At that meeting, Dr.Traficante, Smith, Fouratt (her representative) and Young appeared at Young's office with her during her lunch/prep period. During that meeting they discussed policy procedure for conducting ORS and that she was not administering ORS to students. She said that she had all of her kindergarten ORS with her in a wheeled carrier but no one asked her to produce them, even though she told them they were right there. Dr.Traficante kept referring to a "green sheet" with instructions, but Ziznewski had no idea what she was referring to. She was "admonished." They said that she had not conducted the ORS and Dr.Traficante kept insisting that the ORS forms did not belong in her personal possession. They belonged in the files. She was then told that they had retested her children.

She noted that this was the first time that she have ever met with Mr. Smith. She claimed that she did not know that Melissa Smith-Zeichner, a special education teacher, was the niece of Martin Smith. She admitted that she did refer to him as being "Uncle Marty," which she indicated was in response, perhaps, to him being her uncle after a guidance counselor indicated that they were in fact related. She denied that it was done in any derogatory sense in a conversation with Diane Keane.

She insisted that she gave ELS tests to every child who was recommended for it in 2006-07. She did not know if she then recommended any such children for the MAC II testing. However, she was aware before that meeting that she was being challenged about her test results. Prior to that year, none of her children were ever retested. Also, prior to that meeting, she was never told where to have the ORS test results placed. After the November meeting, she continued to test children without any further challenges until she was told to stop testing them completely at the end of April, 2007. Also, after November, 2006, she started to file copies of the ORS with the main office at Marshall. When she reviewed the ESL testing sheet which identified nine children in need of ESL (P-122), it was her opinion that the disparity of the test results between her and the other testers was based upon a very subjective test standard. Also, recommendations for ESL only came from the two inexperienced first year kindergarten teachers and not the two experienced ones.

She noted that she had written to Young with reference to the complaints by Sviderskis-Carroll and her use of her cell phone and the door policy in the library area which they shared, which letter was written on November 3, 2006 (P-140). This was in response to the letter which Young had sent to her on the same date (P-140). Although she insisted in her testimony that her usage occurred during her lunch period, there is no reference to it in her responsive letter to Young. She initially claimed that she never used her cell phone during the day when she had children. But she then stated that, when she would be forced to answer the phone, she would use it almost anywhere, even if there were children in the area. She was not aware of any Board of Education policy about such usage although she admitted that Young did send her a memo at one point regarding her violation of that purported policy. She also indicated that she did use her cell phone after she got the Young memo but she did not then do so when students were present. And Sviderskis-Carroll would be mistaken if she said that she did use the phone in the presence of children.

Regarding the use of the library space with Sviderskis-Carroll and their respective defined areas there in 2006-2007, she said that the version testified to by Sviderskis-Carroll was inaccurate. Instead, Sviderskis-Carroll had already selected her area in advance of the arrival of Ziznewski back to school and both she and her husband and two children were already there at the time of her arrival. Or, she opined that perhaps Young may have already decided the space issue for her since Ziznewski's shelves and teacher's desk were in place when she arrived. She also disputed the various diagrams drawn by the various witnesses of the area in this matter and indicated that proportionately, she did not know even if her diagram was also correct (R-15). She indicated that the library usage also varied from morning to afternoon and there was a lot of coming and going between the morning and afternoon sessions. In the morning, only the Ziznewski children were routinely there, who were sometimes joined by the Sviderskis-Carroll children, although this did not occur all the time every day. Further, Sviderskis-Carroll was not there in the afternoon. As a result, the majority of the time the Ziznewski class was the primary "tenant." Ziznewski used her area virtually all day, including lunch periods and during her prep periods. Sviderskis-Carroll may have "flipped" her schedule to the afternoon upon occasion or in a class with a fourth grade teacher since Sviderskis-Carroll did English, reading and writing as a resource room as an adjunct to the inclusion students. She claimed that she never had any door problems with Sviderskis-Carroll. After stating that, however, she then admitted that in early September, 2006, she and Sviderskis-Carroll did have an exchange about the positioning of the doors. Ziznewski raised the issue to keep the doors open due to the noise and heat but she did so discreetly in order to avoid confrontations. But, Sviderskis-Carroll said she needed quiet in order to teach and rejected the request. Young then told Ziznewski that Sviderskis-Carroll would be moved, but then he never did effectuate any move. Instead, he sent out a memo that the doors were to remain closed (P-136). Ziznewski asceded to that directive. However, after that, even if the others left the doors open, Sviderskis-Carroll blamed Ziznewski. Ziznewski also had to make accommodations by restricting her materials due to space limitations. During her instructional periods, Ziznewski would experience distractions, especially when everything was closed in. Thus, she wanted to mute out the closed noise by keeping the doors open. Opening the doors was a noisy proposition too, and she noted that in her own testimony, Ami Hoffman had agreed with that. Prior to 2006-07, she shared classroom with others but never had difficulties with them.

She also indicated she refused to sign her annual evaluation form for the period ending May, 2007 (P-159) or to confer about it because she disputed the requirement that she should have filed the ORS screening results, as was stated in that evaluation. But she noted that her evaluation was nonetheless satisfactory. Prior thereto, she got a favorable performance reports in 2005-06 (R-3), 2004-05 (R-5), 2003-04 (R-6), and 1989-2000 (R-7). There was no mention of interpersonal skills problems and she viewed this as a good evaluation. Except for 2007-08, she was never denied any increment. She was disciplined at the Lindeneau School, where she was transferred from James Monroe School as a fulltime reading specialist. The Lindeneau School principal, Mr Somalowitz, transferred her to a second grade teaching position from reading specialist and she viewed this as a "discipline." The Board of Education rescinded the action and she became a reading specialist again. This is the only one problem of which she was aware. Further, in June, 2007, Young prepared a staff reforms report for and a professional improvement plan for Ziznewski in which he noted that during 2006-07 she had worked closely with teachers in grades 1 and 2 (R-2). She was never advised that her job was in jeopardy from 2005 to 2008 and only became first aware of it in April or May, 2008. In that regard, she never saw the letter from Young to Toth (P-171), dated October 8, 2007, which characterized her as being combative, until litigation began. She therefore had no prior knowledge of any problems until that memo or that Young wanted to have her transferred.

Regarding her work schedule, she created it and had it signed off by Young in 2006-07 and 2007-08. In only one instance in the 2006-07 school year, Young instructed her to stop giving instruction for E.L.. She never got any explanation from him about the stoppage but she complied immediately by picking up two other children. She also never refused to meet with any teachers. She never got any complaints from any parents and she always met with them as needed.

Regarding Mr. Drew, she had prior dealings with him in 1996-97 relative to her procurement of her Master's degree and then later when she was trying to locate her personnel file in approximately January, 2008 (she thinks), when he was then acting administrator at Edison for Personnel. She never had any dealings with him regarding discipline, however.

On January 4, 2008, she had a meeting with John DiMuzio, Acting Superintendent, regarding another Affirmative Action Investigation meeting, which meeting was actually conducted by Mary Smith, Esq, attorney on behalf of the Board of Education. She felt that Smith was very vague about what the "climate in the school was." She was not given any specifics as to the events or circumstances of her purported negativism or the allegations pertaining to it. Nothing was scheduled beyond that meeting and she was not admonished or disciplined as a result of that meeting. She never got specifics about any complaints but only surmised that there had been an allegation about a screaming match at some point after school with Sica, at which time she denied yelling at Sica whatsoever.

Between 2006-2008 she had many contacts with teachers on grade levels one through five, both of which were wholesome and positive. However, in 2006-07, she had conflicts and differences of opinion only with Figueroa. During 2007-08, she had conflicts with Sica and Schaefer (first grade), Figueroa (second grade) and Peters (third grade). But as to Peters, any child problem she had with her were worked out. However, she then stated that after three months, Peters used did raise questions and had three incidents of having had experienced loud voices with Ziznewski. But she denied that there was any incidents of negativism as a result of those three events anyway. Regarding Toni-Ann Hooker, a second grade teacher, initially in 2006-07, she had no problems with her either. In 2007-08, Ziznewski indicated that there was an incident in which Hooker apparently overheard an argument between her and Sica within a classroom. Ziznewski claims that her voice was not offensive. She merely wanted to talk about children, and not the program documents.She denied intimidating Hooker, directly or indirectly although Zisnewski recalls reading about some allegations about intimidation in some paper somewhere. She also denied the version of events which Hooker reported in the Affirmative Action Investigation, which occurred on November 1, 2007 (P-176 at EBOE00584). Ziznewski denied that she ever told her that she had jumped on the bandwagon against her or that Ziznewski had told her that she should consider getting a lawyer because Ziznewski was threatening to file a lawsuit. She then opined what lawsuit could she file anyway.

She admitted that she refused to accept a memo from Dr. Maryann Banks to her, dated July 3, 2007 (P-166) but she did so by telling them that she wanted that letter to go to her attorney at the time instead. Regarding her refusal to accept the regular mail of this letter, she claimed that she never got it, this apparent communication being sent to her during the time of the death of her mother. Her mother died on May 3, 2007. She later did receive the certified letter in that regard, however. By July 7, 2007, she had read the letter from Dr. Banks and wrote an e-mail to Pellicane (as her union representative) expressing her upset about those complaints (P-168). She then called Fouratt and asked him what it was all about. She still contends that the allegations are unspecific even to this day in her mind and she has yet to receive an explanation regarding them.

In concluding her direct examination on August 18, 2009, she indicated that she believes that she was suspended as a result of the Board of Education meeting on April 15, 2008. She did not go to the public meeting on that date due to her humiliation and she was never asked to surrender her swipe card, her keys to her personal file cabinet, the new file cabinets or her classroom key. She denied ever accessing the school after she was suspended on April 15, 2008.

On cross examination, she admitted that she did have a hallway conversation with Toni-Ann Hooker and Diane Keane on November 1, 2007, but she contended that it was cordial. She only admitted that she did raise a question to them about having written complaining letters about her at the time. She denied that she verbally assaulted them because they had previously met with DiMuzio and complained about her, even though Young wrote to Toth on November 12, 2007, regarding their complaint in that regard (P-175). She also denied having threatened them with a court suit at that time. Instead, she said that later that same day, as she went back to the library to pick up Hooker's students assigned to her, Hooker went "crazy" on her for no apparent reason.

When she was questioned regarding the letter from Young to Bredahl , dated October 5, 2007 (P-13), she admitted that only some of the letter was accurate. She did admit that she could take only a limited number of students from the Sica class because she did not know how many more students she would get from the teachers. Besides, she acknowledged that Sica had a special education teacher and an aide in her inclusion class. Although she never felt harassed by Sica, she once again indicated that she did go to Young to complain about Sica always calling out the names of children who needed help to her in her class.

During 2006-07, Ziznewski did have periodic exchanges with Schaefer and other teachers regarding the needs of their children. However, many times she would bring her assigned instruction children into their classes in order to "showcase them" to the classroom teachers.

Regarding the letter from the parent of J.B., dated June 7, 2007 (P-124 at EBOE00448), Ziznewski denied having anything to do with the composition of the letter from him to Young although she admitted that Mr. B. "begged" her to write the upper part of that page since she figured that he could not write in English. She also admitted that she typed an instructional passage in which she wanted Young to be aware of all the facts regarding the father intending to come in to discuss the signing of a parent waiver (P-124 at EBOE00449). The father wanted her to be there when he arrived at the end of the school day and was adamant about signing a waiver. She then saw him there at 4:00 down the hall after Young had refused to let Mr. B. see her at the time. The father had asked her to help him in resolving the placement of his child at the Marshall School instead of the Washington School. She also claimed that the literacy coach apparently did the ORS incorrectly regarding J.B.

Ziznewski denied ever calling either Dr. Banks or Dr.Traficante "bitches" or saying it in the presence of either Maria Piparo or Figueroa. She would never use that language in school and stated that "I absolutely deny it." She admitted that she had a faculty position at the Middlesex County College while she was employed at Marshall but that it was an evening class. She denied ever leaving Marshall during the day to go to Middlesex, although she nonetheless noted that the lunch/prep periods (45 minutes each) are not restricted to one staying on campus. In addition, Young was always accommodating individual personal needs. Prior to being challenged by Mary Smith in that regard, no one even ever raised any issue with her about the use of her time.

She also challenged the complaints by Schaefer regarding her alleged latenesses. Schaefer never discussed anything with her about it. She denied being routinely late, as suggested by Schaefer or Sica. By contrast, there were "surprise occasions" where children were denied instruction because they were engaged in other activities, even though Ziznewski was not advised where they were at the time. In addition, there are some occasions when Ziznewski became tied up either doing the ORS screenings, participating in the kindergarten orientation in the fall, or the kindergarten registration in the spring. If she would not be available, Ziznewski would notify the office, send a note back with the children, or advise the affected teacher.

Her involvement regarding the ESL program was also examined. During the 2006-07 school year, she admitted that there were no ORS screening scores in 8 of the student folders, as indicated in the memo generated by Young (P-116), but she said this is the first time that the testing was back in Marshall and not at the Education Testing Center. So she screened every child, even though she cannot tell who was on the appointment sheet. On the day of their arrival in the district, the families would show up. This represented a new set of confusions and procedures, which appeared to be very inconsistent, which event happened in the spring of the year. She screened over 100 children in the process but none of them qualified for the MAC II.

She conceded that all nine of the children indicated hereinabove were placed in ESL even though Ziznewski had determined they would would not need it. She denied that she ever misidentified the nine children. These scores were not put in the main office folders because she never knew she had to do it except when they required further testing (i.e., MAC II). She only kept those scores herself. Thus, she conceded that none were ever sent to Mrs. Piparo in 2005-06 or 2006-07 since every one of the students had passed her screening in both years.

Although she insisted that a "reading specialist is beyond a teacher" (i.e., beyond a teacher's status), she was not able to identify any different salary guide to distinguish between her status as a reading specialist and a teacher since they are both within the same education association and the collective bargaining unit. She admitted that her salary was geared the same way as similarly situated teachers.

In her prior dealings and other schools, she conceded that she had had personality problems with Mr Samolewicz at the Lindeneau School as well as Mrs. Fox who had been an elementary supervisor assigned to the Lindenau School. In the case of Principal Samolewicz, he had an issue with her regarding difficulties with her scheduling. He felt that she was taking too long to get from the Lincoln School to Lindeneau (this occurring during one of her periodic dual school assignments over her career) and for of her to cut down her lunch time accordingly. She also did not feel that Samolewicz appeared to understand how to implement the reading program there. Samolewicz would yell at her for picking up children from the other classes, which she would nonetheless do if the teacher forgot to send them to her. Samolewicz also disputed how the children were to be serviced or whether they were to be serviced at all in her BSI program. He was harassing and vindictive with her. He would not allow her to attend PAC meetings, and he challenged her scheduling and travel requirements. He also nitpicked on her being late for classes by as little as three minutes and not providing her with appropriate passing time between classes, among other minor issues (P-132). Yet she maintained that Samolewicz had apparent confusion about the way her schedule was run. She claimed that he was difficult to work with and he even got to the point of ordering her not to deviate anymore in her schedule without clearing with him personally. Although she claimed that she had had no problem with Samolewicz regarding the submission of her lesson plans, she was nonetheless shown copies of letters, the first from him to her, dated January 7, 1998 (P-129), in which and he expressed concern that she had failed to reply to his order to leave him with her lesson plans and the second from her to him, dated January 21, 1998 (P-130), in which she referenced his request to review her lesson plans. It is noted that this appeared to suggest that there was in fact some problem in that area, not withstanding her contention to the contrary.

She also had issues with Regina Fox, who she contended was the girlfriend of a principal and which resulted in Fox becoming a supervisor without any credentials. As a result, Ziznewski was excluded from certain curriculum material which was being given to the first grade teachers by Fox. She wrote the note which objected to her being so excluded but never got a response from Fox, who was very hostile to her during the 1994-96 school year. This also resulted in Ziznewski being ignored by Fox and being left out of meetings, particularly those which she felt she should have been responsible to run herself. Fox would also order books for teachers which superseded the authority of Ziznewski, in her estimation. She never thought it was her place to question Fox at the time. Fox had made her opinion known that she did not even like Ziznewski as a person to other colleagues. But she never confronted Fox with those claims. She never had any confrontations with her in the past and there was therefore no reason for Fox not to like her.

By 1996, Ziznewski applied for the position of elementary supervisor herself for curriculum and development, at which time she expressed her displeasure with Fox's credentials to Dr. Capraro. She thought that Fox was blatantly rude with her, in a manner similar to the actions of Samolewicz with her. Yet, for all these personality difficulties, she claimed that she did not have a problem with either one of them and that she did her work. Yet, she admitted that when she was later transferred from James Madison Intermediate School to Marshall in 2004, James Quinn said "it would be better" if she transferred because Fox was about to be the principal at Madison. He further stated that it "wasn't personal and it wasn't professional" either. Ziznewski felt it would "probably" be a problem if she was in the same school as Fox since it was her understanding that Fox did not want her there anyway.

She at first testified that she had had prior problems with principal Elsie Rebovich at the Monroe School, in 1996-97 where she was the only reading specialist at the building, much like her role in a number of her other assignments. While there, Rebovich had some concerns with her program performance but she did not think that Rebovich truly understood her program or how to identify children in need of reading services. She only previously served as a curriculum resource teacher at a middle school. It was her opinion that Rebovich had some "misunderstandings" as to the times that Ziznewski was supposed to be at her school. But Rebovich cited her with conduct unbecoming a teacher on December 9, 1996 (P-127) and claimed that the Ziznewski's "outbursts", which were always unpredictable, were affecting her ability to function as a reading specialist. Rebovich also noted that Ziznewski's treatment of staff members had bordered on harassment. Ziznewski denied the bulk of the allegations cited by Rebovich, however. She denied ever having gone into a "tirade", as alleged by Revobich. And, despite those allegations and despite her initial testimonial acknowledgement that she had had prior problems with Rebovich, she still contended that she had "no problem" at Monroe School. It was just a "misunderstanding." (Emphasis added). She also denied that Rebovich ever asked her to supply her with her final copy schedule even though the letter from Rebovich to her, dated January 7, 1997 (P-128), raised those issues too, along with her violation of her scheduled school hours.

The issue of lesson plans is also discussed. She did not recall ever being asked by Rebovich for her lesson plans and did not recall being told to put her lesson plans in the book either. She claimed that her "lesson plans", as such, consisted of a "record of [her] meetings," which included the notes of her meetings and what occurred at the meetings. Also, when she was told by Samolewicz in 1997-98 about supplying the lesson plans to him, she then described the lesson plans as being in her "portfolio", which also included how children respond pursuant to accepted teacher self directed evaluations. She believed that reading specialists are not required to create lesson plans. Thus, she created her own compendium and called it a "portfolio."

On further cross examination, she reiterated that she did not report to the supervisors of curriculum and instruction (Hagie and Capraro) and that they had no authority over reading specialists. She had previously applied for the job twice, once in 1996 and then in approximately 2004. Somewhere early on, she initially reviewed the job description for the job and recalled that the supervisors supervise "teachers." But she believe that a reading specialist is one step above the term "teacher." She did not recall Dr. Traficante ever telling her that the supervisors Hagie and/or Capraro were over her at any time or at any meeting. She then said that, at this point (i.e., the due process hearing), she cannot say that she denies it ever having been said by Dr. Traficante, however. But she nonetheless denied that the role the supervisors was so stated at the October 24, 2006 meeting, even though the memo from Hagie and Capraro to Young, Ziznewski, and Keane, dated October 25, 2006 (P-5) states that to be the case.

Then, at the following meeting held on January 23, 2007, she did not recall that Dr. Traficante ever state that all teachers and reading specialists are under the control of the supervisors. She also did not recall asking Myron Fouratt whether she had to show her lesson plans to those supervisors. She also specifically denied that the two supervisors then indicated that they can review the plans of all tenured and untenured teachers.

She then denied that there was any discussion about the role of the supervisors at the third meeting which was held on March 19, 2008, and which was summarized in the letter from Dr. Traficante to her dated April 2, 2008 (P-51). She indicated that Dr. Traficante was not being truthful about any such discussion in that memo.

Ziznewski then conceded that, prior to transfer to Marshall, she did have problems with some principals, but that started only with Daniel Donnelly, who was the principal at the Washington Elementary School where she was assigned between 1994-96. However, when she was asked about any problems she had had with principal Katherine Peterson at the James Madison Primary School in November, 2000, Ziznewski indicated that she did not recall any "discussion" with her about her schedule at the time. But she was then shown a letter from Peterson to her, dated November 29, 2000 (P.-134) and her response, dated November 30, 2000 (P.-135), which referenced problems involving her schedule even at that school. She did not know if she had complied with the deadlines set forth by Peterson by that time.

The examination emphasis then shifted to her role regarding testing of A.P. Ziznewski indicated at that point that that she had tested him in October, 2007 that he had tested out on his DRA at the time, after she had finally gotten the Summer Literacy Academy list which had been handed out to Ziznewski and all of the other staff on September 28, 2007. Ziznewski contended that she thought that she may have missed that meeting. She did not recall getting a copy that list then, even though it was attached to the memo to reading specialists, dated October 3, 2007, which included his name on it (P-12). She also did not recall at that point whether not Figueroa even ever asked her to take A.P. for BSI services. Counsel for the district then pointed out that Ziznewski did not test out A.P. in October but rather on December 11, 2007 (P-59) and that she had acknowledged that she never shared the test results with Figueroa at that time. Further, Ziznewski announced that December testing result date when she was part of the meeting with the parent of A.P. on January 16, 2008. Her response was that she does not now recall stating "December 11" to them at that meeting. She then indicated that she did not even know if she "had the opportunity" to give A.P's testing results to Figueroa any time. Figueroa was not even talking to her at the time, even though Ziznewski claimed that she gave the results to Young and discussed those results with him.

The various results regarding A.P. were that Figueroa had found him to be at a grade one reading level in the fall of 2007, while Ziznewski found him to be at the second/third grade reading level, this having occurred after he had been in the Summer Literacy Academy during the summer of 2007 where he was was still found to be scored at a grade one level, even though a prior DRA by Ziznewski at the end of June, 2007 had already scored him at the second grade (full step) level. Thus, even with testing by the summer DRA tester (who was not Ziznewski), A.P. was still one full grade level apart. Even though A.P. had regressed by the end of that summer, Ziznewski nonetheless had scored him higher into the second/third grade level. Further, Ami Hoffman's running record for A.P. in April, 2008 (P-70 at EBOE00195) was close to the results generated by Figueroa which placed him at grade level "1,2" even at the end of April, 2008, despite the fact that Ziznewski had found him to be in the second/third grade level in the prior fall 2007. In addition, Young had advised Dr.Traficante on January 16, 2008 (P-26) that Figueroa had already been reporting A.P. as being "the poorest reader in her class." And this occurred even though Ziznewski had dropped as a good reader in June, 2007, based upon his DRA score by her at the time. When confronted with that information, Ziznewski could not explain how A.P. had gotten into the Summer Literacy Academy thereafter despite those recorded results other than to say that all of the other teachers, including the literacy academy teachers, Schaefer, Figueroa, and Hoffman were all wrong. She then claimed that in mid 2008 (January-February, 2008), Ziznewski's score for A.P. on that DRA placed him on a third/fourth grade equivalency by her testing, even though Hoffman later found him in April, 2008 to be still at the first/second grade level. She nonetheless does recall saying that A.P. was a good reader when the meeting was held regarding him on January 16, 2008.

Regarding the incident with the Young on January 29, 2008 (P-31), she denied calling him a liar or that she was agitated, as he alleged in that memo to Dr.Tarficante. She claimed that she was confused as to why she could not go to a staff writing workshop after he had told that she did not have permission to attend. She said "that

(her emphasis) is a lie." By that she meant to say that she did not call him a liar. She did admit that she stated to him at the time that she was in the process of going to the Commissioner of Education but said that was only because of her dissatisfaction with her increment denial, and not because of any threat to him. She also did not remember getting a letter from Young, dated January 28, 2008 (P-30) in which he cited complaints by Sica and Schaefer regarding her failure to implement the BSI program. She also denied being told by Young on January 16, 2008, to begin BSI instructions with A.P. immediately (P-26).

She also denied ever saying that she would not take any of the Sica children because Sica had too much professional help in her classroom already, and indicated that if Sica or Young stated that, they would both be "lying." She also indicated that Schaefer would be untruthful if she stated that in January, 2008, Ziznewski was not taking any of the Schaefer children since Schaefer never told her at any time before that time that she wanted some specific children in the BSI program.

Ziznewski admitted that she never provided BSI services for the Sica student, A.G., but denies being brought assessments of him by Sica. Besides, A.G. did not fit the eligibility criteria after Ziznewski had looked at the quality of his work in the batch testing, although she did not recall doing a DRA on him . She also denied ever yelling at Sica. As a result, Sica was not telling the truth when she so testified, according to Ziznewski. But she denied not taking children due to their eligibility and for the denied that she refused to take children because Sica had enough help. If Sica said that is what happened, she would be "lying." She also denied that Sica ever approached her "time after time" to take A.G. but that, contrary to what Sica reported, Sica had been met with hostility from Ziznewski. She also denied telling Sica that she does not believe in ESL and claimed that there was no ESL program at Marshall in 2006-07, despite the fact that counsel for the Board reminded her that Dr. Traficante had opened up such a class at Marshall during that period of time. She nonetheless still claimed that her determination regarding A.G. was based upon his educational needs and not the amount of personnel in the Sica class, even though she previously testified that she considers both options, both teacher needs and student needs, when she is assessing the need for services.

She also denied ever declining to take children from the Peters third grade class too even though Peters had recommended S.A. and that she had found out indirectly that Peters had some concerns about him. And she denied that Peters ever pressed her to take the child S.A., even though he had been enrolled in the Summer Literacy Academy in the summer 2007. She then claimed that running records and DRA's regarding BSI eligibility are not correct assessment tools. She did the DRA on S.A. at the end of June, 2007, and found him to be at grades three/four even though at the subsequent DRA baseline which was done by another teacher it found him to be at the first/second grade levels (P-52), and, even at the end of the summer academy he was still only at the first/second grade level. Thus, she still contended that the two summer literacy academy teachers and Peters were both wrong in their assessments.

She also claimed that Peters would be "lying" if Peters said that she gone to Ziznewski to have her take the child A.G. because he was below grade level and needed help. Ziznewski took A.G. because he had just arrived came from Serbia as a result of an abrupt move. Although his parents reported that he had standard English there, Ziznewski claimed that she and Ami Hoffman had agreed to providing services anyway. Further, the father wanted A.G. to receive some other services other than ESL, based upon his own research. She denied failing to identify A.G. for ESL, and Hooker was incorrect in so requiring A.G. to get the MAC II accordingly.

Regarding the ORS screening forms (P-65), she kept the test results in her folders in a locked cabinet in her classroom. She admitted that she would take them out of the building in order to work on them at home since she did not have enough time to do the work in school and was otherwise preoccupied working directly with students. She denied disregarding the written directive in that form which require the ORS forms to be forwarded to the appropriate office (elementary) and claimed that she did supply the completed ORS forms to the school office. She denied that the form (P-65) was changed in November, 2006 to reflect that requirement, and even if Dr.Traficante and Martin Smith had so testified, they both would have been "mistaken." Further, she indicated that Young would also be " lying" to say that he ever had a conversation with her at all in September, 2006, regarding her failure to place the ORS in a second grader's folder, as indicated in the memo from Young to Martin Smith on that date (P-64). She also did not recall getting any memo from Young on October 3, 2006, which ordered her to produce the ORS (P-66). But she did acknowledge that she did receive a memo from him on October 6, 2006 (P-117), and does recall a conversation earlier that day regarding it, although she denied that Young had then asked for copies of all students for whom she had done ORS testing since school had begun (even though the memo says precisely that).

Yet, regarding the requirement to produce the ORS test results, she then admitted that she did not transmit her ORS test results to the main office in the fall of 2006. At the same time, she did not recall getting a follow-up memo from Young on October 10, 2006 (P-118), in which he reminded her that he still did not receive from her all the completed student ORS forms by October 6, 2006. At that point she once again emphatically stated that she did not get any of these notices and denied that Young ever told her to produce the ORS forms, either verbally or in writing at any time whatsoever. Then, when directed to the letter from Young to her, dated October 10, 2006 (P-119), in which Young advised her that she had not placed any ORS forms in 58 student folders, she replied that she really didn't know if she ever even got this memo either.

However, she did acknowledge receiving the notice of a meeting from Young to her, dated November 13, 2006 (P-120). She attended the meeting accordingly but did not say much. She indicated that she did have all of the kindergarten registration forms with her but instead of allowing her the chance to present them, she once again stated that Dr.Traficante dwelled only on "green sheet" procedures and wanted the forms in the main school office, and not in her possession. In the process, she indicated she has spoken to all of the incoming children to get information from them.

At this point, she indicated that the father of D.B. (the sister of J.B.) did have a discussion with her about procuring a parent waiver for D.B., although she denied having a discussion with him about the child, which discussion occurred sometime after September, 2007. At that point, she went to Young and was "confused" about why D.B. was going to another school but she pointed to no specifics or details in that regard. She then admitted that she then called Mr. B., instead of Young or Smith, in order to further allay the confusion.

She also claimed that she offered the DRA's to Hagie in March, 2008, but Hagie did not want them. She never produced any lesson plans, but she claimed she had a "form of a lesson plan." She also admitted that even though she had been told to produce the lesson plans in January, 2007, she nonetheless questioned them in the first place because she felt that the DRA was not necessary and that the teachers were satisfied with her portfolio approach instead. She contended that she performed the DRA's on all assigned children from the Summer Literacy Academy and that they were always submitted in a timely fashion relative to the first and second quarters of the school year. However, she did not recall the dates of such submissions in 2007-08 and had no exhibits to prove that point. She then admitted there were none in either of the three exhibit books from either herself or the district presented at the hearing. She also indicated that she did respond to the Hagie memo but cannot recall what she said. Nor, could she recall speaking to anyone about it other than perhaps her attorney. She speculated that she may have spoken to Young about it also but offered no other information in that regard. She denied telling Young that Hagie was "not her boss" (i.e., basic skills supervisor) and denied saying that she did not believe in the DRA's. She also denied saying that she would only do as Young directed. She also denied being told consistently by Hagie or Young to produce her DRA's. And she claimed that she turned them all in before March 17, 2008, to Mrs. Piparo. She also indicated that Young and Hagie would be "lying" if they said that she failed to produce six sample DRA's from the first grade and six from the second grade, which had been ordered by Young to her in a letter dated March 10, 2008 (P-45). She also denied that she had refused to speak to Hagie, despite the letter from Young to her to that effect, dated March 10, 2008 (P-44). She also called that assertion by him as being a "lie."

She also denied that the DRA's were discussed at the March 19, 2008, meeting at the Education Center, even though the letter from Dr. Traficante to her, dated April 2, 2008 (P-51) states that fact beginning with the first paragraph of the two page letter. Instead, she maintains that Dr.Traficante only spoke spoke about ORS assessments not being done and that she then produced Hagie's charts of the students who had had different reporting levels. At that time they did discuss the comparison charts of children whose DRA results varied from hers, although she denied that her results denied the children appropriate services. She did not recall being told at the time that her results were inflated and contended that no one said they were inflated. She also insisted that Dr. Traficante was incorrect when she had noted in that letter that they had discussed her untimely reporting. Instead, she stated that they had acknowledged to her that they had incorrectly listed her results in the wrong columns. She denied that Dr Traficante had any discussion about the role of the elementary supervisors at that meeting and once again stated that she had never been told that at the meetings in either October, 2007, or January or March, 2008 that the elementary supervisors have a role in the BSI program.

The cross-examination of Ziznewski was scheduled to continue on September 23, 2009, but that date was adjourned out in the early morning hours when this tribunal was advised that Ms. Lordi was ill and unable to attend. This examination continued on October 5, 2009, accordingly. On that date, Ziznewski claimed that she did produce her lesson plans (i.e., her contention being the portfolio plus general comprehensive plans she has for grade levels) and did always produce them upon request from any school authority. However, she was then shown the letter from Samolewicz to her, dated January 7, 1998 (P-129), in which he stated that they were not timely produced. She also claimed that she prepared lesson plans on a daily basis but admitted that there could be a difference between lesson plans and a portfolio, which she claims is a more extensive and more accurate reflection of what a child's responses are in any given situation. She then admitted that the term "portfolio" does not appear anywhere in the policy of Edison at either Exhibits P-182 or P-192, but her contention was that she was not governed by teacher requirements, which is the intent of either and both of those policies.

At Marshall, she claimed that the elementary supervisors were not authorized to require her to produce lesson plans and that Dr. Traficante never told her that the elementary supervisors had the authority to ask her to produce lesson plans or that the supervisors ever told her what their role was over her. In the process, she denied that Hagie and Capraro's letter her, Young and Keane, dated October 25, 2006 (P-5) was inaccurate and incorrect. She then admitted that she did not bring her lesson plan books to the October 24, 2006 conference, even though she knew that she had been directed to do so, because she did not believe that they had the authority to demand them. She thought that she did bring her "lesson plans" to the January 2007, meeting but now denied that what she did bring constituted lesson plans which fit the definition as contains in exhibit P-182.

The confidentiality requirements of the Affirmative Action Investigation was also examined at this time. She admitted being told by Dr. Banks that the investigation was confidential and not discuss it with anyone. She then denied seeking out Hoffman afterwards and confronting her about what Hoffman had at her interview in that investigation. Therefore, it was her opinion that Hoffman was "lying" about any such confrontations even though Young stated that fact to Dr. Banks in his letter to her dated March 23, 2007 (P-152). She then admitted that she did receive the March 23, 2007, letter from Dr. Banks about that incident (P-153) and then stated that she did actually have discussions with Hoffman about it but only that she "answered her questions." However, she did not seek Hoffman out. In addition, she had gone to to Young's office herself and not that he called for her. She denied being hostile with him and, as a result, Young was "mistaken" by saying that. She also denied that Diane Keane was part of that meeting with Young.

At this point, she commented once again regarding her interview at the Affirmative Action Investigation, which interview with her took place on March 20, 2007. She once again indicated that she was interviewed by Mary Smith, counsel for the Board (P-155 at EBOE00523). At that time, she admitted that she and Young did frequently talk about church. She claimed, however, that Young was mistaken about her use of her statement at the time: "How do you look yourself in the mirror?" her response was that they had been discussing his ability to face each day. Thus, she admits that the comment was made by her but that the context was wrong. She denied the Young ever talked to her about her ongoing tendency to be argumentative and uncooperative with the staff. He was mistaken. She also denied that she ever acted hostile to Young in the school setting and she never hollered or yelled at him there.

Regarding the letter from Dr. Banks to her on June 19, 2007,(P-164) regarding another Affirmative Action Investigation, she does not recall getting it or having any meeting thereafter about it. (It is noted that Dr, Banks wrote her again on July 3, 2007 (P-166) at which time she indicated that since Ziznewski never got back to her to discuss the matter and then refused to accept the certified mail noted above, Dr. Banks concluded her investigation and issued her findings without any further input from Ziznewski.) She only admits that she declined to take the letter from Young at which time she told them there were attorneys involved.

Regarding the letter from Young to Toth, dated June 20, 2007 (P-165), she denied speaking nastily to Mr. Smith except for one time, she denied that she spoke nastily to Smith whenever they had a meeting with him and she denied that she had ever spoken to a parent to refuse ESL services for his son.

On redirect, Ziznewski indicated that, prior to 2006, no one was ever assigned over her in a capacity of elementary supervisor and nor did she ever get observed by any elementary supervisor, which she contends supports her position that they were not her supervisors in fact. But she never discussed the any such lines of authority with any other reading specialists. She did acknowledge that there are elementary supervisors for physical education, health (nurse), art, music, ESL and the Spanish programs throughout the district.

It is noted that the next scheduled date of October 8, 2009, was adjourned in advance on October 6, 2009, due to the sudden and untimely death of the daughter of Mr. Feintuch. The scheduled days of October 8, 9 and 16, 2009, were adjourned accordingly. Numerous additional hearing dates were offered in order to accommodate the personal needs of counsel.

The matter ultimately resumed on November 4, 2009. Ziznewski continued and noted that there were numerous delays and adjustments to the daily schedule which affected her ability to provide ongoing services for students, including such things as assemblies, shortened days, teacher workshops, repeated lost days, Halloween parade day, fire drills, and lock down practices, which occasionally took up part of the day. There was no requirement that she make up the time lost. But she would try to take up the slack by discussing it with the appropriate teachers without having the need to clear it with Young's office. She would look to see if a class that was more deficient would be in greater need than another since she was required to maintain "proof of service", as she described it, of the children she was responsible for, which she memorialized in her portfolio. She was never asked to generate a report of the attendances to the main office, however. It was merely meant to document services in accordance with State requirements. She was never required to give any annual report and nor was she ever State monitored. Yet, Sica kept a log on students who were not even in her class and she did not understand the purpose of that list maintained by Sica. This was to be distinguished from the Schaefer monitoring list of her personal attendance at school.

She then claimed that she was never disciplined or suspended at any time prior to 2006-07. However, she was then confronted with information at which time she was cited in her personnel file by Elsie Rebovich twice, the first being on December 4, 1996, for unauthorized leave/unprofessional behavior (P-126) and on December 9, 1996 for conduct unbecoming a teacher (P-127). But no action was taken by Rebovich at any time thereafter about these complaints and she understood the matters were put to rest. She also once again denied creating a tirade as alleged by Rebovich in the second compliant. She then denied the validity of a complaint by Rebovich against her on January 7, 1997,(P-128) regarding her purported violation of any of her scheduling requirements. She indicated that all of her required teaching time was accounted for in the three day per week schedule that she had been assigned at the Rebovich school. She also denied that she had engaged in additional PAC prep periods, as also alleged by Rebovich, since she felt this was valid administrative time and free periods which she could legitimately utilize for her own purposes. As a result, Rebovich did not read her schedule correctly.

She then offered her various staff performance reports to demonstrate the positive ratings which she had received from the various principals going back to 1999-2000 (R-1 through R-7). And, during several of those years, Young and another principal, Michael Quinn had referenced her positive use of the portfolio methodology. And in none of them was there any reference for her need to use lesson plans as opposed to the portfolios. Over time, she had created the use of portfolios starting in the early 1990's. It was her way to keep track of every pupil she serviced and people were aware of it for years even before the adoption of the Teacher Self-director Evaluation program ("TSDE"). She then suggested that the Edison education authorities above her at a minimum acquiesced to her format since she was never told to stop using her portfolios in favor of lesson plans. Furthermore she contended that, even though Hagie and Capraro had told her to produce lesson plans, there was yet nothing to produce since it was too early in the year in any event. But, she failed to indicate why she failed to produce them in January, 2007 upon being so questioned at the hearing, since the January timeframe was more than well into the school year by then.

Ziznewski then once again contended and insisted that she was not aware of the supervisors' authority over her until January, 2007, during the course of some discussion at the meeting with Dr. Traficante. Yet, the Hagie/Capraro memo to the parties, including Ziznewski, dated October 25, 2006, sets forth the fact that Ziznewski had raised the issue about the supervisors at the October 24, 2006 meeting and that she had been so advised that they were her supervisors, not Deborah Bredahl (P-5).

Procedurally, it is noted that the next scheduled date of the November 13, 2009, was adjourned in advance on November 12, 2009, at the request of Mr. Feintuch due to the illness of Ziznewski. The matter was also scheduled to resume on November 17, 2009 as day 39 of the hearing, but it was adjourned the day before at the request of counsel once again due to the continuing illness of Ziznewski. It continued to be heard on November 23, 2009 accordingly.

Prior to 2006-07, neither Hagie nor Capraro ever approached her about any problems with her program. Regarding the DRA's, they were only introduced into the system in 2006 and she feels that they were only to be used where there were problems with the running records. There were many teacher discussions regarding the running records issue and the use of DRA's over time. The first time she had to do the DRA's for an entire group was in May, 2007. She was then horrified by the disparity in the DRA and running record results, so, in December, 2007, she talked to Young because she had heard that there was a reading meeting scheduled to which she was not a party, although Hoffman and Blecher-Sass were included.

She claimed that she was "confused" in that she was being told to do the DRA's but that no one was looking at them. Children were still being put into summer school (such as S.A.), who were scoring in the eighties on her standardized tests. She even challenged Figueroa's preference to pull S.A. into the first grade or even into ESL even though she felt that he had been doing well and had even scored 87% on a standardized test administered by her. She had no idea what records Figueroa had relied upon and she saw nothing that indicated a problem. But S.A. stayed in second grade and Ziznewski nonetheless determined to pick him up for BSI in 2006-07. He exited the BSI program at the end of that year.

Ziznewski then once again returned to the issue of the January 22, 2007 meeting (P-10), at which time her BSI program was discussed. She admitted that she disagreed with administering to all BSI students, including the Summer Literacy Academy students, since she felt that administering to them was unnecessary. The running record was already being done. The question was, according to her: "When did the teachers have a chance to teach?" She further admitted that she did challenge that the DRA's were to be done by the reading specialists and she expected Myron Fouratt to check this out to see if it's use had been Board approved. Yet, she claimed that she did all she was required to do regarding the DRA work and did not deny any children, notwithstanding her challenge regarding the policy and that requirement to do them. Further, principals can demand to see lesson plans, but Young, who knew that she utilized a portfolio style, never asked to see any lesson plans from her, although he did see her portfolios at the I&RS meetings as well as when he observed her in her classroom (at which time she offered them to him, even though he did not actually ask to see them). In addition, she does not know if she even used the term "lesson plan" even though she considers her portfolios to be the same thing, i.e., a "plan."

She also claimed that the Summer Literacy Academy teachers did not do DRA's on the children in that program. However, the evidence submitted showed that the analysis which was done by Hagie regarding ten children who participated in the Academy revealed that seven of them received DRA scores as a baseline as well as post testing (P-52), thereby contradicting her assertion in that regard. Her response was that those results are not DRA's but are only running record correlations, even though they are all listed as being DRA scores. She then couched and refined her prior response by saying that her "experience" was that most summer literacy teachers did not do DRA's.

Once again, she denied that Young ever ordered her on October 3, 2006, to forward to him all of her ORS assessments that she completed on her assigned children to date (P-66). She claimed that she never received or saw that letter. Further, she indicated that, in 2004-05, the ORS was done in Central Administration while in the following two years of 2005-06 and 2006-07, it was done in the home schools. As a result, the registration form does not have a place to check off "ORS." Thus, while the testing was still done in Central Administration, a handful of students were sent to her to perform ORS. She had nothing to do with the registration, however. In the subsequent years, however, she had an appointment schedule although she had no indication that any of them actually needed ORS. She was not sure whether they needed ORS or not because she was doing other functions with those kindergartners at the same time and there was still no indication whether they did need ORS or not. She would interview the children and determine whether or not they needed it. She found that none of them qualified for ORS since they all spoke and understood English. All of these interviews were held in the spring of the year, prior to the next autumn matriculation at Edison. Only after school started in September of one year did she find out that two children needed ORS. None of the eight affected children were discussed with her at any time prior to someone else administering ORS to them.

It is noted that, at this point on day 40, November 24, 2009, the hearing adjourned at 10:25 AM because Ziznewski was ill. The resumed hearing on November 30, 2009, with re-cross examination.

Once again, she denied that Dr. Traficante or Young ever told her that Hagie was, in part, an elementary supervisor over her. And, if they said so in their testimony, they would not be telling the truth, according to Ziznewski. Further, she claimed that she did take all the children who were eligible for BSI and denied that she declined to take any children that other teachers wanted into BSI. They would be mistaken or "lying" if they said that she had not so taken them and they would be mistaken about their eligibility. She also maintained that a reading specialist is not a teacher in the district. Teachers instruct students in a classroom and, in terms of that, a reading specialist is not a teacher and therefore not required to produce lesson plans, according to Ziznewski, although she admitted that a reading specialist does provide reading instruction to children. She then admitted that, at the October 24, 2006 meeting, the supervisors did ask to see her lesson plans but that she declined to do so and that, although she was ordered by them to produce DRA's at the same conference, she did not do so because there were not yet do. In her view, portfolios take the place of lesson plans as they are defined in Exhibit P-182. However, she conceded that in January, 1998, Principal Samolewicz did ask her to produce her "lesson plans" (P-129) and that her reply to him acknowledged her use of lesson plans at the time (P-130). When she was shown those documents, she indicated she had not recalled that exchange earlier. But she then claimed that she had kept "general lesson plans kept by content and subject areas" but never showed them to any principal, including Samolewicz or or Rebovich, or submitted them to either Hagie or Capraro at any time.

Ziznewski also admitted that she did apply for the position of elementary supervisor on three or four occasions, on the last of which Hagie got the job instead of her. She thought that she knew the role of the job but denied that it included supervision of reading specialists or that reading specialists were considered "teachers" in the district.

She then stated that, although on November 22, 2006, Young had written her (P-7) at which time she admits that he told her to bring her lesson plan book and four copies of DRA's administered to a meeting which was originally set for November 28, 2006 (which was eventually and later held in January, 2007), she indicated that she never produced the DRA's to anyone at that meeting because she claims that she was only "asked to bring them" and not necessarily to produce them. As a result, everyone else was "very definitely mistaken" when they said they did ask for them. She also contended that she did bring a lesson plan which was in the form of her portfolio at that time. At that meeting, she did not recall if she questioned the reliability of the DRA, but upon follow up questioning by this tribunal, she then stated that she never questioned the reliability of the DRA at any meeting, but only the running records. As a result, she maintained that Young was wrong here again. In that regard, when Hagie at the March, 2007 meeting claimed that Ziznewski never produced the DRA's, she was "lying." Finally, she claimed that she is not even sure what the Summer Literacy Academy is or what it is supposed to be, i.e., whether it includes enrichment or not. This completed the case in chief on both sides.

Rebuttal

Dr. Rose Traficante

Dr. Rose Traficante was called as the first rebuttal witness in this matter. She referred to Article 1 of the Collective Bargaining Agreement between the Edison Board of Education and the Edison Township Education Association for the period between July 1, 2005 through June 30, 2008 (P-193), which defines the bargaining unit as well as the definition of teacher, the latter which states "Unless otherwise indicated, the term

"teachers" when used hereinafter in this Agreement, shall refer to all professional employees represented by the Association in the negotiating unit as defined above". And, even though the definitional section does not specifically list reading specialists, a reading specialist is nonetheless a teacher since the major function of a reading specialist is to provide instruction and services to assist teachers. They are not treated separately from teachers or paid differently. They also come with an instructional certificate, the current title of which even states: "Teacher (Emphasis added) of Reading." (The old certificates say "Reading Specialist.") Thus, even though the Association also includes non certificated personnel as part of its collective bargaining unit, reading specialists are readily and unequivocally distinguished from them in as much as they are certificated as teachers (Emphasis once again). In addition, the job description of a reading specialist is to provide instruction in the defined reading program, which is a key element which also distinguishes them from non certificated personnel. Reading specialists teach. Thus, if they teach, they are teachers.

The lesson plan is the document or series of documents which define the design of instruction in compliance with the core curriculum instructions. Any teacher who provides instruction to children must do lesson plans, and this includes reading specialists, who work in the classroom and must teach pursuant to the Edison core curriculum. There is no specific form of a lesson plan in the district, although it must be in a collected compendium/binder which includes objectives and activities.The book must also show continuity.

The Teacher Self-directed Evaluation Program (TSDE) has nothing to do with lesson plans. It is used to acquire 100 hours of professional development, which is ongoing and to be generated within the district for tenured teachers in order to gain the required 100 hours within a five year period of time. There are several projects in order to qualify for it, such as use of a portfolio, journal, or co-coaching with a colleague. However, a portfolio cannot be substituted for a lesson plan, even though they can interface. On cross examination, she indicated that she was the founder of TSDE and, in that capacity, she did discuss portfolios as an option for a model available to teachers as one of the alternatives to meet the goal requirements of the TSDE program.

She did not know if Ziznewski's portfolios contained lesson plans. She acknowledged that if her portfolios had been reviewed over several years then they would have been acceptable by them as portfolios for the TSDE program. But a reading specialist cannot ignore an essential part of the teaching unit. The TSDE has been in use in Edison since 2004. Dr. Traficante started in Edison in 1993 as the principal of the Woodrow Wilson School. There were reading specialists in the district at the time. She has never known any circumstance where reading specialists were not considered teachers at any time whatsoever. They are observed and evaluated in the same manner as other teachers. They also receive periodic instructions on district in-service days, which amounts to 21 days per year by contract and which are to be administered by the elementary supervisors to ensure consistent curriculum-based instruction. In that regard, both Hagie and Capraro got Dr. Traficante's approval in the Fall 2006 and 2007 to provide reading strategies to reading specialists. There was mandatory attendance assessed to that participation by all of the reading specialists. Also, both of them scheduled literacy development to the reading specialists every two to three months for professional development at the Education Center, where training was undertaken in such areas as the use of the Lindamood Bell approach.

In addition, since reading specialists are employed as teachers, they fall directly under the supervision of the elementary supervisors, who constitute the content supervisors for them, in addition to which they also are required to report to the building principals since the two supervisors are located at the Education Center. Exhibit P-182 is the district's Procedure and Policy with reference to lesson plans. It includes periodic review by, among others, the supervisors, who are responsible for the creation of and implementation of the content development.

The information contained in the Policy and Procedure document was discussed with Ziznewski at the January 22, 2007, meeting at Marshall School, where the parties specifically discussed lesson plans with her because the supervisors had previously not had met with success in getting Ziznewski's lesson plans. She indicated that it was "preposterous" that a teacher/reading specialist would challenge the need to produce a lesson plans, so Dr. Traficante dismissed Ziznewski's urgings at that meeting to not provide them. That was reflected in the summary which she prepared the next day (P-10). The lesson plan is a plan designed to be directed to a child, which is a prerequisite to actual teaching. And, through teaching, the goal is to see if the child really has learned. In addition, Ziznewski never physically offered or handed over any lesson plan to Hagie or Capraro at the meeting, although she candidly did not recall if she did at least try to offer DRA's to them then or not at that meeting. She noted that at the March, 2008 meeting, by contrast, Ziznewski did hand in some DRA's (such as A.P.'s scores. See P-52), but they were at marked variance with the DRA's of the Summer Literacy Academy teachers and the classroom teachers' running records. In any event, Ziznewski had no exemption from producing lesson plans whatsoever. Further, the Summer Literacy Academy assessments were DRA's and not running records, even though Ziznewski alleged the latter to be the case. All BSI children must go into the Summer Literacy Academy as well as late entrants or struggling children in school.

On further cross-examination, she indicated that the role of the elementary supervisors between the period of 2005 to 2008 was (one) conduct periodic meetings with various specialists, including reading specialists (who teach) and literacy development specialists (who do not teach), (two) observe non-tenured teachers, (three) prepare departmental budgets, (four) first line contact with new teachers in schools, (five) non observation of tenured teachers, and (six) providing aid to teachers who needed help. In that regard, both Hagie and Capraro did help Ziznewski regarding her conducting her assessments, identifying children, and keeping proper records regarding the DRA's. Hagie did have actual email dialoguing with Ziznewski over issues regarding her programming. As a further part of this process, they tried to do this on an ongoing basis by looking at her DRA's and lesson plans, all of which efforts failed because of the steadfast and increasing lack of cooperation by Ziznewski. The conferences were conducted after those failed efforts to meet productively with her. She also noted that Deborah Bredahl has been a coordinator and manager of the Title 1 program, since approximately 1998, and was, in that capacity, involved in the managing of BSI funding. However, she had no supervisory authority over any one at any time.

Dr. Traficante attended a meeting on March 19, 2008, which included Hagie, Donald Tarr, Ziznewski and Young, at which time there was a specific discussion regarding the Summer Literacy Academy and the "most at risk" students. The district wanted to do more and provide them with additional help on a timely basis. As a result, there was no indication by Ziznewski of any confusion by her about the Summer Literacy Academy at that time, contrary to her assertions at the end of her case-in-chief examination herein.

At that same meeting, Ziznewski challenged the validity of the DRA, which provides observable reading behaviors and which is better than fixed standardized tests. However, the DRA had already been approved by the Board of Education and funds had been allocated to purchase the programming for it, which had been an ongoing program in the district for two years by that time. Yet, Ziznewski persisted in challenging what was already an established and authorized program in the district. Thus, when Ziznewski challenged the validity of DRA's, the import of her questioning was to reject and demean the DRA as an assessment tool even though she did not refuse to administer it.

Deborah Bredahl

Deborah Bredahl is the assessment coordinator and "No Child Left Behind" (NCLB) coordinator for the Edison district where she has been employed since 1995. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree in elementary education from the University of Pennsylvania in 1985 and a Master of Arts in education from Montclair State in approximately 1992, with a concentration in cultural thinking. She is certified as an elementary education teacher by New Jersey.

In her present job title she coordinates all NCLB and State and local mandated assessments. She indicated she does not supervise any certificated staff in the district in her present job or in her prior job with the district. She knows Ziznewski as being a reading specialist who participated in some of her programs for which she files and monitors funding. She handles all seventeen schools in the district in that regard. She has conducted meetings along with the elementary supervisors, the latter of whom set the meeting agenda and then the supervisors run the meetings as it applies to their teachers.

She has never supervised or told Ziznewski that she supervised her at any time whatsoever. All she had was a continuing contact with Ziznewski regarding collecting reading specialist schedules for the funding, which she did with all the reading specialists. Her office was located at the Education Center, and her supervisor was Dr. Traficante. Periodically, she would exchange emails or phone calls with Ziznewski but did not have individual meetings with her. Bredahl indicated she would refer Ziznewski to her elementary supervisors when it involved every question relating to instruction, although on cross examination she did not specifically recall any questions asked of her by Ziznewski. Finally, regarding the submission of her funding schedules, Ziznewski once missed the first one which was due at the beginning of one school year, but that was not unusual since others did too.

Elsie Rebovich

Elsie Rebovich was previously employed by the Edison Board of Education and, prior to her retirement in July, 2003, was then the principal of the James Monroe School. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree in social studies from Montclair State (then) College in 1967 and her Master of Arts degree in education, administration and supervision from Newark State College in 1974. She possesses New Jersey certificates as teacher of elementary education (K through 8), typing (K through 12), math (K through 12), social studies (K through 12), supervisor, administrator and principal. She started as principal at the Monroe School, which is a K through 5 school, in 1996 where she remained until her retirement. She originally began her employment at Edison in 1985 after having been in various assignments as a typing teacher, classroom teacher or basic skills teacher at various districts, including Belleville and Newark as well as in Arizona.

The James Monroe School included BSI instruction for children which included a combination of instruction by the regular classroom teacher and a reading specialist. She knew Ziznewski who was only there during the year 1996-97, at which time the total student population at her school was then under approximately 400 students.

On December 4, 1996, she sent a memo to Ziznewski (P-126) because Ziznewski had done something which was unacceptable at school, which was to leave the school in the middle of the day at noon and not return until 3:15 PM, without getting the permission of Rebovich, but only her secretary. Rebovich does not specifically recall if she was was readily available at the time. But, in any event, Ziznewski should have looked for her either in the cafeteria or in her office, which was the only two places she would be at, or Ziznewski should have left her a note or brought her a note later regarding the absence.

Prior to her unauthorized departure from school, at approximately 11:15 AM, Rebovich entered the Ziznewski classroom only after having heard children inside that classroom talking loudly. As she arrived in the classroom she noticed that no one was there. Ziznewski was scheduled to meet with the children between 11:15 and 11:45 AM. She personally waited with the children and she paged for Ziznewski, who arrived approximately ten minutes later but gave her no explanation for her absence. Rebovich chose not to confront her at the time for fear of creating a problem in front of the children. Later that day, after Ziznewski returned at 3:15 PM and joined the scheduled faculty meeting, Ziznewski avoided Rebovich completely and made no attempt to provide any explanation for that prior misconduct either.

She noted that when one attempted to speak to Ziznewski it was often more a confrontation and sometimes Ziznewski would "fly off the handle." It was her opinion that Ziznewski is capable of going off on a rage, screaming, and shouting. She personally witnessed this while they were at Monroe.

She also had a problem with Ziznewski regarding her servicing of her assigned students. On November 26, 1996, she asked Ziznewski when she expected to start seeing her students. At that point Ziznewski went into a "verbal tirade" which startled both Rebovich and her office staff. The outburst was totally uncalled for given the basic question asked by her. This occurred during the school day and the possibility of others overhearing the display by her was great and this included visitors, parents and children. Then, within ½ hour, Mrs. Malleck, the speech teacher who shared the SGI room with Ziznewski, came into Rebovich's office and complained how it had been disruptive to have Ziznewski in the SGI room while she was attempting to work with her speech students. Rebovich was then later challenged that same day and confronted by Ziznewski in her office regarding her schedule and room assignment. At that time, Ziznewski flew into another verbal tirade, stood up, yelled at her, start pointing the finger at her and said she would not comply with anything that Rebovich suggested. Ziznewski then put her arm up to prevent Rebovich from leaving her own office after Rebovich had asked her to leave and she persisted in refusing to leave. Ziznewski eventually dropped her arm. Then 10 minutes later, Mrs. Malleck came to the office of Rebovich visibly upset and stated that Ziznewski had blamed her for all her problems at James Monroe and then Malleck requested a room change for the rest of the day since she could no longer work with Ziznewski under those conditions. Rebovich agreed. She viewed Ziznewski's constant disruptive behavior as "conduct unbecoming a teacher" and not acceptable in a school with co-workers and children present, and she wrote her up accordingly. (P-127).

The meeting regarding that complaint was subsequently held with Dr. Capraro, John Gundry, Ralph Ranta, and Ziznewski. Rebovich did not recall much about that meeting except that Ziznewski persisted in telling lies and crying a great deal. This upset her in her role there since there were many "untruths" told by Ziznewski which Rebovich described as "twisting the facts". Thus, Ziznewski's "interpretation" of the facts was viewed by Rebovich as being distortions of the truth by Ziznewski.

She also felt it necessary to write up Ziznewski on January 7, 1997 regarding Ziznewski's students schedule, which Rebovich felt was unacceptable since there was too much free time built in by Ziznewski (P-128). Rebovich wanted the time to be spent with the children. In addition, Ziznewski's written schedule contained too many arrows and asteriks, which was very confusing. It was her belief that since Ziznewski had so much time in her schedule, Ziznewski should have reviewed her PAC referrals at the end of the day instead of when she built it in, which PAC work is only paperwork time anyway. The better part of a should have been spent with the children. Further, even when Rebovich asked for her schedule, Ziznewski would not comply with the request. She only "guesses" that Ziznewski ultimately re-wrote her schedule after the January 7, 1997 memo, since she has no independent recollection of it actually having occurred at this time.

Surrebuttal

Ziznewski presented surrebuttal testimony. Regarding the Rebovich concerns, she admitted that she left the Monroe School at 11:50 AM on December 3, 1996 after having gone to the school nurse around 10:50 AM with complaints of high blood pressure and a severe headache with pain. At that time the nurse told her to see her doctor, but she wanted to go to lunch after taking her morning class. She understood that the protocol was to only notify "the office" upon departure. She never had any subsequent discussion with Rebovich about it afterward, however, but claimed that she wrote a memo back to explain it to her. In fact, prior to November 26, 1996, Ziznewski had been out of school from September 6, 1986, onward. In fact this may have been her her first day back at Monroe although she she may have been working at the Benjamin Franklin school the day before.

Regarding the November 26, 1996, incidents, Ziznewski denied having blocked the way of Rebovich in her office, where she contended that Rebovich had remained at her desk. She insisted that she went to see her because she felt that Mrs. Malleck did not want her in her classroom. She did not recall being in Rebovich's office twice that day even though Rebovich testified that she had done so. And when Rebovich told her noted that this statement comes after she had nonetheless attended a meeting conducted by Schaefer with Mrs. C. on February 7, 2008, where she had been invited at the request of Mrs. C. She claimed that she basically "listened" at that meeting, although the letter from Schaefer to Young, dated February 7, 2008 (P.-57) is to the contrary in that Schaefer claimed that both Ziznewski and Mrs. C. questioned Schaefer regarding her use of certain types of interventions (i.e., the use of headphones which have been suggested at the prior I&RS meeting in January, 2008). Schaefer also noted that she had felt "ambushed" by the two of them there. Ziznewski's response to that accusation was that she was being "ambushed" all year by Schaefer, Sica and Figueroa and that was the real history of what had gone on.

However, the continuing concerns raised by Schaefer in her March 20, 2008, summary were not agreed to at all by Ziznewski or by Mrs. C. although she agreed that when a parent attends a meeting, the staff should not show its "bad face." Schaefer had wanted G.C. to be brought before the committee, although Ziznewski did not know why at the time . Schaefer reported things about G.C. that Ziznewski was not aware of, such as that she could not read. She was only aware of certain problems in G.C's kindergarten class relating to bodily functions, and problems relating to the constant change of substitute teachers and the impact of lunch aides. She did not get involved instruction in any way until the 2007-08 school year. She disagreed that she was negative, however, at that meeting and she denied that she openly and repeatedly interrupted, questioned, commented and disagreed with the Schaefer findings, as alleged by Schaefer in that summary. Instead, she claimed that she was only "assisting" in trying to resolve issues relative to G.C. and would never discuss negatively in front of a parent. She also denied questioning Schaefer about her running records. She admitted that she did not have the DRA results on G.C. available to present at that meeting but claimed that may have been the case since G.C. may have been ill. Yet, she previously testified that all of her DRA's had been completed by March 19, 2008.

She also then recalled a discussion she previously had with Young about G.C. at which time she had become aware of her when the child was in kindergarten in 2006-

07. She did not meet the mother or her, however, until sometime during the 2007-08 year. She then administered the ORS test to her and then she was recommended by the kindergarten teacher for Ziznewski to have her in BSI. She met the mother at a basic skills parent meeting in the fall 2007 and they were cordial with each other.

In response to the letter which Dr. Traficante had written to her on April 2, 2008, relative to the conference which she conducted with her on March 19, 2008 (P-51), Ziznewski contended that the letter was not an accurate reflection of that meeting, and she denied that her scores were inaccurate/inflated. She once again challenged the authority of Hagie when she indicated that only Bredahl ran the September 28, 2007, meeting and not Capraro nor Hagie, even though all three of them were named on that agenda for the meeting (P-11). She also contended that some children who attended the summer academy were not at risk, but she never produced any proof that regard. And, as it pertained to the student J.B., she "couldn't say with certainty" that J.B. was given the running record equivalent versus the DRA during the Summer Literacy Academy. Yet, she surmised about the testing results since she had admitted that she was not sure how it was all computed and whether it was based upon a complete reading sequence. Also, although she stated that nothing ever happened after that meeting, she was nonetheless suspended on April 15, 2008. She also stated that, although the memo from Hagie to Traficante, dated April 10, 2008 (P-52) complained about the fact that children received support well above their frustration levels rather than their instructional levels, Hagie never observed her in her class and no one ever told her up to that point about those concerns.

Once again, regarding A.P., Ziznewski got permission from Young to attend the January 17, 2008, meeting with the mother of A.P. after she heard about Figueroa planning to conduct such a meeting with the mother. Earlier in the day, Young had written her and wanted to know how A.P. was doing so she went down to his office and asked Young :"What are you talking about?" She claimed that she had no idea that there was a problem regarding the child. She claimed that she did test A.P. on December 11, 2007, but did not tell Figueroa, although she did enter the results in the computer. She nonetheless contended that A.P. should not have been in BSI in December, 2007, but she never collaborated with Figueroa about her running records during that time period in any case. The reason was that he had done well in June, 2007, during the summer academy thereafter, as well as the Figueroa results up to October 15, 2007. She indicated she did not refuse to give A.P. services and denied that Schaefer even recommended A.P. for summer services. She did not believe that A.P. was even on the BSI list but suggested that he may have mistakenly been there due to his math results. She then stated that on August 23, 2007 (Emphasis added), she was told that A.P. had been in the Summer Literacy Academy. She then changed that statement by saying that it was not until October 23, 2007 (Emphasis added), that she first became aware of that status and corrected herself after a review of her taped testimony was replayed at the hearing. She indicated that she could not have known in August about his status because they did not have school access due to construction at the school during that summer. Also, whenever Young would give her an instruction to take a child, she would. In the case of A.P., he told her not to take A.P. for BSI but instead Figueroa picked up instead by providing extra instruction for A.P. thereafter (even though Figueroa still objected to the lack of services throughout the fall 2007). She also indicated that at no time after January 17, 2008, did Young ever discuss Figueroa's concerns about not taking children.

At the hearing on August 18, 2009, (Day 31), Ziznewski initially indicated that she did provide A.P. with two time slots for Figueroa's student after Young "directed" her to provide those services (Emphasis added). But she then stated, by contrast, that it was a "determination" made after a meeting with Mrs. P., at which time Ziznewski herself determined to provide those services. Thus, she contradicted her own prior statement about who was the source of the determination to provide the services. It is noted, however, that, on January 28, 2008, Young did write to Ziznewski and told her that she was to provide services for A.P. on a weekly basis with the other second graders on her schedule (P-30). Further, although she then denied that Young also ordered her to initiate the services as early as January 16, 2008, the letter from Young to Dr. Traficante on January 16, 2008, indicates that he had so ordered her to do so (P-26). In response, she claimed that his letter to Dr. Traficante was merely his "confirmation" of and not an "instruction" by him for Ziznewski to provide the services, even though in to leave, she complied. She also thought that she had responded to the memo of the incident (P-127) and did not scream or engage in any outburst. If anything, Rebovich was angry with her instead. At the subsequent meeting with Dr. Capraro and the others, Rebovich complained about an incorrect schedule and Ziznewski having yelled. She contended that she was entitled to the times allotted to her and her schedule to do her preparations and everything else and was authorized authorized to leave at 3:15.

On cross examination, she claimed that she saw the nurse between 3rd and 4th periods at 10:50 to 10:55 AM or 10:55 to 11:00 AM, if the class ran over. She denied being ten minutes late. She did not tell Rebovich then about her medical problem because Rebovich was in a "huff." However, she cannot recall what Rebovich said other than that Rebovich was unpleasant. At the same time, she denied ever yelling in the Rebovich office on that date.

ANALYSIS

Respondent, Carol Ziznewski is a tenured teacher at John Marshall School in the Edison Township School District. (See Petitioner's Statement of Tenure Charges and Statement of Evidence Under Oath (hereinafter "Petitioner's Statement") at 1. Respondent has worked in the Edison Township public school system since 1973 and currently serves in the capacity of reading specialist. Respondent is accused by petitioner, the Edison Board, of violating her professional responsibilities as a tenured teacher by "willfully failing to provide services to her students; engaging in improper conduct toward other teaching staff members and supervisors; and engaging in insubordination." Id. at 1-2.

In total, respondent has been charged with two (2) counts of unbecoming conduct and one (1) count of insubordination. Id. at 3-6. The first count of unbecoming conduct is for the "willful refusal to provide service to students." Id. at 3. Petitioner alleges that respondent ignored administrative directives and peer recommendations regarding basic skills instruction (BSI) and consistently refused to "follow appropriate procedures for student referrals, use required forms, or use appropriate assessment tools." Id. at 3. Petitioner further asserts that respondent did not believe that there is a need for the English as a Second Language ("ESL") program and "actively discourages student participation in the ESL program." Ibid. Petitioner also alleges that respondent had "engaged in inappropriate communication with parents." Ibid.

The second count of unbecoming conduct alleges that petitioner engaged in "improper conduct toward other staff members and supervisors." Id. at 4. Respondent asserts that petitioner over time has harassed, intimidated and bullied fellow colleagues and has been disrespectful to supervisors. Ibid. Petitioner also alleges that respondent had "berated, discredited and embarrassed others in front of parents, students, and peers." Ibid. Furthermore, it has been asserted that respondent had been disciplined for the above conduct and directed to cease such behavior, but she has failed to comply. Id. at 4-5.

Finally, the third count upon which petitioner is charged alleges that petitioner had "repeatedly disregard[ed] administrative directives and Board policies over the past several years. Id. at 6.

Petitioner contested the above charges and the Commissioner of Education then transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative law as a contested case. It is noted that, at the beginning of this Initial Decision, the procedural history recited the basic particulars regarding the 43 days it took to hear this matter. What it did not automatically reflect, however, were the additional delays built into the hearing schedule due to the recited illnesses, occasional shortened hearing days, and tragic loss, none of which could have been foreseen under any circumstance. As a result, some of those delays were exemplified in the testimonial presentation recited hereinabove and are illustrative of the repeated opportunities the parties had in order to assess and reassess their respective positions, examinations, and proofs relative to the issues to be presented in this matter since they were able to, and in many cases did, revisit them every time the matter resumed, which forced this tribunal to consume additional time in order to allow the parties to get back on point. This causes certain amount of redundancy which was unavoidable under the circumstances. Further, even as issues were revisited, every effort was made to ensure that due process protections afforded to both sides so much so that they were encouraged to develop their respective positions appropriately. As a result, I FIND at the outset that the parties were afforded every reasonable and exhaustive opportunity to present their matters fully since the charges are extremely serious and the impact upon all the parties is significant.

The legislative design of the statutory tenure provisions is "to aid in the establishment of a competent and efficient school system by affording to principals and teachers a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service." Viemeister v. Borough of Prospect Park Bd. of Education, 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949). Tenure protects competent and qualified teachers during good behavior and guards them against "dismissal for 'unfounded, flimsy or political reasons.'" Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Education, 90 N.J. 63, 73 (1982) (citation omitted). "No person shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation, if he is or shall be under tenure of office, position or employment during good behavior and efficiency in the public school system of the state, . . . except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10(a).

The Board bears the burden of establishing the truth of the charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962). This tribunal has the duty "to decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to the reasonable probability of truth." Jackson v. Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E & A 1933). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact." Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consolidated Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). In other words, the evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metropolitan Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958). See Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959). Precisely what is needed to satisfy this burden necessarily must be judged on a case by case basis.

Conduct unbecoming a public employee has been described as an "elastic" phrase that includes "any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency" of the public entity or "which has a tendency to destroy public respect for . . . [public] employees and confidence in the operation of . . . [public] services." In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960) (citation omitted); see Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998). Behavior rising to the level of unbecoming conduct need not be predicated upon a violation of any particular rule or regulation and may be based simply upon a violation of the implicit standard of good behavior. City of Asbury Park v. Dep't. of Civil Service, 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955); In re Tuch, 159 N.J. Super. 219, 224 (App. Div. 1978). In the context of a tenured teacher, the contours for dismissal set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 have been found to provide a sufficient standard which, while "general in terms," when "measured by common understanding . . . fairly and adequately conveys its meaning to all concerned." Laba v. Newark Bd. of Education, 23 N.J. 364, 384 (1956). Succinctly stated, "the touchstone is fitness to discharge the duties and functions of one's office or position." In re Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13, 29 (App. Div.), certif. den. 65 N.J. 292 (1974). In an educational setting, unbecoming conduct has been held to be demonstrated by a series of incidents indicating a pattern of behavior, or by a single incident if sufficiently flagrant. See Redcay v. State Bd. of Education, 130 N.J.L. 369 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd o.b. 131 N.J.L. 326 (E.&A. 1944). In that matter, a school principal was found guilty of the charges of inefficiency, incapacity, insubordination, lack of cooperation, unfitness and conduct generally unbecoming a principal. 128 N.J.L. 281, 282 (Sup. Ct. 1942).[i] The court held,

> Unfitness for a task is best shown by numerous incidents. Unfitness for a position under the school system is best evidenced by a series of incidents. Unfitness to hold a post might be shown by one incident, if sufficiently flagrant, but it might also be shown by many incidents. Fitness may be shown either way.

[i] This citation concerns the original case, in which the court remanded back to the board. The board's decision in the remanded matter was subsequently appealed and that opinion is the one published at 130 N.J.L. 369 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd o.b. 131 N.J.L. 326 (E.&A. 1944).

Insubordination is defined as the willful and intentional disregard of the lawful and reasonable directives of an employee's duly authorized supervisor. In re Tenure Hearing of Motley, EDU 7421-97, initial decision, (May 5, 1999), modified, Comm'r. (August 4, 1999), adopted, State Bd. of Education (December 1, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>.

The type of conduct that the Commissioner of Education has determined constitutes "insubordination" and "conduct unbecoming" varies significantly, from verbal/physical altercations and threats of both students and colleagues to failing to comply with school policies. The following are a few recent examples of cases involving conduct which is similar to the conduct in the present case. In these cases, the ALJ's found the conduct of the tenured teachers to constitute insubordination and conduct unbecoming.

In I/M/O The Tenure Hearing of Carl A. Hill, EDU 5979-06, initial decision, (April 2, 2007), adopted, Comm'r. (May 15, 2007), adopted State Bd. (Oct. 17, 2007), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, the ALJ found a teacher guilty of both insubordination and unbecoming conduct for refusing to accept letters from supervisors, failing to timely submit roll and grade books, using inappropriate language toward a student, and using disrespectful language and vulgar gestures towards colleagues on multiple occasions.

In I/M/O The Tenure Hearing of Paul Ash, EDU 2799-03, EDU 2658-04 and EDU 2861-06 (consolidated), initial decision, (May 30, 2008), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, adopted Comm'r. (July 18, 2008) <http://www.state.nj.us/education/legal/index.html>. In that case, the ALJ found a teacher guilty of insubordination and unbecoming conduct for, among other things, failing to adhere to the district's attendance and leave policies, failing to comply with verbal warnings from supervisors, and failing to turn in required lesson plans.

In I/M/O the Tenure Hearing of Christopher Molokwu, EDU 9650-04, initial decision, (Oct. 26, 2005), adopted Comm'r., (Dec. 12, 2005)

<http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, the Commissioner found that a teacher was guilty of conduct unbecoming for, among other things, failing to report to a period assignment, obtaining medical leave under false pretenses, pushing a female student, lying to his supervisor about attending a mandatory training program, threatening comments to the building principal, and telling a ninth grade female student that she was "acting like a street girl." The Commissioner found that, together, these instances of conduct, "constitute[d] an ongoing pattern of conduct unbecoming a teacher and/or other just cause for dismissal."

In I/M/O the Tenure Hearing of April Renee Bradley, 1990 S.L.D. 790, adopted Comm'r. 1990 S.L.D. 818, adopted State Bd. of Education 1991 S.L.D. 2521, a teacher was found to have demonstrated conduct unbecoming and insubordination for "defying Board administrative directives," failing to comply with call-in/sign-in policies, and refusing to speak with a supervisor who approached her about a previous incident that had occurred.

The above-cited cases surprisingly mirror many of the allegations which are encapsulized in the three basic charges preferred against Ziznewski, and this Analysis summarizes all of my findings in that regard. As a linchpin finding, whether she holds herself out as either a reading specialist or a classroom teacher, the charges against her, if affirmed, constitute a violation of the tenure statute under N.J.S.A.18A: 6-10. Ziznewski has pointed to nothing which would allow her to be held exempt from the Tenure Act as it applies to teachers or reading specialists, the latter of whom are teachers of BSI in the district. They are one in the same for purposes of tenure disposition. In the process, I reject her claim that, as a reading specialist, she somehow is above or superior to the position of teacher, even though in her own mind she may think that she is. And, although the Edison Collective Bargaining Agreement cited in this matter does not specifically list the job or title of reading specialist in its definitional Article 1 (P-193), since her role is to teach students, that function is consistent with the coverages afforded to and covered by the defined term "teachers" who are otherwise protected by that same agreement, among other defined groups within the district. She is certificated in the same fashion as teachers. By contrast, non-certificated personnel, although included in the same agreement, do not fall under the same category as teacher.

The threshold of any findings relative to the conduct of Ziznewski centers on the concept of balanced literacy and it's use and adoption by Edison. After having considered all of the proofs presented and the arguments advanced, I FIND that the unequivocal proofs demonstrate that, over time, Edison has adopted and endorsed the concept of balanced literacy and student-centered learning as a district-wide policy and that, as a result, all personnel have been required to adhere to this authorized program of instruction for the benefit of the students within the district. In particular, Dr. Traficante presented highly credible testimony and proofs relative to the implementation of the balanced literacy program by Edison. In fact, she was instrumental in managing the requirement to utilize running records and DRA's, as well as the determination to reject Terra Nova testing (the latter of which had been discontinued by Edison after the 2006-07 school year but which Ziznewski admitted she still employed), and for reading specialists to provide appropriate BSI services when the student profiles and teacher recommendations called for those services.

All of the relevant proofs presented indicate that everyone in the district signed on to and followed the mandated directives relative to balance literacy except for Ziznewski, who, despite that mandate, and, further, despite being afforded numerous and repeated opportunities at hearing to justify her steadfast resistance and, in many cases, blatant noncompliance with it, Ziznewski, for reasons never explained, repeatedly rejected the requirement to adhere to district policy to provide timely DRA testing for certain students and to also provide appropriate and timely BSI to a number of students, even though they had been recommended for such services by their teachers, or had become eligible as a result of attendance at the Summer Literacy Academy, or despite the fact that Ziznewski had been ordered to immediately provide those services by her principal, Gerald Young. Her own admissions that she did have a number of children read above their appropriate reading levels constituted a direct violation of Board policy to provide reading appropriate to and targeted to the individual skill needs of those children. Her declaration and assertion that she provided enrichment flies in the face of her requirement and authority to only provide remediation. And despite the urgings and instructions of her superiors, including her supervisors, to refrain from such activity, she nonetheless persisted in her self-determined approach to learning. Those repeated actions by her constituted insubordination and unbecoming conduct when she failed to adhere to district policy in that regard. This alone constitutes a basis for removal since it strikes at the very heart of the program by the Board to provide a uniform approach to learning on behalf of all of the children. Her admission that she has not changed her style as a reading specialist over the years only reinforces the argument of the district that she has failed to sign on to the newly structured academic programming of the district. And I so FIND. As a result, when she failed to follow those directives, she was in direct violation and insubordinate.

In that further regard, her actions in repeatedly challenging the integrity of the balanced literacy program and the utilization of the DRA's went well beyond reasonable intellectual discourse since she adamantly refused to reject her preference for "product teaching" (including her insistence upon using novels with reading deficient children) in favor of the accepted and district approved "process teaching," and as so testified to by Dr.Traficante. This ongoing resistance by her placed her on a collision course with the approved learning style of the district, and placed her at variance with all of the other teachers who did comply with it. She was out of sync with and in defiance of those directives.

In addition, Ziznewski failed to provide timely services for a number of students, as testified to by the various teachers in this matter, who were the primary guardians of instruction for them. Although the testimony examined hereinabove is replete with such references and will not be repeated, it is necessary to point out some situations which illustrate her defiance that regard. For example, the child A.O., a Schaefer first grader, was the weakest child in her class, and yet, as of October 5, 2007, Ziznewski refused to service the child, claiming in the process that she had independently tested the child twice and that, as a result, the child did not need any services. But that was not her decision to make since she was not the classroom teacher. And, even giving her the benefit of the doubt that she actually did test that child, the proofs demonstrate that the child still nonetheless suffered in the Schaefer class until Schaefer was forced to and took it upon herself to provide individual additional services to A.O., at a time when she was thus forced to redirect those energies away from her other students in the class. Ziznewski's function as reading specialist was to augment or supplement classroom instruction. When she failed to provide appropriate services in response to such teacher requests, she engaged in unbecoming conduct. She also placed an unseemly burden upon others to fill in and shift their teaching methodology to meet those individual needs, whether was during the class periods or after school, as necessary and appropriate. Not only was invaluable time lost for the benefit of all the students, but additional resources and costs were incurred as a result in order to offset her deficiencies in that regard.

At the same time, she selectively took only children she wanted to take such as M.V. (who,curiously, was nonetheless reading at his grade level at the time) and R.U, while rejecting and refusing to take other Schaefer children such as T.J., E.H. and E.P., even at a time when she failed to provide paperwork to support her claims of their individual competence. This conduct by her was most disturbing.

A.P. is another troublesome example of her disregard of teacher determinations and preferences. This was a child in the second grade of Jennifer Figueroa who had attended the Summer Literacy Academy (thereby immediately qualifying the child for BSI the next September) and was, as indicated by Figueroa, the poorest reader in her class, as evidenced by her test results and her experience with the child as the classroom teacher. Yet, Ziznewski dropped the child in September, 2007 from BSI and claimed that he was nonetheless a good reader. She also claimed that she had independently tested the child on December 11, 2007, but admitted that she never shared that information with Figueroa, the classroom teacher. Such action is highly inappropriate and represents unbecoming conduct since her affirmative obligation was to provide any such evidence to the classroom teacher on a timely basis. Then she compounded her inappropriate behavior by rudely interrupting and challenging both Figueroa and Sandra Pellicane regarding her position relative to A.P. at the January 16, 2008 with the parents. This was not acceptable actions by an educational professional, since she injected herself between the staff and the parents, thereby creating an unnecessary level of confusion into the discussion. The parents do not need to see dissension in the ranks and her failure to properly discreetly channel any professional disagreement as between professionals violated her obligation to ensure that her disagreement with them should not be the subject of exposure in the environment with the parents present. Her tactlessness in that regard was unforgiving and inexcusable.

And she did the exact same thing again when, by her own admission, she injected herself into the disagreement between T.C. (the mother of G.C.), and Schaefer on February 7, 2008, relative to the use of earphones for G.C., instead of going into a sidebar discussion with the teacher instead. This merely added a bad mixture of fuel to an otherwise major disagreement between the parent and Schaefer, which apparently had been manifest for a period of time. Her interference there, despite her self-proclaimed advocacy on behalf of the child and parent, was inappropriate in light of the manner in which she engaged herself into that conversation. That was uncalled for and represented unbecoming conduct inasmuch as it demonstrated a lack of appropriate and acceptable protocol when parents or other outsiders interfaced with the professional staff in any discussions regarding their children. Similarly, her subsequent private dialoguing with that parent at the school a day later is further evidence of and gives the very strong appearance of impropriety and of her efforts to create dissension, unrest and ferment to undermine the efforts of the classroom teacher to attempt to resolve any discord with the parent herself. Curiously, the testimony of T.C. only added to the specter of some undercurrent of discord generated by Ziznewski inasmuch as T.C. admitted that she had put more reliance on Ziznewski despite the fact that she never saw any purported DRA from her which indicated that G.C. did not even need any extra help and even though her teacher had made observations and had ongoing concerns to the contrary. It is most curious how this parent would have attached more reliance on the opinion of Ziznewski absent any educational proofs to support her position. The only answer might be that T.C. was looking for any one she could attach herself to in her escalating disagreement with Schaefer. In that regard, Ziznewski was a ready and willing candidate.

It is noteworthy that the concept of advocacy was never disputed by the district in this matter. In fact, absent any specific prohibitions to the contrary, it should be a standard mission of all educators to advocate on behalf of children. However, as the district demonstrated, it is the manner in which the advocacy takes place which dictates the appropriateness of its application. The reason is to provide a level playing field so that the parents are not confused or misguided in their efforts to either understand, appreciate, or contribute to the success of their children in the school environment. That process is not helped when school personnel become openly combative, disruptive, and/or conspiratorial and/or apparently conspiratorial with the parents or their children (such as child J.B., the brother of D.B., noted hereinafter, whom Ziznewski used as a messenger to the father) relative to any potential disagreements which may erupt during the course of the analysis of the child by all the parties, whether it be at scheduled and unscheduled conferences, I&RS meetings, or any day to day interactions. In that context, the counterproductive actions taken by Ziznewski relative to her injecting herself in the G.C. matter were highly inappropriate, and they were similarly negative when she fostered, aided and abetted the parents of D.B., and even allowed herself to be drawn further into the fray by communicating in part through D.B.'s brother, J.B. She significantly overstepped reasonable bounds when she engaged the brother in any form whatsoever in the parents' placement dispute with the district. She also fostered confusion in the mother of A.P., which was highly inappropriate. All of those actions by her represented unbecoming conduct and constituted meddling.

And, in that further regard, after having considered all of the proofs presented, I FIND that the upset expressed by Gerald Young relative to the meeting with the parent of A.P. on January 17, 2008, being one of the most embarrassing meetings he has ever attended in his 53 years of education because of the actions by Ziznewski (P-28) was totally corroborated by Figueroa and Pellicane and that, in the process, her attempt to flip the responsibility for the disruption in front of the mother by claiming that they instead had embarrassed her was unfounded.

Further, she refused to immediately provide A.P. with services even though Young ordered her to do so immediately at that same meeting. Her refusal to do so unless and until an I&RS meeting was held also violated Board policy, which permitted such a meeting to take place only after a child had been receiving BSI. Her denial about being so ordered by Young at the time or when he sent her a follow-up letter on January 28, 2008 (P-30) is rejected as not being believable in light of the documented evidence produced at hearing as well as the highly credible testimony of Young, Figueroa and Pellicane in that regard. Her refusal to provide those immediately ordered services constitutes insubordination and unbecoming conduct. Her denial of any responsibility to respond to that direct order is equally disturbing in light of all of the evidence produced in that regard.

Ziznewski was similarly confrontational in 2006 with Figueroa regarding the child R.B. after she had rejected him for BSI services, even though he was doing poorly. And, even though R.B. eventually received services, none of the other recommended children received them until November, 2007 from Ziznewski, which was well after the time when such services should have been implemented. The overwhelming majority of the proofs amply demonstrates that BSI was supposed to begin just a few weeks after school commenced in September of the school year. Yet, Ziznewski's failure to immediately comply with that requirement in a timely fashion denied a whole host of students the opportunity and ability to receive needed reading benefits. Her failure to respond to that requirement was inexcusable and constitutes unbecoming conduct.

And her argument that there has been no actual showing of damage to the children falls short of convincing me that there wasn't such an adverse impact. Her job was to teach and provide timely services to students, which she routinely failed to do. If anything, it was only because of the diligent and dedicated efforts of the other teachers and administrators to provide alternate services for the children that there wasn't such extensive damage. At the same time, sizable needless energy had to be expended by them all in order to address the deficiencies in providing timely reading services by Ziznewski which could otherwise have been more properly directed by the teachers to positive classroom efforts on behalf of the affected children as well as the other children in their respective classes. Thus, in that additional sense, Ziznewski caused the other children to also be denied of their full entitlement to educational benefits because their teachers had to redirect their energies to fill in the gaps caused by Ziznewski's failure to provide such timely services to her assigned students.

It is also evident that Ziznewski failed to provide services for the Sica child, A.G. (2), as well as the sisters A.N. and A.N., even though their respective teachers had requested such services. At the same time, it is noted that Ziznewski's refusal to take A.G. (2), despite that request by Sica, was in part motivated by Ziznewski's declaration that Sica had the assistance of a special education teacher and an aide in her classroom, and that, as a result, Sica had more than enough help there. This resentment by Ziznewski of Sica and her available help translated into a real motive to deny necessary services for children, which is unconscionable. She also failed to provide timely services for the Schaefer children D.J., E.P., and A.O., even though their reading levels were extremely low. She also failed and refused to provide BSI services to children such as A.O., even though Schaefer had requested her to provide such services in early October, 2007. The proofs demonstrate that A.O. did not even receive services as of January 17, 2008 (P-27). She also had refused to take E.H., T.J., and E.P., all of whom had been recommended to be assigned by Schaefer at the beginning of 2007-08.

Regarding portfolios, her self-determined and crafted use of the portfolio method, instead of the mandated lesson plan, was neither authorized nor approved by the district. And the fact that the district may have acquiesced at some point regarding her use of it, did not grant her license to employee it instead of lesson plans. Portfolio is retrospective, while lesson plan is prospective. Thus, when she adamantly refused to adhere to district policy regarding the use of lesson plans and then steadfastly failed to produced lesson plans upon request by her supervisors and/or her principal, Ziznewski was insubordinate and her conduct was unbecoming. And her late testimonial explanation that she viewed her portfolio style as being a form of lesson plan was a lame effort to bootstrap her unapproved use of portfolio onto the acceptable lesson plan requirement.

In addition, Ziznewski demonstrated a track record of not being available at all of her assigned classroom instructional times when she was required to provide services for the children, as evidenced by the running log which Schaefer maintained for a period of time (P-62). Her explanations regarding her latenesses, absences, or non appearances are weak at best and do not provide any plausible rationale for her noncompliance with her assigned professional responsibilities. But her absences and latenesses were apparently not new. Her track record in that regard goes back to the even to the days in 1996 when she served under principal Elsie Rebovich, who similarly observed Ziznewski's failure to timely attend to her class in order to do her assigned duties. Rebovich even had to tend to the Ziznewski class for ten minutes where there was no supervision by any other adults at the time in Ziznewski's absence there. This was shocking to have left children so unattended. This also represents unbecoming conduct and it reflects a failure to provide needed services for, as well as protections for, children. There is also no indication that she ever made any efforts to make up the lost times, which is a disservice to both those children and their parents.

Ziznewski has also been cited with inflating children's DRA scores, which thereby placed these at-risk children into further jeopardy. This is a most serious charge and represents a most flagrant violation of her duties. A significant amount of time was spent at hearing exploring and investigating the various test results and the glaring discrepancies which existed between the results obtained by Ziznewski and the other DRA testers, as well as the results of the running records, all of which was further collated pursuant to the district-adopted Fountas and Pinnell standards set forth at Exhibit P-53. After having carefully considered all of the proofs in that regard, I adopt all of the testimony and the proofs presented by the district in that regard as being believable, worthy of belief and consistent and, as a result, I FIND that the overwhelming evidence demonstrates that Ziznewski's results were highly at variance with virtually everyone else who tested the children at the various times during their pre and post Summer Literacy Academy instructions, and this reflects the heightened concern with which Hagie and Dr. Traficante had to wrestle in order to provide appropriate services for those affected children. The huge uniform disparity in those test results suggests any number of reasons, such as, to wit, either that Ziznewski was incompetent in the manner in which she conducted her tests, that she misunderstood the manner in which she was supposed to administer them, that she disregarded her role as part of the balanced literacy process, or that she may even have somehow manifested some undetermined motive to deny appropriate BSI services to certain children. An explanation regarding a possible motive may lie in the letter which she sent to Gerald Young on November 22, 2006, at which time she stated, in relevant part: "You are familiar with everything I do here and I have done here since my illegal involuntary transfer in 2004." (P-8). This strongly suggests bitterness and resentment which could form an undercurrent for her ensuing and flagrant actions at Marshall, which became readily apparent early on to Young, who nonetheless attempted to give her some slack during the first year of her transition there. But, no matter what the real reason, however, the result is the same. Her testing results, when contrasted with every other result by the other test administrators, were apparently grossly wrong and, as a result, her actions in denying those necessary services represented unbecoming conduct. Further, as indicated hereinabove, when she failed to provide timely immediate services when ordered by her principal (in particular, relative to A.P.), she was insubordinate.

I also FIND that Ziznewski failed and refused to follow proper procedures for student referrals for ESL, despite her assigned obligation to conduct the ORS screening for them. She failed to submit the required ORS forms even though she was repeatedly asked to do so. Her failure to do so was inexcusable. During the 2006-07 school year, Ziznewski failed to provide ORS for 58 children in folders which she was required to do and that process was to be completed within 48 hours of the child's registration. Her retention of her folders in the trunk of her car was also a clear violation of policy and procedure regarding the safekeeping of the student ORS folders, notwithstanding her explanation to Young at the time that they should "trust" her.

Smith found out about her dereliction in that regard after he had been approached by a teacher during the third week in September, 2006, who expressed concerns about the status of A.G., whom she felt would be in need of ESL. Ultimately and significantly, nine children were retested and found to need ESL, including A.G. (in the second grade) (P-116). All nine children were then kept at Marshall since the school year was already underway and the district was required to pull in another teacher, Mrs. Pandit, who was paid for extra time in order provide for those ESL services for those children. In the process, I FIND that the district went to extraordinary lengths in order to intercept and contain damage to these children due to the irresponsible failure by Ziznewski to provide accurate and fair test results for them so that they would not be deprived of necessary ESL services, this having occurred even though Ziznewski had still not turned in her required ORS forms and despite repeated requests from her supervisors to the contrary. Further, Ziznewski acted inappropriately when she became enraged when she was challenged about her failure to have the ORS in the second grader's folder, as Smith had directed (P-64). This also constituted unbecoming conduct.

In addition, she inappropriately intervened in the role of the ESL supervisor Martin Smith when she actively discouraged parents from consenting to having ESL services provided for their children. This was particularly and graphically apparent in the proofs presented relative to the issues involving the parent of D.B., who had informed Smith that Ziznewski was going to great trouble to keep his child out of ESL and that he was frustrated about Ziznewski because of her repeated statements to him which indicated that his daughter did not belong in any ESL program but rather that she belonged at the Marshall School (P-125). This contravention of the direct authority of ESL supervisor Smith was insubordination and conduct unbecoming. In addition, it represented a prime example of her self determined and inappropriate advocacy on behalf of a child, which translated into confusion and upset in a parent as well as the appearance of subterfuge against the organized efforts of the official ESL program as well as the building principal. Her admission that she did get involved in the discourse regarding the status of D.B. was also graphically echoed in the voicemail which the parent shared with the district in which Ziznewski told the father not to place his child in ESL and that Smith did not know what he was doing. Her actions in that regard were highly inappropriate and unbecoming in her role as a teacher. Thus, it is also no wonder that she was relieved of her ESL responsibilities in April/May, 2007 due to her failure to provide appropriate services to children in that area.

As found hereinabove, Ziznewski's repeated failures to provide appropriate BSI and ESL services to needy students represented a significant deviation from acceptable standards of conduct and performance. Further, her misapplication of advocacy was misguided and misplaced under the circumstances.

In addition, her repeated and ongoing outlandish conduct toward her fellow teachers, supervisors and administrators was extensively explored during the course of the due process hearing.

The policy of Edison regarding harassment, intimidation and bullying (P-154) (hereinafter the "Policy") indicates, in relevant part:

"The Board acknowledges that a safe and civil environment in school is necessary for students to learn an achiever high academic standards. Harassment, intimidation or bullying, like other disruptive or violent behaviors, is conduct that disrupts both a student's ability to learn and the school's ability to educate its students in a safe environment. Since students learn by example, employees, staff members (Emphasis added), vendors, or visitors, and students themselves, must demonstrate appropriate behavior, treat others with civility and respect, and refuse to tolerate harassment, intimidation, or bullying.

The Board prohibits engagement in any act or behavior of harassment, intimidation, or bullying towards others on school property, and school-sponsored functions, or on a school bus. Harassment, intimidation or bullying means any gesture or written, verbal or physical act that is reasonably perceived as being motivated either by any actual or perceived characteristic, such as race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, or a mental, physical or sensory handicap, or by any other distinguishing characteristic, that takes place on school property, and any school-sponsored function or on a school bus and that:

1. a reasonable person should know, under the circumstances, will have the effect of harming the person or damaging the student's property, or placing a person in reasonable fear of harm to his person (emphasis added) or damage to his property; or

2. has the effect of insulting or demeaning any person (Emphasis added) or group of people in such a way as to cause substantial disruption in, or substantial interference with the orderly operation of the school.

The Board expects students and adults (Emphasis added) to conduct themselves in keeping with their levels of development, maturity and demonstrated capabilities with a proper regard for the rights and welfare of others, the educational purpose underlying all school activities, and the care of school facilities and equipment."

It is within the context of that policy that I have analyzed the extensive proofs offered regarding the allegations of harassment, intimidation and bullying which have been preferred against Ziznewski. In the process, and after having considered the width and breath of that policy, I FIND that the enumerated categories of characteristics are not dispositive and/or exclusive. Nor, does it appear to limit offensive conduct to persons who possess only those listed characteristics. Rather, the controlling language of the policy dictates that employees and staff members are expected to demonstrate appropriate behavior at all times on school property, and that their maturity and demonstrate capabilities must be in keeping with a proper regard for the rights and welfare of others. As a result, any conduct which reflects harassment, intimidation or bullying is prohibited at Edison.

After having considered the testimony of all the accusers in that regard after having considered and given due deference to the responses by Ziznewski, I FIND that the overwhelming evidence supports the conclusion that Ziznewski engaged in repeated, unprovoked, and uncalled-for abusive verbal and threatening displays against numerous teachers, supervisors, and principals over time, all of which violated the Policy. As part of that analysis, I was required to assess the credibility of the respective parties and their interests in the outcome of the matter. Needless to say, the sheer number of such incidents raised an initial specter of doubt regarding the versions and denials advanced by Ziznewski since one could preliminarily be suspicious as to question how so many people could so wrongly have accused her. However, that inference was not at all dispositive since each matter was examined on its own merits and each represented interactions unique between Ziznewski and those individual players. As a result, each such incident was considered independent of the others and the appropriate weight was attached accordingly. After having considered all of them independently, however, one common theme became abundantly apparent which was that, by and large, each of the incidents reflected a significant negative level of conduct by Ziznewski which illustrated unbecoming conduct by her. In the process, she created a hostile work environment for those around her and made it extremely difficult for others to function properly for the benefit of the children. In many cases, the people around her virtually "shut down" any opportunity to continue meaningful interactions with her as a means of survival in the school environment as well as to further protect the children from her ongoing negative conduct.

As a result, I FIND that each of the witnesses against her presented credible testimony, which was amply supported by numerous memos, emails, letters, or conference summaries. As a result, each of those testimonies was worthy of belief. By contrast, the testimony by Ziznewski was self serving, sometimes contradictory, and suspicious at best. She also would put a spin on answers which appeared to shade the truth. For example, at a meeting with Young on January 29, 2008 (which she at one point contended she was not sure was the actual date, despite the memo from Young to her (P-31) to the contrary), she emphatically denied that she called him a "liar." Instead, her response was that, when Young told her that she did not have his permission to cancel a class, she said "That's a lie. I did have permission." The distinction she was attempting to draw here was obviously disingenuous.

Further, in many cases, she attempted to shield her own misconduct by pointing the finger at the other parties. Such an example is reflected in her attempt to show that the meeting with Young, Figueroa, Pellicane and the mother of A.P. on January 17, 2008, was highly embarrassing to her because of the efforts of everyone but herself. Once again, I am satisfied that the proofs to not support her contention in that regard whatsoever (P-28). Rather, this was one prime example of her negativism, harassment and intimidation of others, not to mention the embarrassment and humiliation which caused her fellow teachers in the presence of the parent.

And another most telling challenge to her credibility was her apparent selective memory loss regarding her receipt or non receipt of many of the documents which supported the claims of the others in this matter, not to mention her refusal to accept various official documents from the administration, which in itself was inexcusable, unprofessional and totally uncalled for under the circumstances. It is indeed curious how Ziznewski could remember receiving only certain messages or other communications while failing to recall any receipt of others, which in the vast majority of the cases just coincidentally happened to be contrary to her position in the matter. For example, she does not recall getting any letter from Hagie or Capraro on October 23, 2006, receipt of any notices of meetings from Young, or receipt of Young's letter to her on January 28, 2008, in the latter of which case she was ordered by him to provide BSI services to A.P. and that he would be monitoring her. Yet, despite her denial of getting any such letter, she still claimed that she still unilaterally determined to provide services for A.P. even though she had felt that his past performance did not warrant it. She claimed that she did that on her own in her capacity as a reading specialist. Why would she have generated those services in light of her belief about his performance level unless she was otherwise told to do so by her superior? That assertion by her was suspicious at best and illustrated her overall and ongoing lack of credibility.

In addition, although she asserted that she never had any personal problems with other educators until she arrived at Marshall in 2004, the substantial proofs presented by the district are to the contrary. Thus, when she denied that she ever had had any problems with Elsie Rebovich, she then attempted to back track by saying that it was only a "misunderstanding." The proofs presented with reference to the incidents, as well as the testimony of Rebovich, are much to the contrary inasmuch as Rebovich credibly described Ziznewski as going into a rage, screaming and shouting and, as she described it, "fly off the handle" on more than one occasion, which included an incident which occurred on November 26, 1996, and for which she was cited for unbecoming conduct by Rebovich(P-127). This hardly represents a person who merely had misunderstandings with another, particularly the principal at one's school. Those actions also reflect unbecoming conduct and are consistent with the allegations of intimidation lodged against her in this matter. Further, she had ongoing disputes with another principal, Mr Samolewitz, which additionally represents problems which she claimed never happened before she arrived at Marshall. Thus, for these reasons, plus all of the presentation and responses made by her in this matter, I FIND that I could afford little weight to the credibility of Ziznewski under the circumstances. This also occurred in light of the extensive opportunities given to both sides to examine each and every one of the witnesses presented at the hearing. In the process, virtually everyone presented by the district held up exceedingly well and presented cogent testimony which was aptly supported by the proofs and the paper trails which followed various incidents and encounters involving Ziznewski.

In that regard, the Affirmative Action investigations conducted by Maryann Banks amply demonstrate the seriousness, consistency and severity of her misconducts against various teachers and her principal, Gerald Young on repeated occasions. Based upon all of the foregoing, I FIND that Ziznewski instigated inappropriate confrontations with teachers during their class times and within the earshot or the eyesight of numerous children, which not only interfered with the teachers' instructional time with the children but also subjected the children to potential upset. There is a time and a place in order to have a dialogue among professionals, but, for whatever reason, Ziznewski apparently chose to pick her own time and place in order to challenge the authority and preferences of the teachers relative to the needs of various children regardless of the proximity of children and/or visitors or parents. By doing so, she also violated the privacy rights of those children when she would announce their names in the presence of others in the area. This was totally uncalled for under all circumstances.

In addition, Ziznewski was so abusive upon occasion that she inappropriately caused other teachers such as Kerry Peters to break down, get physically ill, or want to flee. To cause such a response is shocking and represents a most horrible case of hostile work environment. Her various intimidations of and confrontations with Jennifer Figueroa, Mary Schaefer, Toni-Ann Hooker, Hope Blecher-Sass, Melissa Smith-Zeichner and Ami Hoffman, among others, were similarly egregious, intimidating, harassing and bullying. For example, Ziznewski screamed at Hooker on November 1, 2007, for jumping on "the bandwagon" against her and threatened her with a court suit, which represented bullying by her. Similarly, Keane got upset when she observed Ziznewski yell at Hooker in the presence of her children. This also constitutes a form of intimidation against Keane, which is even the more straining since Keane was a union representative of hers. In the process, I FIND that Ziznewski engaged in highly inappropriate conduct toward each of them in the cited incidents described by each of them herein. Also, her child-like shenanigans regarding her refusal to speak or respond verbally at conferences and the use of her Post-It Notes, her obstinance regarding the status of the library door and her humming antics within routine earshot of Sviderskis-Carroll, the unauthorized use of and misuse of her cell phone during teaching hours which disturbed not only Sviderskis-Carroll but also Pellicane and their students, and her visual staring at and against Sviderskis-Carroll were meant to intimidate and harass the victims of her wrath, all clearly in violation of the Policy. It is noted that the issues regarding the inappropriate cell phone usage was clearly corroborated by Sandra Pellicane, who was thus another victim of Ziznewski's excessive and inappropriate use of her cell phone during classes.

Ziznewski's failure to follow instructions was also illustrated in her refusal to utilize her swipe card upon entry to the Marshall facility, which was a violation of the directive of superintendent Vincent Capraro, dated March 25, 2004 (P-190) as well as the order of her principal, Gerald Young on November 14, 2006.(P-141). This was a district wide security requirement which the superintendent required all parties to follow. Her claim that there was nothing in the collective bargaining agreement to require morning entry swiping is REJECTED in light of those clear-cut directives. If she had a problem with those orders, she should have grieved them in a timely manner. Instead, she ignored those written directives and chose to do what she wanted to do. There is no evidence that she did so grieve those orders.

Further, her ongoing steadfast denial and wrongful challenge to the authority of Lois Hagie and Suzanne Capraro was abusive, intimidating, and harassing, all of which constituted unbecoming conduct and also represented a gross level of insubordination. Ziznewski maintained throughout the entire matter that neither one of them was her supervisor, despite the relevant proofs which demonstrated the on-going extraordinary efforts made by the district to remind her of her responsibility to accept the authority of those elementary supervisors over her. In addition, by her own testimony, she conceded that she had applied for the job of elementary supervisor on several occasions. I find it inconceivable to believe that she would not have known either the job responsibilities or the authority of that job. As a result, her claim that she did not understand the direct authority of either Hagie or Capraro over her is insulting at best. Yet, her refusal to acknowledge the supervisors' role over her and her refusal to respond to their direct orders to produce various student records persisted even to the end of this entire matter, and even despite the testimony of Deborah Bredahl, who appeared as a rebuttal witness on behalf of the district, and whose direct testimony, in addition to all of the other proofs advanced relative to this issue, clearly and unequivocally stated that she was never the supervisor to Ziznewski and she never held herself out as such.

Ziznewski also acted with a high level of disrespect to Martin Smith, even at a time when she similarly inappropriately challenged his authority as the ESL supervisor for the district. Once again, her berating, cynical attitude and derogatory comments with reference to him (i.e., "Uncle Martin") can only be best viewed as harassment and attempted (emphasis added) intimidation, that latter observation being so emphasized as being an attempt by her only because, having had the opportunity to assess the extensive and impressive credentials, dignity and stature of Mr. Smith, I am more than satisfied that Mr. Smith had both the capacity and the professional bearing to keep the bar high notwithstanding the petty, inappropriate efforts by Ziznewski to demean him and his position within the district. If anything, his role there on behalf of ESL students represents one of the most significant and crucial aspects of education since the purpose of that program is to identify and intercept children who have language interpretation needs and to channel them immediately and appropriately into educational services which will allow them to succeed within the school environment. For, without it, those children can be easily irretrievably lost in an educational system or misdirected into special education instead of receiving what they really need. In addition, the costs which would attend that misdirection are totally unacceptable. And the fact that Mr. Smith was able to courageously challenge the status of the ORS testing purportedly done by Ziznewski, notwithstanding her apparent longstanding reputation of being a negative, non-cooperative, bullying force in the district, is a credit to him and the integrity with which he approached his obligations. Thus, the negative actions by Ziznewski relative to Smith were highly unbecoming conduct and were insubordinate.

Her interactions with Gerald Young standing alone on their own merits demonstrate a high level of disrespect, which can best described as shocking and deplorable. It was evident during the course of the hearing that Ziznewski had been dealt with repeatedly by the district by, in many cases, mostly reassigning her around the district. One questions whether or not that represented the old concept of "out of sight, out of mind." Although one shall not at this point dwell on that fact or chide the district for having utilized that type of methodology or strategy in order to deal with her as a problem since it is evident that the district was apparently attempting to maintain as much harmony as possible and to keep a tenured teacher within the ranks in light of the legal requirements attendant to such retention, it is nonetheless anticipated that any future similar flagrant infractions by others, if any, will be intercepted much sooner. This is not to suggest, however, that the district should not have considered alternate ways of intercepting her negative conduct earlier on. Rather, despite the enormous costs which tend to associate with attempts to remove tenured teachers, the fact remains that the district must be more vigilant and aggressive in singling out and handling such negative influences henceforth. Teachers who exhibit unbecoming conduct or who are incompetent, insubordinate, insolent, harassing, intimidating or bullying must be intercepted and re-directed or, if necessary, disciplined as soon as possible to avoid adversely affecting the morale of those professionals who consistently try to maintain a high level of good order and positiveness in the school community for the benefit of the children, staff and the citizens which it services. If teachers seek to be treated as professionals, they should act as professionals. When they violate that mandate, they must then be held accountable.

In any case, the process of that school assignment shifting caused Ziznewski 's final landing place to be at the Marshall School, at a time when Young was asked to take her on by the district. Here was a man with an apparent long standing reputation of creating and maintaining a wholesome environment for his entire educational community and family, as it were. My overriding impression is that he also had a reputation for being a decent, responsible man and one who could hopefully be best positioned to cope with the negative attitude of Ziznewski. In addition, it is reasonably assumed that there may have been some general understanding or hope that, since Ziznewski and Young attended the same church, there could have been some additional opportunity for him to bridge her pervasive negativism in an attempt to bring her more in line with his harmonious community at Marshall. Even though he expressed reservations upon the initial re-assignment of Ziznewski to his school, he nonetheless took orders like a good soldier and attempted to embrace her there. However, despite those best efforts by him, including his periodic attempts to remind Ziznewski to conduct herself in a more professional manner, she persisted in generating a hostile environment and also inflicted upon Young himself a level of abuse which included shouting, berating, and threatening even him personally to such a point that he ultimately asked superintendent Carol Toth to keep her out of his school after the 2006-07 school year (P-165), which request, for whatever reason, was rejected. Thus, he was forced to endure her ongoing tirades and humiliations for another year, which actions by Ziznewski persisted in eroding the morale of the school which he had so strenuously and proudly cultivated and protected for the benefit of the children and teachers. In fact, Ziznewski challenged Young to such a point that others, such as Hoffman, even got upset with the matter in which she had verbally attacked Young in his office. Additionally, and in light of the hostile actions which Ziznewski directed toward Young on a recurring basis, I FIND that it is more likely than not that Ziznewski was responsible for having ripped up her birthday certificate and cowardly re-deposited it at Young's office which certificate Young had prepared for her benefit, as he routinely and consistently did for all of his professional staff in order to foster a happy environment. Thus, even though it was suggested that hearing that the this particular incident was not independently actionable, I nonetheless FIND that it represents another example of her festering negativism which went counter to the harmonious spirit which Young attempted to cultivate at Marshall for the benefit of everyone.

What was most flagrant, shocking and glaring, however, was the totally uncalled for outburst, challenges and threats by Ziznewski to Young about his Christian spirituality, which was also expressed in the presence of Young's secretary. It is also conceivable that others in the immediate area may have been privy to it since she was so vocal and flagrant in her inappropriate verbal attack upon him. Thus, even though he was nonetheless attempting to reach out to her in order to maintain a level of civility, dequorum and decency within his school community, these types of reaction typify the hostile actions, meanness and bitterness of Ziznewski under the circumstances. For all the foregoing reasons, I FIND that Ziznewski exhibited significant hostility, belligerency, intimidation and bullying against Young in direct violation of the Policy. All of this constituted unbecoming conduct and insubordination to a very high degree.

Her adverse impact extended to the greater community at Marshall. Each of district witnesses presented credible testimony about the individual difficulties they had with Ziznewski, while the few whom she presented offered very little to rebut those allegations. Although the sheer numbers do not dictate credibility, it is the substance of their respective testimonies and interests in the outcome of the matter which form a viable basis for such evaluation. As noted hereinabove in this initial decision, the closest that one came to challenging any of the Board witnesses was T.C., the mother of G.C. However, as also found hereinabove, her reliance upon Ziznewski, despite never having received the benefit of her purported documentation regarding the status of her daughter, raised suspicion regarding her true alliances and, as a result, her overall credibility.

Further, it is noteworthy that the uniform credibility of the Board's witnesses was particularly highlighted by the testimony of Dr. Traficante, who was ultimately on the receiving end of a snowball of escalating concerns regarding Ziznewski and who was charged with maintaining a consistent level of academic performance by all teachers within the district and in conformity with Board policy. Ultimately, as the problems escalated, she was forced to enter and engage the controversies surrounding Ziznewski and by so professionally superintending that process, she was able to effectuate control over a situation which was otherwise creating a huge morale problem at Marshall. In that regard, she presented cogent, clear-cut and highly credible testimony regarding the expectations and goals of Edison and managed to keep the bar high even in the face of the ceaseless belligerency by Ziznewski.

Further, based upon the enormous amount of testimony presented against her, I FIND that Ziznewski's increasing use of the abrasive and confrontational term "lying" to describe her reaction to the testimonies of several of the key witnesses, such as Young and Figueroa, gave a rare glimpse into the true flavor of the matter. While most hearings, being so relatively brief in duration, can only afford us a tiny snapshot of the real personalities of the parties, the unexpectedly long and arduous hearing journey in this matter allowed for the deeper personalities of the parties to surface. The examination of all the witnesses was extensive and searching by both counsel. As a fact finder, this tribunal gave considerable, ongoing latitude to both sides to ensure that due process was provided and in order to present as complete a record as possible. The width and breath of this initial decision reflects those efforts.

This extensive process of fact finding which unfolded before us was not unlike a trip on a cruise ship. Initially, every one appears to be on their best behavior, but as the ship leaves port and encounters the rips, swells and upheaval of an uneven sea, and as the physical confines of the ship become increasingly and acutely defined (much like a courtroom), a lot of the initial façade washes away quickly and the real personalities emerge.

Such was the case here. It is noted that, in addition to all of the proofs presented by the district's witnesses about the incidents in question, even Ziznewski's own conduct at the due process hearing appeared to reflect some of the basic concerns raised by the various witnesses who had been subjected to her wrath and verbally assaultive behavior in the school environment. As counsel for the district accurately argued: "Throughout both her direct and cross examination testimony, Ms. Ziznewski doggedly asserted that the Board's case in chief consisted wholly of lies. (My emphasis added). In an effort to advance her perception of the facts, she regularly ignored the questions being asked of her by her own attorney, the Board's attorney, and His Honor, often having to be redirected or admonished for straying off topic." (post-hearing brief of petitioner Board at pages 87-88). In fact, she frequently referred to a number of those witnesses as either being "liars" or characterized others of them as being "mistaken" in their accounts of the incidents. The use of the term "lying" is extremely harsh on its face and demonstrates a callous, pointed and glaring response, which was consistent with the allegations of the verbal assaults by her to which those witnesses had testified. In addition, on several occasions at the hearing she had to be instructed to refrain from any attempt to intimidate witnesses who were testifying after they broke down emotionally on the witness stand and expressed concerns about her gestures and facial expressions which were apparently directed toward them at that time. Although this tribunal did not witness those acts due to being focused on writing bench notes at the time or examining exhibits, it nonetheless became apparent that more than one witness was upset with and/or intimidated by her in the courtroom to such an extent that, at least in the case of Figueroa, it took several minutes of recess for her to get recomposed before she could continue. This also occurred after Ziznewski had been previously instructed not to engage in any negative, disruptive activities when a previous witness had raised similar concerns. This also did not speak well to Ziznewski and suggested her ongoing failure to maintain a proper decorum, as well as her failure to follow instructions even in a controlled environment of a courtroom.

The Board's case ended on the 24th day of the 43 day hearing schedule, at which time Ziznewski presented her defense to the various allegations. Although she initially generally politely tended to characterize much of the Board witnesses' testimony as only having been "mistaken", as the matter proceeded onward, she eventually shifted her responses as to some of those same people by using the blunt term "lying" to re-describe their testimony. The only specific routine exception to that use and description of the term "lying" to the Board witnesses applied to Dr. Traficante, whose testimony, except for only one or two minor occasions near the end of the entire hearing schedule, Ziznewski still continued to describe as only having been "mistaken." In that regard, it is noted that Dr. Traficante was in attendance at the hearing as the Board liaison throughout most of the earlier portions of the hearing process, but was much less present during the the respondent's part of the case due to other apparent and presumed personal commitments, obligations and family needs. Curiously, as indicated hereinabove, Ziznewski's description of and challenge to the presentation of Dr. Traficante remained largely toned down (by only mostly referencing her challenges to her in the context of using the "mistaken" term, as indicated hereinabove), but it was in marked contrast to her blunt "lying" verbal characterizations and accusations of the other district witnesses, who were never in the courtroom at the time of her testimony or during the testimony of any other witnesses because of the ongoing sequestration order.

And, much like the real personalities of ocean cruisers which seem to surface in the face of an angry sea, so did Ziznewski ultimately color and lace her "lying" assessments of those other witnesses, other than Dr. Traficante, as the momentum of her testimony escalated during the extensive and exhaustive examination by both counsel. Thus, it appeared to offer a very rare but important glimpse into the real Ziznewski, which apparently was the same one which the various teachers, supervisors and administrators had to face on a daily, routine basis. In fact, at times, it sometimes seemed that she may have forgotten that she was in a courtroom and not a classroom, since her periodic emotional outbursts, reactions, refusal to answer questions, or respond to directions to answer were rife. Thus, that real life aspect of her personality surfaced and stood out repeatedly at the hearing. Such is the similar makings of life at sea on a cruise.

Although counsel for the Board repeatedly and increasingly exasperatedly requested and pleaded for Ziznewski to respond relevantly to her questions, and despite numerous, specific instructions by this tribunal for her to respond appropriately, Ziznewski persisted in providing extended, and in many cases, non-responsive discourses. She attempted to do what she wanted to do no matter what. It is only due to the enormous credit of Board's counsel in forbearing and the professional decency and courage of Ziznewski's own counsel to attempt to control and refocus her, even in the face of such insolence, that the hearing itself did not become uncontrolled or confrontational.

As indicated hereinabove pursuant to this analysis, in tenure matters, as in all other matters which are the subject of due process, the moving party, which in this case is the Board, bears the burden of proving the charges upon which it relies by a preponderance of the competent, relevant, and credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). After having examined and considered all of the evidence and testimony presented, as well as after having considered all the arguments advanced, I FIND that the overwhelming evidence supports the ongoing concerns raised by the district as to each of the charges preferred against Ziznewski.

Her arguments about her longstanding good service do not give her leave to be excused for her misconduct and insubordination, much of which became increasingly significant and re-occurring upon her arrival at Marshall. Yet, despite her claims that she really had no major problems with any one prior thereto, she did have a similar prior pattern of misconduct and/or failure to follow the directives of at least three prior administrators in other schools. And even if one were to find that her negative actions were only of brief duration, case law does not support her assertion in that regard. In the matter of In re Tenure Hearing of Rosa Sardury, App. Div Dkt. No. a-5913-0323 (December 13, 2005), the Court held that even though the teacher had had numerous years of service, her insubordinate behavior and unbecoming conduct actions had so severely compromised her role as to justify her employment relationship with the board to be severed.

In the last analysis, a thorough review of the history of Ziznewski in the Edison district illustrates a classic example of a board, through its authorized supervisors and principals, attempting to work with an increasingly disruptive teacher within the school environment. But those efforts failed as she, for whatever reason, persisted in generating negative interactions with her fellow teachers, her supervisors, as well as her administrators. She compounded it by adding confusion to parents of children in the district. Further, she failed to follow district policies regarding the implementation of appropriate programming for the students to which she was assigned, whether it was in BSI or ESL instruction. The net result was an ongoing disruption which adversely affected the proper functioning of the school environment and which negatively impacted upon appropriate services being provided for needy students. All of that misconduct was egregious. Her actions in that latter regard reflect tragedy in the making since the long-term effects upon children who have been denied relevant services can be devastating. This is intolerable. Blatant insubordination is grounds for dismissal of a tenured teacher. Gross and unbecoming conduct are also grounds for dismissal of a tenured teacher. Thus, while I am acutely aware of the entitlements which attach to tenure status and diligently sought to scrutinize the evidence in light of the impact it will have upon her future, Ziznewski has nonetheless offered no viable explanation whatsoever to justify either her insubordination or her unbecoming conduct. And I so FIND.

CONCLUSION AND ORDER

Based upon all of the foregoing, I have thoroughly considered all of the extensive proofs offered in this matter. Although there are no explicit bright-line rules as to what may be considered "insubordination" or "conduct unbecoming" in cases involving teachers facing tenure charges, the determination must be made on a case by case basis. As a result, in the present case, the petitioner Board has presented consistent and corroborated evidence in the form of extensive testimony, incident reports and memorandum regarding the unauthorized leave and abuse of the attendance policy by respondent, failure to follow approved and acceptable educational plans and protocols of Edison, disrespect and disregard of her authorized supervisors Hagie and Capraro, selective teaching of certain students and selective disregard of the BSI and ESL learning requirements of other students, unacceptable BSI schedules, thoroughly and unprofessional conduct in the manner in which she challenged both school authorities and fellow teachers at parent/teacher conferences, her disgraceful insolence directed at her principal Gerald Young and ESL supervisor Martin Smith, and several Affirmative Action complaints lodged against respondent from other staff members alleging repeated and grossly unnecessary minor incidents/confrontations by Ziznewski as well as repeated and recurring disturbing instances of harassment, intimidation and bullying by her, frequently in or near the immediate presence of school children during school hours or in environments in which either children or their parents or other visitors could overhear these confrontations in the immediate after school environments. In several of these incidents, the teachers whom the Ziznewski confronted became physically and/or emotionally upset by these encounters to the extent that they required medical attention. Further, her conduct jeopardized the tranquility, orderliness, stability and general professional school environment to a large degree. I FIND and CONCLUDE that all of the allegations against respondent, Carol Ziznewski, as to the each of the three charges cited against her in the Statement of Tenure Charges and Statement of Evidence Under Oath by John DiMuzio, dated April 30, 2008, are sufficient to constitute insubordination and conduct unbecoming and that she is GUILTY of all of the charges contained therein relative to same. I make all of these findings and form all of these conclusions by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

It is ORDERED that respondent Carol Ziznewski be DISMISSED and REMOVED from her tenured employment with the Edison Board of Education.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." JENNIFER DeKENIPP, PETITIONER, V. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WALL, MONMOUTH COUNTY RESPONDENT.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION ON APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF

The record of this emergent matter – which included a digital recording of the hearing conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on July 30, 2010 – along with the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner has failed to satisfy the requirements necessary for the granting of emergent relief as set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), most notably – she has failed to demonstrate that the legal right is established in her favor or that she has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying controversy.

Accordingly, the recommended order of the OAL denying petitioner's application is hereby adopted. This case shall proceed at the OAL for such further proceedings as may be required to bring it to conclusion. Due to the circumstances of this matter, such proceedings should – to the greatest extent possible – be conducted on an expedited basis.

Record Closed: July 30, 2010 Decided: August 2, 2010

BEFORE ELIA A. PELIOS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Jennifer DeKenipp (petitioner) appeals Wall Township Board of Education's (respondent's) rescission of a previous grant of extended maternity/child care leave.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On July 21, 2010, petitioners' petition of appeal was filed with the Office of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education, along with a request for emergency relief seeking an order compelling respondent to grant the previously granted leave. On July 26, 2010, the emergent matter alone was filed with the Office of Administrative Law for oral argument, which was held on July 30, 2010.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Petitioner commenced employment with respondent on or about September 1, 2004 as a teacher holding a K-12 art endorsement on an instructional certificate. Petitioner began contractually provided maternity leave on or about April 24, 2009 in expectation of the birth of her second child, who was born on June 8, 2009. Pursuant to the collective bargaining agreement between respondent and petitioner's bargaining unit such leave was to conclude at the end of the 2009-2010 school year. Petitioner requested that respondent grant a discretionary extension of her unpaid leave for the duration of the 2010-2011 school year, effective September 1, 2010. Respondent granted this request on March 9, 2010, but subsequently rescinded its approval on May 11, 2010. After respondent declined to reconsider its rescission, petitioner filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education claiming petitioner held a right to the leave which vested once respondent granted its approval. Petitioner also filed a request for emergent relief compelling respondent to grant the leave pending the underlying proceeding. It is the emergent request which is currently at hand. The parties agree that all contract based leave was exhausted and the requested leave was for respondent to grant or decline at its discretion. At issue is whether respondent could rescind the leave once it was granted.

The preceding information has not been disputed or contradicted by the parties, and is found as fact.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The standards which must be met by the moving party in an application for emergent relief in a matter concerning a special needs child are embodied in N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6 and Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126, 132-34 (1982). Emergency relief may only be granted if the judge determines that:

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the relief is not granted;
2. The legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled;
3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

The petitioner must satisfy all four prongs of the Crowe test.

In the current matter, petitioner argues that the law is settled that once a Board of Education passes a formal resolution establishing a leave of absence, the board may not unilaterally rescind its decision, thus showing that petitioner is likely to succeed on the merits of the case. Petitioner relies primarily on Oxford v. Pohatcong, 81 S.L.D. 48, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 2711-80 (November 25, 1980), aff'd, Commissioner of Education (January 16, 1981) to support this assertion.

There are, however, several distinctions between Oxford and the matter currently at issue. In Oxford, the respondent Board unilaterally extended the time of a teacher's return date, delaying the date by several months beyond an agreed to return date into the next year. This had the result of effectively reducing that teacher's salary, which, it was determined, implicated the petitioner's rights under the tenure statute. In the current matter, the opposite is true, as respondent is requesting that petitioner return to work sooner than anticipated, therefore not serving to reduce petitioner's salary or affect her compensation at all. The tenure statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, protects, tenured teachers from dismissal and reduction in compensation. Granting, denial or rescission of what is agreed to be a discretionary exercise of the Board's power is not a part of the tenure protections.

In Oxford, the petitioner received notice of the Board's action only one week prior to the start of the school year in question, whereas in the current matter the respondent took action nearly four months prior to the effective date of the additional leave, leaving sufficient time to plan. Finally, Oxford dealt with setting the return date for a maternity leave which was mandated and provided for in the collective bargaining agreement between the parties, and it is in that foundation where it took root as a vested right. As earlier noted, the leave requested by petitioner is not a contractual right, nor is it contemplated anywhere in the agreement between respondent and the bargaining unit. The current matter involves what all parties agree is a discretionary act of the board's authority. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE Oxford is not a compelling analogy upon which to state that the law governing the current set of facts presented is settled so as to assert that success on the merits is likely, or to provide a basis upon which to grant emergent relief.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioners have not demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits of the underlying claim. A full plenary hearing is likely necessary to ascertain whether the discretionary exercise of power involved was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable before the full merits of their claim can be determined.

Consequently, the petitioners' request for emergency relief is DENIED.

DECISION AND ORDER

For the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE that petitioners are not entitled to the requested emergent relief and that the Petitioners' request for emergency relief is DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner sought to have the Board pay tuition for K.T. to attend an out-of-district private school, alleging that the District failed to address persistent intimidation, harassment and bullying of her daughter by school administrators and the local police department. The charges stem from the response of the District in the aftermath of a third party call to the Berkeley Heights Police Department regarding the well-being of K.T., following a comment she had written to a friend on Facebook which expressed suicidal thoughts. The Board filed a motion to dismiss because petitioner failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action.

The ALJ found that: petitioner failed to allege any particular actions by the school district – which were taken in the context of a police-ordered Division of Youth and Family Services investigation into whether K.T. was in fact at risk of committing suicide – that permit a reasonable inference of harassment, intimidation, or bullying that would establish a claim upon which relief can be granted; petitioner's allegations that both the police and school administrators harassed K.T., that the District failed to adequately address the harassment, and that K.T. suffers emotional distress when she attends school are not supported by the evidence; there is no factual basis for the cause of action presented by the petitioner for the District to provide tuition payments for K.T. to attend the private Interlochen Arts Academy in Michigan; and the Commissioner does not oversee the police department, and cannot enact a remedy grounded in alleged police harassment. Accordingly, the ALJ granted summary decision in favor of the respondent Board, and dismissed the petition.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner agreed with the ALJ that summary decision is appropriately granted to the Board. Accordingly, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, and dismissed the petition.

SUMMARY DECISION

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 13228-09

AGENCY DKT. NO. 231-9/09

M.E.T., ON BEHALF OF MINOR

CHILD, K.T.,

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF BERKELEY HEIGHTS,

UNION COUNTY,

Respondent.

M.E.T., pro se

Marie-Laurence Fabian, Esq., for respondent (Porzio, Bromberg & Newman, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 29, 2010 Decided: July 13, 2010

BEFORE IMRE KARASZEGI, JR., ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner M.E.T. on behalf of her minor child, K.T., filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education on September 8, 2009, seeking to have the Township of Berkeley Heights Board of Education (District) pay the tuition for K.T. at an out-of-district school. Petitioner alleges that the District has failed to address persistent intimidation, harassment and bullying.

On October 9, 2009, petitioner submitted an amended petition seeking, among other things, placement of K.T. at a private school of petitioner's choice. On October 23, 2009, the District submitted a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. The matter was thereafter transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case. On February 9, 2010, I held a status conference in order to address the issues with the parties. I also provided the petitioner the opportunity to submit a written response to the District's motion to dismiss. Petitioner filed replies on March 1, 2010, and March 18, 2010.

The following material facts are undisputed.

M.E.T. is the mother of K.T. K.T. is a general education student enrolled in the District's Governor Livingston High School (Governor Livingston). On October 26, 2008, the Berkeley Heights Police Department received a call from G.M., who was concerned for the well-being of K.T. G.M.'s daughter was a friend of K.T. G.M.'s daughter had shown G.M. a Facebook comment that was written by K.T. The comment read: "and I'm tired of waking up every morning and wishing I hadn't, and wanting to kill myself almost every day, and having to deal with my parents . . . it's not fair." Police officers went to M.E.T.'s home to investigate, and spoke with K.T.

On October 27, 2008, a police officer called M.E.T. to check on the well-being of K.T. After speaking with M.E.T., the officer referred the matter to the Division of Youth and Family Services (DYFS), citing the Facebook comment and the perceived "delusional behavior" of M.E.T. On the same day, M.E.T. went to Governor Livingston and spoke with principal Scott McKinney. M.E.T. told McKinney, among other things, that the police had come to her house the previous day because of Facebook comments made by K.T. McKinney directed Carol Riegel, the school psychologist, and Carolyn Dennerlein, the school counselor, to meet with K.T. and discuss the Facebook comments. Afterwards, McKinney told M.E.T. that K.T. denied ever threatening suicide, and that the school would take no further action at that time.

On October 29, 2008, a DYFS social worker interviewed K.T. at Governor Livingston. Ms. Dennerlein sat in on the DYFS interview. During the interview, K.T. admitted to having suicidal ideations and a plan to carry out her suicide. In light of this information, the District informed M.E.T. that K.T. required a psychiatric evaluation before she could return to school. She was placed on home instruction pending care. Anne Evered, the licensed clinical social worker for DYFS, evaluated K.T. and was of the opinion that K.T. was not a danger to herself. Her evaluation was approved by Dr. Pat Martino, the director of pupil personnel services, and Judith Rattner, the superintendent of schools. A re-entry conference was held on November 5, 2008, to return K.T. to Governor Livingston.

Subsequently, M.E.T. applied to have her daughter admitted to the Interlochen Arts Academy in Michigan. The District submitted recommendation forms to Interlochen as part of its application process. While K.T. continued her studies at Governor Livingston, M.E.T. made numerous requests during the remainder of the 2008–2009 school year to have the District pay K.T.'s tuition at Interlochen. The District refused, citing no basis for the request.

On May 18, 2009, M.E.T. met with school administrators, including Dr. Carmen Centuolo, the executive county superintendent of schools. Two days later, Dr. Centuolo sent a letter to M.E.T. stating that any action taken by the District was to ensure the safety and health of K.T. Additionally, Dr. Centuolo wrote that he contacted the Union County Prosecutor's Office and relayed M.E.T.'s concerns regarding the Berkeley Heights Police Department.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(g), a respondent may file a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer to a petition. In its motion for summary decision, the District contends that it is entitled to summary decision or dismissal because petitioner has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action.

Summary decision is the administrative counterpart to summary judgment in the judicial arena. Summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). In order to defeat a summary-decision motion, the adverse party must respond by affidavits setting forth "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding." Ibid. Use of the summary-decision procedure is aimed at "'the swift uncovering of the merits and either their effective disposition or their advancement toward prompt resolution by trial.'" Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954) (citation omitted).

The New Jersey Supreme Court has encouraged trial-level courts "not to refrain from granting summary judgment when the proper circumstances present themselves." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 541 (1995). While cautioning that a judge should not weigh the truth of the evidence or resolve factual disputes at this early stage of the proceedings, the Court clarified that "when the evidence 'is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law,' the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment." Id. at 540 (citation omitted).

Petitioner alleges that school administrators harassed, intimidated, and bullied K.T., causing a substantial disruption in K.T.'s school environment and her ability to learn. Particularly, petitioner alleges that the interview of K.T. by the school psychologist and counselor after learning of the Facebook comment from M.E.T. was an act of harassment. Petitioner alleges that the school district engaged in harassment by permitting DYFS to interview K.T., and by following its recommendations. Particularly, petitioner claims that the police officer who submitted the report to DYFS had a history of harassing petitioner. Thus, the police officer meant to continue his harassing behavior by unleashing a DYFS investigation on petitioner's family.

N.J.S.A. 18A:36-25 requires all school districts to establish policies for the early detection of abused children and to notify the appropriate child-welfare authorities when a potential abused-child situation is detected. Once the school district learned of K.T.'s possible suicidal ideations, it investigated the matter as required for early detection. Indeed, the school district is required to accommodate child-welfare investigators, and provide a school representative during a DYFS investigation. N.J.A.C. 6A:16-11.1(a)(5)(i). Accordingly, the school's counselor was present during DYFS' interview of K.T. Furthermore, the school district has no duty to investigate the source of a DYFS investigation before permitting an interview with a child, especially if that source is a police officer. I CONCLUDE that petitioner failed to allege in the amended petition any particular actions by the school district, taken during the DYFS investigation, that permit a reasonable inference of harassment, intimidation or bullying that would establish a claim upon which relief can be granted.

Education regulations require a school district to enact a policy towards "[a]ppropriate consequences and remedial action for any staff member who commits an act of harassment, intimidation or bullying." N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.9(a)(2)(vi). The statutory authority behind this rule defines harassment, intimidation, or bullying as > any gesture, any written, verbal or physical act, or any electronic communication that is reasonably perceived as being motivated either by any actual or perceived characteristic, such as race, color, religion, ancestry, > national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, or a mental, physical or sensory handicap, or by any other distinguishing characteristic, that takes place on school property, at any school-sponsored function or on a school bus and that:

> a. a reasonable person should know, under the circumstances, will have the effect of harming a student . . . ; or
> b. has the effect of insulting or demeaning any student . . . in such a way as to cause substantial disruption in, or substantial interference with, the orderly operation of the school.
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14.]

Accordingly, the legislative intent of the statute is to provide "a safe and civil environment in school [that] is necessary for students to learn and achieve high academic standards." N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13.

Moreover, "[w]hile their children are educated during the day, parents transfer to school officials the power to act as the guardians of those young wards." Frugis v. Bracigliano, 177 N.J. 250, 268 (2003). Indeed, "[n]o greater obligation is placed on school officials than to protect the children in their charge from foreseeable dangers." Ibid. Accordingly, "a school may be liable in the commission of acts as well as [in] the neglect or failure to act." B.J. and L.F., by their parents and guardians, L.J. and D.F. v. Bd. of Educ. of Teaneck, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 424, 428.

The Commissioner of Education has the power "to decide legal controversies and disputes arising under school laws or State Board regulations." N.J.A.C. 6A:2-1.2(a)(1). Petitioner claims that the District failed to implement its harassment and bullying policy against school administrators, as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.9(a)(2)(vi). Specifically, the regulation requires a school district to develop and implement a policy that provides "[a]ppropriate consequences and remedial action for any staff member who commits an act of harassment, intimidation or bullying." The regulation's language is similar to that of the enabling statute, requiring "consequences and appropriate remedial action" for harassment, intimidation, or bullying. N.J.S.A. 18A:37-15(b)(4).

The Commissioner of Education also has "the constitutional duty . . . to assure the maintenance and support of a 'thorough and efficient system of public schools.'" M.P. and G.P., parents of R.P. v. Bd. of Educ. of Delran, Burlington County, 1985 S.L.D. 1817, 1830 (citing N.J. Const., art. VIII, § IV, ¶ 1), adopted, 1985 S.L.D. 1834. Thus, the Commissioner has the "'affirmative obligation to see to it that the statutory objectives are met' and that local school boards and governing bodies fulfill their delegated duties." In re Upper Freehold Reg'l Sch. Dist., 86 N.J. 265, 273 (1981) (citing Robinson v. Cahill, 62 N.J. 473, 509 n.9 (1973)).

Assuming Governor Livingston staff members harassed and bullied K.T., the Commissioner may have sufficient power to order the school district to fund K.T.'s education at a private school. The courts "extend substantial deference to an agency's interpretation of its own rules." Sloan ex rel Sloan, 342 N.J. Super. 385, 394 (App. Div. 2001). New Jersey's harassment, intimidation, and bullying statute prescribes "appropriate" remedial actions for violations. N.J.S.A. 18A:37-15(b)(4). The Supreme Court has noted that the ordinary meaning of appropriate "confers broad discretion," and should be applied "in light of the purpose of the Act." Burlington Sch. Comm. v. Mass. Dep't of Educ., 471 U.S. 359, 369, 105 S. Ct. 1996, 2002, 85 L. Ed. 2d 385, 395 (1985). Accordingly, the legislative purpose of the harassment and bullying statute is to provide "a safe and civil environment in school," which is "necessary for students to learn and achieve high academic standards." N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13.

Reimbursement of private-school tuition has been ordered in the context of special-needs children. See Burlington Sch. Comm., supra, 771 U.S. 359, 105 S. Ct. 1996, 85 L. Ed. 2d 385 (1995); P.S. v. Shore Reg'l Bd. of Educ., EDS 4687-99, Final Decision (November 2, 2001) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>. The Supreme Court has articulated a two-prong test to determine whether reimbursement was proper when parents unilaterally place their children in private schools. "Parents are entitled to reimbursement . . . if the school district has failed to provide a free and appropriate public education (FAPE) and the placement chosen by the parents is proper." P.S., supra, EDS 4687-99 (citing Burlington Sch. Comm., supra, 771 U.S. at 370–71, 105 S. Ct. at 2003, 85 L. Ed. 2d at 395–96). Alternatively, the applications of this remedy have been extended beyond the special-needs context in very limited circumstances, including harassment. M.P., supra, 1985 S.L.D. at 1831.

In M.P., supra, 1985 S.L.D. 1817, the Commissioner affirmed an administrative law judge's (ALJ's) order to have the school district reimburse, and continue paying, the out-of-district school tuition of a middle-school student. The young student was the target of a campaign of harassment by a group of fellow students. Her mother continuously sought intervention by school administrators, as her daughter became suicidal. The only remedies offered would have further isolated the student from a free and efficient education, and leave her harassers unpunished. Consequently, the mother removed the student from the district, and petitioned for reimbursement. The ALJ cited the district's failure to provide a secure facility as a violation of the student's Constitutional right to a thorough and efficient education. The ALJ analogized the school's failure to create an adequate plan to address the harassment to a school's failure to properly service a special-needs child. Thus, the remedy was reimbursement and continued payment of tuition. However, the continued tuition payment was not indefinite. Payment continued until the district developed a sufficient plan to secure the facility, and reintroduce the student into the school system.

Alternatively, the ALJ in B.J., supra, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 424, entertained similar reasoning, but subsequently ruled against reimbursement. The students in that case were continuously harassed and assaulted by a group of teenagers, but never while on the school campus. Accordingly, the ALJ ruled that the students were not entitled to reimbursement of tuition payments after they were unilaterally removed to private school.

The Commissioner has granted reimbursement of tuition payments when a school district has failed to adequately address in-school peer harassment. See M.P., supra, 1985 S.L.D. at 1832. Here, however, petitioner alleged that school administrators harassed K.T., and the District failed to adequately address the harassment. Petitioner alleges that K.T. suffers from emotional distress whenever she attends Governor Livingston. However, K.T.'s emotional distress was not documented by a diagnosis from a doctor or therapist, unlike in M.P. Indeed, K.T. was evaluated by school officials, DYFS, and a licensed clinical social worker, and found to be of sufficient mental health. Furthermore, K.T. was never unilaterally removed from the District, unlike the student in M.P. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that there is no factual basis for a cause of action presented by petitioner for the District to provide tuition payments for K.T. to attend a private school.

Finally, the Commissioner is not responsible for any acts of harassment committed outside of the school campus, or a school-sponsored function. See B.J., supra, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) at 429. The Commissioner does not oversee the police department, and cannot enact a remedy grounded in alleged police harassment.

For all of the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE that summary decision in favor of the District is appropriate.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that summary decision is GRANTED in favor of the District.

It is further ORDERED that this petition is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

CORRECTED DECISION

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF KIMBERLY GEURDS, EAST WINDSOR REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, MERCER COUNTY	COMMISIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The petitioning school district brought charges against tenured teacher Kimberly Geurds, maintaining that her conduct was unbecoming to a sufficient degree to warrant dismissal. No charges of "inefficiency, incapacity, . . . or other just cause" were alleged, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. The first count of the tenure charges alleged several incidents of inappropriate comments and discussions between respondent and her students. The second count alleged improper communications between respondent and various school employees, but petitioner withdrew that count by letter dated October 14, 2009 from petitioner's counsel to ALJ Jeff S. Masin and respondent's counsel.

Upon its transmission to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), the case was initially assigned to Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Dennis Blake, who presided over the first two hearing days. The case was subsequently reassigned to ALJ Masin, who reviewed the record – including audio recordings of the testimony given on the above-referenced hearing days. ALJ Masin determined that there was "no need for the re-presentation of the testimony of the several witnesses who testified on those hearing dates." (Letter dated August 25, 2009, from ALJ Masin to counsel for the parties) He was satisfied that the hearing could be "completed without the recalling of such witnesses without any prejudice to the parties." (Ibid). No objections having been articulated by the parties, ALJ Masin presided over a third hearing day and issued an Initial Decision recommending that Geurds forfeit 120 days of salary and one year's increment.

Because petitioner brought no charge of inefficiency or incapacity against respondent, the ALJ correctly focused on the evidence concerning the alleged unbecoming conduct which, in the instant case, appeared to relate to the alleged "use of certain words, phrases and the discussion of certain topics by Geurds with or within the hearing of her students." (Initial Decision at 15) He noted that the evidence had been "geared to prove that Geurds ha[d] spoken and acted inappropriately, most especially in respect to the discussion of matters mostly related to body parts, sex and words inappropriate to a 5th grade, indeed, in some instances, to any classroom perhaps other than in health class." (Ibid.)

Certain facts are undisputed. Respondent agrees that she reenacted, for her fifth-graders, an incident that had occurred several years prior, in which she had demonstrated to kindergarten boys – using a hat and a piñata stick – how to urinate into a commode without splattering. According to respondent, this reenactment indirectly resulted from complaints by fifth grade girls that their bathroom was messy. It was additionally, in respondent's view, a reminiscence for the children in her fifth grade class that had been in that kindergarten class. Respondent also agreed that after hearing a couple of fifth-grade boys call each other "douche-bags," she had explained to them – in the presence of the class – what douche-bags are and why they are used. (T3[1] at 100-01) In testifying about these incidents, respondent stated that in retrospect she would have handled them differently, and that her mistakes flowed from the fact that she had just transitioned from teaching kindergarteners to teaching fifth-graders. (T3 at 108-09)

[1] T3 is the transcript from the third day of hearing on November 17, 2009.

While both sides agree that the urination demonstration and the discussion of douche bags did take place, there are discrepancies between respondent's account of these incidents and the descriptions provided by students. In addition, respondent denies the balance of the allegations against her.

To evaluate the discrepancies, the ALJ examined the sources of the evidence against respondent. Of petitioner's seven witnesses, only two could be regarded as having had first-hand knowledge of what transpired in respondent's classroom, ie. , the twelve-year-old students A.L. and J.R. Petitioner presented a parent and four school officials, whose testimony about petitioner's classroom discussions was, however, hearsay and valuable only insofar as it could corroborate direct testimony. Petitioner also presented written notes about respondent's behavior (Petitioner's Exhibit P-8), that were taken during interviews with approximately fifty non-testifying students. While the ALJ recognized that the contents of P-8 are also hearsay, he considered them harmonious enough with the direct testimony of A.L. and J.R. – and with respondent's testimony – to accept as corroborating evidence.[2] (Initial Decision at 17-19)

[2] P-8 consists of handwritten memorializations of interviews with over 50 students, thirty-seven of which reported nothing about inappropriate discussions by Geurds. Of the fourteen who said they noticed something unusual about Geurds' teaching, half of them only referred to the class in which Geurds recounted how she instructed kindergarten boys in bathroom protocol. Four of those students stated that during that incident Geurds used the word "penis." Of the remaining seven students that recalled respondent mentioning body parts:
M.Q. stated that respondent explained body parts after she found some students laughing at a book.
M.O. stated that respondent explained the word "pussy" after it was used by a student. He was not troubled by the incident.
M.G. stated that respondent corrected other students when they used the word "nuts," and told them that if that body part is injured it can't grow back.
S.O. recalled that respondent spoke of girls' body parts and it made him uncomfortable.
M.P. said that respondent had used the "V" word and had explained that "it's just girls' private parts." He thought it was ok for respondent to explain it because "some people don't take it serious and they don't know what the words mean."
N.O. said that respondent gives explanations of what words mean: "It surprises me what it really means." He related that douche-bag "is something to help a girl freshen up . . . a little more of an adult meaning." He was a little uncomfortable during such discussions. N.O. also related that some students looked at respondent's health books which have pictures of body systems.
S.Y. stated that it made her uncomfortable when respondent spoke about body parts – in connection with puberty, childbirth, etc. She was embarrassed "because the boys are looking at us." S.Y. agreed that respondent had spoken to the boys about testicles and called them "balls."

The first student to testify, A.L., recounted the above-mentioned incident in which respondent revisited the way she had instructed kindergarten boys on proper bathroom procedure. (T3 at 23-25) A.L. recalled that respondent had used the word "penis" on that occasion. (T3 at 23) A.L.'s recollection of respondent's above referenced explanation about douche bags was also part of her testimony. (T3 at 29-31) She stated that respondent used the word "vagina" in the course of that incident. (T3 at 30) It was A.L. that remembered respondent saying "s__t" after breaking a beverage bottle. (T3 at 31-32) She also testified that respondent told boys who had pulled their trousers above their waists that they would "get [their] balls in a bunch." (T3 at 33)

Of most concern was A.L.'s testimony that – after a student said to another student: "s__k my d__k," respondent reacted by saying "If you want someone to s__k your c__k, then go home and ask your family to do it for you." (T3 at 33-34) A.L. also testified that respondent – in reaction to a student using the F-word (T3 at 40) – explained the mechanics of sex. (T3 at 26-27)

J.R. testified about the douche-bag discussion – recalling that respondent had used hand gestures in the course of her explanations (T3 at 51-53) – and about the incident in which respondent allegedly told students that they would get their balls in a bunch. (T3 at 53-54) J.R. also maintained that at the beginning of the school year respondent told the students that she was a single parent and not gay. (T3 at 50-51) As to this latter statement, the Commissioner notes that J.R. was the only one of over fifty interviewed students to so testify. By way of contrast, respondent testified that she had mentioned her single status – and the fact that she did not lead an alternative life style – to parents at Back-to-School night, but not to the students. (T3 at 112-

13) Significantly – in the Commissioner's view – J.R.'s hearing testimony disclosed that on the morning of the hearing, her mother had quizzed her about her testimony:

> Q. Did you go over what it was you were going to say?
> A. Yes, but she just asked me if I remember stuff and I would either say yes or no if I remember something.
> . . . .
> Q. What did she say?
> A. She would ask stuff if I remembered, like if she said this or that.
> Q. Can you tell us what those things were?
> A. Gay, balls, cock, and the other one.
> (T3 at 58, emphasis added)

When respondent testified at the hearing she denied explaining the mechanics of sex (T3 at 109), making comments about boys' "nuts" or "balls" (T3 at 102-03; T3 at 110), telling her class that she is a single parent but not gay (T3 at 112), and, of most concern, responding to a child's epithet ("s__k my d__k") by saying "if you want someone to s__k your c__k then go home and ask your family to do it for you."[3] (T3 at 103; T3 at 111) Respondent also denied using the word "s__t" in class, but conceded that she might have used the word in exclamation when her vitamin water bottle broke – which would have been in between classes, as opposed to during class. (T3 at 109-10)

Focusing on the testimony of A.L., J.R., and respondent, and the contents of Petitioner's Exhibit P-8, the ALJ concluded that – given respondent's evident propensity for candid discussions with her students about health, sex, and crude language – it would not be surprising if respondent had, as some of the interviewed students had stated, used the names of body parts in the course of discussing urination technique or the purpose of douche bags, and

utilized hand gestures while describing douche bag usage.[4] (Initial Decision at 19) Further, in light of respondent's tendency to correct her students' use of vulgarities by explaining the underlying meanings of such words, the ALJ concluded that it was plausible that A.L. reliably reported that respondent had mentioned the mechanics of sex. (Ibid.) More specifically, the ALJ accepted the testimony of A.L. that such a discussion was precipitated by respondent hearing a student use the word "f__k."[5] (Ibid.)

Thus, the ALJ found, as a matter of fact, that respondent did demonstrate urination technique in her fifth grade classroom, did instruct her class about the purpose of douche bags, did use the words "penis" and "vagina" in the course of those discussions and demonstrations, did "relate something of the mechanics of sex," did on one occasion use the word "s__t" in the classroom upon breaking a bottle, and did on at least one occasion refer to testicles as "nuts" or "balls." (Initial Decision at 19-20) However, the ALJ did not find credible A.L.'s contention that respondent told "a boy that he should go home and have his family perform oral sex." (Initial Decision at 20)

In rejecting the latter allegation, the ALJ explained that while respondent had a clear propensity to "speak freely and explain matters of health and sex to these young and impressionable students, there is in what she has admitted and most of what the students claimed no sense of nastiness, no suggestion of any lurid or prurient element." (Initial Decision at 19) He thus found that while respondent may have reacted to hearing a student say "s__k my d__k," she did not make the crude rejoinder attributed to her by A.L. (Ibid).

[4] The Commissioner notes that J. R. was the only one of the fifty-plus interviewed students who stated that respondent had demonstrated with hand gestures the use of a douche bag (T3 at 52) and that respondent denied that she performed such a demonstration. (T3 at 101)

[5] The Commissioner notes that A.L. was the only interviewed student to say that, in response to a student using the "F word," respondent explained the mechanics of sex to the class, i.e., that a boy puts his penis in a girl's vagina. (Petitioner's Exhibit P-16; (T3 at 26-28; T3 at 40)

Finally, the ALJ made no findings about J.R.'s assertion that respondent disclosed her marital status and sexual orientation to the students early in the school year. The Commissioner does not regard that particular assertion by J.R. as credible but, in any event, would not regard such a disclosure as rising to the level of "unbecoming conduct."

Ultimately, the ALJ found that respondent's approach to dealing with students' use of vulgarities or handling other incidents relating to matters of health and hygiene was well-intentioned but inappropriate. (Initial Decision at 20) He found that the class discussions described in the evidence before the ALJ were outside the boundaries of the curriculum for which she was responsible, that the language she used was unprofessional and insensitive to her students and their parents, and that she acknowledged same. Consequently, the ALJ concluded that petitioner had proven that respondent had manifested unbecoming conduct. (Ibid.)

In addressing the appropriate sanction, the ALJ recommended suspension and increment withholding, not removal, as requested by petitioner. Applying the relevant legal standards articulated in In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 420-22 (App. Div. 1967) and other cases for determining penalties for unbecoming conduct, the ALJ concluded that respondent is not "a lost cause." (Initial Decision at 21) Contrary to petitioner's assertions, the ALJ found that respondent had acknowledged the inappropriateness of her comments and actions and would likely not repeat them. (Initial Decision at 20) He was persuaded that respondent could continue to serve as an effective teacher. (Initial Decision at 21)

Further, the ALJ contrasted respondent's misguided attempts to capitalize on "teachable moments" with the behavior of the subjects of prior tenure charges who, inter alia, cultivated improper familiarity with students, preyed on students, undermined students' morals and endangered students' health and well-being. (Ibid.) The catalyst for each of the inappropriate class discussions in the present case was an incident of student misbehavior which respondent endeavored to correct; nothing in the record suggests that respondent had a venial or immoral agenda.

Ultimately, the ALJ recommended the forfeit of 120 days of salary and one year's increment, concluding that "[s]uch sanction should assure that [respondent] will conduct herself in the future in an appropriate manner, respecting the limits of her role and the sensibilities of her students." (Initial Decision at 22) This recommendation was based upon his determination that the record, overall, painted a picture of imprudent behavior that did not rise to the level of conduct warranting respondent's removal, loss of tenure and significant career damage. (Ibid.) After reviewing the record, the Initial Decision, petitioner's exceptions, respondent's reply exceptions, and relevant case law, the Commissioner adopts the ALJ's recommendation.

Petitioner's exceptions urge that the ALJ was correct in finding unbecoming conduct but erred in declining to uphold the penalty of dismissal: the "only sanction that can be justified on the facts of this case is termination of employment." (Petitioner's Exceptions at 35) While conceding that in the past tenured teachers have received lenient treatment for behavior commensurate with respondent's, petititioner contends that respondent did not show the contrition or awareness of her improper conduct that was necessary to avoid the penalty of termination. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 32-33) More specifically, petitioner argues that respondent's denial of some of the students' allegations suggests that her remorse is shallow and insufficient to support a return to work. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 33-34)

Petitioner apparently made these same arguments in the OAL. The ALJ rejected them, concluding that the most likely explanation for the fact that respondent denied some of the facts that he ultimately found, was that she "simply [did] not remember all that she said."

(Initial Decision at 21-22) He felt that respondent was not willfully obfuscating facts because, inter alia, what respondent admitted was similar in character to what she did not recollect. (Initial Decision at 22) Insofar as his opinion on this issue is a credibility determination, the Commissioner may not disturb it unless a review of the record discloses that it is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. D.L. and Z.Y. on behalf of minor children T.L. and K.L. v. Board of Education of the Princeton Regional School District, 366 N.J. Super. 269, 273 (App. Div. 2004).

The Commissioner finds that the record does not belie the ALJ's credibility determination, factual findings or conclusions of law. The Initial Decision is thus adopted as the final decision in this case and the petition is dismissed. Accordingly, respondent may continue teaching but will forfeit 120 days of salary and one year's increment.

In addition, to help insure that respondent is able to correct the inappropriate behavior discussed supra, the Commissioner orders that respondent – before the end of 2011 – complete coursework in pedagogy that addresses: 1) the differences in the social and psychological needs of children of different age and grade levels, 2) the boundaries between a teacher's instructional jurisdiction and issues properly in the province of parental guidance and control, and 3) professional classroom demeanor. The coursework will be subject to reasonable review and approval by petitioner, who may apply to the Commissioner if respondent fails to comply with the above articulated terms.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[6]

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF KIMBERLY GEURDS, EAST WINDSOR REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, MERCER COUNTY

COMMISIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning Board filed tenure charges of conduct unbecoming against respondent Kimberly Geurds – a tenured elementary school teacher – for allegedly engaging in inappropriate conversation in her classroom, including speaking to her students about her own personal situation, discussing matters of a private or sexual nature in class, and using words and phrases that were not appropriate for a teacher in such a setting. The petitioning Board sought revocation of respondent's tenure and termination of her employment.

The ALJ found that: the Board met its burden to prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence that respondent did engage in inappropriate conduct for a teacher; although respondent's inappropriate conduct was not of a lurid or prurient nature, she did engage in discussion in the classroom of topics of a private and/or sexual nature which would properly fall under the category of health education rather than the fifth grade curriculum which respondent was responsible for teaching; respondent's conduct was not proper and her choices as to what subjects or language to use or discuss in the classroom were not justified by the circumstances; respondent now recognizes that if it was necessary to address the actions or comments of students that were not proper, she should have done so either privately, or through referral to proper school personnel to deal with the situation, and/or to advise the child's parents of the facts and let them deal with their children; respondent's conduct demonstrated failure to recognize boundaries and the sensitivities of students – especially pre-teenagers – and to respect the prerogatives of parents. The ALJ concluded that, while her conduct was certainly unprofessional, it did not rise to a level that would justify terminating her tenure and career. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that respondent forfeit 120 days of pay and one year's salary increment.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter. Additionally, to enable respondent to correct her inappropriate behavior, the Commissioner ordered Ms. Geurds to complete coursework in pedagogy addressing: the social and psychological needs of different age and grade levels; the boundaries between a teacher's instructional jurisdiction and issues properly in the province of parental guidance and control; and classroom demeanor.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 290-9/08

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF KIMBERLY GEURDS, EAST WINDSOR REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, MERCER COUNTY	:	COMMISIONER OF EDUCATION
	:	DECISION

The petitioning school district brought charges against tenured teacher Kimberly Geurds, maintaining that her conduct was unbecoming to a sufficient degree to warrant dismissal. No charges of "inefficiency, incapacity, . . . or other just cause" were alleged, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. The first count of the tenure charges alleged several incidents of inappropriate comments and discussions between respondent and her students. The second count alleged improper communications between respondent and various school employees, but petitioner withdrew that count by letter dated October 14, 2009 from petitioner's counsel to ALJ Jeff S. Masin and respondent's counsel.

Upon its transmission to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), the case was initially assigned to Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Dennis Blake, who presided over the first two hearing days. The case was subsequently reassigned to ALJ Masin, who reviewed the record -- including audio recordings of the testimony given at the above-referenced two hearing days. ALJ Masin determined that there was "no need for the re-presentation of the testimony of the several witnesses who testified on those hearing dates." Letter dated August 25, 2009, from ALJ Masin to counsel for the parties. He was satisfied that the hearing could be "completed without the recalling of such witnesses without any prejudice to the parties." Ibid. No objections having been articulated by the parties, ALJ Masin presided over a third hearing day and issued an Initial Decision recommending that Guerds forfeit 120 days of salary and one year's increment.

Because petitioner brought no charge of inefficiency or incapacity against respondent, the ALJ correctly focused on the evidence concerning the alleged unbecoming conduct which, in the instant case, appeared to relate to the alleged "use of certain words, phrases and the discussion of certain topics by Geurds with or within the hearing of her students." Initial Decision at 15. He noted that the evidence had been "geared to prove that Geurds ha[d] spoken and acted inappropriately, most especially in respect to the discussion of matters mostly related to body parts, sex and words inappropriate to a 5th grade, indeed, in some instances, to any classroom perhaps other than in health class." Ibid.

Certain facts are undisputed. Respondent agrees that she reenacted, for her fifth-graders, an incident that had occurred several years prior, in which she demonstrated to Kindergarten boys, using a hat and a piñata stick, how to urinate into a commode without splattering. According to respondent, this reenactment indirectly flowed from complaints by fifth grade girls that their bathroom was messy. It was additionally, in respondent's view, a reminiscence for the children in her fifth grade class that had been in that Kindergarten class. Respondent also agreed that after hearing a couple of fifth-grade boys call each other "douche-bags," she had explained to them – in the presence of the class -- what douche-bags are and why they are used. 3T100-01. In testifying about these incidents, respondent stated that in retrospect she would have handled them differently, and that her mistakes flowed from the fact that she had just transitioned from teaching Kindergarteners to teaching fifth-graders. 3T108-09.

While both sides agree that the urination demonstration and the discussion of douche bags did take place, there are discrepancies between respondent's account of these incidents and the descriptions provided by students. In addition, respondent denies the balance of the allegations against her.

To evaluate the discrepancies the ALJ examined the sources of the evidence against respondent. Of petitioner's seven witnesses, only two could be regarded as having had first-hand knowledge of what transpired in respondent's classroom, i.e., the twelve-year-old students A.L. and J.R. Petitioner presented a parent and four school officials whose testimony about petitioner's classroom discussions was, however, hearsay and valuable only insofar as it could corroborate direct testimony. Petitioner also presented written notes about respondent's behavior (Petitioner's Exhibit P-8), that were taken during interviews with approximately fifty non-testifying students. While the ALJ recognized that the contents of P-8 are also hearsay, he considered them harmonious enough with the direct testimony of A.L. and J.R. – and with respondent's testimony – to accept as corroborating evidence.[1] Initial Decision at 17-19.

[1] P-8 consists of handwritten memorializations of interviews with oner 50 students, thirty-seven of which reported nothing about inappropriate discussions by Geurds. Of the fourteen who said they noticed something unusual about Geurds' teaching, half of them only referred to the class in which Geurds recounted how she instructed Kindergarten boys in bathroom protocol. Four of those students stated that during that incident Geurds used the word "penis." Of the remaining seven students that recalled respondent mentioning body parts:
M.Q. stated that respondent explained body parts after she found some students laughing at a book.
M.O. stated that respondent explained the word "pussy" after it was used by a student. He was not troubled by the incident.
M.G. stated that respondent corrected other students when they used the word "nuts," and told them that if that body part is injured it can't grow back.
S.O. recalled that respondent spoke of girls' body parts and it made him uncomfortable.
M.P. said that respondent had used the "V" word and had explained that "it's just girls' private parts." He thought it was ok for respondent to explain it because "some people don't take it serious and they don't know what the words mean."
N.O. said that respondent gives explanations of what words mean: "It surprises me what it really means."
He related that douche-bag "is something to help a girl freshen up . . . a little more of an adult meaning." He was a little uncomfortable during such discussions. N.O. also related that some students looked at respondent's health books which have pictures of body systems.
S.Y. stated that it made her uncomfortable when respondent spoke about body parts – in connection with puberty, childbirth, etc. She was embarrassed "because the boys are looking at us." S.Y. agreed that respondent had spoken to the boys about testicles and called them "balls."

The first student to testify, A.L., recounted the above-mentioned incident in which respondent revisited the way she had instructed Kindergarten boys on proper bathroom procedure. 3T23-25 A.L. recalled that respondent had used the word "penis" on that occasion. 3T23 A.L.'s recollection of respondent's above referenced explanation about douche bags was also part of her testimony. 3T29-31 She stated that respondent used the word "vagina" in the course of that incident. 3T30 It was A.L. that remembered respondent saying "s__t" after breaking a beverage bottle. 3T31-32 She also testified that respondent told boys who had pulled their trousers above their waists that they would "get [their] balls in a bunch." 3T33.

Of most concern was A.L.'s testimony that -- after a student said to another student: "s__k my d__k," respondent reacted by saying "If you want someone to s__k your c__k, then go home and ask your family to do it for you." 3T33-34 A.L.'s also testified that respondent -- in reaction to a student using the F-word, 3T40, -- explained the mechanics of sex. 3T26-27.

J.R. testified about the douche-bag discussion, recalling that respondent had used hand gestures in the course of her explanations, 3T51-53, and about the incident in which respondent allegedly told students that they would get their balls in a bunch. 3T53-54. J.R. also maintained that at the beginning of the school year respondent told the students that she was a single parent and not gay. 3T50-51. As to this latter statement, the Commissioner notes that J.R. was the only one of over fifty interviewed students to so testify. 3T50-51. By way of contrast, respondent testified that she had mentioned her single status – and the fact that she did not lead an alternative life style -- to parents at Back-to-School night, but not to the students. 3T112-13. Significantly -- in the Commissioner's view -- J.R.'s hearing testimony disclosed that on the morning of the hearing, her mother had quizzed her about her testimony:

Q. Did you go over what it was you were going to say?

A. Yes, but she just asked me if I remember stuff and I would either say yes or no if I remember something.

. . . .

Q. What did she say?
A. She would ask stuff if I remembered, like if she said this or that.
Q. Can you tell us what those things were?
A. Gay, balls, cock, and the other one.

3T58 (Emphasis added.)

When respondent testified at the hearing she denied explaining the mechanics of sex, 3T109, making comments about boys' "nuts" or "balls," 3T102-02; 3T110, telling her class that she is a single parent but not gay, 3T112, and, of most concern, responding to a child's epithet ("s__k my d__k") by saying "if you want someone to s__k your c__k then go home and ask your family to do it for you."[2] 3T103; 3T111. Respondent also denied using the word "s__t" in class, but conceded that she might have used the word in exclamation when her vitamin water bottle broke – which would have been in between classes, as opposed to during class. 3T109-10.

Focusing on the testimony of A.L., J.R., and respondent, and the contents of Petitioner's Exhibit P-8, the ALJ concluded that – given respondent's evident propensity for candid discussions with her students about health, sex, and crude language -- it would not be surprising if respondent had, as some of the interviewed students had stated, used the names of body parts in the course of discussing urination technique or the purpose of douche bags, and utilized hand gestures while describing douche bag usage.[3] Initial Decision at 19. Further, in light of respondent's tendency to correct her students' use of vulgarities by explaining the underlying meanings of such words, the ALJ concluded that it was plausible that A.L. reliably reported that respondent had mentioned the mechanics of sex. Ibid. More specifically, the ALJ accepted the testimony of A.L. that such a discussion was precipitated by respondent hearing a student use the word "f__k."[4] Ibid.

[2] The Commissioner notes that only one student, A.L., alleged that respondent told a male student to go home and ask his family to s__k his c__k. 3T33-34.

[3] The Commissioner notes that J. R. was the only one of the fifty-plus interviewed students who stated that respondent had demonstrated with hand gestures the use of a douche bag, 3T52, and that respondent denied that she performed such a demonstration. 3T101 .

Thus, the ALJ found, as a matter of fact, that respondent did demonstrate urination technique in her fifth grade classroom, did instruct her class about the purpose of douche bags, did use the words "penis" and "vagina" in the course of those discussions and demonstrations, did "relate something of the mechanics of sex," did on one occasion use the word "s__t" in the classroom upon breaking a bottle, and did on at least one occasion refer to testicles as "nuts" or "balls." Initial Decision at 19-20. However, the ALJ did not find credible A.L.'s contention that respondent told "a boy that he should go home and have his family perform oral sex." Initial Decision at 20.

In rejecting the latter allegation, the ALJ explained that while respondent had a clear propensity to "speak freely and explain matters of health and sex to these young and impressionable students, there is in what she admitted and most of what the students claimed no sense of nastiness, no suggestion of any lurid or prurient element." Initial Decision at 19. He thus found that while respondent may have reacted to hearing a student say "s__k my d__k," she did not make the crude rejoinder attributed to her by A.L. Ibid.

Finally, the ALJ made no findings about J.R.'s assertion that respondent disclosed her marital status and sexual orientation to the students early in the school year. The Commissioner does not regard that particular assertion by J.R. as credible but, in any event, would not regard such a disclosure as rising to the level of "unbecoming conduct."

Ultimately, the ALJ found that respondent's approach to dealing with students' use of vulgarities or handling other incidents relating to matters of health and hygiene was well-

intentioned but inappropriate. Initial Decision at 20. He found that the class discussions described in the evidence before the ALJ were outside the boundaries of the curriculum for which she was responsible, that the language she used was unprofessional and insensitive to her students and their parents, and that she acknowledged same. Ibid. Consequently, the ALJ concluded that petitioner had proven that respondent had manifested unbecoming conduct. Ibid.

On the other hand, the penalty that the ALJ recommended was not removal, as requested by petitioner. Applying the relevant legal standards articulated in In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 420-22 (App. Div. 1967) and other cases for determining penalties for unbecoming conduct, the ALJ concluded that respondent is not "a lost cause." Initial Decision at 21. Contrary to petitioner's assertions, the ALJ found that respondent had acknowledged the inappropriateness of her comments and actions and would likely not repeat them. Initial Decision at 20. He was persuaded that respondent could continue to serve as an effective teacher. Initial Decision at 21.

Further, the ALJ contrasted respondent's misguided attempts to capitalize on "teachable moments" with the behavior of the subjects of prior tenure charges who, inter alia, cultivated improper familiarity with students, preyed on students, undermined students' morals and endangered students' health and well-being. Ibid. The catalyst for each of the inappropriate class discussions was an incident of student misbehavior which respondent endeavored to correct; nothing in the record suggests that respondent had a venial or immoral agenda.

Ultimately, the ALJ recommended the forfeit of 120 days of salary and one year's increment, concluding that "[s]uch sanction should assure that [respondent] will conduct herself in the future in an appropriate manner, respecting the limits of her role and the sensibilities of her students." Initial Decision at 22. This recommendation was based upon his determination that the record, overall, painted a picture of imprudent behavior that did not rise to the level of conduct warranting respondent's removal, loss of tenure and significant career damage. Ibid. After reviewing the record, the Initial Decision, petitioner's exceptions, respondent's reply exceptions, and relevant case law, the Commissioner adopts the ALJ's recommendation.

Petitioner's exceptions urge that the ALJ was correct in finding unbecoming conduct but erred in declining to uphold the penalty of dismissal: the "only sanction that can be justified on the facts of this case is termination of employment." Petitioner's exceptions at 35. While conceding that in the past tenured teachers have received lenient treatment for behavior commensurate with respondent's, petititioner contends that respondent did not show the contrition or awareness of her improper conduct that was necessary to avoid the penalty of termination. Petitioner's exceptions at 32-33 More specifically, petitioner argues that respondent's denial of some of the students' allegations suggests that her remorse is shallow and insufficient to support a return to work. Petitioner's Exceptions at 33-34

Petitioner apparently made these same arguments in the OAL. The ALJ rejected them, concluding that the most likely explanation for the fact that respondent denied some of the facts that he ultimately found, was that she "simply [did] not remember all that she said." Initial Decision at 21-22. He felt that respondent was not willfully obfuscating facts because, inter alia, what respondent admitted was similar in character to what she did not recollect. Initial Decision at 22. Insofar as his opinion on this issue is a credibility determination, the Commissioner may not disturb it unless a review of the record discloses that it is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. *D.L. and Z.Y. on behalf of minor children T.L. and K.L. v. INITIAL DECISION

AGENCY DKT. NO. 290-9/08

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF KIMBERLY GEURDS, EAST WINDSOR REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, MERCER COUNTY.

David B. Rubin, Esq., for petitioner East Windsor Regional School District Board of Education[1]

Arnold M. Mellk, Esq., for respondent Kimberly Geurds (Wills, O'Neill & Mellk, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 18, 2010 Decided: April 9, 2010

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

The East Windsor Regional School District Board of Education ("East Windsor" or "Board") filed tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education, alleging that one of its tenured teachers, Kimberly Geurds (Geurds), had engaged in conduct unbecoming a teacher. The Board sought revocation of her tenure and termination of her employment in accordance with the Tenured Employees Hearing Act, N.J.S.A.

[1] The Board of Education was originally represented by Mark J. Blunda, Esq., of Apruzzese, McDermott, Mastro & Murphy, who tried the case before the prior judge and filed the motion for recusal. David B. Rubin, Esq. was then substituted as counsel for the Board and tried the case before this judge and filed the post-hearing briefs for his client.

18A:35-1. The Commissioner certified the tenure charges and transferred the contested case to the New Jersey Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing. The case was originally heard by a judge who, after conducting a partial hearing, was recused from the case on motion of the Board. Thereafter the case was reassigned to this judge, who, after review of the existing record and the positions of the parties, determined that he could continue the hearing to conclusion and render a decision after review of transcripts, exhibits and the additional material produced on a final hearing day held before this judge on November 17, 2009. The parties submitted closing statements and replies and the record closed on March 18, 2010.

The Charges[2]

The tenure charges filed by the Board recite a number of matters regarding Ms. Geurds, all relating to her assignment to teach 5th grade during the 2007-2008 school year at the Perry L. Drew Elementary School (Drew). Importantly, while the recitation of matters in the first count of the charges touches on a number of items that appear to relate more to concerns about job competence and academic concerns, perhaps touching on inefficiency,[3] and while some of the testimony presented early in the matter arguably touched on these concerns, the real thrust of the charges, and indeed of the evidence offered at trial, dealt with allegations that Geurds spoke to her students about her own personal situation and used words and phrases and discussed matters in class that were inappropriate for a teacher in such a setting. The second count dealt with allegations involving certain improper correspondence that the Board alleged Geurds was party to or involved with. In his Statement of Evidence Supporting Tenure Charges, Ronald E. Bolandi, Superintendent of the East Windsor Regional School District, characterized the charges against Geurds as "misconduct and unbecoming conduct." As such, the Board did not seek to prove inefficiency or incompetence. And [2] It should be noted that prior to the formal institution of tenure charges, the Board insisted on Ms. Geurds undergoing a psychiatric evaluation, which resulted in an opinion that she had no significant or definable psychiatric condition.

[3] During the summer before the start of the school term, several parents presented requests to the school's principal, Darlene Nemeth, asking that their children be assigned to another teacher rather than to Ms. Geurds. They purportedly expressed concerns about lack of structure, control and discipline in Geurd's classroom. During the fall of 2007, additional complaints were received by Nemeth, concerning aspects of Geurd's performance.

the Board ultimately did not pursue the second count, representing that it did not believe that it could proceed due to significant concerns as to the ability of the Board to present necessary proof to meet its burden in respect to that allegation, especially with regard to issues involving the need for expert evidence to prove any misconduct by Geurds. The Board requested that that charge be withdrawn and I concur in that result.

Evidence

As noted, testimony was first presented before the judge previously assigned to the case.[4] Darlene Nemeth, Principal of Drew in 2007-2008 and a teacher for thirty-two years, testified that the school taught kindergarten through fifth grade. She and Ms. Geurds served together at Drew for four years. Geurds had been a kindergarten teacher, but had a chronic illness, advanced Lyme disease, and given that kindergarten required that teachers have a lot of energy, it was thought that fifth grade might be an easier assignment for her to manage. She was advised of this assignment on June 2, 2007. She was allowed to skip staff meetings and go home to rest. She had time in the summer prior to the start of the 2007-2008 school year during which to engage in staff development and prepare for September.

During the summer, Nemeth received e-mails or written requests from parents that their child not be placed in Geurds' class. There were several of these requests and they involved parents whose students had previously been in Geurds' class and felt that the class was not sufficiently structured for their child and that they wanted a different teacher. Nemeth would usually honor such requests if they were specific enough. She did not share these requests with Geurds.

In fifth grade, pupils would be in Geurds' class for home base and would in some instances switch for math and social studies, but always for science. After the start of the school year, Nemeth received "numerous" phone calls from parents, generally complaining about academic issues, such as a lack of sufficient homework and/or a failure to teach how to do the homework or to define what the homework entailed. She maintained a journal of these complaints with documentation of each. It was expected that a teacher would give homework totaling between forty-five minutes and one hour a day. It was reported that Geurds was telling students that if she had to check their homework Geurds would herself then have homework and that she was in bed by 8:30 p.m. Nemeth claimed that whenever she received a complaint she always told the teacher and asked the parent if they had contacted the teacher about the matter.

[4] It is the view of this judge that some of this testimony, offered before I sat on the case, might be considered irrelevant to the misconduct charge, as it might better be thought of in regard to any inefficiency issue that the Board most clearly did not identify as the basis of the tenure charge. However, it might also be thought of at least to some degree as preliminary to the evidence of pupil and parental concern about language and topics that is the real thrust of the tenure charges.

N.R., the mother of student J.R., first contacted Nemeth about homework issues. She reported that her daughter told her that Geurds said that she was "forced" to give homework, but that Geurds would "whisper" that the amount would lessen. When Nemeth asked Geurds if she had told students that she had to increase homework, Geurds admitted that she did tell students that Nemeth had told her she had to increase homework. N.R. again contacted her on November 13, 2007, very upset that things were still not working and asking that her daughter be assigned to another teacher. She felt that her daughter was learning nothing. She also said that she had other things to tell Nemeth, but that she felt uncomfortable doing so. Nemeth asked R. to be patient, as she was trying to help Geurds.[5]

In November, Nemeth was told about certain incidents that allegedly had occurred in Geurds' classroom. One involved a student using an IPOD, and another involved rubber bands that were shot in class. She spoke to Geurds about these and Geurds told her that she had taken the rubber bands away.

On November 26, Ms. L. reported that profanity had been used in the class, including the "f" word, and there had been references made to the penis and vagina and card playing had been permitted on the half-day session before Thanksgiving. Geurds had also been aware of IPODs in the room and while such were not permitted, she had allegedly said that as long as she did not see them, the students could keep them.

[5] Nemeth testified that staff developers had been showing Geurds how to administer the Developmental Reading Assessment, which Geurds had not been trained on. Workshops had been offered after the close of school during the summer (the contract year was September 1 to June 30) and at the school all during the year, but Geurds was often ill. As of mid-November, assessments of students' fluency and comprehension had been done with the assistance of the staff developers in order to get the assessment process moving. Nemeth also assisted Geurds with spelling and tried to set her up with a Master Teacher to observe her. This was done in November and it was hoped that such activity would continue. In November, an assistant principal also modeled a reading and vocabulary lesson for her with students.

Nemeth explained that when parents complained about a teacher, she would generally speak to the teacher within twenty-four hours. She did so with Geurds, as "long as she or I was in school", but these were verbal discussions and no memos were prepared about them. She recalled having spoken to Geurds about the use of curse words and about topics that were not appropriate to discuss in class.

On December 6, 2007, Nemeth received another telephone call from Ms. R., who reported that her daughter had come home and wanted to know what "cocks" meant, as she had heard this term used in the classroom. R. also reported that the class had watched an "R" rated video without any notice to parents, that at the beginning of the school year Geurds had told the children that she was single, a mom, had never been married and was not gay, that Geurds had given a "full explanation" of how a douche bag worked when a student called another by that term and a student asked what it was, that Geurds had stated that a boy who had pulled up his pants did not want to get his "balls in a bunch", and that someone has asked Geurds what sex was and she explained the mechanics of sex. Ms. R. wanted Geurds kept as far away from her daughter as possible. Nemeth told her that she would get back to her and contacted Deborah Feaster, the District's Director of Elementary Programs and Personnel.

On December 10, another mother, Mrs. Y., called and reported that Geurds had told students that she was not happy teaching 5th grade and that her daughter did not want to go to school anymore. She came home each day crying. She also expressed concern about a book that students were looking at in class, the "Belly Button Book." This had drawings of breast feeding and woman's body parts and was not a part of the curriculum. Nemeth went to the classroom and found the book. It is a book for three and four year olds about a baby coming into the family.

Ms. Nemeth discussed the interviews she conducted in December 2007, with "any students" who had Geurds in the fall of 2007, whether in her home base or not. These interviews were conducted after Geurds had been administratively suspended pending investigation on December 7, 2007. The students, who did not know why they had been summoned to her office, were interviewed one at a time in Nemeth's office by Nemeth and Lori Stein, an assistant principal at Drew. The students were asked how things were going in school and whether anything had occurred that made them upset or they felt was inappropriate. Stein took notes as Nemeth asked the questions. Several reported the use of curses by other students, references by Geurds to the douche bag, the book with pictures of body parts, references by students and/or Geurds to "balls" and "nuts," and a demonstration by Geurds of how to "aim straight" in the bathroom. Others did not recall anything that made them uncomfortable, or said that they heard nothing or had "nothing to report", or that "everything is okay." J.R. and A.L. were interviewed by Ms. Feaster and Lori Stein.

After December 7, 2007, when Geurds was removed from her classroom, and told not to come to work, Nemeth was directed by the Superintendent to pack up personal items located in Geurds' classroom. She documented these items, many of which were not "standard" items in a classroom. Nemeth had knowledge before December 21 that there were lots of materials in the room. Some things found at the time of their removal were dangerous, such as knives, a sledge hammer, and butane lighters. Others included a crock pot, rake, screwdriver, tool box, drills, toys, sixty rubber ducks, baby blocks, tools, baby food, cleaning supplies, a vacuum cleaner, stepladder, spade, shower curtains, nails, screws, mops, and a tea kettle. These were items that Nemeth would not have in her classroom. She had not seen them in October when she "walked through" the classroom (at which time she did not look into drawers or closets) and had not discussed them with Geurds. Nemeth never had an opportunity to discuss the purported "R" rated video with Geurds.

Nemeth opined that discussions of body parts or the presence of a book such as "The Belly Button Book" was not proper in Geurds' classroom as they were not part of the curriculum she taught. Some of the items found in the classroom were inappropriate, although she agreed that there was no written requirement for approval of non-instructional items in the classroom.

Lori Stein, a former special education teacher and supervisor of special services and now assistant principal at Drew, testified that she and Deborah Feaster conducted the interviews of J.R. and A.L. Separate interviews of each student were held in a conference room after the students were requested to come there from class. After some small talk to try to make each girl comfortable, they were asked what was going on in class and how things were. There was no written script. They were asked about what words they heard in class. J.R., who was interviewed first, was clearly uncomfortable reciting some of the words she reported hearing. She commented that "we hear things that teachers don't usually say in the classroom." She asked if she had to say the words. She blushed and looked scared and uncomfortable about what she was talking about. A.L. was then interviewed. She exhibited a similar demeanor.

Stern acknowledged that she did not ask the students the context in which the various words and phrases were used. Having heard what these students reported, Stein opined that these were inappropriate comments and words for a teacher and that it was "not our job to teach kids these words." Stein acknowledged that not all of the students interviewed who reported the use of "inappropriate" language were as bothered by them, as some were seemingly more comfortable with foul language.

Deborah Feaster, Director of Elementary School Programs and Personnel for the District, and formerly a school principal at Drew through the 2005 school year, received a call from Ms. Nemeth on December 6 regarding parental complaints and asked that she document them. She interviewed J.R. and A.L., each of whom she knew. She tried to make them comfortable and asked what was going on in the classroom. She found them to be embarrassed by what they reported. The language that they reported was not appropriate in the classroom; the cursing by students should have been addressed by Geurds. Some words could be used in the appropriate setting, such as in sex education class, but that was not part of the curriculum that Geurds was responsible for. If a student uses a vulgarity, the proper response would not be to teach the whole class about the matter, but to address it privately and call the child's parents.

East Windsor School District Superintendent Ronald E. Belondi, a school superintendent with various districts for a period of over eighteen years, testified that Ms. Geurds' alleged inappropriate comments came to his attention on December 7, when Ms. Feaster e-mailed him. He directed Feaster to investigate. He wanted as many students interviewed as possible that Friday, so as to avoid concerns that could arise if the children went home over the weekend and spoke to each other about the matters. After the interviews were completed, Bolandi developed a series of questions to pose to Geurds at a meeting to be held with her in January. At that meeting, Geurds admitted using some words and denied using others. While in some instances she claimed that the incidents that prompted comments or discussions that she admitted to had arisen in what she deemed to be "teachable moments", in his testimony Belondi opined that instead, when faced with these situations, Geurds should have stopped the discussion, spoken to the students privately and alerted the parents to the matter if necessary.

A.L., who at the time of her testimony was thirteen years old, was a student of Ms. Geurds in kindergarten and later in the 5th grade in 2007-2008, except for science and fine arts. She described the classroom, in which there were both male and female students, as "overwhelming" and "colorful." She recalled that on one occasion in the fall semester, Geurds mentioned that when boys in kindergarten went to the bathroom, they often missed the toilet and deposited urine on the seat. Girls would complain about this. Geurds explained to her fifth grade class that she had explained to the kindergarten boys how they should go to the bathroom. She described how she had used a straw hat as the toilet bowl and a yardstick to demonstrate the proper position of the penis to properly urinate. A.L. reported that none of the fifth grade boys had said that they were having any problem with this function. The single bathroom for the kindergarten class was located in the classroom, while in fifth grade separate boys and girls rooms were located outside of the classroom.

A.L. also recalled that Geurds explained to the class what "sex" meant, referring to a male placing his penis in a female's vagina. She could not recall how this discussion arose, but on cross-examination remembered that some boys had "used the f word" before Geurds explained sex. In fifth grade sex education was conducted separately for boys and girls (except for a movie about reproduction) and was taught by gym teachers. Geurds did not teach sex education and her discussion of the definition of sex was not a part of a lesson. A.L. "felt kind of uncomfortable" with this discussion.

Geurds also told the mixed class what a douche bag was. One of the students had called another student by that term. Geurds asked them if they knew what the term meant. She then explained what it was and how it was used, noting its use in the case of an infection in the vagina. This discussion was also "uncomfortable" for A.L.

A.L. also described how, on one occasion when a vitamin water bottle dropped and cracked during what the witness thought was a math class, Geurds said "shit" loud enough for a few of the students to hear. On another occasion, when A.L. used too much glue on a paper, Geurds told her that she should use only a dot "no bigger than a bugger." Another time, when boys had their pants hiked up, Geurds commented that "you're going to get balls in a bunch." Finally, when a boy said to another boy to "suck my dick," Geurds responded that "if you want someone to suck cock then go home and ask your family to do it for you." This comment was loud enough for everyone to hear. She denied that Geurds had instead only commented that if the boy wanted to talk like that that he had better talk to his parents.

J.R., twelve years old and a member of Geurds' fifth grade class for home base (home room class), language arts and social studies only, said that Geurds used words such as "gay," "balls," "douche bag" and "cock." At the beginning of the year she told the class that she was not married and not gay. The witness did not recall how this came up. She remembered that boys were calling each other douche bags before Geurds explained what it was and how it was used. She made a hand movement between her legs to demonstrate the method. At the time this occurred, some students were just entering the classroom. Both boys and girls were present. J.R. was "shocked." The comment about "balls" came when two boys were kicking at each other's private areas. Geurds remarked, "You're going to get your balls in a bunch." According to R., "everyone could hear." Again, the student was "shocked" as this sort of comment was not one that a teacher should be saying. The "cock" reference was reported to her by A.L. and was not something that J.R. heard herself. She told her mother about the teacher's comments, but at first her mother just told her to "just do your best."

N.R., J.R.'s mother, testified that her daughter told her about the teacher's "not married, not gay" comment as early as the first day of school in the fall of 2007. She later told of the demonstration of how to douche in response to the students' "douche bag" references. J. appeared to be shocked by her teacher's comments and conduct. She also told her about the boys kicking and Geurds' comments about "balls in bunch," which Ms. R. found a bit funny but nevertheless inappropriate. Then towards the end of the fall term, J. came home and asked what "cock" meant. She told her and asked how this word had come up. When she heard what A.L. had reported about this to J., Ms. R. could not believe what Geurds had said. Her daughter also told her of the discussion of what sex meant, but she did not know the context for this comment.

Ms. R. denied that she was told by school administrators to speak to Geurds about her concerns regarding the class. She also denied that she ever threatened to go to the media. She never wrote a letter of complaint to either Geurds or the board. She never told Geurds about any concerns, although she was in her presence for both Back-to-School night and a parent-teacher conference.

In addition to the testimony of the two students, the Board presented summaries of interviews conducted with many students of Ms. Geurds. As will be discussed below, some said they heard words or comments that appear to agree with the comments of J.R. and A.L., others heard and saw nothing. As these persons did not actually testify at the hearing, the evidential significance of their reported comments will be discussed in the analysis section of this opinion.

Kimberly Geurds has an early childhood education associate's degree, a bachelor's degree in education and a certification for K-8. She testified that she has been employed with the East Windsor school district since 1997, first teaching in a Gifted and Talented program and in kindergarten until the end of the 2007 school year, when she was assigned to teach 5th grade at Drew.

Ms. Geurds denied having any knowledge about any complaints that Ms. R. may have made about her during the fall of 2007. She was not given any written notice of any such complaints.[6]

Geurds acknowledged that there had been an incident, occurring either in the home base or in language arts or social studies class, in which two boys, who she thought were assigned to her home base classroom, were calling each other "douche bags." She was shocked that these fifth graders knew the term. She responded to the boys, asking them if they even knew "what you're talking about." They did not, and she commented, "So you're calling someone something that you don't even know what you're calling them." As she testified, "By now, everyone was looking." She proceeded to explain that there was such an item, that it was a feminine hygiene product found in stores. She told the boys, and the class, "so basically you're calling your friend or each other something that is a piece of garbage that left over. And I don't want to hear it again." She denied that she had graphically shown the class how a douche bag is applied. She did not refer to infection or use, "vagina" or use a hand motion to demonstrate the technique for using the item.

Geurds denied ever referring to "balls in a bunch" or "testicles" or "cock," having never heard these words in her classroom. However, there was an incident where boys were > being rough . . . roughhousing with each other . . . being physical. And I said - -They were at each others below the > belly button area. I said, You don't need to do that. You don't need to fight and hit at each other there. Private parts are private. Hands off. No more. That's it.

[6] A copy of the collective bargaining agreement between the district and the teacher's union was identified and its provisions will be discussed later in this decision.

She denied ever using the words "penis" or "vagina."

Ms. Geurds agreed that she had demonstrated the proper technique for boys to urinate to her kindergarten children. This happened due to complaints by girls about the boys "spattering" on the one toilet provided for the boys and girls in the classroom. Geurds would have to clean this up. She discussed this issue with parents, and she also demonstrated the proper technique to the children, utilizing a piñata stick and a straw sun hat. In fifth grade this episode was recalled as a "story of remembering." Many of the fifth graders had been her students in kindergarten. When some of the fifth grade girls complained to her that there was urine on the toilet seats (the boys and girls had separate bathrooms), she responded

> Well, that's something I usually only had to worry about the boys doing in kindergarten, and that was aiming straight. And the children liked when I told them stories about kindergarten because, again, many of them were "I remember that," and "Oh, I remember that."

Geurds added, "So I did exactly what I did in front of the class. And I told them - - I relayed my story of how I taught the boys in kindergarten how to aim straight." She acknowledged that she did in fact repeat her kindergarten demonstration for the fifth grade students, adding

> And the issue was the girls couldn't aim straight because they sit down. And the bottom line was we found out the toilet flushers were not working . . . But that was strictly relaying a kindergarten story to my fifth grade students, of which I did other stories.

Counsel for Ms. Geurds asked her if "knowing what you know now, would that be a repetitive story again?" Geurds replied, "Absolutely not," and repeated this answer to a question as to whether she would repeat her explanation about the douche bag. Instead, if a child called another that, she would "probably at that moment" have them sit, stop talking and go on with the lesson and then, after class, chat with them and explain the inappropriateness of the name-calling. If asked "what do we call them," she would "probably send them" to guidance or Ms. Nemeth. On cross-examination she explained that she had not given any thought to the possibility that fifth graders were more sensitive about matters such as the urination issue than were younger children and that given this,

> In hindsight, I needed to - - I should have stopped and thought more of the age group of children that I was dealing with. But, again, I say coming from some 20-years of teaching little ones, that it was my natural response. And having never taught fifth grade, getting used to that age group - - I was only with them for a limited amount of time, so I was new to the age group. And in thinking back, I probably would not do it again. I would handle it differently, as I stated before.

Given all this, when asked by counsel for the Board on cross-examination whether she would agree that her handling of the "douche bag" incident was "inappropriate," she responded that "at the time, I thought it wasn't. Yes, now I do. I do agree that it was inappropriate and I would handle myself differently." Even limited to the facts of her own version of the incident, given the age involved, "it most likely was inappropriate. I reacted - - my reaction to the fellow saying that word was, again, a gasp. And I probably should not have reacted like that in fifth grade."

Geurds denied that she told her class about the mechanics of sex. She might have said "shit" at some point, possibly between classes, which would be the only time that she would have gotten a vitamin water. She denied using the phrase, "balls in a bunch," but did tell the boys who were roughhousing that they needed to be "careful with your body." This roughhousing, including the boys hitting below the waist, was "not unusual" for fifth grade boys. She also completely denied ever telling any boys to go tell their parents about sucking a cock.

The witness did not tell her class that she was not gay and that she was a single parent, although she did tell parents at back-to-school night that, as they would be hearing stories about her son, she was not married or widowed or divorced and did not lead an alternative lifestyle. She did not use the term, "gay."

On cross-examination, Geurds reviewed P-17, a form she filled out as part of the review of this matter at the district level. She gave full and complete answers, however, she did not feel that she had been able to explain the context in which certain matters occurred or were said.

Applicable Standards

Tenured teachers may not be dismissed or have their compensation reduced "except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. Pursuant to the Tenured Employees Hearing Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:35-1, a tenured teacher may not be removed from her position unless a school board successfully establishes one or more of these causes by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Matter of Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982) "Unbecoming conduct" is broadly defined as "any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the [governmental unit] or which has a tendency to destroy public respect for municipal employees and confidence in the operation of municipal services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998), at 554 (internal quotation and citations omitted). In the Matter of Anthony Nicosia, A-5285-04T5 (App. Div. May 17, 2007). The conduct need not be "predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye." In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136,140 (App. Div. 1960). And because a teacher is both a role model and is entrusted with the care and education of minors, the public is entitled to expect that they will fulfill their roles with a high degree of responsibility. In Saunders v. New Jersey Dep't of Educ., 91 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 12, 14, Administrative Law Judge Mumtaz Bari-Brown wrote:

> The educator imparts on her students not only academic knowledge, but also the development of social and moral values that are expected from parents, law enforcement officials, and the general public. Thus, teachers must be > held to a higher standard of conduct than others who do not in their profession have direct contact with molding habits and nurturing young minds. Suffice it to say, children mimic what they see and they learn by example. Clearly, teachers play a direct role in influencing the opinions of their pupils and, indeed, teachers are role models. Teachers often impart the goals set by their students and the direction they take in achieving those goals.

Another expression of the role of the teacher

> Teachers are public employees who hold positions demanding public trust, and in such positions, they teach, inform, and mold habits and attitudes and influence the opinions of their pupils. Pupils learn, therefore, not only what they are taught by the teacher, but what they see, hear, experience and learn about the teacher." Analysis

The Board of Education charges that Ms. Geurds engaged in conduct unbecoming for a tenured teacher. As explained at the opening of this opinion, the gravamen of the Board's complaint really deals with the use of certain words, phrases and the discussion of certain topics by Geurds with or within the hearing of her students. The Board has not pressed any issues of academic performance as grounds for discipline of this tenured employee. The evidence has been geared to prove that Geurds has spoken and acted inappropriately, most especially in respect to the discussion of matters mostly related to body parts, sex, and words inappropriate to a 5th grade, indeed, in some instances, to any classroom perhaps other than in health class. Ms. Geurds has acknowledged that some of the events that allegedly involved inappropriate conduct did occur, while not characterizing what she did in those instances as unbecoming. In the case of the demonstration of how to properly urinate so as to avoid any "splattering," she agrees that there was such a discussion and indeed a demonstration put on for her fifth graders. While she contends that this resulted from a complaint by girls that splattering was occurring in the girls bathroom and that this led to discussion, and indeed a demonstration, remembering a previous such demonstration in kindergarten which some of the students in her fifth grade might recall as some of the students, but not all, were in her kindergarten class, she acknowledges that, given the age of the students in fifth grade and the prospect that, unlike kindergarteners, these children might be more sensitive to such matters and such talk, what she said and did was "inappropriate."

Similarly, Ms. Geurds does not deny that there was an incident that led to a discussion about douche bags. She agrees that as a result of some boys calling each other by that reference, that she discussed what a douche bag was in front of her entire class. She does not agree that she presented any demonstration of how such an item is used, nor does she admit to having referred to infection. But as with the allegation about discussion of urination in class, she agrees that, in hindsight, her handling of the matter was "inappropriate." It would have properly been handled differently.

While Geurds has admitted both the reality of the discussion of urination and about douche bags, she has denied other allegations made about her language in class. And while a consideration of whether her admittedly inappropriate actions in these two instances might serve as a basis for determining if she engaged in unbecoming conduct, there are other, similar allegations about language and topics that she denies even occurred. Of these, the one comment attributed to her that most definitively would call into serious question the conduct of this tenured teacher is that when a boy said to another boy to "suck my dick," she told the student "if you want someone to suck cock then go home and ask your family to do it for you." While comments about "balls," "nuts", and/or a short explanation of the mechanics of sex, whether taken separately or together, are certainly matters that cannot be overlooked, if Geurds did make this particular comment attributed to her by A.L. then surely her judgment and professionalism are open to serious question and the security of her tenured status most threatened.

In order to assess the credibility of the allegations about the matters that Geurds denies, it is necessary to look at the sources of evidence that claim that she did in fact say or do things other than what she admits. Other than its evidence as to what Geurds herself admitted, the Board presented three witnesses to testify about alleged misconduct arising from things Geurds said. One N.R., the mother of a student, was of course not present in the class. Her testimony is hearsay, admissible in this administrative proceeding under N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5, and subject to the need that the District present at a minimum a residuum of competent evidence to support any material fact that is essential to the resolution of the case against Geurds. N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5; Weston v. State, 60 N.J. 36, 51 (1972).

The two student witnesses, A.L. and J.R., each testified about the douche bag incident, which Geurds has acknowledged she discussed, although not in exactly the same way these students claimed. A.L. also testified about the urination incident. Again, Geurds essentially acknowledges that this conversation and demonstration did occur. Further, A.L. testified to Geurds' use of the word "shit," another matter which Geurds has apparently acknowledged occurred, albeit there is some question as to whether it might have occurred in-between classes. But A.L also testified about the mechanics of sex discussion and the reference to oral sex, matters which Geurds denies. And J.R. testified to Geurds telling the students about not being single, never married and not gay. Geurds denies any such talk in front of students, agreeing only that she did tell parents about being a single mom. The Board also presented hearsay materials that purportedly reflect what other students who were in one or more periods with Ms. Geurds reported during their individual interviews. Again, as these are hearsay, the information contained in any one, or the collection of these interviews, cannot serve as the sole evidence upon which it can be determined that Geurds did in fact speak about these other matters. But combined with the competent evidence of the student witnesses, and with Geurds' own statements and admissions, they can serve to bolster such competent evidence to prove the fact of any such comments.

Review of the interview notes which purport to record what students purportedly said shows that eleven students reported something that arguably involved conduct concerning matters that the District has characterized as inappropriate. While other students either did not report these matters when interviewed, or simply did not hear any of the alleged or admitted matters, there is no question that given the admissions by Geurds, the information offered by the students who did report something cannot be dismissed as not reflective of reality, even if other classmates did not offer any information about these matters. Of the students reporting hearing and witnessing something about the matters in question, N.A., D.J., L.R., K.S., B.S. and E.S. each mentioned the urination demonstration. Interestingly, N.A., L.R., K.S. and B.S. all recalled some reference during this to the names of body parts; one to the vagina, two to the penis, one only mentioning the use of "names for body parts." Of course, as Ms. Geurds has acknowledged that this discussion and demonstration did occur, these notes merely offer evidence of other recollections of a matter not really at issue, although with the added reference to body part names. Yet, clearly when they spoke to the administrators, they were not making up this incident from whole cloth. There is therefore no doubt that when questioned, at least some of the students were accurately reporting actual events in Ms. Geurds' classroom.

In addition, M.G. seems to recall that Geurds used the word "nuts." Having reported that some kids in the class used the word in "talking about wrong body parts (nuts)," he was asked if Geurds used "those words." The reply is noted as "Sometimes . . . nuts; as a body part. She says if someone hits you there you won't grow them back . . .some kids laughed." S.Y. also reported that Geurds talked "about body parts (puberty . . . How it happens and what happens. Just talks about girls, how mothers give birth to children.") She also reported that boys talked about "balls" and Geurds "talks to the boys. She is referring to the boy's privates." M.P. told of Geurds mentioning that the vagina was "just girls' private parts." While he did not feel that this was a problem, because "some people don't' take it serious and they don't know what the words mean," he added that "Girls say, gross! Why are you talking about that?" And M.P. also noted that he had heard "shit", which suggests that he too was more than likely reporting something real, as Geurds has admitted that she did use this word at least on one occasion. And S.O., while unsure what word was used, recalled that Geurds "talks about the girls body part down there."

Since we know that the allegations of students, including witnesses A.L. and J.R., that Geurds addressed topics such as urination and douche bags are true, there is good reason to believe that additional elements of the information provided by the students are also accurate. There is no reason to believe that these students were making up the events and comments they related. No evidence has suggested that these students had any motive to fabricate, and while not every student heard everything or even anything, there is enough here to suggest the reports of those who did accurately reflect the general truth of what they said. Ms. Geurds apparently had no compunction about discussing matters with her students about topics relating to health, sex, inappropriate use of words, and the like. Thus, when boys used the term "douche bag" she found it appropriate to openly discuss the actual meaning of the word with the students in class. Given this, it would not be at all surprising that she might have found it appropriate to respond to the use of "fuck" in the classroom by relating what the offensive word connotes and this could well have led to a basic mention of the mechanics of sex. And while the physical demonstration of the mechanics of the use of a douche bag might well have been far from graphic, that Geurds might have gestured as to how it was used is not at all farfetched. Further, given what she admitted and the consistency of her admission with the testimony and statements, I am persuaded that Geurds would have spoken openly about the private body parts, just as several of the students said.

The one most troubling issue is whether Geurds did speak to a boy about oral sex in the manner that A.L. reported. She is the sole witness, either actual or by interview, to relate this disturbing matter. While Geurds showed a propensity to speak freely and to explain matters of health and sex to these young and impressionable students, there is in what she has admitted and most of what the students claimed no sense of nastiness, no suggestion of any lurid or prurient element. If a student were telling another boy to "suck my dick," the evidence would support the likelihood that Geurds might have told the boy, possibly in front of others, to go home and ask his parents what this meant, but for her to say something such as, "if you want someone to suck cock then go home and ask your family to do it for you" is quite another matter. In the absence of any corroborating evidence as to this remark or any such similarly nasty, evil comment, I am unwilling to conclude that the witness properly heard what was said.

Based upon the credible evidence, I FIND that Ms. Geurds did instruct her 5th grade students about what douche bags were and how they were used, did discuss and demonstrate how to properly urinate so as to avoid "splattering," did make reference to private parts such as the penis and vagina by those words, did relate something of the mechanics of sex, did on one occasion use the word, "shit" in the classroom, albeit in disgust at having dropped a bottle, and did refer to boys' testicles by the term "nuts" or possibly "balls." I also FIND that she did not tell a boy that he should go home and have his family perform oral sex. I FIND that although Ms. Geurds may well have felt that some of the incidents occurring in her room provided "teachable moments," none of these comments or references were made in the course of instruction in any part of the curriculum for which Ms. Geurds was responsible. I FIND that Ms. Geurds acknowledges that the comments and actions regarding urination and the douche bag were inappropriate. She understands that her approach to the circumstances that arose in her classroom was no proper. Given this, it seems likely that she would agree that some of the other comments would also be inappropriate.

Given the above findings, I CONCLUDE that the Board of Education has met its burden to prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Ms. Geurds engaged in inappropriate conduct for a teacher. Her behavior in the circumstances was not in accord with what was proper, her choices as to what subjects and language to discuss or use in her classroom was not justified by the circumstances. She herself has recognized that if it was necessary to address the actions or comments of students that were themselves not proper, that the way to do so was, depending upon the event, either to do so privately, or to refer the student to the proper school personnel to deal with the situation, and/or to advise the child's parents of the facts and let them deal with their children. Open discussion of these topics in the classroom by a teacher not detailed to teach health or to otherwise address these delicate subjects as a part of the curriculum was not professional conduct. It demonstrated a failure to recognize boundaries, to realize the sensitivities of students, especially within the pre-teen age group, and also to respect the prerogatives of parents.

Sanctions

The Board contends that the sole remedy for Ms. Geurds' misconduct is removal. Even, as here, in the absence of any prior disciplinary history, removal can be ordered where the misconduct is sufficiently flagrant. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 421 (App. Div. 1967). Factors to be considered in assessing the proper sanction include the "nature and circumstances of the proven violations of rules, statutes, policies, responsibilities, standards and the like, as well as the underlying policy concerns implicated by the violations, and the prior employment and disciplinary history of the employee," I/M/O/ Tenure Hearing of Getty, EDU 8750-06, Initial Decision, (June 4, 2009), adopted Comm'r. (July 17, 2009)http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html citing In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frederick, L. Ostergren, 1966 S.L.D. 185, 188. Additionally, as the Fulcomer court noted, the impact upon a teacher's career, and the effect on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system, are additional factors to be considered. Fulcomer, supra, at 420-422.

The Board agrees that in cases where the proven misconduct of a tenured teacher has involved the use of inappropriate language in class and/or discussions of subjects of a sexual nature or some other such inappropriate topic, that the penalty of removal has sometimes been imposed and sometimes has not. Each counsel in this case has cited some of these prior cases. Examples of cases ending in removal or a lesser sanction could be listed here ad nauseum. However, the Board, acknowledging the differing results as to removal, argues that consideration of these prior cases suggests that a significant factor in determining between removal and a lesser sanction has been whether the respondent has acknowledged wrongdoing and appears sincerely contrite. It claims that Ms. Geurds' expressions of belated understanding of the impropriety of her conduct ring hollow and should be ignored. But despite the Board's dire assessment of Geurds, I am not persuaded to any significant degree that Ms. Geurds is a lost cause and that she cannot continue to serve as an effective teacher despite her failures as found here.[7] Importantly, there is nothing in this case that would suggest that she is a predator, or that she sought to start conversations on clearly inappropriate topics without there having been some incident that she did not herself cause that led her to address a word, a phrase, a topic. There is no element of inappropriate familiarity with any student, whether in words or physical actions. There is a lack of understanding of verbal boundaries, of the limits of teaching responsibilities and of a teacher's role in regard to some topics, but no suggestion of venality or moral turpitude. That she only belatedly realizes that she should not have said some of what she admits is not surprising, or we probably would not have a case to decide. And while she denied some of what I have found she said, there is no suggestion that these comments were very different in quality or in the genesis of their occurrence from those she admits. Perhaps she simply does not remember all that she said. I do not believe that she purposely and knowingly denied matters that she in fact recalled. But even with the items that she denied added to those she acknowledged, I do not see enough here to justify terminating her tenure, and effectively, her career. And in this regard, the fact that I have found that she did not tell a student to go home and request oral sex from his family is very important, for that kind of remark, if proven, would strongly weigh against Geurds retaining her tenure.

[7] Once again, it is necessary to recall that despite the limited testimony as to what might be seen as efficiency issues, the Board has proceeded here as to inappropriate conduct, and my conclusions as to the sanction are in connection with that issue only.

Based upon the above considerations, I CONCLUDE that Ms. Geurds should forfeit 120 days of salary and one year's increment. Such sanction should assure that she will conduct herself in the future in an appropriate manner, respecting the limits of her role and the sensibilities of her students. It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS,	:	DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Pro-se petitioner appealed the determination of the State Board of Examiners (Board) to deny her a standard Teacher of Elementary School certificate. Petitioner contends that the coursework and teaching experience required for her Master of Education degree from Rutgers University – awarded in 2004 – is equivalent to the requirement for 200 hours of formal instruction under the alternate route to teacher certification in New Jersey; she requested an evaluation of her educational background and experience to determine whether she could be given credit for some portion of her educational coursework, and whether such credit could be applied to an application for a teaching certificate. Respondent State Board of Examiners (Board) contends that the petitioner has satisfied requirements toward certification, except for completion of a teacher preparation program culminating in student teaching and accompanying fulfillment of provisional requirements. The Board asserted that it is entitled to prevail as a matter of law, and filed a motion for summary decision.

The ALJ found that: the respondent, in a decision dated October 16, 2008, did address the issue of whether petitioner's educational background and teaching experience is equivalent to the requirement for 200 hours of formal instruction, and concluded that it was not; petitioner chose to enroll in the alternate route program and as such is obligated to fulfill the requirements set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:9-8.3, which specifically states that the required 200 hours of instruction in professional education must be completed concurrently with the provisional teaching requirement; petitioner admitted that she did not complete 200 hours of formal instruction while she was provisionally teaching. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the respondent is entitled to prevail as a matter of law, granted the Board's motion for summary decision, and dismissed the petition.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred that the Board is entitled to summary decision. Accordingly, the petition of appeal was dismissed.

INITIAL DECISION

AGENCY DKT. NO. 67-4/09

KATHRYN A. BLACKSTONE,

Petitioner,

v.

NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS,

Respondent.

Kathryn A. Blackstone, petitioner, pro se

Susan M. Huntley, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Paula T. Dow, Attorney General of New Jersey)

Record Closed: June 10, 2010 Decided: July 13, 2010

BEFORE JOSEPH F. MARTONE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner filed a petition of appeal seeking a review of the decision by the State Board of Examiners in which the Board denied her application for issuance of the standard Teacher of Elementary School (N-8) certificate. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on April 27, 2009, for hearing as a contested case.

The case was assigned to me and I scheduled a series of telephone conferences with petitioner and counsel for respondent. As a result of these conferences, both parties agreed that no testimony would be necessary because there are no facts in dispute, and the matter could be decided by motion.

Upon the filing of the motion for summary decision by attorney for the respondent, additional conferences were held in an effort to explain to petitioner the purpose of a motion for summary decision and to assist petitioner in setting forth her position in this case. In response to this, petitioner verbally acknowledged that she did not engage in student teaching concurrent with the educational coursework in question. She also explained that she never requested the issuance of a teaching certificate. Rather, all she asked was whether she could be given credit for some portion of her educational coursework and whether such credit could be applied to an application for a teaching certificate. In all other respects she agreed with the factual discussion contained in the motion submitted by the Deputy Attorney General. These verbal responses and acknowledgements by the petitioner were confirmed in writing. (C-1 and C-2.)

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Based upon the documentary evidence and submissions by the parties, I FIND that there are no material facts in dispute. I FIND that the facts in this case are as set forth in the paragraphs which follow.

On or about July 31, 2008, petitioner Kathryn A. Blackstone requested that the New Jersey Department of Education, Office of Licensing and Credentials, review her educational credentials, specifically a Masters degree in Elementary and Early Childhood Education from Rutgers University. She requested that those credentials be deemed equivalent to the 200 hours of formal instruction required for the issuance of a Teacher of Elementary School (N-8) Certificate. (R-1, Exhibit A.) Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.13, respondent reviewed this request and on October 22, 2008, issued a decision, noting that it was unclear from the documentation provided by the applicant whether she had completed the requirements under the provisional certificate issued to her in January 2008. (R-1, Exhibit B.) The respondent found that the petitioner's experience and study did not establish a "one-to-one correspondence of experience/alternate education" to her licensing deficiencies. (R-1, Exhibit B.)

The petitioner then submitted a Petition of Appeal to the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, asking the Commissioner of Education to review respondent's decision. (R-1, Exhibit C.) On April 8, 2009, an answer was filed on behalf of the respondent. (R-1, Exhibit D.) The matter was then transmitted to the OAL as a contested case. On or about August 21, 2009, respondent served requests for discovery upon the petitioner. (R-1, Exhibit E.) Petitioner provided responses to respondent's discovery requests on or about October 7, 2009. (R-1, Exhibits F and G.)

Petitioner is the holder of a Certificate of Eligibility (Elementary N-8), issued by respondent in July 2007. (R-1, Exhibit F, Admission 1.) Petitioner also held a Provisional Teaching Certificate (Elementary) issued by respondent from January 2008 until its expiration in July 2009. (R-1, Exhibit F, Admission 2.) Since petitioner did not complete a traditional college teacher preparation program culminating in a student teaching experience, she sought to fulfill the requirements to obtain a standard teaching certificate through the Alternate Route program. (R-1, Exhibit F, Admissions 3 and 4.) In an effort to fulfill the requirements for certification through this program, petitioner obtained employment as a long-term substitute in the Readington School District, and while teaching there she was evaluated periodically by a mentor teacher. (R-1, Exhibit F, Admission 7; Exhibit G, Answer 4; Exhibit H; Exhibit I.) However, petitioner did not complete 200 hours of formal instruction in professional education at a regional training center or in a college/university alternate route education program during the same time period she was being mentored and evaluated in the Readington School District. (R-1, Exhibit F, Admissions 8 and 9.)

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

Respondent requests that I grant its motion for summary decision because no genuine issue of material fact exists, and respondent argues that it is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. The standard of review on a motion for summary decision is set forth in N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), which provides:

> The decision sought may be rendered if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law.
> [N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b)].

This standard is essentially the same as that which governs a motion for summary judgment in the Superior Court. In Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520 (1995), the Supreme Court held that;

> a determination whether there exists a "genuine issue" of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party.

In this case, based upon the discovery responses provided by petitioner, I have found that there are no material facts in dispute. Therefore, this case is ripe for summary disposition.

N.J.A.C. 6A:9-8.8 sets forth the requirements for a standard teaching certificate. First, the candidate must possess a provisional teaching certificate pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-8.2. Additionally, the candidate must successfully complete a State-approved district training program pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-8.3 and -8.4 while being employed provisionally by a school district. The requirements for State-approved district training programs include on-going mentoring and evaluations by a mentor teacher over a period of at least thirty weeks as well as a minimum of 200 hours of formal instruction in professional education to be completed concurrently with the thirty or more weeks of mentored teaching. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-8.3(b)(1) and (3). According to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-2.1, "formal instruction" as used in N.J.A.C. 6A:9-8.3(b) (3) means, > a Department-approved planned program of professional preparation for holders of certificates of eligibility which is located at a regional training center site operated by a school district, school district consortium or institution of higher education.

> [N.J.A.C. 6A:9-2.1]

In this case, the petitioner holds a certificate of eligibility and held a provisional teaching certificate from January 2008 to July 2009. (R-1, Exhibit F, Admission 2.) Petitioner admits that she was subject to the above requirements. (R-1, Exhibit F, Admissions 4, 5, 6.) Petitioner also admits that she did not complete the 200 hours of formal instruction in professional education at a regional training center during the same period she was teaching provisionally in the Readington School District. (R-1, Exhibit F, Admissions 8, 9.)

As was stated above, petitioner's position is that she never requested the issuance of a teaching certificate and only asked whether she could be given credit for some portion of her educational coursework which could be applied to an application for a teaching certificate. Petitioner's letter of appeal filed on March 5, 2009 (R-1, Exhibit C), also stated that she was not requesting issuance of a certificate, but was requesting reconsideration of her educational background and teaching experience as equivalent to the requirement for 200 hours of formal instruction. Petitioner's position appears to be that the Board of Examiners failed to address the issue whether her educational background and teaching experience is equivalent to the requirement for 200 hours of formal instruction. After reviewing the respondent Board of Examiner's decision of October 16, 2008 (R-1, Exhibit B), I CONCLUDE that the Board did address this issue.

In its decision, the Board of Examiners notes that N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.13 allows an applicant to provide the Board with materials the applicant considers evidence of alternative education warranting issuance of an appropriate license. The decision goes to state that the Board made "a careful review of the documents submitted by Ms. Blackstone" and specifically states:

> Ms. Blackstone documentation of experience and study does not provide a compelling one-to-one relationship with her licensure deficiency. The board is not satisfied that her program of study coupled with the requirements to be fulfilled through a district training program for first year teachers is sufficient to issue a standard certificate.
> [R-1, Exhibit B at 2.]

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the decision of the Board of Examiners did address the issue whether petitioner's educational background and teaching experience is equivalent to the requirement for 200 hours of formal instruction, and concluded that it did not. The petitioner's request for relief in her letter of appeal was to seek reconsideration by the Board of Examiners of her request. The request for reconsideration is a discretionary matter best addressed by the Board of Examiners.

In this case, the respondent recognized that petitioner attained a Master's degree in Early Childhood/Elementary Education. However, petitioner chose to enroll in the alternate route program and as such she was obligated to fulfill the requirements set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:9-8.3. This regulation specifically states that the required 200 hours of instruction in professional education must be completed concurrently with the provisional teaching requirement. Petitioner has admitted that she did not complete 200 hours of formal instruction in professional education while she was provisionally teaching. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that respondent is entitled to prevail as a matter of law and its motion for summary decision should be granted.

DECISION AND ORDER

For the reasons stated above, the motion for summary decision of the respondent, Board of Examiners, is GRANTED, and petitioner's appeal is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF RANDALL N. KAVET,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE	:	DECISION
CITY OF NEW BRUNSWICK,	:
MIDDLESEX COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning Board certified tenure charges of inefficiency, incompetence, and conduct unbecoming against respondent – a tenured special education teacher employed by the district since 1987 – for allegedly failing to: follow lesson plans; substantiate student grades, and meet the goals of multiple sixty-day improvement plans. Respondent denied the charges as alleged.

The ALJ found that: the petitioning Board bears the burden of proving the tenure charges brought against respondent by a preponderance of the competent and credible evidence; the Board failed to comply with the procedural requirements set forth at N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and *N.J.A.C.*6A:3-5.1(c) regarding the tenure charges of inefficiency and further failed to substantiate the charges of incompetency and conduct unbecoming. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that all tenure charges brought against respondent be dismissed.

Upon a comprehensive and independent review of the record, the Commissioner determined to adopt the decision of the ALJ recommending that the charges against respondent be dismissed. In so doing, he found that the Board failed to sustain its burden of establishing its charges of unbecoming conduct by a preponderance of the credible evidence. With respect to the charges of inefficiency, the Commissioner found that as the petitioning Board failed to comply with the procedural requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and *N.J.A.C.*6A:3-5.1(c), the charges of inefficiency are dismissed for failure to satisfy the statutory and regulatory requisites attendant to their certification. Finally, the Commissioner agreed with the ALJ that the Board has failed to sustain its charges of incompetency. The Commissioner ordered that respondent be reinstated to his tenured position and reimbursed for back pay and emoluments.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF RANDALL N. KAVET,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE	:	DECISION
CITY OF NEW BRUNSWICK,	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The District's exceptions and respondent's reply thereto – submitted in accordance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching his determination herein.[1]

The District's exceptions – although acknowledging the technical correctness of the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) analysis on the issue of the District's charges of inefficiency – cite extensively to the testimony of its witnesses, which it avers was essentially unrebutted and amply supports its contention of Respondent's incompetency, insubordination and unprofessional conduct. It alleges, inter alia, that such testimony establishes that respondent:

- Could not produce student grades when requested by the principal and failed to enter grades in the computer.
- Failed to complete documentation requested by the Department of Youth and Family Services in connection with its investigation involving a specific student.

[1] It is noted that by letter dated July 7, 2010 – filed with the Agency on July 8, 2010 – the District attempted to file a response to Respondent's Reply Exceptions. As there is no regulatory provision for such a submission, it was not considered herein.

- Claimed a writing sample with inappropriate content was authored by a student, while the District Superintendent concluded that such sample couldn't have been done by a student because it was adult in manner, prose and composition.
- Was absent on days of regularly scheduled weekly meetings with the principal.
- Missed a meeting with the Superintendent to discuss the potential seriousness of denial of increments for the 2007-08 and 2009-10 school years and the lack of change in his performance.
- Complied at a very minimum level with code requirements of teacher assessments.
- Performance evaluation from his supervisor evidenced no student writing samples as required; showed that he regularly used videos in place of classroom instruction and he failed to utilize textbooks.
- Was repeatedly unprepared for IEP meetings, notwithstanding repeated directives from his superiors to correct that deficiency.
- Was given seven 60-Day Improvement Plans but did not improve.

It additionally cites to certain of respondent's own testimony which it claims further buttresses the charges asserted against him:

- When asked about his failure to maintain student folders he said he was not a "paperwork guy."
- He admitted he failed to maintain student grades consistent with Board policy and instructions of his supervisors.
- He admitted his classroom environment was disheveled, and further admitted that he is messy by nature.

(District's Exceptions at 1-8)

The District next excepts to the ALJ's Finding of Fact, #5. It maintains that although respondent testified that he posted some grades, the unrebutted testimony of the District's witnesses demonstrate that no such grades were regularly found in the respondent's grade book or on the Real Time Computer System used by the District. Moreover, it proffers this same testimony established that even when grades were posted, no back verification such as student classwork, homework, quizzes or tests could be found, therefore raising a serious concern as to the validity of his grade posting. (District's Exceptions at 6)

In conclusion, the District maintains that the evidence and unrebutted testimony clearly demonstrate that it has met its burden of proving the tenure charges against respondent and urges the Commissioner to reverse the decision of the ALJ. (Id. at 8)

In reply, respondent asserts it is important to note that, although evidence on many issues was introduced at the hearing in this matter, the only relevant issues are those relating to the charges advanced in the District's two sets of tenure charges. Although the District claims to have presented witnesses whose testimony was "essentially unrebutted," respondent does not necessarily concur that such is the case but, notwithstanding, cautions that it must be recognized that although evidence may be unrebutted, unless such testimonial evidence is probative of a specific charge against him, the fact that it may be unrebutted is of no consequence. As an example, respondent notes that there is no reference in any of the District's charges against him as to his teaching style or how he conducted himself in the classroom, other than that he had model writings in his classroom that were inappropriate. (Respondent's Reply Exceptions at 1-2)

Respondent proceeds to analyze the actual incompetence and unbecoming conduct charges against him – which he charges the District's exceptions failed to do – and, in great detail, presents testimony and evidence in defense of the appropriateness of the ALJ's dismissal of all of them as unproven. He maintains that it was the District's burden to provide specific fact – rather than mere conclusionary testimony and evidence – to support the charges against him which, he asserts, it failed to do. (Respondent's Reply Exceptions at 1-17)

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter – which included transcripts of the hearing conducted on February 19, March 11, and March 18, 2010 – the Commissioner, finding the District's exceptions unpersuasive, determines to adopt the decision of the ALJ recommending that the charges against respondent be dismissed.

As noted by the ALJ, the within District certified two sets of tenure charges against respondent, alleging inefficiency, incompetence and unbecoming conduct. Initially, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's determination that the inefficiency charges must be dismissed as a consequence of the District's failure to comply with the procedural requirements attendant to the certification of such charges. Specifically, it is well-established that when a board provides an individual with written notice that it is bringing tenure charges of inefficiency against him or her, the district is required to: provide that individual with a 90-day period in which to correct and overcome the inefficiencies (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16); provide the individual with a modified professional improvement plan (PIP) which addresses the specific charges of inefficiency and comports with the timelines established for correction (N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)4); and render positive assistance to the individual during the 90-day remediation period in an effort to help him or her overcome the inefficiencies. (In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Donald Rowley v. Board of Education of Manalapan-Englishtown, 205 N.J. Super. 65, 72 (App. Div. 1985)). It is uncontested that such legal prescriptions were not undertaken in the instant matter.

Turning to the District's charge of incompetence which alleges "for several years Mr. Kavet has regularly made up grades for students and placed them in his grade book, as documented by students' work folders in comparison to Mr. Kavet's grade book," (Initial Decision at 9), based on past case law on this particular charge, the Commissioner is in full agreement with the ALJ – for the reasons presented on pages 9-10 of his decision – that the District has failed to sustain this charge.

Finally, after full consideration of the District's tenure charges of unbecoming conduct and the proofs advanced in support of them, the Commissioner agrees – for the reasons presented by the ALJ on pages 10-11 of his decision – that the District has failed to sustain its burden of establishing these charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence, necessitating their dismissal.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL dismissing the instant tenure charges is adopted as the final decision in this matter. It is hereby ordered that Randall N. Kavet be reinstated to his tenured position and reimbursed for back pay and emoluments withheld, less mitigation, as a consequence of these charges.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

Nancy I. Oxfeld, Esq., for respondent, Randall N. Kavet (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 3, 2010 Decided: June 14, 2010

BEFORE IMRE KARASZEGI, JR., ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The School District of the City of New Brunswick (District), brought tenure charges against Randall N. Kavet, a special education teacher, on October 9, 2009, alleging inefficiency (failure to follow lesson plans), incompetence (failure to substantiate student grades), and behavior unbecoming (failure to meet the goals of multiple sixty-day improvement plans). On November 17, 2009, the District suspended Kavet without pay, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. On December 12, 2009, additional tenure charges of incompetence and behavior unbecoming a professional for the period of September 4, 2009, through November 16, 2009, were brought against Kavet by the District. On January 19, 2010, Kavet was again suspended without pay. Through his counsel, respondent filed an Answer on November 30, 2009, and January 26, 2010, respectively, denying the charges as alleged and raising several affirmative defenses.

Upon receipt of Kavet's Answer on November 30, 2009, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes referred the tenure charges to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on December 1, 2009, as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. I established a discovery and hearing schedule in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.1. Upon receipt of Kavet's Answer on January 26, 2010, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes referred the additional tenure charges to the OAL on February 18, 2010. The hearing commenced on February 19, 2010, and continued on March 11, 2010, and March 18, 2010. The record closed on May 3, 2010, after the receipt of transcripts and post-hearing briefs.

Jeremiah Clifford testified on behalf of the District. Prior to his current position as principal of the District's Woodrow Wilson School, he held both teaching and supervisory positions at the District's Livingston Elementary School. From the time that Kavet was transferred to the Livingston School in 2005 until the 2008-2009 school year, Clifford was his supervisor. Clifford's duties included the observation and evaluation of staff including Kavet. Clifford evaluated Kavet and found his evaluations were "not good." Specifically, Clifford found Kavet to be "deficient in instruction, in planning and in classroom management areas." Kavet was given sixty-day improvement plans detailing areas that "he was to work on."

Clifford testified that Kavet failed to comply with the District's student-grading policy, which required that students' grades be entered in a grade book on a "weekly or bi-weekly basis." Clifford stated that as principal, he allowed teachers to use either an electronic or paper grade book. Beginning with Kavet's March 24, 2006, evaluation, a specific recommendation for improvement noted that a "grading key" was not available. The December 13, 2006, evaluation indicated that Kavet "did not have a grade book" for the first quarter and also failed to provide documentation for his use of an "alternate assessment." Kavet's April 26, 2007, evaluation notes that his "grade book is insufficient." Specifically, "there is no correlation between grades in book and lesson plan assessment." Clifford's June 11, 2007, and October 12, 2007, memos regarding sixty-day improvement plans note that Kavet "did not meet" the respective improvement plan. These two memos similarly highlight various "areas of priority" for the next sixty days; "3. Grade book will be current and submitted on a weekly basis." Clifford stated that by the February 4, 2008, evaluation, Kavet "got worse." Clifford added that Kavet "put grades in" but could not produce the "back up documentation, the actual exams" for student assessments.

Clifford also testified that Kavet had problems performing the student assessment for the individual education plan (IEP). These problems included a failure to submit paperwork in a "timely fashion" prior to an IEP meeting and a failure to provide documentation for the paperwork that he did submit. Clifford stated that during the eligibility meeting for one of his fifth grade students, N.F., Kavet indicated that the child was using a phonics workbook. Clifford noted that the phonics workbook was not part of the fifth-grade curriculum. Clifford maintained that Kavet failed to read his students' IEPs at the start of the school year. This was specifically exemplified by Kavet's failure to mainstream student K.A. for language arts literacy, though K.A.'s IEP, according to Clifford, required such mainstreaming.

Additionally, Clifford recalled a classroom observation he made of Kavet on December 13, 2006. Clifford noted various "writings" on the classroom wall with references to "water balloon bombs," "guns," "alcohol to soothe toothaches." He believed that these writings were not appropriate for "second, third and fourth grade students."

Kathryn Schneekloth, principal of the Livingston School since September 2008 and former vice-principal of the same school since 2005, testified on behalf of the District. Schneekloth stated that the Livingston School has one special education self-contained class. Her responsibilities included training the teachers on any new curricula and technology. She would also provide support to the teachers in order to address any individual improvement plans. In this regard, she had direct involvement with Kavet.

Schneekloth stated that Kavet did not produce lesson plans or grade books during her tenure as vice-principal. She developed a sixty-day improvement plan for Kavet in September 2008 in light of his previous evaluations. This improvement plan required Kavet to read the students' IEP, complete lesson plans in accordance with District policy, maintain and submit grade books on a weekly basis. Schneekloth indicated that during this period, the students' IEPs were placed in the "RealTime database." This database "integrates all student data including individual instructional plans, the attendance and the grade book." RealTime also records every time a teacher views the database. Schneekloth testified, "I believe I have documentation somewhere to show that he didn't go into it until . . . mid-October to see what-how-where he was supposed to be instructing his students on the IEP." As to the requirement to complete lesson plans, Schneekloth indicated that Kavet was required to submit online lesson plans to her. Kavet "did submit them as required, but they were not up to standard . . . ." She elaborated by noting that Kavet's lesson plans did not "differentiate" the instruction or what "levels" the individual students were on. Kavet also did not "show the follow-up or how his paraprofessionals were engaged with the students."

In addition to the student IEPs, student grade books were also part of the District's RealTime database. Kavet also failed to enter grades into the RealTime database for "weeks at a time." When grades did appear, Kavet could not provide the "documentation" to Schneekloth to substantiate those grades. She advised Kavet as to the priority of maintaining an accurate and updated grade book in both the December 3, 2008, and February 9, 2009, sixty-day improvement plans. She also noted in her January 7, 2009, and April 27, 2009, sixty-day improvement plan reviews that Kavet's maintenance of an updated student grade book was not satisfactory. Although there was an occasion when Kavet did enter student grades in the computer for the period September 25, 2009, through mid-November 2009, she was unable to match the grades to the lesson plans. Without any "matching documentation," Schneekloth believed the grades were "fictitious."

Schneekloth stated that she had scheduled meetings with Kavet every Wednesday at 9:45 a.m. during the 2008-2009 school year in order to address his improvement plans and evaluations. She added that Kavet was absent for sixteen of those meetings. Because of Kavet's lack of effort in meeting the requirements of the sixty-day improvement plans and his lack of significant progress, Schneekloth recommended the withholding of his increment for the 2009-2010 school year.

Mary Egan, assistant superintendant for curriculum and instruction, testified on behalf of the District. She became involved with Kavet in March 2009 at the request of Principal Schneekloth. Since the District was using a new grading system to input grades into the interim reports and report cards, one of Egan's responsibilities was to insure that principals were able to verify the report cards. Egan learned that Kavet had failed to use the grading-system technology and provide documentation for the grades he submitted. On March 17, 2009, Egan memorialized her conversation with Kavet, specifically noting the absence of grades in the grade book for the third quarter and no documentation of student assessment. Egan stated that Kavet did not advise her of any problems with the RealTime grading-system technology.

Richard Kaplan, superintendant of the New Brunswick School District, testified that he was involved in Kavet's reassignment as a special education tenured teacher to the Livingston School. He initially became aware of Kavet's poor performance from the teacher evaluations that he read. Kaplan stated that he observed poster board with content dealing with "drugs, alcohol, and even perhaps weapons" in Kavet's fourth or fifth grade classroom on one occasion. Kaplan stated that the poster's content was "inappropriate." After numerous other complaints of Kavet's performance from Clifford, a withholding of increment was approved for the 2007-2008 school year by the District.

Mary Miskewitz, supervisor of child study teams, testified for the District. She is responsible for monitoring the child study teams and their respective development of IEPs. Miskewitz stated that teachers have direct input in the development of a child's IEP. In the case of student, J.B., Miskewitz indicated that Kavet participated in the child's IEP meeting but provided a "minimal assessment" of the child. She stated that the complaints from child study team members were that Kavet "came to the meeting, he didn't have a lot of information about kids." Miskewitz testified that she did not sit on any of the IEP meetings that Kavet attended. She does, however, "read and review every IEP" that goes through her office.

Randall Kavet testified on his own behalf. Kavet began his employment with the District on September 1, 1987, as a special education teacher. He has a master's degree in elementary education/special education from Adelphi University in New York and possesses teaching certificates in New York, in the area of special classes of the emotionally handicapped, and in New Jersey, for teacher of the handicapped.

Kavet stated that at the time he was assigned to the Livingston School in 2004-2005, he was assigned to teach a self-contained special education class consisting of grades three, four and five. He was responsible for teaching language arts, math, science and social studies with the assistance of one or two paraprofessional teaching aides. He would also participate in IEP meetings. Kavet maintained that "tasks were completed" and that classwork was checked, graded and assessed. When questioned, he acknowledged problems with the way his grades were maintained;

> A. I am not as you could probably attest – I am not a paperwork person to be kind. I am really not a paperwork person. Sometimes I would record, for an example, I would grade an assignment, but I would not log in appropriately to the computer system so the grade – so the date that the grade would be posted would not connect to the grade of the particular test and similar things.
> Q. And how about maintaining paperwork of your students, was there ever any issue about that?
>
> A. Periodically, yes.

Q. And what was that?

A. Addressing basically organization. There might have been some papers that were not placed in the appropriate folder and – and things along those lines.

Kavet stated that he had problems with the RealTime computer program. He had grades "disappear" and, at times, he could not "open" RealTime to complete daily attendance.

Kavet testified that he would send the child study team "survey requests" and observations of student classroom performance. He did not receive any complaints from either the child study team or the director of pupil personnel or the director of special education that he was not providing student assessments for the IEP. Kavet also indicated that he would read the students' IEPs at the beginning of the school year. When the IEP became part of the RealTime database, Kavet stated that he could access the IEP in "two or three different ways."

Kavet recalled the "water balloon bomb" poster as an effort to brainstorm with his students so that they "feel that writing as a form of expression is good, it's interesting, it's riveting, it's something that is a fun thing to do." He also recalled a writing sample that he wrote for a language arts presentation. Kavet acknowledged that the writing sample may not have been appropriate in terms of mentioning a gun; however, "we had some very street savvy kids in that room and it was to make the writing exercise riveting, to make it interesting, to make it real."

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon a consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS:

1. Kavet is a tenured special education teacher in the School District of the City of New Brunswick and has been employed by the District since September 1, 1987.
2. During the 2004-2005 school year, Kavet taught students in grades three, four and five in a special education self-contained classroom at the Livingston School.
3. On or about December 13, 2006, Kavet had "model writings" and posters in his classroom containing references to water-balloon bombs, guns and alcohol.
4. Beginning with a March 24, 2006, evaluation through an April 27, 2009, sixty-day improvement plan, Kavet was given numerous notices related to grading; no grading key available (March 24, 2006), no grade book for first quarter and failure to provide documentation for alternate assessments (December 13, 2006), insufficient grade book with no correlation between grades and lesson-plan assessment (April 26, 2007), need to keep grade book current and submit on a weekly basis (June 11, 2007, and October 12, 2007), back-up documentation could not be produced for grades (February 4, 2008), need to maintain accurate and updated grade books (December 3, 2008, and February 9, 2009), unsatisfactory maintenance of updated grade book (January 7, 2009, and April 27, 2009).
5. Kavet posted student grades for the period September 25, 2009, through mid-November 2009.
6. Kavet was absent for sixteen regularly scheduled meetings with Principal Schneekloth during the 2008-2009 school year.
7. Kavet received increment withholding for the 2007-2008 and 2009-2010 school years.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

The District has brought tenure charges against Kavet alleging inefficiency, incompetence and behavior unbecoming. Under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, tenured teaching staff members may be dismissed for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause. Where, as here, the charge is inefficiency, the District shall inform the employee with specificity of the allegations and that, unless such inefficiencies are corrected within a minimal ninety-day period, it intends to certify those charges of inefficiency with the Commissioner of Education. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)(1) and (3). The District must also provide a modification of the individual professional improvement plan to the employee at the commencement of the ninety-day probation period to assure that such plan addresses the specific charges of inefficiency. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)(4). In this case, the District did not present any evidence that it complied with the dictates of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c) as it relates to the charge of inefficiency. I therefore CONCLUDE that the District has failed to comply with the procedural requirements as to the tenure charges of inefficiency.

The District bears the burden of proving the charges upon which it relies by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). The statutory status of a tenured employee may not be lightly removed. Tenure protects educators from arbitrary dismissal for "unfounded, flimsy or political reasons." Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63, 73 (1982). It is designed to aid in the establishment of "a competent and efficient school system" by affording teachers a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service. Viemeister v. Prospect Park Bd. of Educ., 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949).

The District also asserts that the tenure charges of incompetence should be upheld because "for several years Mr. Kavet has regularly made up grades for students and placed them in his grade book, as documented by students' work folders in comparison to Mr. Kavet's grade book." As the Commissioner and State Board of Education has indicated:

> The charge of incompetence, as distinguished from the charge of inefficiency, presumes that the proofs in support of the charge will demonstrate that respondent is so lacking in competency to perform the responsibilities of classroom teacher that the requirements of the 90-day improvement period, required for a charge of inefficiency . . . would be a useless exercise . . . . Incompetence requires proof that the > affected person regardless of the assistance offered by certified supervisors, does not have the ability or capacity to be an effective teacher.

As indicated in the Findings of Fact, Kavet was given numerous notices related to grading. However, I CONCLUDE that the District did not present any evidence to substantiate that Kavet's problems with grading impacted his ability or capacity to be an effective teacher. In addition, the District's contention that Kavet "regularly made up grades" should be evidenced by poor-student-test scores or a lack of learning by Kavet's students. I CONCLUDE that the District failed to substantiate either.

Unbecoming conduct is not defined in the statute. However, the courts have stated that "the touchstone is fitness to discharge the duties and functions of one's office or position." In re Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13, 29 (App. Div. 1974), certif. denied, 65 N.J. 292 (1974). For this purpose, the Commissioner considers the nature and gravity of offenses, evidence of provocation, extenuation, or aggravation, and any harm or injury to discipline and the proper administration of the school system. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967). The tenure charges of behavior unbecoming, as referred to by the District, are primarily based on the District's assertion that Kavet failed to meet the goals outlined by "numerous 60-day improvement plans." The October 9, 2009, tenure charge of behavior unbecoming notes that Kavet is "habitually unprepared" at IEP meetings. The charge also indicates that "model writings" on chart paper in Kavet's classroom were inappropriate. The December 12, 2009, tenure charge for behavior unbecoming includes the District's assertion that Kavet was "habitually absent" on the days that meetings were scheduled with Principal Schneekloth.

I have carefully considered the nature and gravity of these charges, any extenuating or aggravating circumstances, and the effect on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system. I CONCLUDE that the evidence presented by the District regarding the sixty-day improvement plan lacks sufficient specificity to determine whether any itemized goal listed in the plans has been accomplished by the time of any subsequent improvement plan. In addition, the fact that Kavet did not attend sixteen scheduled meetings with Schneekloth during the 2008-2009 school year or had certain "model writings" and posters in his classroom on December 13, 2006, fails to indicate, without additional evidence, any harm or injury to discipline and the proper administration of the school system. The assertion that Kavet is habitually unprepared at IEP meetings and lacks student-work samples was also not substantiated by any evidence. I therefore CONCLUDE that the District has not substantiated, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, the charge of unbecoming conduct.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that all tenure charges brought against Randall N. Kavet on October 9, 2009, and December 12, 2009, be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. INITIAL DECISION
SETTLEMENT
AGENCY REF. NO. 11-1/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF RAMIRO BORJA, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF PATERSON, PASSAIC COUNTY.

Sidney A. Sayovitz, Esq., for petitioner (Schenck, Price, Smith & King, attorneys)

Robert M. Schwartz, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: July 8, 2010 Decided: July 23, 2010

BEFORE CAROL I. COHEN, ALJ:

On January 19, 2010, the School District of the City of Paterson ("the District") certified tenure charges against the respondent, Ramiro Borja, a tenured principal employed by the District. Borja filed an answer denying the charges on February 1, 2010. The New Jersey Department of Education transmitted the charges to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") on February 4, 2010, having deemed the charges sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary.

The Board filed charges of unbecoming conduct (Misuse of District Teaching Staff Members Instructional time utilizing instructional assistants in non-instructional capacities; falsifying documents; inappropriate use of substitute teachers; misappropriation of District funds; using instructional aides to cover classes without certified teachers and other just cause against Borja. These charges pertained to the discharge of his duties as a principal.

On the date that the hearing was to commence, April 16, 2010, the parties engaged in settlement discussions and reached an agreement, which was filed with me on July 13, 2010, at which time the record was closed. The Superintendent of the State Operated School District approved the settlement terms.

Based upon a review of the attached settlement agreement, I FIND as follows:

1. The nature of the charges has been documented by the submission of a Statement of Charges and Certificate of Determination to the Commissioner of Education.

2. Pursuant to the settlement agreement, Mr. Borja will resign from his position of employment effective on the day that the settlement is approved by the Commissioner of Education.

3. Mindful that the Paterson School District is an Abbott District with stringent budget limitations, it is in the best interests of the parties and the public to resolve this matter without risking an uncertain conclusion after protracted and costly litigation. The settlement is financially prudent. Although Mr. Borja will receive the equivalent of one year of salary, he was suspended effective January 19, 2010. In accordance with law, he would have resumed a fully paid status after 120 days of suspension.

4. The proposed settlement agreement is with the consent of all parties.

5. By the terms of the proposed settlement agreement, Mr. Borja has entered into this agreement with a full understanding of his rights.

6. Furthermore, the agreement stipulates that Mr. Borja fully acknowledges that he understands that additional proceedings may occur before the State Board of Examiners.

7. The agreement does not contain any provisions which restrict public access under the Open Public Records Act.

I therefore CONCLUDE that this settlement agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and that approval of this settlement is in the public interest.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

GARY GOLDBERG,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF SALEM AND AMIOT PATRICK MICHEL,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENTS.	:

This controversy arose in March 2009, when respondent Amiot Patrick Michel – the Superintendent of the respondent Salem Board of Education's district – advised petitioner that his position, Director of Programs and Projects, would be eliminated and his employment would be terminated at the end of the school year. This advisement was repeated in letters from Michel dated May 5, 2009 and May 14, 2009, respectively.

It appears undisputed, however, that the respondent board of education never acted to eliminate the position. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) was therefore correct in determining that, as a matter of law and pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, petitioner's position was never abolished. See, Initial Decision at 15-16. Similarly, the Commissioner agrees with the ALJ that since petitioner was a tenured administrator in respondent's district and no tenure charges were brought against him, his employment was not, as a matter of law, terminated. See, Initial Decision at 16.

Accordingly, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's recommendation that petitioner be returned to the position of Director of Programs and Projects, with back pay and benefits. Further, if the Director of Programs and Projects position is eliminated, petitioner, as a tenured administrator in the district, will be entitled to other administrative positions – such as International Baccalaureate Program Director – where those positions are held by untenured individuals or individuals with less seniority within the categories of positions that petitioner has held in the district.[1]

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Date of Decision: 8/23/10

Date of Mailing: 8/24/10

[1] In responding to petitioner's contention that he is eligible for certain supervisory positions, the ALJ found that he may be eligible for the position of Supervisor of Mathematics and Science. A challenge to that finding is the only issue raised in respondent's exceptions. The Commissioner need not reach this specific issue, as it is resolved by his holding in the instant case.

[2] This decision may be appealed to the Appellate Division of Superior Court pursuant to P.L. 2008, c. 36.

BEFORE BRUCE M. GORMAN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner appealed the termination of his employment with respondent's school district.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The appellant requested a fair hearing and the matter was transmitted to the OAL on June 1, 2009, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. The matter was heard on June 10, 2010, and the record remained open until June 24, 2010, for final submissions from the parties.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

This case involves the alleged reduction in force (RIF) of a tenured administrator in the Salem City school system.

Petitioner testified on his own behalf. Petitioner has thirty-two years experience as a teacher and an administrator in various New Jersey school systems. He holds a Bachelor's Degree in mathematics and education from Rutgers University and a Masters Degree from Rowan University.

In 1999, petitioner returned to his alma mater as Director of Curriculum, Instruction and Technology. In that capacity, he was charged with multiple duties. He helped develop curriculum and coordinated the process of its implementation. He mentored teaching staff members in professional development. He was also in charge of all instructional technology. He supervised a staff of fifteen people. His specific duties were more particularly set forth in his job description (P-3).

In 2007, Amiot Patrick Michel was hired as the new Superintendent of respondent Salem Board of Education's school district (Board). Shortly thereafter, Michel assumed the duties of Curriculum Coordinator and transferred petitioner to the position of Director of Programs and Projects. At trial, no one testified how that transfer was effectuated.

Petitioner's job description reveals his duties as Director of Programs and Projects were as follows (P-2):

1. Develop and implement a comprehensive multi-year strategic plan, which addresses all components of school district operations and functions deemed appropriate for the plan from the outset and for the annual review of the district strategic plan and subsequent plans to guide the district's priority work.

2. Plan and implement a performance review component, which connects administration and staff in meeting benchmarks of the strategic plan.

3. Coordinate the process of submitting progress reports on the Strategic/Corrective Action Plan to the appropriate agency.

4. Seek and apply for grants with input from the Principals, and other administrative staff. Oversee all grant programs, e.g., NCLB, Perkins, Reading First, etc...in the district and complete each corresponding projects and reports for each of the grants.

5. Contribute to County Curriculum Consortium projects.

6. District Test Coordinator.

7. Responsible for maintaining files of records to support all federal, state, county and local reports associated with the responsibilities of the position.

8. Coordinate updating and ongoing three-year cycle review of all existing Board policies and Board Policy Book and maintain the existence of current policies and the inclusion of new policies on the districts shared drive.

9. Disseminate information to staff including: policy for dispensing of medicine for maintaining a drug-free environment. Prepare information for parents including: notification of pupil rights, Salem Nuclear Generating Center possible emergency procedures and family life education.

10. Responsible for district calendar coordination and communication, as well as, in coordination with administrative team, PD/in-service days.

11. Responsible for coordination of private school participation and application process for support programs such as Title I, Title II, Title IV, Title VI and PX 192-193.

12. Responsible for coordination of articulation between the district's school nurses regarding the district's health services.

13. Responsible for the reporting and for the contracting for the disposition of medical waste.

14. Responsible for the Impact Aid Application/Federal Aid Surveys.

15. Responsible for the Homeless Program.

16. Responsible for maintenance and recording of Home Schooling and Home-Bound Instruction.

17. Coordinate Violence and Vandalism reporting for state purposes.

18. Assist principals in the development of school-level plans, which guide the priority work of the schools. These plans should meet the requirements of other programs such as QSAC and CAPA.

19. Responsible for a minimum of 10 newsletters throughout the year.

20. Prepare reports for the Strategic Plan/CAPA process. Present an annual report to the Superintendent of Schools.

21. In collaboration with the administrative team, the compilation and submission of the ASSA, Fall Report, School Register Summary and Certificated Staff Report.

22. Responsible for reporting statistical information for the Safe and Drug Free Communities Act (SDFSCA) and ATOD program impact information.

23. District School Uniform Coordinator.

24. Mentor/Novice Teacher Program and Local Professional Plan Development Plan Coordinator.

*Any other duties as may be assigned by the Superintendent for the good of the district.

In his testimony, petitioner emphasized that as Director of Programs and Projects, he was involved in the coordination of State interactions, including all State-audited programs. He served as the District Compliance Officer. He applied for grants for the District, including the ARRA Grant recently created by the Federal government. Petitioner stated the first purpose of the ARRA Grant was to save or create jobs.

On March 28, 2009, petitioner received a letter from Superintendent Michel advising him that his employment with the District would be terminated at the end of the school year because of economics and change in administrative responsibilities. Petitioner was dismayed by the letter and sought a meeting with the Board of Education. That meeting occurred in early April 2009. Petitioner presented his position to the Board, but nothing came of the meeting.

On May 7, 2009, petitioner received another letter from Superintendent Michel dated May 5, 2009 (P-4). That letter again stated that:

> Please be advised at the board of Education meeting on May 13, 2009, which will be held in the Salem High School Library at 6 p.m., the Salem City School District, unfortunately cannot offer you an employment contract in your current position for the 2009-2010 school year.

The letter went on to say:

> At this time, due to financial constraints it is necessary to exercise a reduction in force of staff. As such I will be recommending that the Board eliminate your current position.

In his capacity as an administrator, petitioner attended all Board meetings. Consequently, he was present at the May 13, 2009, meeting of the Salem City Board of Education. He heard no action taken terminating his employment, and left the meeting relieved.

A review of the Board minutes for that meeting (P-6) confirms petitioner's testimony. Nowhere do the minutes reflect a Resolution abolishing the position of Director of Programs and Projects.

Notwithstanding the failure of the Board of Education to take any action abolishing the position of Director of Programs and Projects at its May 13 meeting, on May 14, 2009, Superintendent Michel sent petitioner another letter (P-5) which stated as follows:

> I regret to inform you that in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 and formal action taken by the Board of Education at a meeting on May 13, 2009, the Board of Education has deemed it advisable to abolish your position for reasons of economy, reduction in the number of pupils, change in the administration or supervisory organization and/or other good cause. Pursuant to N.J. 18A:28-12 you shall be and remain upon a preferred eligible list in the order of seniority whenever a vacancy occurs in a position for which you are qualified and you shall be reemployed if and when such vacancy occurs. If I can be of any assistance during this difficult time, please do not hesitate to contact me at either extension 4220 or via email Michel@salemnj.org. I will also be available to meet with you at any time to discuss any concerns that you may have.

Petitioner compared the statement of reasons contained in the May 14 letter to the statute, and determined that Dr. Michel had "cut and paste" the language in the letter directly from N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9.

Petitioner was aware that Dr. Michel was in the process of creating a position called International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator. Petitioner met with Dr. Michel and asked that he be considered for the position, as he believed the duties to be substantially similar to those he was currently performing. According to petitioner, Dr. Michel stated, "Why would I appoint you to that. I am trying to get rid of you." Petitioner testified that Dr. Michel then told him, "You're not working here next year." He instructed petitioner that if he was found on school property on July 1, Dr. Michel would have him arrested.

Petitioner testified that Dr. Michel then hired Patricia Null for the position of International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator. The job description for that position (P-17) sets forth the following duties:

> • Advise candidates, families, teachers, and administrators of all services provided by the IBO – Liaisons with IBNA, IBCA, IBO and MARC. Reviews the Vade Mecum, IB Coordinator Notes, IBNET, and OCC/Coordinator sites for relevant information and updates.

- Monitor graduation requirements for all IB students.

- Conduct exit interviews with all IB students and work with teachers to improve delivery of instruction.

- Work with IB students with personal, social, health and academic issues.

- Develop statistical reports for the building principal, district office, and Department of Education.

- Responsible for monitoring the NCLB program and the Perkins Grant.

- Perform other duties as assigned by superintendent.

Petitioner reviewed the list of duties and testified that as Director of Curriculum and Director of Programs and Projects, he had performed all but three of the listed functions. The three which he had not performed were:

- Train Extended Essay supervisors and teachers as needed.

- Establish honor boards and address honor code violations for IB students.

- Manage 504 plans for IB candidates.

Petitioner did note that his own son had a 504 plan, so he has some familiarity with that process. He also stated that although he had never dealt specifically with an International Baccalaureate Programe, the program was conceptually similar to any number of programs he had handled in his capacity of Director of Programs and Projects. Petitioner testified that most of the tasks in this job description were curriculum based, a function which he performed when he was Director of Curriculum and Instruction.

Petitioner identified the Report of Certificated Staff as of October 15, 2008, issued by the New Jersey Department of Education (DOE) (P-20). He testified that the District must annually submit a list of all personnel to the Department by October 15, and that the DOE then memorializes the list. According to the October 15, 2008 report (P-20), petitioner was listed as an administrator by virtue of the code "A" set forth at the extreme right-hand side of the report. His job code was "0500." According to the job code listing issued by the Department of Education (P-22), code 0500 stands for Director of Curriculum and Instruction. It is instructive to note that despite petitioner's transfer to the position of Director of Programs and Projects, as of October 15, 2008, the Board was still listing him as Director of Curriculum and Instruction. That designation raises the question as to whether the Board ever took formal action transferring petitioner to the position of Director of Programs and Projects. The failure of the Board to take formal action abolishing the position at its May 13, 2009, meeting only heightens that concern.

Petitioner then identified the Report of Certificated Staff Personnel as of October 15, 2009. According to that report, the International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator, Patricia Null, was also listed as an administrator. Her job code was "0399." A review of the job code list (P-22) reveals that "0399" is not the job code for International Baccalaureate Programme Coordinator, but rather is the job code for Supervisor of Special Projects.

Petitioner stated that Dr. Michel advised him that the basis for his termination was a letter from the County Superintendent advising that the Salem school district had an inappropriate ratio of administrators to pupils. Given that Dr. Michel then hired Patricia Null, petitioner questioned how his termination had alleviated that problem. The hiring of Null resulted in the District maintaining the same number of administrators after his termination as it had employed before his termination.

Petitioner argued that, aside from the position of International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator, he had seniority over other administrators in the system and should not have been the person RIFed. The District maintains three supervisory positions dealing with academic concerns: Mathematics Supervisor K-12; Language Arts and Literacy Supervisor 5-12; and Language Arts and Literacy Supervisor Pre-K–4. He noted that the only qualifications for these positions set forth in the job description

(P-13) are a Masters Degree in Curriculum or School Administration, a valid New Jersey Certificate as a Supervisor, at least five years experience in public schools, and such other qualifications as the Board of Education may find appropriate and acceptable. Petitioner testified that he has a Teaching Certificate in mathematics (P-14). The present Supervisor of Mathematics, George Franks, was appointed to the position on August 10, 2006 (P-12). Accordingly, petitioner has seniority over Franks.

Petitioner conceded that he does not hold a state certification in any of the disciplines involved with language, arts and literacy, although he contended that he meets the criteria set forth in the job description (P-13). Petitioner further argued that he should have bumping rights for the position of Director of Special Services. That position was only filled in 2008, and petitioner met the stated requirements of a Masters Degree and a New Jersey Principal or Supervisor Certificate (P-10). Petitioner admitted he had no first-hand experience in teaching or supervising special education, although he contended that he had assisted from time-to-time in the classroom.

On cross-examination, petitioner agreed that he has never been employed in the Salem City School District as a principal, vice-principal, supervisor, or teacher. He also acknowledged that he has no certification in special education.

Petitioner was shown a page from a document attached to a letter from counsel for respondent (R-20). This page contained a list of four names, all of whom were non-tenured administrators. Petitioner's name did not appear on the list. Petitioner stated he did not know what the list was. No witness for the Board ever identified or explained the nature of this document.

On cross-examination, petitioner was asked if he believed Dr. Michel had a vendetta against him. Petitioner responded he thought he made Dr. Michel uncomfortable. Petitioner had been a leader within the District. He did not always agree with Dr. Michel's actions. He believed Dr. Michel felt challenged when petitioner did not agree with him.

The Board presented Dr. Michel as its only witness. Dr. Michel previously served as Director of Curriculum and Instruction in the Haddon Heights School District for a period of two and one-half years. On February 28, 2007, he was appointed Superintendent of the Salem School District. Upon taking office, he also took control of curriculum, and transferred petitioner to Special Programs and Projects. He did not specify how he effectuated that transfer.

Dr. Michel testified he was interested in upgrading the educational level of the Salem School District. He introduced the International Baccalaureate Programe in order to facilitate that process. The program had its genesis in Sweden, where it was used to education the children of diplomats. Dr. Michel created the position of International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator and personally wrote the job description (P-17). He asserted that the International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator had no responsibilities outside of that program.

Dr. Michel testified he determined to eliminate the position of Director of Programs and Projects upon his receipt of a letter from the Salem County Superintendent of Schools dated February 20, 2009 (R-16). That letter stated that the County Superintendent had identified areas of excess administrative and non-instructional expenditures. Dr. Michel particularly noted Indicators 8 and 18, which stated:

> * * *
> • Indicator 18 Ratio of Students to Administrative Personnel is less than the State average

Under threat of administrative penalty from the County Superintendent, Dr. Michel determined to reduce the size of the administrative staff. As a result, he decided to eliminate the position of Director of Programs and Projects held by petitioner.

Dr. Michel asserted that the International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator position was not an administrative position, but only a "coordinator." He argued that "coordinators" do not count as administrators for purposes of assessing an administrative penalty against the District pursuant to the County Superintendent's letter (R-16). He offered no evidence other than his own opinion to support his contention that a "coordinator" is not an administrator.

Dr. Michel admitted that the State of New Jersey offers no certification for a "coordinator." He also conceded that Patricia Null holds an administrator's certificate, but he insisted that Null was working as International Baccalaureate Programme Coordinator under her teacher's certificate, despite the fact that, as he conceded, Null is a twelve-month employee. Dr. Michel could not explain why Null was denoted as an administrator on the Report of Certificated Staff as of October 15, 2009 (P-21).

Dr. Michel identified an organizational flow chart for the Salem City School District (R-24). He opined that the flow chart showed the International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator to be on the same level as a teacher. He claimed the chart demonstrated that said position is not administrative in nature.

What the chart actually shows is five positions that are directly answerable to the Superintendent: School Business Administrator, Principals, Supervisors, Director of Special Services, and International Baccalaureate Coordinator. The International Baccalaureate Coordinator is located on the chart at a level lower the other positions, with a longer line running down from the Superintendent of Schools to make it appear that the position is on the same level as the teaching staff. If this subterfuge is ignored the chart clearly shows that International Baccalaureate Coordinator is on the same level as the other administrators.

Dr. Michel offered no explanation of the methodology he used to abolish the position of Director of Programs and Projects. He admitted that the May 13, 2009 minutes reflect no resolution abolishing that position. He offered no other explanation for how the elimination of the position was effectuated.

On cross-examination, Dr. Michel admitted that he knew Patricia Null prior to his employment by the Salem School District. She previously worked in programming at Camden Technical High School. Dr. Michel had a relationship with her from attending county curriculum meetings.

On cross-examination, Dr. Michel continued to insist that Null was not an administrator. Although he admitted she was denoted as an administrator on the Department of Education Report of Certificated Staff as of October 15, 2009 (P-21), he contended that she was listed as a coordinator in the school budget and asserted that the school budget was the controlling document. He further conceded that for the 2009-2010 school year, Null was paid a salary of $99,950. He offered no evidence placing Null's salary on the teacher's salary guide.

Dr. Michel admitted that despite the statement contained in his letter to petitioner of May 14, 2009 (P-5), he did not maintain a re-eligibility list in accordance with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A-28-12. He further admitted that petitioner was qualified to perform any administrative job. He did not address petitioner's qualifications for the coordinator positions or the child study team position.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The Board's case is premised on two arguments: that it abolished petitioner's position for economy, and that he has no bumping rights into any other position. The Board's case fails on both counts.

FAILURE TO ABOLISH THE POSITION

First and foremost, nothing in the record proves that petitioner's position as Director of Programs and Projects was abolished pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. The Board of Education never passed a resolution abolishing the position; the only document indicating the elimination of petitioner's position is Dr. Michel's letter of May 14, 2009 (P-5).

The proper procedure for abolishing a position under tenure protection was considered in the matter of Marsh v Atlantic City Board of Education, EDU 8582-98, Initial Decision (October 20,1999), modified on other grounds, Comm'r (December 21, 1999), St. Bd. (October 4, 2000) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml> wherein the Court held:

> [t]he Board is required to abolish positions under tenure protection when the position is subject to a RIF. The statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:29-9, provides that:
> Nothing in this title or any other law relating to tenure of service shall be held to limit the right of any board of education to reduce the number of teaching staff members, employed in the district whenever, in the judgment of the board, it is advisable to abolish any such positions for reasons of economy or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district or for other good cause upon compliance with the provisions of this article. (emphasis supplied).
> Reading these two statutes together, N.J.S.A. 18A:27-1 and N.J.S.A. 18A:29-9, it can only lead to the logical conclusion that where a board of education is required to appoint a teaching staff member by a recorded roll call vote of its full membership it, therefore, must vote to abolish a position before it may subject an employee to a RIF.

In short, when he wrote the letter of May 14, 2009 (P-5) terminating petitioner's employment, Dr. Michel engaged in a unilateral action that was outside the scope of his authority. Dr. Michel is not a voting member of the Board of Education and does not have the authority to act in the stead of the Board. Abolishing the Director of Programs and Projects position required action by the Board of Education. Based upon the record, no such action occurred.

Accordingly, petitioner's position was never abolished, and the Board never terminated petitioner's employment.

In its brief, the Board argued that the failure of the Board to rehire petitioner at its May 13, 2009, meeting constituted a termination of his services. Such is not the case. It is undisputed that petitioner has tenure rights in the district as an administrator. His tenure entitles him to perpetual employment until his position is eliminated, he reaches mandatory retirement age, or he engages in conduct that warrants his removal under the tenure law.

In this case, none of the above has occurred. Accordingly, petitioner remains employed as an administrator with the Salem City Board of Education to the present time.

REASONS OF ECONOMY

Given that no reduction in force has occurred in this case, it is not necessary to determine whether the Board has established reasons of economy necessitating the elimination of the Director of Programs and Projects position. Nevertheless, in order to provide a complete record, I will address the issue.

Dr. Michel premised his action on the letter from the Salem County Superintendent of Schools dated February 20, 2009 (R-16). In that letter, the County Superintendent identified "excess administration" in the Salem City school system. The County Superintendent cited two indicators:

> • Indicator 8 Administrative cost per pupil is greater than the State median
> * * *
> • Indicator 18 Ratio of Students to Administrative Personnel is less than the State average

The Board offered no statistical data proving that the administrative cost per pupil had improved as a result of the elimination of petitioner's position. Nor did the Board provide any statistical data showing that the ratio of students to administrative personnel had improved as the result of petitioner's departure from the school system.

The Board's failure to produce such information is understandable, given that the termination of petitioner's employment did not reduce the size of the administrative staff. Dr. Michel attempted to eliminate petitioner's administrative position, but then hired a new administrator, Patricia Null, and created the position of International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator. In his testimony Dr. Michel contended that the International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator was not an administrator, but rather a "coordinator," a position which, he asserted, did not fall under the heading of "administrator." Although he admitted that the new employee, Patricia Null, held an administrator's certification, and that she worked twelve months per year for a salary of $99,950, Dr. Michel insisted that Null was working under her teacher's certification.

Dr. Michel offered no basis for his argument, and the documentation proves otherwise. The report of Certificated Staff as of October 15, 2009 (P-21), a document generated by the New Jersey Department of Education, shows conclusively that Patricia Null is considered an administrator by the State. If the State considers her to be an administrator, then her hiring left the ratio of students to administrative personnel unaffected.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Board has failed to prove the District derived any economic benefit from petitioner's termination. Further, I CONCLUDE that, given the subsequent hiring of Ms. Null to an administrative position, petitioner's removal from the District had no impact on the excess administration identified by the Salem County Superintendent of Schools in his February 20, 2009, letter.

REEMPLOYMENT RIGHTS

Next, assuming a proper RIF did occur here, I CONCLUDE that petitioner had re-employment rights and should have been afforded the position of International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator.

The law regarding reemployment following a reduction in force is set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12, which states in pertinent part:

> If any teaching staff member shall be dismissed as a result of such reduction, such person shall be and remain upon a preferred eligible list in the order of seniority for reemployment whenever a vacancy occurs in a position for which such person shall be qualified and he shall be reemployed by the body causing dismissal...

In Francey v. Board of Education of City of Salem, Salem County, 286 N.J. Super. 354 (App. Div. 1996), the Appellate Division has interpreted the statute to mean the following (360):

> As we perceive them, the tenure protections afforded by the Act are designed to apply to, and protect, a teacher's employment efforts over a period of time with a particular school board of education. Thus, on the one hand, when a teacher is RIF'd, but, during employment with the school board, has earned tenure rights within the scope of a teaching certificate and all endorsements thereon, the teacher is entitled to preferred reemployment only to positions within that certificate and endorsements.

Petitioner was a tenured administrator in the District. Notwithstanding Dr. Michel's assertion to the contrary, the Report of Certificated Staff as of October 15, 2009 establishes beyond question that the International Baccalaureate Program Director is an administrative position requiring an administrator's certification. Accordingly, petitioner's credentials meet the requirements for reemployment under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12, provided he is "qualified."

The Appellate Division, in Francey, supra, went on the define "qualified" as follows (358):

> "Qualified," in its ordinary sense, means: "[to have] complied with the specific requirements or precedent conditions. . . ." Webster's Third New International Dictionary Unabridged 1858 (3d ed. 1981). It is, moreover, well evident that possession of the appropriate certification deems one "qualified" for a vacancy within the context of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12. See Mirandi v. Board of Educ. of West Orange, 1989 S.L.D. 3057, 3062; Bodine v. Board of Educ. of Burlington, Burlington County, 1989 S.L.D. 1053, 1058, aff'd by State Bd. of Educ., 1989 S.L.D. 1064. It is, further, by now clear that "qualified" within the scope of tenure rights means qualified as to the particular position in which a teacher has attained tenure and all other positions within the scope of the teacher's teaching certificate and endorsements thereto, Dennery v. Board of Educ. of Passaic County, supra, 131 N.J. at 634, 638, 622 A.2d 858; Ellicott v. Board of Educ. of Frankford, Sussex County, 251 N.J. Super. 342, 348, 598 A.2d 237 (App.Div.1991), regardless of whether one has actual experience in that area, id. at 348-50, 598 A.2d 237; Capodilupo v. Board of Educ. of West Orange Tp., Essex County, 218 N.J. Super. 510, 513-15, 528 A.2d 73 (App.Div.), certif. denied, 109 N.J. 514, 537 A.2d 1300 (1987).

Therefore, since petitioner was both tenured and certified in the appropriate area at the time of the purported reduction in force, he must be reemployed regardless of whether he has actual experience in that area.

But in fact petitioner has experience in the field. At the time he was removed, he held the position of Director of Programs and Projects. A review of that job description shows conclusively that the International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator would have fallen within the parameters of petitioner's duties.

The job description for the position of Director of Programs and Projects (P-2) shows the duties of that position to be many and varied. Twenty-four duties and responsibilities are listed in the job description, most of which are unrelated. Those unrelated job duties are in keeping with the title - Director of Programs and Projects.

The position was clearly designed as a catchall, a position to fulfill the numerous administrative duties that fall outside the job descriptions of the more traditional administrative positions such as principal, vice-principal, business administrator, and child study team head. Indeed, at the end of the list of duties, the job description states as follows:

> *Any other duties as may be assigned by the Superintendent for the good of the district.

The International Baccalaureate Programe is just such a miscellaneous program/project. It would logically fall within the parameters of the job description of the Director of Programs and Projects. If the Director of Programs and Projects was to be eliminated, then petitioner should have been afforded re-employment rights in the new administrative position of International Baccalaureate Programe Coordinator.

But Dr. Michel did not offer the position to petitioner. Instead, he brought in Ms. Null, who, by his own admission, was a former colleague. Dr. Michel offered no coherent reason for his failure to offer the position to petitioner, thereby lending credence to petitioner's assertion that Dr. Michel sought to rid himself of a possible rival.

Regardless of Dr. Michel's motivation, petitioner unquestionably has reemployment rights in the International Baccalaureate Programme Coordinator position.

Under the standard set forth in Francey, supra, petitioner also has reemployment rights in the Supervisor of Mathematics and Science position. That job requires an administrator's certificate (P-13), but additionally, petitioner holds a certification as a teacher of mathematics. That combination renders him well qualified to perform that position. He is significantly less qualified for the positions of Supervisor of Language Arts and Literacy and Director of Special Services.

CONCLUSION

Petitioner's employment with the Board's school district was never legally terminated. Consequently, I cannot order him reemployed. Instead, I order him reinstated in the position of Director of Programs and Projects, together with retroactive pay. In the event the Commissioner subsequently deems his employment to have been properly terminated, then he must be reemployed as International Baccalaureate Programme Director or, if that position is likewise abolished, Supervisor of Mathematics and Science.

ORDER

I ORDER that petitioner be reinstated to the position of Director of Programs and Projects.

I ORDER that petitioner receive retroactive pay from the date of his separation from the school district to the date of his reinstatement.

I ORDER that in the event the Commissioner subsequently deems his employment as Director of Programs and Projects to have been properly terminated, that he be reemployed as International Baccalaureate Programme Director or, if that position is likewise abolished, Supervisor of Mathematics and Science.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

IN THE MATTER OF THE APPROVAL OF HATIKVAH INTERNATIONAL ACADEMY CHARTER SCHOOL	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION ON MOTION

For Movant, Board of Education of East Brunswick Township: Scarinci Hollenbeck (Matthew J. Giacobbe, Esq.)

For Respondent, Hatikvah International Academy Charter School: Porzio, Bromberg & Newman P.C., (Thomas O. Johnston, Esq.)

Participant: New Jersey Office of the Attorney General, Department of Law & Public Safety, Division of Law (Shannon M. Ryan, DAG)[1]

This matter was opened by way of a motion for emergent relief filed on August 11, 2010,[2] by the Board of Education of East Brunswick Township ("Board"). Therein, the Board seeks a stay of the Commissioner of Education's July 6, 2010 determination – currently on appeal to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court – to grant a charter to Hatikvah International Academy Charter School ("Hatikvah") pursuant to the authority granted him by N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-1 et seq., pending resolution of the appeal. Upon full review of the Board's moving papers and the responsive filings,[3] the Commissioner is compelled to deny the Board's motion.

[1] After the Office of the Attorney General was served in connection with the appeal of this matter on its underlying merits to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court, DAG Ryan requested and was granted participation status on the Board's Motion for Stay.

[2] The Commissioner finds it somewhat incongruous that, notwithstanding the Board's claim that it knew on June 30, 2010 that Hatikvah did not have the requisite enrollment pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:1-2.1(i)(14), it did not file its Motion for Stay until August 11, 2010 – some 36 days after the Commissioner's July 6, 2010 grant of a charter to Hatikvah.

[3] It is noted that subsequent to the close of business on August 24, 2010, the Board faxed a reply to the responsive filings to its motion in this matter. No such submission having been requested, it was not considered herein.

The essence of the Board's underlying appeal to the Appellate Division is that in order to be awarded a final grant of a charter, a charter school must submit certain documentation by June 30 (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-2.1(l)) which includes, inter alia, "[e]vidence of enrollment of at least 90 percent of approved maximum enrollment, as verified by student registrations signed by parent/guardian(s)." (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-2.1(i)(l4)). Hatikvah's approved maximum enrollment is 108; 90% of this number is 97 students. The Board charges that Hatikvah did not have on June 30th – nor does it have to-date – the requisite number of registered students to satisfy this legal requirement. As such, the Board contends that the Commissioner's July 6, 2010 grant of a charter to Hatikvah was premature, unauthorized, and detrimentally prejudices the Board. The Board maintains that the Commissioner must stay his grant of final approval to Hatikvah pending resolution of this appeal.

The standards for granting injunctive relief are well established. (See Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982); incorporated into regulations at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6) The party seeking such relief must demonstrate the existence of each of four separate conditions: 1) the movant will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted; 2) the legal right underlying the movant's claim is settled; 3) the movant has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and 4) when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the movant will suffer greater harm than the other party if the requested relief is not granted. (N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b)) Each of these criteria will be addressed below.

The Board argues that it will suffer irreparable harm absent a stay here because the Board – which is responsible for providing transportation to not only its own students but those of the charter school – is immobilized with respect to sending out bids for transportation absent a finalized number of students for both the District and the charter school. Without these final enrollment figures, arrangements for transportation are impossible to conclude. It urges that, at this late date, disruption in instruction of students and special education services can be contemplated.

Upon review, the Commissioner finds that the reason set forth by the Board does not constitute a demonstration of irreparable harm. According to its filing, East Brunswick has a total enrollment of approximately 9,000 students. Hatikvah students comprise no more than 1 percent of the Board's resident student population, hardly a sufficient number to cause immobility to this District. Moreover, Hatikvah contends that the Board has already submitted 75 student transfer cards to it and, therefore, is fully aware that at least these pupils will require transportation to Hatikvah, yet – according to Hatikvah – they have done nothing to prepare for these students. Based on the foregoing, the Board has failed to demonstrate that it will be irreparably harmed if the grant of a charter to Hatikvah is not stayed.

With regard to the second and third criterion, the probability that it will succeed on the merits of its appeal before the Appellate Division and that the legal right underlying its claim is settled, the Board argues that – as the entity responsible for ensuring the education of students domiciled in the District – any issue which impedes the timely delivery of educational services in the District falls under its purview. Additionally, it maintains, the grant of a charter to Hatikvah renders this charter school eligible for money in excess of $1.2 million. As the entity also responsible for the finances of the District, it is incumbent on the Board before releasing such a sum to this school that it ensures that this charter school is legally eligible for such taxpayer funds. The Board asserts that the facts surrounding this matter are undisputed. The law requires that prior to receiving final approval, a charter school must demonstrate that they have enrolled 90% of their minimum approved student enrollment. It contends that there is no exception to this requirement. In that Hatikvah's current student enrollment is far below the requisite number, the Board urges that the legal right in support of its claim is settled and it will ultimately prevail on the merits of this matter.

The Commissioner finds the Board's arguments in this regard to be without merit. Hatikvah's papers clearly indicate that the material facts in this matter are, indeed, disputed. Hatikvah's enrollment, which comprises the total factual basis for this action, is at issue. The Board claims that the enrollment is 62 pupils and Hatikvah contends that – as of the submission of its materials here – total student enrollment is at least 99 students. The Commissioner, therefore, concludes that the existence of such a material factual dispute precludes the Board from demonstrating a likelihood of success in this matter. Additionally, the legal right underlying the Board's claim is not at all settled. As observed by participant, there is no case law which addresses the 90% of maximum enrollment nor has the Department ever been presented with a challenge to N.J.A.C. 6A:1-2.1(i)14, nor has it ever had a challenge by a school district to the Commissioner's grant of a final charter based on the student enrollment of a charter school. Consequently, the Board cannot establish that there is a settled legal right which entitles it to prevent the opening of a school which has a validly authorized and issued charter.

Finally, as to the balancing of the equities, the Board offers that – absent a stay – it will suffer far more hardship than any experienced by Hatikvah. While Hatikvah will continue its efforts to satisfy its 90% enrollment requirement, the Board – with 9,000 students – will be unable to finalize plans for the 2010-11 school year. It maintains that the inconvenience caused to Hatikvah's approximately 65 enrolled students pales in comparison with the 9,000 student challenge facing the Board. Moreover, the funds allocated by the Department of Education to Hatikvah were for the education of 108 students, thereby allowing Hatikvah to receive funding for more students than actually enroll in the school. The financial harm which would be incurred by the Board in releasing unwarranted funds to a charter school with such a low enrollment far exceeds that incurred by any other party.

The Commissioner finds the Board's arguments in this regard spurious at best. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-12, the Board is only required to pay Hatikvah for the actual number of East Brunswick students enrolled in Hatikvah. It bears no financial responsibility either for students who are not enrolled in Hatikvah or students outside of the East Brunswick School District who attend that school. Finally, it is the public policy of the State and the Department of Education to facilitate and encourage the establishment of charter schools. The Department has been working with Hatikvah since early 2009 with the expectation of Hatikvah opening its school for the 2010-11 school year. Should the Board's request for a stay of the Commissioner's grant of a charter to Hatikvah be granted, it is unlikely that the school would be able to open for the upcoming school year. The educational opportunities offered to its students and supported by the Department would, therefore, be foreclosed. For these reasons, a balancing of the equities in this matter clearly weighs in favor of Hatikvah.

In that the Board has failed to establish any of the requisites in support of its application for stay of the Commissioner's July 6, 2010 grant of a charter to Hatikvah International Academy Charter School, its motion is hereby DENIED.

Petitioner challenged the abolishment of her position as school director and non-renewal of her employment during a reorganization, alleging bad faith and violation of tenure and due process rights. Respondent Board asserted that petitioner's appeal was not timely filed, and filed a motion for summary decision.

The ALJ found that: there are no genuine issues of material fact and the matter is ripe for summary decision; petitioner had sufficient notice by May 19, 2009 of the Board's intent to eliminate her position at the close of the 2008-2009 school year; pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), a petition of appeal must be filed no later than 90 days from the date of receipt of notice of a final action of the Board, which in this case would be August 17, 2009; and petitioner did not file her appeal until October 7, 2009. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board's motion to dismiss the appeal for failure to comply with the 90 day rule.

Upon review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, noting that counsel for petitioner failed to submit exceptions to the ALJ's decision despite being granted two extensions of time to submit same.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The material FACTS are not in dispute, and I FIND as follows:

Petitioner has been employed by the Board since School Year 2004-2005, first as Assistant School Director, and, since August, 2006, as School Director. On May 5, 2009, the Executive Director of the Board informed petitioner that the Board would receive a recommendation to not renew her contract at its May 12, 2009 meeting (R-2, Exhibit E). On that May 12, 2009 meeting, the Board approved a reorganization of the School which eliminated petitioner's position at the close of the school year.

The Executive Director notified petitioner of this action by letter dated May 13, 2009 sent via certified mail (R-2, Exhibit F). The Board's Manager of Human Resources contacted petitioner via email on May 19, 2009 regarding the Board's action and petitioner replied on that date. Petitioner made a number of requests for the vote count and a written determination stating the reasons for the non-renewal. The vote count was provided on May 27, 2009 (R-2, Exhibit J).

On June 20, 2009, petitioner wrote the President of the Board again requesting a written explanation and requesting to address the Board at the June 23, 2009 meeting (R-2, Exhibit K). On June 22, 2010, the Board President replied via email that he would be available to meet with petitioner the following day. Petitioner again reiterated her desire for a written explanation and a meeting with the full board. On June 23, 2009, the Board President wrote petitioner a letter (R-2, Exhibit M) indicating that no written explanation would be supplied and that petitioner was not on the agenda for the Board meeting later that day. He indicated that he did remain available to meet with petitioner.

Petitioner states that she did not receive the June 23, 2009 letter until July 6, 2009, and that it was in an envelope bearing a postmark of July 2, 2009. However, as will be more fully set forth below, any dispute regarding when the June 23, 2009 letter was actually received by Petitioner is immaterial to a resolution of the Board's motion.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The facts involving this motion are not in dispute. This motion is based entirely on the timeliness of the filing of petitioners petition challenging the Board's reorganization pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). While the parties disagree as to whether petitioner was tenured in her position, this fact is not material as to the applicability of the timeline requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) to challenge the Board's reorganization. Therefore, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:12.5(b) and Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 523 (1995), I FIND that there are no genuine issues of material fact and that this matter is ripe for summary decision.

Petitioner has filed her appeal pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1, et. seq. which establishes the procedures for the filing of petitions of appeal before the Commissioner of Education. See: N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. The time for filing is clearly set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3 (i), which provides that a petition of appeal before the Commissioner shall be filed "no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education ... which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing."

Adequate notice has been defined as notice "sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate."Kaprow v. Board of Education of Berkley, 131 N.J. 572, 587 (1993). The record reflects that respondents sent a letter, via certified mail, dated May 13, 2009 (R-2, Exhibit F) indicating that the Board had approved the reorganization of the school and had eliminated petitioner's position. Although proof of receipt was not provided, the record does include email correspondence, dated May 19, 2009, between petitioner and the Board's Manger of Human Resources and & Enrollment Services (R-2, Exhibit I) which make clear that petitioner was aware of the Board's action. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioner had notice "sufficient to inform [her] of some fact that ... she ha[d] a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate," by May 19, 2009. This would require that her petition be filed by August 17, 2009. Petitioner's appeal was filed October 7, 2009 (Petition affixed to transmittal, date stamped by office of Controversies and Disputes), 52 days after the deadline. Petitioner argues that the 90 days should run from the date petitioner was advised that the Board did not intend to further discuss her employment, in a letter dated June 23, 2010 (R-2, Exhibit M). Petitioner states that this correspondence was received by her on July 6, 2009, in an envelope postmarked July 2, 2009 (envelope not provided). Although I have CONCLUDED that this is not the appropriate date to run the 90 days, as petitioner had notice of the Board's actions significantly earlier, it is noted that if this date were utilized, petitioner's appeal would still need to have been filed by October 5, 2009.

It is well established that the ninety day rule is to be strictly applied. See: Kaprow, supra.; Morris-Union Jointure Commission v. Board of Education of the Borough of South River, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 453; Markulin and the Neptune Education Association v. Board of Education of the Township of Neptune, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 406. The rationale for this requirement was articulated by the Kaprow court as follows:

> The [ninety day] limitations period provides a measure of repose, an essential element in the proper and efficient administration of the school laws. It stabilizes the relationship between teachers and the administration. The limitation period gives school districts the security of knowing that administrative decisions regarding the operation of the school cannot be challenged after ninety days. Moreover, because local school boards operate on a cash basis, claims must be file promptly so that the local board can anticipate any back-pay requirements. Kaprow at 582.

Petitioner argues that relaxation of the 90-day rule would be appropriate. While the Commissioner has the discretion to relax the rule, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16, this extraordinary relief has been reserved only for those situations where a substantial constitutional issue is presented or where a matter of significant public interest is involved, beyond that of concern only to the parties. Portee v Board of Education of the City of Newark, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 381,384. Cordell Wise v Board of Education of the City of Trenton, OAL Dkt No. EDU160-00 Final Decision, (September 11, 2000) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. Petitioner's claim has no import or significance beyond her personal employment relationship with the Board, making a relaxation of the rule unwarranted. Petitioner argues that the reorganization was a sham, and done in bad faith, and that the Boards alleged failure to follow the rules in conducting its reorganization justify relaxation of the 90 day rule. This is essentially the basis for the entirety of the matter at hand. The vast majority of cases brought in this forum are formed by an allegation that one party did not follow the rules. Petitioner's argument, taken to its logical conclusion, would require that no petitioner be required to adhere to the rules of procedure in those matters. I CONCLUDE that this argument does not provide a basis for relaxation of the 90 day rule.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Petitioner's petition of appeal should be dismissed as out of time for failure to comply with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-11.3(i).

DECISION AND ORDER

The Board's motion to dismiss the appeal of the petitioner is GRANTED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, a tenured teacher of world languages, challenged respondent Board's action in placing her on an unpaid medical leave of absence. Respondent contended that its action was a proper exercise of its authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4, as a psychiatric examination of petitioner revealed that Diaz was medically unfit to continue her teaching duties. The respondent further contended that it was not obligated to return petitioner to her teaching position, as Diaz had not furnished proof of recovery satisfactory to the Board.

The ALJ identified two issues to be determined in this case: 1) whether the Board properly placed petitioner on a psychiatric leave of absence pursuant to its authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4, and 2) if so, whether the Board's determination that petitioner had not demonstrated satisfactory proof of recovery was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner's request to be transferred from the high school to a middle school teaching assignment was accompanied by a letter from her personal physician which supported Diaz's claims that she was under "extreme duress" and required a transfer as a matter of "medical necessity", therefore, the Board properly directed Diaz to undergo a psychiatric examination in accordance with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2; a mutually agreed-upon psychiatrist, Dr. Gallina, diagnosed petitioner with an adjustment disorder and concluded that Diaz was not fit to remain in the classroom – whether at the high school or middle school level – until she pursued therapy; subsequently, the Board properly placed Diaz on a psychiatric leave of absence; to demonstrate proof of recovery, Diaz later engaged other doctors – a psychiatrist and a psychologist – to evaluate her, resulting in two reports which found petitioner fit for duty. The ALJ concluded that the Board had a reasonable basis for its decision not to accept the reports of Diaz's personal psychiatrist and psychologist, as they do not speak in terms of recovery or address the concerns raised by Diaz's initial medical evaluations. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered the petition dismissed.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, and recommended that the parties agree upon an expert to perform a fitness-for-work evaluation to advise regarding Diaz's present emotional ability to return to the classroom.

EMILY DIAZ,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MAHWAH, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The petitioning tenured teacher, Emily Diaz, challenges respondent's action in requiring that she take an unpaid leave of absence for psychological reasons. She asks that she be returned to her position teaching Spanish in respondent's district and that she be made whole for lost pay and benefits. After consultation with counsel for the parties, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) assigned to this case identified the following issues to be adjudicated:

> 1. Did the Board properly place Diaz on a psychiatric leave of absence pursuant to its authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4, and
> 2. Is the Board's determination that Diaz has not demonstrated satisfactory proof of recovery arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable?
> Initial Decision at 3.[1]

The leave of absence challenged by petitioner commenced in consequence of a psychological evaluation performed in September of 2008, which found petitioner medically unfit to continue her teaching duties. (Respondent's Exhibit R-2 at 12) The evaluation, in turn, had been precipitated by a letter from petitioner asking for a change in teaching assignment for "medical" reasons. (Joint Exhibit J-1)

[1] These two issues were also set forth in the Prehearing Order.

Respondent contends that it is not obligated to reinstate petitioner, because she has not provided proof of recovery. Petitioner argues that she has provided proof of recovery by means of the reports and testimony of two mental health professionals that she hired subsequent to the evaluation, both of whom opined that she was fit for work. (Petitioner's Exhibits P-9 and P-12) The Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) dismissing the petition and recommending that petitioner demonstrate, by way of evaluation by an expert acceptable to both parties, her fitness to return to work.

It is undisputed that in 2002 petitioner began her employment in respondent's district. While her first year of teaching was at the middle school, her assignment in subsequent years was at the high school. It is further undisputed that she experienced significant medical problems during her period of employment at the high school and that her relationship with her supervisor became antagonistic.

On July 24, 2008 petitioner sent to respondent's superintendent, Charles Montesano, the above referenced note (Joint Exhibit J-1) asserting that she had a "medical need" for reassignment from the high school to the middle school. Attached was a letter from her personal physician, Paul Ostergaard, M.D., which maintained that petitioner was:

> suffering from the effect of extreme duress at her present job description. She currently has to take medication for gastritis to prevent an ulcer in addition to irritable bowel syndrome and insomnia.
> (Respondent's Exhibit 5)

Ostergaard further wrote:

> On the basis of my findings and in the interest of preserving her health, I must recommend a change of job venue. Please consider her request to work in a lower grade as a matter of medical necessity.
> (Ibid.)

Montesano testified – and the ALJ found – that because petitioner's request cited medical need, he directed that Diaz be examined by the school physician, Everett Schlam, M.D. (3T38-39; Joint Exhibit 2) It is undisputed that the meeting between Dr. Schlam and petitioner occurred on August 19, 2008 in the presence of petitioner's husband and young son, 3T8, and Schlam testified that it lasted at least a half hour. (3T15) Schlam had been able to review Ostergaard's medical file concerning petitioner prior to the meeting. (3T8) After examining petitioner and speaking to Dr. Ostergaard, Schlam issued a report dated August 22, 2008 recommending that – based upon his examination of Diaz – "psychiatric clearance prior to the 2008/2009 school year [was] requested." (Respondent's Exhibit 7)

In the report, Schlam explained that petitioner had presented as "tearful and upset," and that she had spoken of both the medical and psychological stressors that had prompted her transfer request. (Ibid.) More specifically, she believed that job stress had contributed to gastric issues and a feeling of being overwhelmed. (Ibid.) In petitioner's view, the job stress flowed from unfair treatment by the high school administration, leading her to the conclusion that it would be less stressful to teach at the middle school. (Ibid.) Schlam testified in the OAL that petitioner had appeared distraught, and that he was concerned about her. (3T34) > has a chronic stress disorder which is interfering with her ability to function at work. A psychiatric evaluation is required to help her manage acute stress so she can function effectively.

> (Respondent's Exhibit 7*)*

He further advised that he had discussed petitioner's condition with Ostergaard, and both doctors had agreed that petitioner would benefit from a psychiatric evaluation and counseling. (Ibid.)

The ALJ found, and it appears undisputed, that in consequence of petitioner's request for a transfer to the middle school "as a matter of medical necessity,"[2] and Dr. Schlam's recommendation that a psychological evaluation be undertaken, respondent asked petitioner to undergo a psychological examination and she agreed. (Initial Decision at 4 and 8; 3T40) Accordingly, effective September 1, 2008, respondent placed petitioner on paid administrative leave pending the results of the evaluation. (Initial Decision at 4)

Petitioner conceded that the forensic psychiatrist who performed the evaluation, i.e., David Gallina, M.D., was selected not by respondent, but by petitioner on advice from her union. (2T138-39; 3T41) Further, petitioner testified that Gallina was paid by both the NJEA and respondent. (2T176)

It is undisputed that Gallina met with petitioner on September 24, 2008. His evaluation – memorialized in a written report, incorrectly dated September 27, 2008 but issued subsequent to that date[3] – included an extensive interview with petitioner, a patient questionnaire, the review of correspondence from petitioner and Dr. Schlam, and the administration of various psychological tests.[4] (Respondent's Exhibit R-2) The patient questionnaire invited petitioner to describe the nature of her main problem, and her response was "stress acute disorder." (Respondent's Exhibit R-3) Petitioner also checked off several physical and psychological issues on the questionnaire – including anxiety, tenseness, panic, insomnia and fatigue. (Ibid.) As the ALJ observed, "It was noteworthy that [petitioner's] job-related [2] This phraseology was used in the above referenced June 24, 2008 letter from petitioner's personal physician, Paul Ostergaard, to Montesano.

[3] Gallina explained that the September 27, 2009 date set forth on his written report reflected the date of the first section of the report. He finished the report after receiving the results of the tests that he had administered, but the typist failed to change the date. (1T109)

[4] In his report, Gallina advised that the only documents which he felt were relevant to the evaluation were petitioner's request for a transfer to the middle school, and Schlam's letter/report about his interview with petitioner.

stress was still apparent in September, when she had not been in the classroom since June." (Initial Decision at 11)

Gallina noted that in the course of his interview with petitioner she acknowledged the significant emotional stress that her medical problems had caused her and the burdens they had imposed upon her job performance. (Respondent's Exhibit R-2 at 5) She also, according to Gallina, identified – as a stressor – difficulties with her world language supervisor. Petitioner alleged, for example, that the supervisor issued a disciplinary write-up when physical discomfort precipitated her failure to go to a workshop required by the supervisor. (Ibid.) Petitioner related to Gallina that she had filed grievances and affirmative action complaints against the supervisor but had apparently not prevailed. (Ibid.)

Petitioner's explanation to Gallina for her request for a transfer to the middle school was that she had hoped 1) that there would be less pressure from the middle school administration, and 2) that she would be less under the world language supervisor's scrutiny in the middle school building, because the supervisor's office was located in the high school.[5] As an example of how she felt about her supervisor, petitioner told Gallina:

> I'm going white-knuckled. . . . I'm driving and I'm not even going to the school. I'm just driving by and my husband is sitting with me in the car, and he says your knuckles are turning white. (Respondent's Exhibit R-13 at 47)[6]

Gallina's own observations of petitioner found no evidence of psychoses, cognitive impairment or depression. (Respondent's Exhibit 2 at 9) He did identify "free-floating anxiety," Ibid., occupational problems and "Adjustment Disorder With Mixed Emotions."

[5] During her testimony at the hearing in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), Diaz conceded that her supervisor would be her supervisor no matter where she was located. (2T151-52)

[6] This quotation is from the transcript of an audio tape which petitioner surreptitiously recorded when she appeared for the evaluation. She initially withheld it from discovery. (2T140)

(Respondent's Exhibit 2 at 10) Underlying these findings were the results of the mental status examination:

> Increased levels of generalized anxiety and stress, mostly related to health problems and to occupational conflicts on her job. Ms. Diaz is clearly dissatisfied with the administration of the high school where she works, has had multiple conflicts with authority figures in her school, and she tends to blame others for her difficulties.
> (Respondent's Exhibit 2 at 11)

At the hearing in the OAL, Gallina explained that the term "adjustment disorder" signifies a greater difficulty than the average person in adjusting to one or more external stressors in an individual's life. (1T112) It could flow from a heightened sensitivity to a certain stressor or the accumulation of stress from multiple sources. (Ibid.) It is usually "reflected by a mixed emotional response," e.g. anxiety, depression, anger, irritability. (Ibid.) In petitioner's case, Gallina felt that her extensive medical problems, her difficulties on the job and the normal stresses of parenthood were all significant contributors to her adjustment disorder. (1T113-14)

Gallina recommended cognitive therapy to assist petitioner in gaining insight into the nature of her occupational issues, noting that throughout her health related problems, petitioner had not sought or received any psychiatric or psychological treatment or medications.[7] (Respondent's Exhibit R-2 at 11-12) At the hearing he testified that the kind of illness and chronic pain that petitioner had experienced often wears a person down, necessitating new coping strategies. (1T119) Treatment, in his view, was essential. (1T120)

In Gallina's opinion, petitioner's belief that a transfer to the middle school would solve her problems was speculative:

> Based on today's evaluation, it is anticipated that Ms. Diaz may continue to have authority conflicts, to feel victimized, and to project most of the blame for these difficulties on others if she returns to her teaching job.

[7] Petitioner apparently did indicate to Gallina that she thought cognitive therapy might be helpful to her, especially in adjusting to the effects of her medical problems. (Respondent's Exhibits R-2 at 11; R-13 at 43)

> Her level of insight into her own contribution to these difficulties is limited.
> (Respondent's Exhibit R-2 at 12)

Thus, as a result of the evaluation, Gallina concluded that petitioner was not fit to return to work. (Ibid.) While he understood that transfer to the middle school was petitioner's preference, it was not medically necessary and he saw no basis to believe that it would resolve her problems. (Ibid.)

Gallina also explained that the nature of petitioner's individual circumstances must be considered. There are people with adjustment disorders who go to work. However, the evaluation was intended to assess petitioner's unique situation, including her medical stressors and the fact that her job involved being responsible for children. (1T125-26) Putting petitioner's status in the context of a school district, Gallina observed:

> Like any bureaucracy, the school system's ability to adjust to all the individuals who are working for them is certainly limited. . . . so it is pretty much up to the individual to try to cope with the environment that any of us are working in. I think Ms. Diaz' ability to do that without some treatment and without some help would be fairly limited.

Ultimately, Gallina felt that treatment was "absolutely the right recommendation" for petitioner. (1T126) It is undisputed that petitioner's administrative leave was extended based upon the results of Gallina's evaluation.

The ALJ found that Gallina's is a "highly accomplished physician and expert in the field of psychiatry," and that his testimony was presented "in a professional and credible manner." (Initial Decision at 8) She found significant the fact that he had been selected not by respondent but by petitioner's union. (Ibid.) She further found that Gallina's conclusion – that petitioner's high level of stress and anxiety called for a leave of absence and counseling in coping skills – was convincing, and was corroborated both by petitioner's own questionnaire answers and by petitioner's own statements in her taped and transcribed meeting with Gallina. (Initial Decision at 8-9)

In discussing the content of the taped meeting, the ALJ noted that "[a] transfer from the high school was [petitioner's] clear agenda," Initial Decision at 9, but that Gallina spoke to her about the feasibility of that agenda:

> Gallina: If I clear you to go back to work, in all probability, from what you're telling me, initially you're going to go back to the high school. Can you handle that?
> Petitioner: No.
> Gallina: So what is the alternative?
> Petitioner: I don't know.
> (Respondent's Exhibit at 45–46. [Emphasis added.])

Subsequent to Gallina's evaluation – on October 13, 2008, petitioner wrote to Montesano stating that she was prepared to return to work. (See, e.g. Joint Exhibit 3) [8] This was in contrast to what she had just told Gallina in their September 24, 2008 meeting, i.e., that she would not be able to handle going back to her position at the high school. (Respondent's Exhibit R-13 at 45-46) Montesano advised petitioner, by letter dated October 14, 2008, that as a result of Gallina's determination that she was not medically able to perform teaching duties, she would need written clearance from Gallina if she wished to return to work. In the meanwhile, her days of absence would be charged to her bank of 25 sick days. (Respondent's Exhibit R-8)

Rather than following through on seeking cognitive therapy, petitioner asked her chiropractor to submit a note saying she was fit to return to full time teaching, which he did on November 10, 2008. (Petitioner's Exhibit P-8) She also arranged – at her own expense – for a second evaluation, i.e. by Diana Riccioli, M.D. Dr. Riccioli's examination of petitioner took place on November 4, 2008, and the report was dated November 20, 2008. (Petitioner's Exhibit

[8] She repeated this assertion via letters dated November 24, 2008 and January 19, 2009.

P-9) Respondent's Superintendent Montesano testified that he was given no prior notice that petitioner had arranged for a second evaluation. (3T44)

Riccioli's short recitation of the facts leading to petitioner's request for a second forensic evaluation, Petitioner's Exhibit 9 at 1-2, did not differ materially from the background presented in Gallina's report. The mental status assessment by Riccioli did not appear to differ in any significant degree from Gallina's. (Petitioner's Exhibit P-9 at 3) Nor did her diagnosis of "Adjustment disorder – unspecified occupational problems." (Ibid.) Riccioli's interpretation of the MMPI-2 test which she had petitioner take was that petitioner's judgment was "fair." (Petitioner's Exhibit P-9 at 4)

Nonetheless, Riccioli opined that petitioner was "able to return to work as a teacher without psychological restrictions." (Ibid.) Having found petitioner fit to return to work, Riccioli paradoxically wrote:

> perhaps [petitioner] should work in a less conflicted environment to decrease some stress, which can worsen her physical illness (fibromyalgia). Mrs. Diaz explained some of her stress related to feeling subject to conflicting demands and working for what she perceives to be an unhelpful supervisor.
> I recommend if possible a transfer to another school in order to decrease stress.
> (Ibid. [Emphasis added.])

At the hearing Riccioli confirmed that her conclusion that petitioner was fit for work was conditioned upon whether petitioner could work in a less conflicted environment. (3T108) She stated in her rebuttal testimony on the third hearing date, however, that she believed that petitioner would be able to go back to work in the high school if need be, because she had had time off, because they had discussed – during the evaluation interview – solutions to some of the problems that petitioner had experienced, and because petitioner wanted to go back to work. (3T114-15)

Montesano received Riccioli's report in November but did not allow petitioner to return to work because 1) Riccioli's evaluation contradicted Gallina's, 3T44, 2) he noticed "inaccuracies" in Riccioli's report, Ibid., 3) his priority was avoiding the risk of an unfit teacher in the classroom, and 4) he did not wish for petitioner's stress to be exacerbated. (3T45)[9]

When asked to describe some of the inaccuracies in Riccioli's report Montesano testified that, contrary to what was set forth in Riccioli's report, petitioner was not "written up" for failing to attend a third day of teacher workshops, or for the content or greetings of her emails. She was written up for failing to sign Individual Education Plans (IEPs). He explained that teacher signatures on IEP documents are essential to verifying that special education students are receiving the required accommodations. The district needs to be able to produce such signed IEPs in the event that complaints are brought against it. (3T46-48)

Further, in contrast to the complaints that petitioner communicated to Riccioli about her supervisor, Ms. Lezansky, Montesano explained that a confidential investigation performed by the district affirmative action officer had unearthed no basis for a finding of discrimination or harassment. Statements from petitioner's departmental colleagues suggested that if there was a hostile work environment, it was more attributable to petitioner than to Lezansky. (3T53) In addition, Montesano testified that petitioner had also "had issues" with the supervisor who preceded Lezansky. (3T54)

Ultimately, Montesano testified that he had been keeping petitioner's position open and that he would accept her return to work provided that she:

> Hopefully [would] receive the therapy that was recommended but most importantly [would] receive clearance from a doctor who has the full picture of what's going on. (3T55)

[9] At this point in time, petitioner's sick days had been exhausted and her leave was to be continued through March 4, 2009, under the federal Family and Medical Leave Act. See, Respondent's Exhibit R-12.

However, he could not support a transfer of petitioner to the middle school. Consultation with the middle school principal and a former supervisor revealed that petitioner had been transferred to the high school because her demeanor had been considered better suited to older children. (3T56) With regard to the interpersonal frictions, petitioner's supervisor would be the same at both schools. (3T55)

After petitioner filed her appeal to the Commissioner, she hired a third forensic professional – psychologist George Tierney. His first interview with petitioner took place on January 30, 2009, and his primary report was dated February 6, 2009. (2T39) On March 24, 2009, he met with petitioner again and penned a letter "To Whom It May Concern" that stated:

> Based on my clinical evaluation, I believe that Mrs. Diaz is capable, from a psychological point of view, to resume her employment as a teacher. Her mental health status is not impaired. Her mood and affect are normal, her thought procession in tact, and her cognitive functions for judgment, insight and abstractions is [sic] not impaired.
> (Petitioner's Exhibit P-12)

The February 6, 2009 report reiterated the history – provided by petitioner – that had already been articulated in Gallina's and Riccioli's reports. (Petitioner's Exhibit P-12 at 1-2) Similarly to Gallina and Riccioli, Tierney found in petitioner no psychoses, cognitive impairment or significant depression. (Petitioner's Exhibit P-12 at 3) He regarded petitioner's anxiety as natural – given petitioner's "occupational concerns." (Ibid.) His diagnosis was the same as those of Gallina and Riccioli, i.e. adjustment disorder and occupational problems. (Petitioner's Exhibit P-12 at 4)

Notwithstanding the foregoing, Tierney concluded that petitioner was "capable, from a psychological point of view, of resuming a position of teacher in the Mahwah Board of Education." (Ibid.) His impression of petitioner was that she was a "competent teacher in search of a cooperative arrangement between the Mahwah Board of Education and herself." (Ibid.) He suggested that if petitioner's "conflict with her supervisor . . . cannot be mediated successfully within the high school itself, perhaps a less conflicted environment could be available in the middle school, as requested by Ms. Diaz." (Petitioner's Exhibit P-12 at 5) In his view, such an alternative "could result in less stressful anxiety and also be beneficial to her physical well-being." (Ibid.)

In sum, Tierney's conclusion that petitioner was fit for work appeared to be conditioned upon whether she could resolve her issues with her supervisor. His suggestion about a transfer to the middle school implies that he was uncertain about whether petitioner was capable of succeeding at the high school. In fact, he testified that putting her back into the high school with the people against whom she had litigation pending could generate conflict which would move her back to the state she was in when she had asked for a "medically necessary" transfer. (2T53) Further, he agreed that his interactions with Diaz had been after she had been away from work for seven months, which could have accounted for the level of function which he observed. (Ibid.)

Tierney's report appears to have engendered in Montesano the same kind of concerns that Riccioli's report had raised. Montesano testified that he thought Tierney's conclusions about petitioner's fitness to work might have been based in some part upon petitioner's assertions that she had not had issues with prior authority figures and that her relationships with her peers were positive. (3T57) Montesano did not believe that to be the case. (Ibid.) Tierney's report did not persuade Montesano that petitioner should be returned to work without medical clearance and without any therapy or counseling. [10]

[10] Diaz testified that as of the hearing date she had not availed herself of therapeutic interventions, even though she conceded that Gallina, Riccioli and Tierney had all testified that she could benefit from same. (2T152-54) She

At the hearing Gallina was asked for his perspective concerning Riccioli's and Tierney's evaluations. As regards Riccioli's conclusions he testified:

> First, I think [petitioner] needed some time off to regroup herself, she was really overwhelmed. And secondly, I think she needed some treatment. And if she was in treatment and then made a transition to a different school for example whether it be the middle school or it was [sic] somewhere else then perhaps that would be helpful. But I didn't think that just switching the external environment was really directing itself to the heart of this problem. So in that case, at the end Dr. Riccioli and I simply disagreed.

In addressing Tierney's report he stated:

> Basically it reviews the same history, essentially gives the same diagnosis and then makes a recommendation to go back to work as if nothing has happened. And I just don't think that's appropriate and I don't think it makes much sense. The history that Ms. Diaz gives cries out for her to get some help and to get some treatment. . . . And that's on her behalf as well as the children that she's teaching. So, the end result of the report which again implies that changing the . . . teaching environment is the answer to the problem, I just don't think is appropriate and I disagree with it.

When Riccioli's and Tierney's reports did not result in a return to work, petitioner instituted this controversy – on or about December 5, 2008 – by way of a petition and application for emergent relief. The application for emergent relief was unsuccessful and proceedings on the underlying petition continued in the Office of Administrative Law in January 2009 (before Tierney met with petitioner and issued his report). The first hearing date was May 19, 2009[11] and two more hearing days followed: August 5, 2009[12] and October 5, 2009.[13]

The ALJ's overall assessment of petitioner's testimony was that it was lacking in credibility. She pointed out, for example, that in her hearing testimony petitioner had denied telling Gallina that she did not want to return to the high school. This position was inconsistent both with Gallina's recollections and with the content of the audiotape (referenced above) that petitioner had surreptitiously made of her interview with Gallina. (Initial Decision at 11) Similarly, the ALJ recounted that at the hearing petitioner denied telling Gallina that she suffered from acute stress, which contention was belied by petitioner's own words in the questionnaire that she had filled out for Gallina. (Initial Decision at 11-12)

The ALJ also noted the significant disparity in the presentations that petitioner made to Gallina and Riccioli, in meetings that occurred only six weeks apart. This rather abrupt change from a tearful, anxious demeanor to a calm and "stable" presentation flowed, in the ALJ's view, from a change in petitioner's agenda. (Initial Decision at 12) She concluded that petitioner, having been put on leave – instead of transferred to the middle school – as a result of her tearful presentation to Gallina, changed her deportment with Riccioli, in the hope of obtaining a back-to-work recommendation. (Initial Decision at 12-13)[14]

The Commissioner cannot help but observe that petitioner had sought no treatment between her meetings with Gallina and Riccioli, nor did she offer – at the hearing or subsequently – any other persuasive explanation for the remarkable change in her affect in the six weeks between the two psychological evaluations. It does not appear from the record that passage of time alone can be regarded as an explanation for the change since, as the ALJ pointed out, petitioner presented to Gallina as stressed at the end of September 2008, after she had been away from the high school environment for three months. (Initial Decision at 11)

[14] Similarly, in considering Tierney's description of petitioner's deportment during her sessions with him, the ALJ concluded that petitioner tailored her behavior to further her goal of obtaining a back-to-work recommendation.

At the conclusion of her discussion of the material facts of this case, the ALJ offered her analysis of why the three mental health professionals who met with petitioner all agreed on a diagnosis of adjustment disorder, and all assigned petitioner similar GAF scores (levels of functionality), but disagreed upon the appropriateness of a return to work by petitioner. She stated:

> [E]ach doctor approached Diaz in precisely the same way, with a view toward responding to Diaz's concerns as she presented them, and with the intention of giving her the assistance she herself claimed to need. She wished to convince Gallina that she was not fit to return to the high school, and convince him she did. She and Dr. Gallina only parted company on the issue of a transfer. Dr. Gallina did not agree that the extreme stress that Diaz described would diminish simply by a transfer to the middle school, and without therapy and a respite from her teaching duties. I find that for this reason, and out of concern for her best interest, Dr. Gallina determined that Diaz was not psychiatrically fit for an immediate return to work.
> Conversely, Diaz wished to convince Drs. Riccioli and Tierney that she was fit to teach and, again, she successfully did so. . . . I find that Riccioli and Tierney unwaveringly sought to support Diaz's goals. Not only did they find her to be fully functional and fit for duty, they further agreed that a transfer to the middle school would be in the best interest of her mental health. Indeed, Dr. Tierney wrote in his report, "my impression of Ms. Diaz is that of a competent teacher in search of a cooperative arrangement between the Mahwah Board of Education and herself." But Tierney is not an educator, and is not equipped to assess Diaz's competency as a teacher of world languages. Thus, this statement by him serves to emphasize that his report was written exclusively to promote Diaz's objectives of a return to teaching, but in a middle-school classroom. Indeed, there could not be a more literal expression of Diaz's purpose in seeking further psychological evaluation.
> (Initial Decision at 14-15)

In light of the foregoing, the ALJ found that Gallina "provided the most credible report and testimony, precisely because, in the end, he was able to deviate from Diaz's agenda and focus instead on what he truly felt was in her psychological best interest." (Initial Decision at 15) The Commissioner concurs, and adds that Gallina appears to have taken into consideration the fact that the evaluation had a dual purpose. On the one hand it was meant to assess petitioner's needs, but on the other hand it was meant to ascertain whether petitioner's return to work would be harmonious with the needs of the students and the district's operational requirements.

After citing to the statutes and case law which address the obligation of school districts to ensure that their teachers are fit for duty, and the measures which districts are entitled to take in furtherance of this obligation, the ALJ found that respondent's decision to place petitioner on leave was proper. More specifically, the ALJ stated:

> I conclude that the Board properly directed Diaz to undergo a psychiatric examination in accordance with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2. In requesting a transfer from the high school, Diaz cited "extreme duress," requested the transfer as a matter of "medical necessity," and supported her request with a letter from her personal physician. School-district administration comported itself in a prudent and professional manner when, rather than simply acceding to her request, it demanded first that she be examined by the school physician and in turn by a psychiatrist.
> (Initial Decision at 16)

The ALJ further concluded:

> that the Board properly placed Diaz on a psychiatric leave of absence in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4. Its reliance on the opinion of Dr. Gallina was reasonable. He is a highly regarded psychiatrist, chosen by Diaz herself, who supplied the Board with a comprehensive and articulate report. A highly stressed Diaz presented herself for evaluation by Gallina, and she made it very plain that she felt emotionally unable to return to her teaching position at the high school. Gallina understandably concluded that simply transferring Diaz to another workplace was tantamount to permitting her to run away from her problems, and afforded her no opportunity to resolve them. Gallina's determination that Diaz was not fit to return to teaching was grounded in his belief that Diaz's description of her stress was sincere. His report first and foremost considered Diaz and her best interests.
> (Initial Decision at 17)

Thus, the first of the two above identified issues to be adjudicated in this matter – did the Board properly place Diaz on a psychiatric leave of absence pursuant to its authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4? – was decided in favor of respondent.

As to the second issue – Is the Board's determination that Diaz has not demonstrated satisfactory proof of recovery arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable? – the ALJ applied N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4 to the salient facts. N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4 instructs that if it has been determined that an employee manifests a mental abnormality, he or she "shall be ineligible for further service until proof of recovery, satisfactory to the board is furnished." (Initial Decision at 18, emphasis added)

The ALJ concluded that respondent had had a reasonable basis for its decision not to grant petitioner's request that it accept the Riccioli and Tierney reports as "proof of recovery." (Ibid.) Those reports had failed to address petitioner's acutely stressed and highly anxious presentation to her personal physician, to Dr. Schlam and to Dr. Gallina, or to explain reasons – other than the possible decompression petitioner's absence from the workplace might have allowed – why they believed that a return to work would not trigger a recurrence of petitioner's stress and anxiety. (Initial Decision at 18-19) They found petitioner fit for work without identifying the means by which she had allegedly recuperated or, in the case of Tierney, why he felt that petitioner was prepared to successfully handle the same stressors in the same work environment. (Ibid.) The Commissioner notes, also, that both Riccioli and Tierney recommended the transfer requested by petitioner, undermining somewhat their contentions that she was unconditionally fit for duty.

Having found in favor of respondent on both of the issues that the parties had agreed were presented by the pleadings, see, Initial Decision at 3, the ALJ recommended dismissal of the petition. (Initial Decision at 20) She suggested that the parties agree on a psychiatrist whose task it would be to "advise regarding [petitioner's] present emotional ability to return to the classroom."[15] (Ibid.) Montesano testified that he would cooperate in choosing a mutually acceptable psychiatrist to evaluate petitioner's recovery/fitness to return to work. (3T84)

The Commissioner agrees with the ALJ's analysis and conclusions and is unpersuaded by petitioner's exceptions. First, the Commissioner rejects the contention in petitioner's first exception that the ultimate inquiry before the Commissioner is whether petitioner is now fit to teach. The issues before the Commissioner – which were agreed upon by the parties, set forth in the prehearing order, and correctly articulated and analyzed by the ALJ – are the reasonableness, vel non, of respondent's actions in 1) requiring petitioner to undergo a psychological evaluation and placing petitioner on leave and 2) in declining to accept the Riccioli and Tierney reports as proof of recovery.

In her second exception, petitioner asserts that the ALJ disregarded the evidence presented by petitioner's experts and accepted the analysis of Gallina, which – petitioner urges – was 'questionable.' At the outset, the Commissioner's review of the thorough Initial Decision mitigates against a conclusion that the ALJ failed to consider the substance of Riccioli's and Tierney's reports and testimony. Rather, as stated above, the ALJ found that their reports reflected the presentation offered by petitioner during her meetings with them. That presentation was noticeably different from the demeanor manifested during the meetings between petitioner and both Schlam and Gallina. The ALJ appropriately wondered why the later evaluators – despite agreeing with Gallina that petitioner had an adjustment disorder – glossed over the information set forth not only in Gallina's report but also in the letters from Drs. Schlam and [15] The ALJ referenced the two-year limit set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4, and opined that sufficient time remained for an evaluation to take place.

Ostergaard concerning petitioner's intense anxiety,[16] and gave no explanation as to how they believed petitioner had achieved recovery from her self-diagnosed "acute stress disorder" in six weeks. (Initial Decision at 18-19)

In criticizing Gallina's report and analysis, petitioner appears to suggest that Gallina was biased in favor of respondent. To support this contention she points to interactions between Gallina and respondent's superintendent, Charles Montesano. For example petitioner states that Gallina's report was directed to Montesano, who "paid him and to whom he owed his allegiance" (Petitioner's Exceptions at 11); Gallina received oral and written materials from Montesano but his report did not refer to same; Gallina gave an oral report to Montesano before writing the conclusion to the written report; and, when petitioner asked Gallina how she did on her testing, he indicated that the results would be sent to Montesano.[17]

The Commissioner does not agree with petitioner's analysis on this point. First, it is undisputed that the petitioner chose Gallina at the recommendation of her union, and that petitioner's union shared with respondent the cost of Gallina's services. (2T138; 2T176; 3T41) More importantly, since the ultimate purpose of the evaluation in this matter was not therapy, but rather a determination as to petitioner's fitness to teach in respondent's schools, it was unremarkable that Gallina addressed his report to the school administrator, or that Gallina updated Montesano during the evaluation process. In any event, no action was taken regarding petitioner until all aspects of the evaluation were completed.

[16] Gallina's conclusion that Diaz was experiencing "increased levels of general anxiety and stress," Respondent's Exhibit R-2, was corroborated by Ostergaard's letter, Respondent's Exhibit R-5, Schlam's letter, Respondent's Exhibit R-7, petitioner's own statements on Gallina's questionnaires, Respondent's Exhibit R-3, and the transcript of petitioner's surreptitiously taped session with Gallina, Respondent's Exhibit R-13.

[17] Petitioner maintains that Gallina's failure to provide her with immediate feedback not only indicated that he was not an independent evaluator but also prevented her from presenting the test results to a physician of her own choice for a second opinion. It would appear, however, that she received the test results in discovery, and hired two other forensic experts, both of whom were qualified to test her.

That Montesano may have sent Gallina documents has little significance, since Gallina clearly identified – in his report – which documents he relied upon. Documents about petitioner's work history did not appear to be among them. Rather, Gallina appeared to rely primarily upon petitioner's information and testing, and his own observations. A review of the transcript of petitioner's interview with Gallina reveals, ironically, that petitioner herself spoke extensively to Gallina about her work history, her difficulties with her supervisors, and the extreme stress that her work situation caused her. (Respondent's Exhibit R-13 at 16-35)

The Commissioner also rejects petitioner's assertion that Gallina's recommendations were discrepant with the content of Gallina's report – which petitioner characterizes simply as the description of a well-adjusted individual. At the outset the Commissioner notes with disapproval that the "excerpts" from Gallina's report which petitioner presents in her second exception leave out inconvenient facts. For example, petitioner does not include, in her discussion of the section of Gallina's report entitled "Language, Speech and Thinking," Gallina's observation that petitioner cried during the interview on several occasions "particularly when describing the various stressors in her life, including[18] the multiple medical procedures that she has had done." (Respondent's Exhibit R-2 at 8, emphasis added) Nor does petitioner include, in her comment on the report section entitled "Mood and Affect," Gallina's statement that petitioner manifested "free-floating anxiety." (Respondent's Exhibit R-2 at 9)

In point of fact, while Gallina found that petitioner manifested no psychoses or profound personality disorders, and determined that her cognitive functioning was sound, his report as a whole finds that she has an adjustment disorder with mixed emotions and an occupational problem.[19] (Respondent's Exhibit R-2 at 10) As stated above, he agreed that some persons diagnosed with adjustment disorder can function satisfactorily at work. However, he opined that it was necessary to assess petitioner's case on its individual merits. Accordingly, he expressed concern about petitioner's level of anxiety and stress, the adequacy of her repertoire of coping skills, her limited insight into her own contribution to the frictions in the workplace, and the likelihood that placing her into the same environment would result in the same problems for her.[20] Such concerns belie the petitioner's contention that Gallina's recommendations were inconsistent with his findings.

Petitioner's third and last exception alleges that the ALJ failed to make appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law. In light of the foregoing discussion, the Commissioner rejects the third exception in its entirety. The ALJ's numerous findings, including her credibility findings were reasonable and supported by the record. Thus, the Commissioner is obliged to defer to them and, in this case, is wholly in accord with them. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c); D.L. and Z.L. on behalf of minor children T.L. and K.L. v. Board of Education of the Princeton Regional School District, 366 N.J. Super. 269, 273 (App. Div. 2004).

Finally, in considering the facts and credibility issues in this case, the Commissioner notes the following. Petitioner's arguments completely ignore the content of the recording that petitioner herself made of her meeting with Gallina, which recording offers a first-hand corroboration of the state of mind and demeanor that Gallina observed and reported, and stands in stark contrast to Riccioli's and Tierney's portrayal of petitioner. Further, petitioner initially failed to disclose the recording, suggesting that she knew that it would be unhelpful to her. These factors weaken petitioner's position.

[20] For example, he stated that Diaz "has had multiple conflicts with authority figures in her school, and she tends to blame others for her difficulties." (Respondent's Exhibit R-2 at 11)

In addition, without a professional evaluation the Commissioner, a lay person who has not had the opportunity to observe petitioner, cannot conclude that the more stable deportment which Riccioli and Tierney described and which the ALJ observed at the hearing is evidence of recovery and resolution of petitioner's problems. As noted by the ALJ, by the time petitioner had met with Riccioli, her priorities and agenda appeared to have changed. By the time petitioner met with Tierney she had been away from the workplace stressors for many months, and by the time the ALJ was able to observe petitioner, over a year had passed from the last day that petitioner had been at work.

Accordingly, the petition is dismissed for the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision, and it is recommended that the parties agree upon an expert to perform a fitness-for-work evaluation.

EMILY DIAZ,
Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MAHWAH, BERGEN COUNTY,
Respondent.

Record Closed: February 2, 2010 Decided: March 2, 2010

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Emily Diaz, a tenured teacher of world languages, challenges the action of the Mahwah Board of Education ("the Board") in placing her on an unpaid medical leave of absence. The Board contends that its action is a proper exercise of its authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4, as a psychiatric examination of Diaz revealed a mental abnormality, thus rendering her ineligible for further service. The Board further contends that it is not presently obligated to return Diaz to her teaching position, as she has not furnished proof of recovery satisfactory to the Board.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Diaz filed a Verified Petition and Notice of Motion for Emergent Relief with the Commissioner of Education on December 5, 2008, challenging the actions of the Board and seeking immediate restoration of her salary and benefits. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on December 9, 2008. On December 18, 2008, Administrative Law Judge Leslie Celentano issued a decision denying the request for emergent relief. On January 5, 2009, the Commissioner affirmed Judge Celentano's decision, and returned the case to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing on the merits of the underlying claims raised in the petition.

The Board filed a Motion to Dismiss in Lieu of an Answer on January 30, 2009. Diaz opposed the Motion to Dismiss, urging that material issues of fact necessitated that her claims be adjudicated through plenary hearing. While Diaz's opposition papers additionally renewed her request for emergent relief, these claims were withdrawn, through counsel, at the oral argument on the motion which was heard on March 11, 2009. By letter dated March 10, 2009, Diaz additionally sought relief in the form of an order directing that, pending a full hearing, she be placed back on the payroll. Argument on this request for relief was likewise heard on March 11, 2009.

By Order dated March 16, 2009, the Board's Motion to Dismiss was denied, as was Diaz's request to be restored to a full pay status pending plenary hearing. Hearings were conducted on May 19, 2009, August 5, 2009, and October 5, 2009. The parties submitted post-hearing briefs on January 15, 2010, and simultaneous replies on February 2, 2010, at which time the record closed.

ISSUES PRESENTED

Prior to the hearing, I conferred with counsel via telephone and it was agreed that the pleadings raised the following issues for determination:

1. Did the Board properly place Diaz on a psychiatric leave of absence pursuant to its authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4?

2. If so, is the Board's determination that Diaz has not demonstrated satisfactory proof of recovery arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable?

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

Background Facts

The general background facts are not in dispute, and were either the subject of a joint stipulation filed by the parties, or were uncontroverted at hearing. I FIND as follows:

1. Diaz is a tenured Spanish teacher, who commenced her employment with the Board on or about September 1, 2005. For the 2008–2009 school year, Diaz was placed on Step 11 of the Teacher's Salary Guide.

2. On or about July 24, 2008, Diaz requested a transfer from her teaching position at Mahwah High School to the middle school. Her letter requesting the transfer cited medical need. (J-1.)

3. Insofar as the request for transfer cited medical issues, the Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Charles Montesano, requested that Diaz be examined by the school physician, Dr. Everett Schlam. (J-2.)

4. Diaz was examined by Dr. Schlam, who issued a report on August 22, 2008. In a letter dated August 22, 2008, Dr. Schlam advised that, based upon his examination of Diaz, "psychiatric clearance prior to the 2008/2009 school year is requested."

5. As a result of Dr. Schlam's recommendation, Montesano asked Diaz to submit to a psychiatric examination, and she acquiesced to this request.

6. Effective September 1, 2008, the Board placed Diaz on a paid administrative leave, pending the results of the psychiatric examination.

7. On September 24, 2008, Diaz was examined at Board expense by Dr. David Gallina, a psychiatrist. He issued a report dated September 27, 2008, finding that Diaz was not fit to return to work.

8. On October 13, 2008, Diaz wrote to Montesano and advised that she was ready to return to work. (J-3.)

9. On October 14, 2008, Montesano wrote to Diaz and advised that, effective October 13, 2008, she would be charged sick days for her absence.

10. Diaz was advised that when she was medically able to return to work, she would need to supply written clearance from Dr. Gallina attesting to her fitness.

11. Thereafter, school district administration advised Diaz that her sick days would be exhausted on November 24, 2008, and that she was entitled to a federal Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) leave through March 4, 2009.

12. Diaz sought a second opinion at her own expense from forensic psychiatrist Dr. Diana Riccioli, who issued a report on November 20, 2008. Dr. Riccioli concluded that Diaz was fit to return to her duties.

13. By letter dated November 24, 2008, Diaz indicated that she had "no choice" but to request an FMLA leave, but that she was ready, willing and able to return to work. (J-4.)

14. Diaz again requested to return to work on January 19, 2009.

15. On January 30, 2009, Diaz sought a psychological assessment and opinion at her own expense from Dr. George Tierney, a psychologist. Dr. Tierney issued his report on February 6, 2009. Dr. Tierney opined that Diaz was fit to return to her duties.

16. The Board was unwilling to accept Dr. Riccioli's report, or that of Dr. Tierney, as satisfactory proof of recovery, and remains unwilling to do so, to date.

The Decision to Place Diaz on a Medical Leave

The testimony of Superintendent Montesano, and that of Dr. Schlam, provides insight into the district's decision to request a psychiatric evaluation, and ultimately place Diaz on a medical leave of absence. Montesano stated that his concern about Diaz's health was triggered by a June 24, 2008, letter he received from her personal physician, Dr. Paul Ostergaard. (R-5.) Dr. Ostergaard wrote that Diaz was "suffering from the effect of extreme duress at her present job description." Dr. Ostergaard's letter requested that consideration be given to a transfer to a "lower grade as a matter of medical necessity." His letter was written at Diaz's request. Diaz forwarded Dr. Ostergaard's letter to Dr. Montesano via letter dated July 24, 2008, and she asked that Montesano consider her "medical need for a reassignment out of the High School and into the Middle School." (J-1.)

Dr. Montesano felt it appropriate to obtain additional information from the school physician, and, accordingly, he wrote to Diaz on August 4, 2008, and stated that, in order to give full consideration to her request, he would need Dr. Ostergaard to forward records to the school physician, Dr. Schlam. Montesano additionally requested that Diaz be examined by Dr. Schlam. (J-2.)

Dr. Schlam's letter of August 22, 2008, in which he stated that "Ms. Diaz has a chronic stress disorder which is interfering with her ability to function at work," served to heighten Montesano's concern about Diaz's health. Schlam elaborated on his findings at the hearing. He is a family physician, not an expert in psychiatry, but does have enough general medical background to make referrals for further psychiatric evaluation. Schlam has experience in evaluating patients who are experiencing anxiety, and he has performed "fitness-for-duty" evaluations in the past.

Schlam testified that Diaz was accompanied by her husband when she was evaluated, and that her husband did most of the talking. The evaluation lasted for at least a half hour.[1] Diaz was quite tearful and upset, and her husband related many concerns about her overall health and her poor treatment by the school district. Schlam testified that Diaz appeared acutely stressed, and he was advised that she felt ill and had difficulty sleeping. Diaz's husband shared that she was also dealing with serious physical issues, including multiple breast-cancer surgeries and gastrointestinal concerns. After the evaluation, Schlam conferred with Ostergaard. Based upon all the information available to him, Schlam concluded that a referral for psychiatric evaluation was appropriate. Dr. Schlam confirmed on cross-examination that he agreed with Dr. Ostergaard that Diaz was under "extreme duress," and that her stress was interfering with her ability to function.

Diaz was provided a list of three Board-approved psychiatrists by Montesano. She initially made an appointment with one of the listed doctors, but cancelled the appointment because, upon further research, it appeared his practice emphasized child psychiatry. When asked on cross-examination who selected Dr. Gallina, Diaz answered somewhat coyly, stating she was unsure. Upon further questioning she conceded that her union was instrumental in his choice, and that the Board and her union ultimately agreed that she be evaluated by Dr. Gallina. It is clear that Dr. Gallina was not on the original list of psychiatrists generated by the Board, that he was recommended by Diaz's representatives, and that nonetheless the Board agreed to accept his evaluation, and pay for it.

[1] Diaz testified that the evaluation was much shorter, and was interrupted by phone calls. To my mind, this is not a critical point. I believe that Schlam spent sufficient time with Diaz, and had enough information, to determine to make a referral to a specialist.

In a report dated September 27, 2008, Dr. Gallina found that Diaz suffered from "increased levels of generalized anxiety and stress," and concluded that it was his medical opinion, "with reasonable medical certainty that Ms. Diaz is unfit to assume her job related duties as a teacher." (R-2.) He recommended cognitive therapy, and his prognosis was guarded. Upon receiving this report, Montesano placed Diaz on a sick leave. He stated that his decision to do so was motivated by concern first and foremost for the safety and educational well-being of Diaz's students. Diaz's well-being mattered to Montesano as well, but was at all times secondary to his obligations to his students.

Montesano testified that Diaz's position is currently being filled by a long-term substitute. The position is available for Diaz at any time, and Montesano confirmed that he is not adverse to her return, provided Diaz receives appropriate medical clearance. On cross-examination, he emphasized that he feels no animosity toward Diaz and that he did not advise Gallina that he wished to obtain any predetermined result. A series of e-mails generated about Diaz by district administrators certainly pointed to their frustration in dealing with her and her health issues. (P-22.) They likewise touch on performance issues, such as excessive student cuts from her class, and an alleged untruth by Diaz about a student pass to the health office. In their electronic correspondence district administrators characterize Diaz as "bizarre," and state that she is sapping "time and energy from everyone." The e-mails were unprofessional in tone, but nonetheless did not demonstrate that the desire to send Diaz for further medical evaluation was prompted by anything other than the letter from her own treating physician, Dr. Ostergaard.

Diaz's testimony supports the conclusion that it was not her conduct on the job, but rather her request for a transfer based on "medical necessity" that prompted the district to ask for further medical evaluations. Indeed, Diaz testified that she requested a transfer due to her medical condition and because her constant disagreements with administration were causing excessive stress. She felt that she would be less stressed at the middle school, which she perceived to be a more collegial environment.

Joseph Tondi, Diaz's New Jersey Education Association field representative, testified on Diaz's behalf, and clearly shared the impression that the transfer request was the only reason for the Board's action in requiring a psychiatric evaluation. Indeed, he noted that the present case was somewhat unusual, as typically an on-the-job incident precipitates a request for psychiatric evaluation. Tondi was unaware of any aberrant on-the-job behavior by Diaz.

Accordingly, I FIND that the Board required Diaz to undergo a psychiatric evaluation because she had requested a transfer to the middle school as a matter of medical necessity, and the school physician, Dr. Schlam, felt that further psychiatric evaluation was indicated. I further FIND that the action of the Board in placing Diaz on a medical leave of absence was based on the findings of Dr. Gallina, a psychiatrist, who concluded that she was not fit to remain in the classroom, unless and until she pursued certain therapeutic interventions.

The Expert Opinions

Dr. David Gallina testified on behalf of the Board. He is a highly accomplished physician and an expert in the field of psychiatry. His testimony was presented in a professional and credible manner, and he convincingly opined that it was in Diaz's long-term best interest to take a leave from work and address her stress and related mental-health issues.

Diaz surreptitiously taped her meeting with Gallina, and the transcription of that tape was entered into evidence as R-13. Although she agreed that her union was instrumental in selecting Gallina, Diaz did not trust him, and she testified that she "just want[ed] to make sure that [she] was covered." That transcription, together with a questionnaire filled out by Diaz in Dr. Gallina's office, illuminate what she herself described as the presenting problems. She indicated that she suffered from headaches, bowel disturbances, fatigue, and insomnia, that she felt panicky and tense, and that she was anxious and restless and unable to relax at work.

Diaz related to Dr. Gallina that her personal physician did not wish to see her return to her position at the high school, and that Ostergaard had advised, "you shouldn't go to work feeling the way you are." (R-13 at 47.) Diaz informed Dr. Gallina that she experienced an extreme stress reaction even when simply driving by the high school, stating:

> I'm going white knuckled. Like this was so blah. I'm driving and I'm not even going to the school. I'm just driving by, and my husband is sitting with me in the car, and he says your knuckles are turning white. I wasn't going to the school. It was summer.

Diaz indicated on the questionnaire she filled out for Dr. Gallina that she suffered from an "acute stress disorder."

Dr. Gallina reviewed the letters submitted by Drs. Ostergaard and Schlam in reaching his final diagnosis. He met with Diaz, and afterwards had her complete two diagnostic tests, the Hamilton Depression Inventory (HDI) and a Personality Assessment Inventory (PAI). During Gallina's interview with Diaz, she shared many frustrations with her work environment, and related stories of unfair treatment by school district administrators. A transfer from the high school was her clear agenda. She stated that the middle school had a different administration and better teamwork. But it became clear during the course of her conversation with Dr. Gallina that a transfer may no longer be a logistical possibility because the school year had already started. If cleared for an immediate return to work she would likely continue to be assigned to the high school. Dr. Gallina stated to Diaz:

> If I clear you to go back to work, in all probability, from what you're telling me, initially you're going to go back to the high school. Can you handle that? No. So what is the alternative?
> [Id. at 45–46.]

Diaz did not dispute Dr. Gallina's statement, or urge that she felt medically able to return to the high school if necessary. Rather, she replied, "I don't know." Diaz elaborated that her husband "hopes I can get help . . . . It's too long, too much. It has to stop." (Id. at 48.)

It was readily apparent that the "help" Diaz sought was a transfer, so much so that Dr. Gallina felt compelled to spend some time explaining that he did not believe that fitness for duty could be established for a position at the middle school, but not for a position at the high school. He explained to Diaz that either she was fit to teach or not. But Diaz was adamant that a simple transfer would alleviate her acute stress, urging that she did not "think the issue is teaching . . . the issue is dealing with [the] high school" (Id. at 50.)

Dr. Gallina diagnosed Diaz with an "adjustment disorder." He did not find that she suffered from an organic mental illness, and found that she was oriented as to time, place and person. She demonstrated no confusion. He saw no objective signs of depression. Dr. Gallina found Diaz to be logical, coherent and relevant.[2] However, Dr. Gallina indicated that his mental-status examination revealed "increased levels of generalized anxiety and stress, mostly related to health problems and to occupational conflicts on her job." He found that Diaz's understanding of her contribution to these job-related difficulties was "limited." Dr. Gallina emphasized that a transfer to the middle school would not, in his view, eliminate her stress, or address the unsuccessful manner in which she coped with that stress. His prognosis for Diaz was "guarded." Dr. Gallina recommended therapy to assist her in gaining insight into her problems.

[2] Dr. Gallina states in his report that Diaz's GAF score is 70-80. The GAF is the doctor's subjective assessment of the patient's global functioning. This score is generally within the range of functionality, but there could be evidence of mild symptoms of mental illness such as depressed mood, per the DSM-IV (P-12a).

Dr. Gallina elaborated on the findings in his report at the hearing. He stated that an "adjustment disorder" is a response to external stressors, and generally lasts for up to six months after the stressor is removed. He found Diaz to be suffering from considerable stress, caused by her medical issues, her job issues, and the usual stresses of being a wife and mother. It was noteworthy that her job-related stress was still apparent in September, when she had not been in the classroom since June. Dr. Gallina opined that Diaz was not fit to return to her classroom duties because he strongly felt that some time away from the classroom would assist her. A leave of absence would afford her time to engage in therapy and thus better understand her work-related difficulties and develop coping mechanisms. Gallina testified that the physical symptoms of Diaz's stress, including headaches, insomnia and pain, all negatively impacted her ability to perform, to her detriment and that of her students.

Dr. Gallina emphasized that Diaz was not a seriously psychiatrically involved person, and that clearly she was functional. Dr. Gallina conceded that many people who suffer from adjustment disorders continue to work, but he stated, somewhat passionately, that these people were not in issue. Gallina testified:

> . . . we're not talking about, you know, six hundred thousand other people with adjustment disorders, we're talking about this young woman and the difficulties that she has encountered, . . . and I think we're obliged to get her some help . . . . Treatment for her, I think, in my opinion was absolutely the right recommendation to make.

Diaz denied advising Dr. Gallina that she did not want to return to the high school, but her version of the events lacked credibility. Diaz's testimony was inconsistent with both Dr. Gallina's recollections and the statements she herself made during her interview with the doctor, as captured on her surreptitious recording. Diaz indicated that she did not recall advising Dr. Gallina that she suffered from an acute stress disorder, that these were Dr. Schlam's words, not hers. But again her testimony lacked credibility, as the questionnaire she filled out asked her to "state in your own words the nature of your main problems," and she wrote "stress acute disorder." (R-3.) Diaz urged at hearing that her request for a transfer was based on "medical physical" needs and not "mental medical" needs, but this assertion was likewise wholly lacking in credibility. Indeed, Diaz supported her transfer request with Dr. Ostergaard's letter, which plainly stated that she was suffering from "extreme duress."

Diaz obviously was dissatisfied with Dr. Gallina and his findings. She had presented a doctor's note to school-district administration to accomplish her goal of transferring from the high school, and not to find herself placed on a medical leave. Accordingly, a Diaz with a very different agenda presented herself to Dr. Diana Riccioli for a second opinion less than two months after her visit to Dr. Gallina. There was no evidence that Diaz availed herself of any therapeutic interventions prior to seeing Dr. Riccioli. Dr. Riccioli testified at hearing on Diaz's behalf. Like Dr. Gallina, she is an experienced and well-qualified physician who is an expert in psychiatry. Her testimony was professionally presented. But Dr. Riccioli's testimony centered on an effort to discredit Dr. Gallina's findings, as opposed to focusing on an in-depth assessment of Diaz and her mental status and needs.

Dr. Riccioli's report offered little insight into the evaluation process or the substance of her discussion with Diaz, this despite the fact that Riccioli stressed at hearing that she spent three hours with Diaz, as opposed to the shorter time invested by Dr. Gallina. Since Diaz retained Dr. Riccioli and paid for her evaluation, she "trusted" Riccioli and felt no need to secretly tape-record their session together. Dr. Riccioli did not ask Diaz to fill in a form that specified her concerns, and Dr. Riccioli's report does not appear to specify all the issues that were shared by Diaz, other than recounting a few incidents of alleged mistreatment at the high school.

Dr. Riccioli testified that she found no evidence of anxiety and that Diaz advised that she was ready and eager to return to work, even at the high school. Indeed, the word "stress" is curiously absent from the mental-status examination section of Dr. Riccioli's report. It certainly would appear that Diaz no longer described herself as "white-knuckled" at the thought of driving past the high school. Nonetheless, the diagnoses of the two psychiatrists are essentially identical. Dr. Riccioli concurred with Dr. Gallina's diagnosis of an "adjustment disorder." She agreed with Dr. Gallina that Diaz was fully oriented, and that her insight and judgment were not impaired. Dr. Riccioli emphasized that an "adjustment disorder," although a psychiatric illness, is a minor illness that generally does not impair functionality. This was consistent with Dr. Gallina's explanation of the nature of this disorder. Like Dr. Gallina, she found a GAF of 70-80.

The finding of any psychiatric disorder by Dr. Riccioli, albeit a mild one, is somewhat surprising. While Diaz's medical issues are certainly real, the report did not discuss any problems in coping with or making a satisfactory adjustment to these medical concerns. The discussion in Dr. Riccioli's report about the workplace noted friction, and the perception that supervisors wished to "get rid" of Diaz, but did not indicate at all that this friction caused any unusual stress for Diaz. Thus, the agreement on diagnosis appears designed to form the backdrop for Dr. Riccioli's contention that Dr. Gallina's finding of unfitness is inconsistent with his diagnosis. Indeed, despite their agreement on diagnosis, the ultimate conclusions of the two psychiatrists were entirely at odds. Dr. Riccioli opined that Diaz was able to return to her duties as a teacher, without restriction. Dr. Riccioli testified that she examined Diaz again on May 13, 2009, apparently in anticipation of giving testimony at the hearing, and that this more recent evaluation further buttressed her view that Diaz was fit to return to work. Surprisingly, Riccioli found that a change in assignment to the middle school would be helpful, this despite her testimony, and that of Diaz, that Diaz was ready to return to work, even at the high school.

Subsequent to her evaluation with Dr. Riccioli, Diaz was evaluated by a psychologist, Dr. George Tierney, who met with her on January 30, 2009, February 6, 2009, and March 24, 2009. Dr. Tierney is a well-qualified psychologist, whose testimony was presented in a professional manner. Again, the visits to Dr. Tierney, unlike the visit to Dr. Gallina, were designed to obtain an opinion that furthered Diaz's goal of returning to the classroom. Diaz was referred to Dr. Tierney by her attorneys.

She did not feel a need to protect herself by taping her meetings with Dr. Tierney. It is clear, however, that once again, she could not have described herself as experiencing acute stress.

Indeed, Dr. Tierney's report indicated that he found Diaz to be calm and not agitated. He noted that there was some anxiety, but none that was inappropriate to the various stressors in Diaz's life. Diaz shared her workplace conflicts with Dr. Tierney, as well as her history of medical issues. Like the psychiatrists that evaluated Diaz before him, Dr. Tierney diagnosed Diaz with an "adjustment disorder" and found her GAF to be 70-80. Dr. Tierney found her mental-health status to be unimpaired, and found her fit to return to work. Despite finding no mental-health impairment and no evidence of any stress sufficient to impair functioning, however, his report likewise suggested that the transfer sought by Diaz would be in her best interest. Dr. Tierney testified that Dr. Gallina's conclusion that Diaz was not fit to teach was a "non sequitur," and that nothing in his report or his findings regarding her mental status justified that conclusion.

At first blush, the conclusions of Drs. Gallina, Riccioli and Tierney appear impossible to reconcile. While they all agreed that Diaz was not acutely mentally ill, only Gallina found that she was not fit to return to work. Moreover, Drs. Riccioli and Tierney urged that a determination that Diaz is not fit to work is inconsistent with Dr. Gallina's conclusion that her GAF was in the 70-80 range. Indeed, they opined that the DSM-IV does not view a score in this range as indicative of impaired functionality.

But in fact, each doctor approached Diaz in precisely the same way, with a view toward responding to Diaz's concerns as she presented them, and with the intention of giving her the assistance she herself claimed to need. She wished to convince Gallina that she was not fit to return to the high school, and convince him she did. She and Dr. Gallina only parted company on the issue of a transfer. Dr. Gallina did not agree that the extreme stress that Diaz described would diminish simply by a transfer to the middle school, and without therapy and a respite from her teaching duties. I FIND that for this reason, and out of concern for her best interest, Dr. Gallina determined that Diaz was not psychiatrically fit for an immediate return to work.

Conversely, Diaz wished to convince Drs. Riccioli and Tierney that she was fit to teach and, again, she successfully did so. However, I FIND that Riccioli and Tierney unwaveringly sought to support Diaz's goals. Not only did they find her to be fully functional and fit for duty, they further agreed that a transfer to the middle school would be in the best interest of her mental health. Indeed, Dr. Tierney wrote in his report, "my impression of Ms. Diaz is that of a competent teacher in search of a cooperative arrangement between the Mahwah Board of Education and herself." But Tierney is not an educator, and is not equipped to assess Diaz's competency as a teacher of world languages. Thus, this statement by him serves to emphasize that his report was written exclusively to promote Diaz's objectives of a return to teaching, but in a middle-school classroom. Indeed, there could not be a more literal expression of Diaz's purpose in seeking further psychological evaluation. Although both Drs. Riccioli and Tierney are clearly competent practitioners, I FIND that Dr. Gallina provided the most credible report and testimony, precisely because, in the end, he was able to deviate from Diaz's agenda and focus instead on what he truly felt was in her psychological best interest.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Public school teachers perform a unique role, one that requires that they spend long hours educating and nurturing the children in their care. It is strenuous, demanding work and requires a good deal of patience and stamina. Accordingly, the school laws recognize that teachers must be physically and mentally fit for the challenges that await them each day. N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 provides:

> The board may require individual psychiatric or physical examinations of any employee, whenever, in the judgment of the board, an employee shows evidence of deviation from normal, physical or mental health.

The constitutionality of N.J.S.A. 18:16-2 has been upheld by our courts, which have recognized that fitness to teach entails far more than skilled pedagogy. See Gish v. Bd.

of Educ. of Paramus, 145 N.J. Super. 96 (App. Div. 1976). The State's broad interest in the fitness of its teachers has been expressed as follows:

> A teacher works in a sensitive area in a school room. There he shapes the attitude of young minds toward the society in which they live. In this, the state has a vital concern. That the school authorities have the right and the duty to screen the officials, teachers, and employees as to their fitness to maintain the integrity of the schools as a part of ordered society, cannot be doubted.
> [In re Tenure Hearing of Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13, 30 (App. Div. 1974) (quoting Adler v. Bd. of Educ. of New York, 342 U.S. 485, 493, 72 S. Ct. 380, 385, 96 L. Ed. 2d 517, 524 (1952).]

In determining whether a local board has met its burden of proving a deviation from normal mental or physical health, thus permitting it to require a fitness examination, it has been recognized that the "bar set by [N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2] is low, which comports with the overriding purpose in this and related statutes that the health, safety and well-being of students is paramount." Bd. of Educ. of Lyndhurst v. Blevis, No. A-6004-07T3 (App. Div. October 8, 2009) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/search.shtml>.

I CONCLUDE that the Board properly directed Diaz to undergo a psychiatric examination in accordance with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2. In requesting a transfer from the high school, Diaz cited "extreme duress," requested the transfer as a matter of "medical necessity," and supported her request with a letter from her personal physician. School-district administration comported itself in a prudent and professional manner when, rather than simply acceding to her request, it demanded first that she be examined by the school physician and in turn by a psychiatrist. Indeed, it was Diaz herself, and her personal physician, who presented the evidence of deviation from normal mental health necessary to invoke the procedures contemplated by the statute.[3]

[3] The implementation of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 requires that the employee be provided with a statement of reasons for the directive that he or she undergo a psychiatric examination. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-6.3; Kochman v. Keansburg Bd. of Educ., 124 N.J. Super. 203 (Ch. Div. 1973). A challenge to the procedural aspects of the Board's request here was not raised by the pleadings or by counsel at hearing. Nor did Diaz at any time assert that she was unwilling to be

A discrete incident that evidences deviation from normal health, either in the presence of children, or outside the school day, is not required to trigger the Board's rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2. The plain language of the statute does not so require, and it is well established that statutory language should be given its ordinary meaning. Klumb v. Bd. of Educ. of Manalapan-Englishtown Reg'l High Sch. Dist., 199 N.J. 14, 23-24 (2009). Indeed, the request for a psychiatric examination in Gish "included [not] a single instance of any undue conduct or actions in the classroom or out of the classroom with respect to a particular student." Gish, supra, 145 N.J. Super. at 103. The board there nonetheless was upheld in its efforts to insist that Gish submit to a psychiatric examination.

I further CONCLUDE that the Board properly placed Diaz on a psychiatric leave of absence in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4. Its reliance on the opinion of Dr. Gallina was reasonable. He is a highly regarded psychiatrist, chosen by Diaz herself, who supplied the Board with a comprehensive and articulate report. A highly stressed Diaz presented herself for evaluation by Gallina, and she made it very plain that she felt emotionally unable to return to her teaching position at the high school. Gallina understandably concluded that simply transferring Diaz to another workplace was tantamount to permitting her to run away from her problems, and afforded her no opportunity to resolve them. Gallina's determination that Diaz was not fit to return to teaching was grounded in his belief that Diaz's description of her stress was sincere. His report first and foremost considered Diaz and her best interests.

N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4 sets forth the rights and obligations of the parties in the event of a finding of deviation from normal health, including the right to continued employment, stating: seen by a psychiatrist. More importantly, the requirement that a board supply a statement of reasons for its request appears superfluous where, as here, the medical condition at issue was brought to the Board's attention by the employee herself.

> If the result of any such examination indicates mental abnormality or communicable disease, the employee shall be ineligible for further service until proof of recovery, satisfactory to the board, is furnished, but if the employee . . . has tenure, he may be granted sick leave with compensation as provided by law and shall, upon satisfactory recovery, . . . be reemployed with the same tenure as he possessed at the time his services were discontinued . . . .

Diaz urges that the reports of Drs. Riccioli and Tierney provided satisfactory proof of recovery, and that the Board's refusal to accept these reports and return her to the classroom was, and remains, arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

The action of a local school board that lies within its discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives. Boult v. Bd. of Educ. of Passaic City, 136 N.J.L. 521 (E. & A. 1948); Kopera v. Bd. of Educ. of West Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1960). The scope of the Commissioner's review is extremely narrow, and he may not substitute his judgment for that of those who made the decision, but rather, can only determine if the local board, and its administration, had a reasonable basis for their conclusions. Bd. of Educ. of Bernards Twp. v. C.M., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 762.

I CONCLUDE that the Board, and its administration, had a reasonable basis for their decision not to accept the report of Diaz's personal psychiatrist. Indeed, Riccioli's report does not speak in terms of recovery. Rather, her report simply finds Diaz fit to work. Dr. Riccioli does not address the concerns raised by any of the physicians who examined Diaz, including Diaz's personal physician, Dr. Ostergaard. Having reasonably accepted the findings of Dr. Gallina, a physician selected by Diaz, the Board correctly sought a finding of recovery from either Gallina or another physician who, at a minimum, accepted and understood that Gallina had examined a Diaz who presented herself as overwhelmed by stress, and who had stated that anxiety rendered her unable to return to her teaching duties at the high school. Dr. Riccioli's report offers no insight into Diaz's alleged recuperation since her examination by Gallina, making the Board's refusal to accept her report a rational exercise of the discretion granted to it by N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4.

Much like Dr. Riccioli, Dr. Tierney also does not address Diaz's recovery, but rather rejects the notion that Diaz was ever unfit for her duties. Again, the Board was understandably unable to reconcile this finding with that of Dr. Gallina, and thus, I CONCLUDE, reasonably determined that it was unable to accept Tierney's report as evidence of Diaz's fitness to return to her duties.

I am unable to grant Diaz relief in the form of back pay or benefits, in light of my conclusion that the Board conducted itself in a reasonable manner, and in a manner consistent with applicable law. Where a local school board properly places a staff member on leave in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4, there is no basis in law to compel the board to pay that staff member during the period of ineligibility. Chambers v. Pleasantville Bd. of Educ., EDU 8498-97, Initial Decision (May 1, 1998), adopted, Comm'r (June 18, 1998) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.

For the same reason, I am unable to direct that Diaz immediately resume her teaching duties. However, although the Board was reasonable in its determination not to accept the reports offered to date, the testimony of Drs. Riccioli and Tierney convinced me that Diaz may presently be fit to teach. Diaz urges in her post-hearing submission that her demeanor in court likewise supports her readiness to return to work. I concur that she presented as a stable, appropriate individual to my observation, but that is merely the observation of a layperson. The Board is clearly entitled to the opinion of a medical professional.

An opportunity remains for Diaz to provide proof to the Board of her recovery, and to thus return to her teaching duties. There presently is no factual or legal basis to permanently remove Diaz from her teaching position. N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4 makes it plain that Diaz's tenure rights remain intact, and that, indeed, any concerns about her teaching performance or professional conduct must be resolved through the evaluative process, or the disciplinary procedures available to the Board. The mechanisms established by N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 et seq. were not intended to address performance concerns, but rather concerns about physical and mental fitness for duty.

While clearance from Dr. Gallina would undoubtedly be the easiest and most straightforward way to confirm Diaz's recovery, Gallina is not the only physician who can provide the Board with the assurances it needs. Accordingly, the parties can and should confer and agree upon a psychiatrist who can evaluate Diaz and advise regarding her present emotional ability to return to the classroom. If the evaluation is conducted by Dr. Gallina, the Board must defray the cost of that evaluation, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:16-3. If the Board approves another physician, selected by Diaz, she must defray the cost, again as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:16-3. There is a two-year period from the date a leave of absence commenced within which to demonstrate fitness. N.J.S.A. 18A:16-4. As Diaz commenced her sick leave on October 13, 2008, there is ample time for her to obtain the psychiatric clearance needed to return to her teaching duties.

The Commissioner approves the settlement terms and adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, with the following observation. Section 2 of the Agreement references several actions that may have already taken place, and have therefore preceded consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, providing that the parties have either successfully implemented the settlement terms, or have agreed upon mutually satisfactory alternate dates for the effectuation of same. Assuming the foregoing, the matter is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement.

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on May 28, 2010 for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a Settlement Agreement indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures on the attached settlement agreement. As evidence by the attached certification of Paul Bambrick-Santoyo, Managing Director and Secretary of the Board of Trustees, the North Star Academy Charter School Board of Trustees approved the settlement at a public meeting on June 14, 2010, and authorized its Chief Operating Officer to execute the settlement agreement on its behalf.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement") is made and entered into this 14th day of June, 2010, by and between ANGELA MASON ("Mason"), residing at 53 Ingraham Place, Newark, New Jersey 07108, on behalf of herself and her minor son Anthony Brown ("A.B.") (collectively, "Petitioners"), and NORTH STAR ACADEMY OF NEWARK, whose address is 10 Washington Street, Newark, New Jersey 07102, its affiliates and related entities and their successors, present or former trustees, directors, officers, employees, agents and representatives (collectively, "North Star"). Petitioners and North Star (collectively "the parties") mutually desire to enter into this Agreement.

WHEREAS, A.B. was enrolled as a student at North Star from 2005 to 2009, and is enrolled as a student at University High School in Newark for 2009-2010;

WHEREAS, on or about March 9, 2010, Petitioners filed a Verified Petition before the Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey, A.M. o/b/o minor child A.B. v. North Star Academy Charter School of Newark, Agency Docket No. 43-3/10 ("the Petition"), alleging that disciplinary action taken by North Star violated A.B.'s rights under the United States Constitution, the New Jersey Constitution, the New Jersey Civil Rights Act, and provisions of New Jersey Statutes Title 18A and New Jersey Administrative Code Title 6A; and North Star filed an Answer denying such allegations and denying any liability to Petitioners; and the Petition has been transmitted to the New Jersey Office of Administrative Law;

WHEREAS, the parties wish to resolve this matter and all outstanding disputes between them in accordance with the terms set forth in this Agreement; and

WHEREAS, North Star's Board of Trustees consented to the terms set forth herein at a meeting on June 14, 2010, and authorized the execution of this Agreement;

NOW, THEREFORE, for the good and sufficient consideration set forth below, the parties hereby AGREE as follows:

1. Denial of Liability. It is understood and agreed that the execution of this Agreement by North Star does not in any way constitute an admission or concession of liability or wrongdoing on its part.

2. Consideration.

(a) In consideration for the execution of this Agreement by Mason and her compliance with the promises made herein, North Star agrees to provide the following consideration:

(1) A.B. will be permitted to re-enroll in North Star for tenth grade, 2010-11, beginning August 23, 2010, provided that if A.B. chooses to exercise this option, he will notify North Star by no later than July 2, 2010.

(2) A.B. will be provided one-on-one tutoring in Algebra II by a North Star summer school teacher from June 14, 2010 through July 16, 2010. From June 14th through July 2nd, he will be provided tutoring for a total of eight hours (four hours per week with a week off for final exams), with tutoring to be scheduled on Mondays (1½ hours), Wednesdays (1½ hours), and Thursdays (1 hour), beginning at 3:45 p.m. From July 5th through July 16th, he will be provided tutoring for a total of 18 hours (inclusive of tests and assessments), with tutoring to be scheduled Mondays through Fridays from noon to 2:00 p.m. The tutoring schedule will be as follows:

Week of June 14: 4 hours (6/14 1½ hrs, 6/16 1½ hrs, 6/17 1 hr)
each day beginning at 3:45 pm

Week of June 28: 4 hours (6/28 1½ hrs, 6/30 1½ hrs, 7/1 1 hr)
each day beginning at 3:45 pm

Week of July 5: 8 hours (2 hrs each 7/6, 7/7, 7/8, 7/9)*
each day 12 – 2 pm.

Week of July 12: 10 hours (2 hrs each 7/12, 7/13, 7/14, 7/15, 7/16)
each day 12 – 2 pm
*School is closed July 5.

Tutoring will be provided at North Star's downtown campus during the weeks of June 28, July 5 and July 12, and at the main branch of the Newark Public Library during the week of June 14. North Star will reimburse A.B. for his bus transportation for tutoring sessions in June and July, by check payable to Mason in an amount equivalent to $3.00 for each tutoring session attended by Anthony, sent by mail to Mason by mail no later than July 30, 2010.

(3) North Star shall administer an Algebra II proficiency test to A.B. on July 16, 2010 to determine whether he can be excused from taking Algebra II as a prerequisite for other math classes at North Star, and shall provide the results of such testing by mail to Mason by July 30, 2010.

(4) North Star will provide A.B. with its ninth and tenth grade reading lists by June 14, 2010 (receipt of which is hereby acknowledged).

(5) A.B.'s student records through grade 8, including disciplinary records, will remain unchanged, except as follows:

a. His second trimester report card will be revised to reflect his correct average of 82, and grade of B, in Algebra and his status on the honor roll for that trimester;

b. His disciplinary incidents of 4/12/2006, 1/16/2007, and 3/28/2007 will be corrected to specify that a "student apology," not a suspension, was the consequence for those infractions; and

c. All records related to the expulsion of A.B. for an incident occurring on June 9, 2009 will be amended to include the following addendum: "A.B. appealed North Star's expulsion and, pursuant to the settlement of that appeal, the parties agreed that the disciplinary action against A.B. for the incident that occurred on June 9, 2009, should be characterized as a suspension through the end of the 2008-09 school year, and not as an expulsion. As a result, the Board of Trustees' decision of November 16, 2009 shall have no legal force or effect."

(6) A.B.'s student records after grade 8, including high school transcript, will reflect enrollment at University High School for grade 9 and, if A.B. exercises the option set forth in paragraph 2(a)(1) above, enrollment at North Star beginning in grade 10.

(b) Mason acknowledges that North Star's agreement to the terms set forth in subparagraph (a) above is good and valuable consideration, and she understands and agrees that she would not receive the consideration set forth in this paragraph except for her execution of this Agreement and fulfillment of the promises contained herein.

(c) Mason understands that if she breaches any provision of this Agreement, North Star's agreement to provide the consideration set forth above will be void and of no effect.

3. General Release of Claims by Mason. It is understood and agreed by and between the parties that in return for the consideration set forth in Paragraph 2 and the other promises contained herein, Mason does, knowingly and voluntarily, completely and forever waive, release and discharge North Star, its affiliates and related entities and their successors, present or former trustees, directors, employees, officers, agents and representatives from any and all claims, causes of action, and judgments, and any and all claims and rights to compensatory or punitive damages, pre- or post-judgment interest, or attorneys' fees, and any claim of liability of whatever kind and character based on any conduct or incident occurring at any time up to and including the date of this Agreement and relating in any way to A.B.'s past enrollment or attendance at North Star or action taken by North Star with respect to such past enrollment or attendance. Without limiting the foregoing, this General Release includes any and all claims Petitioners, or either of them or anyone on their behalf, may have arising under the New Jersey Civil Rights Act or any other federal, state, or local law, rule and/or regulation or any claim arising under the common law, including but not limited to contract or tort law, whether cognizable in law or in equity; and it specifically includes any and all claims and causes of action that A.B. or anyone on his behalf may have. Mason further agrees that she has not filed any claims, charges or actions or made any allegations relating to North Star in any matter filed in any court, agency, or tribunal, other than the Petition.

4. General Release of Claims by North Star. It is understood and agreed by and between the parties that in return for the release set forth in Paragraph 3 and the other promises contained herein, North Star does, knowingly and voluntarily, completely and forever waive, release and discharge Petitioners from any and all claims, causes of action, and judgments, and any and all claims and rights to compensatory or punitive damages, pre- or post-judgment interest, or attorneys' fees, and any claim of liability of whatever kind and character based on any conduct or incident occurring at any time up to and including the date of this Agreement and relating in any way to A.B.'s past enrollment or attendance at North Star. Without limiting the foregoing, this General Release includes any and all claims North Star or anyone on its behalf may have arising under any federal, state, or local law, rule and/or regulation or any claim arising under the common law, including but not limited to contract or tort law, whether cognizable in law or in equity. North Star further agrees that it has not filed any claims, charges or actions or made any allegations relating to Petitioners in any matter filed in any court, agency, or tribunal, other than the Petition.

5. Withdrawal of Petition. Mason shall withdraw the Petition and take any and all action necessary to secure its dismissal with prejudice, subject only to her right to seek relief in the event that North Star fails to comply with any obligation on its part under this Agreement.

6. Severability. If any provision of this Agreement is declared illegal or unenforceable by any court of competent jurisdiction and cannot be modified to be enforceable, that provision will immediately become null and void, leaving the remainder of the Agreement in full force and effect.

7. Construction. The parties have had an ample opportunity to review and have in fact reviewed this Agreement. Accordingly, the normal rule of construction, to the effect that any ambiguities to be resolved against the drafting party, shall not be employed in the interpretation of this Agreement.

8. This Agreement is entered into in the State of New Jersey and shall be construed and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey.

9. Integration. This Agreement represents the complete understanding between the parties. No other promises, agreements, discussions, or understandings have been made or relied upon by either party to induce the execution of this Agreement by the other party. No other promises, agreements, discussions, or understandings shall be binding or shall modify this Agreement unless made in writing and signed by the parties thereto.

BY SIGNING THIS AGREEMENT, ANGELA MASON ACKNOWLEDGES AS FOLLOWS:

1. She has read this Agreement completely.

2. She has had an opportunity to consider the terms of this Agreement.

3. She has been advised to consult with an attorney prior to executing this Agreement.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF LITTLE FALLS, PASSAIC COUNTY,	:	DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners asserted that the Board's failure to renew the contract of Deborah Caputo – a member of the Education Association – after the superintendent of schools had recommended that her employment be renewed for the 2009-2010 school year was arbitrary and capricious. Petitioners demanded Caputo's reinstatement as a teaching staff member, together with full back pay and emoluments. The Board moved to dismiss the petition, contending that the only basis upon which petitioner's claim could move forward is an allegation of a violation of constitutional or legislatively conferred rights.

The ALJ found that: there is a clear distinction between a probationary teacher employed on a year to year contract and a teacher who has acquired the legislative status of tenure; a tenured teacher has an expectation of continued employment, while a non-tenured teacher must rely upon an offer of continued employment by the board – which must be approved by a recorded roll-call vote of the full membership of the board, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-1; and petitioner failed to allege any violation by the Board of her constitutional or legislatively conferred rights. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board's motion to dismiss the petition.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ for the reasons comprehensively presented in his recommended decision, and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioners' exceptions and the Respondent Board's reply thereto – filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching his determination herein.

As their exceptions, petitioners provide two copies of their previously submitted letter brief in opposition to respondent Little Falls Township Board of Education's Motion to Dismiss. As it is determined that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) fully considered and addressed the arguments advanced therein in his Initial Decision, they will not be revisited here.

Upon his full consideration, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons comprehensively presented in his decision – that the Board's Motion to Dismiss is appropriately granted.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the instant petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

Record Closed: March 17, 2010 Decided: July 26, 2010

BEFORE DANIEL B. MC KEOWN, ALJ (t/a):

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Little Falls Education Association (Association) is the majority representative of teaching staff members employed by the Little Falls Township Board of Education (Board). Deborah Caputo (petitioner) is a member of the Association. Caputo had been employed as a teaching staff member by the Board for the 2008-09 academic year. The superintendent of schools recommended that her employment be renewed for the 2009-2010 academic year. Despite that recommendation, petitioner was not reemployed by the Board. She alleges in a Petition of Appeal filed before the Commissioner of Education on or about July 15, 2009, that because the superintendent recommended her for reemployment the Board's action to withhold reappointment from her is arbitrary and capricious. Petitioner demands reinstatement as a teaching staff member, and seeks all back pay with pre- and post-decision interest, benefits, and all other emoluments of employment, including pension credit, she would have received had the Board not acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner.

The Board moved to dismiss the Petition in lieu of filing an Answer. The argument made by the Board is that the only basis for a nontenure, non-renewal of employment claim may move forward is an allegation of a violation of constitutional or legislatively conferred rights. In the absence of petitioner making such an allegation in the filed Petition, the Commissioner's office granted her ten days within which to submit a letter brief or memorandum providing reasons why the matter should not be dismissed. Petitioner filed the requested memorandum on or about August 25, 2009. On September 15, 2009, the Commissioner transferred the matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to-13.

A hearing was scheduled for December 16, 2009. However, upon request of counsel, the hearing was converted to a prehearing conference. At that conference the parties agreed to the facts, and also agreed that the issue presented is one of law; that is, whether a nontenure teacher whose employment is not renewed when challenging that non-reemployment must plead a violation of constitutional or some legislatively conferred right to avoid dismissal of that challenge. The record closed upon receipt of minutes of an Executive Board meeting of June 2, 2009.

For the reasons which follow, I CONCLUDE a nontenure teacher, when challenging a non-reemployment action, must plead that the adverse action is in violation of a constitutional or some legislatively-conferred right to avoid a dismissal of that challenge.

FACTS

For purposes of the motion to dismiss, the parties agree that the facts are these.

1. Petitioner was employed by the Board as a third-grade teacher for the 2008-09 year.
2. The superintendent of schools evaluated petitioner's performance in the classroom on three separate occasions.
3. The superintendent provided petitioner with a summative evaluation at the end of the school year.
4. The parties agree the evaluations and the summative evaluation were generally positive.
5. The superintendent recommended petitioner be reemployed the following year.
6. Petitioner received notice that the Board would be discussing matters pertaining to her employment at its April 20, 2009, meeting.
7. At that meeting, four members voted in the affirmative to continue her employment, while five board members abstained from voting.
8. The effect of the voting under N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 is petitioner's employment was not continued into the 2009-2010 year.
9. Petitioner submitted a written request on May 1, 2009, for a statement of reasons why her employment was not continued.
10. The superintendent provided the requested statement of reasons in writing on May 6, 2009.

11. The superintendent explains in the statement that one board member abstained from voting on any teachers who taught his children in the present year; that a another board member abstained from voting because she was petitioner's mother-in-law; and, that the remaining three members who abstained from voting perceived the superintendent "showed reserve when questioned about [his] recommendation for reappointment; and (b) that "[petitioner] did not receive what they perceive to be the highest 'glowing' review for a new teacher." (See Exhibit A, attached to Board's memorandum.)

12. Finally, the superintendent explained that the three Board members who perceived "reserve" also believed that petitioner's continued employment would "perpetuate an inherent conflict of interest, as you [petitioner] are a relative of a Board member." (Ibid.)

13. Petitioner was granted the opportunity to be heard by the Board on June 2, 2009.

14. Board minutes of an executive meeting (see Minutes of Executive Session held June 2, 2009) and of a regular meeting held the same evening (see Minutes of Regular Meeting held June 2, 2009, attached as Exhibit B to Board's memorandum) show that while petitioner's employment was again considered, there were insufficient affirmative votes to renew her employment.

There is a clear distinction to be drawn between a probationary teacher employed on a year-to-year contract, with one who has acquired the legislative status of tenure and not otherwise dependent upon a contract for continuing employment. The former teacher must rely upon an offer of continued employment by the board and which must be approved by a recorded roll-call vote of the full membership of the board. N.J.S.A. 18A:27-1. The latter teacher, by virtue of having acquired the legislative status of tenure, has an expectation of continued employment. Absent charges being brought against a tenured teacher and proven true by the board, or a reduction in force, or resignation by the teacher from the board's employ, or other legitimate reasons as provided in law, the tenure teacher has an enforceable claim of continued employment. See N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 et seq. Such expectation of continued employment is a property interest, protected by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

A nontenure teacher has no legally enforceable expectation to continued employment. N.J.S.A.18A:27-4.1(a) does provide that a board of education may not withhold its approval of a nontenure teacher recommended for renewal of employment by the chief school administrator, as is the case here, for reasons that are either arbitrary or capricious. But, as noted by the Board, past decisions of the New Jersey Supreme Court, the Appellate Division, the State Board of Education, and the Commissioner of Education demonstrate that board of education decisions are entitled to great deference and are entitled to a presumption of correctness. See, e.g., Kopera v W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960); Donaldson v. Bd. of Educ. of N. Wildwood, 65 N.J. 236, 241 (1974); Dore v Bedminster Bd. of Educ., 185 N.J. Super. 447, 453-54 (App. Div. 1982).

In Sheridan v. Bd of Educ. Of the Borough of Pitman, EDU 8068-03, modified, Commissioner of Educ. (Dec.1, 2004), aff'd, State Bd. of Educ. (June 1, 2005), http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html, nontenure teacher Sheridan claimed the reasons given by the board for non-renewal of employment were not the real reasons. The administrative law judge (ALJ) agreed with Sheridan and found the real motivation to be a conflict with the superintendent and political pressure from influential parents over voluntary extracurricular activity with the [National Honor Society]. The Commissioner of Education rejected the ALJ's conclusion that Sheridan was entitled to relief in any form. The Commissioner held a non-renewed teacher may obtain relief if he or she can demonstrate that the board of education withheld its approval for reasons that were arbitrary or capricious. But, the ruling is conditioned upon the teacher being able to demonstrate that even it true, the given reasons would constitute a violation of his or her constitutional or legislatively-conferred rights. In the absence of such a showing, the complaining teacher fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted.

In this case, even accepting that petitioner's evaluations of her classroom performance were acceptable, and even accepting that the superintendent recommended petitioner for renewed employment, and even accepting that the vote of the Board on the motion to renew her employment was four affirmative votes and five abstentions, the reasons given for the abstentions do not constitute arbitrary or capricious reasons. In addition, the reasons for the abstentions do not implicate a constitutional or legislatively conferred right to which petitioner may be entitled. In my view, it is reasonable for a board member to abstain from voting on the renewal of employment of a teacher who had taught their children; it is reasonable for a relative, in this case the mother-in-law of petitioner, to abstain from voting to avoid even the appearance, if not the fact, of a conflict of interest; and, in this case, it is reasonable for three members to abstain from voting on petitioner's renewal of employment because of a perceived lack of enthusiasm by the superintendent on his recommendation to renew her employment.

Finally, petitioner asked for and was provided the reasons for her non-renewal of employment. Petitioner was afforded the opportunity to be heard by the Board. The Board reconsidered its earlier determination not to continue petitioner's employment and, again, the motion to continue her employment carried an insufficient number of affirmative votes for the motion to be carried.

CONCLUSION

Having reached the conclusion that petitioner failed to allege some constitutional or legislatively conferred right which the Board was to have violated, the Board's motion to dismiss must be granted. The Petition of Appeal seeking relief in various forms, including reinstatement, must be and is hereby DISMISSED. The Board acted within its broad grant of discretionary authority to determine who shall teach in its schools.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF HUDSON COUNTY SCHOOLS OF TECHNOLOGY, BERGEN COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons set forth in the recommended Order – that petitioners have failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), and codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL denying petitioners' application for emergent relief is adopted for the reasons expressed therein. This matter shall continue at the OAL with such proceedings as the parties and ALJ deem necessary to bring it to closure.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY[1]

Petitioners seek an Order for Emergent Relief directing Respondent, the Board of Education of Hudson County Schools of Technology, (Respondent) to reinstate its sports programs for the 2010-2011calendar year. On July 21, 2010, the Commissioner of the State Department of Education (Commissioner) received Petitioners' application for emergent relief. The Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on July 27, 2010, for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to –15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to –13. On August 3, 2010, the application for emergent relief was heard.

[1] Procedurally, the Commissioner of Education may exercise incidental jurisdiction to determine issues under the Open Public Meetings Act, where such issues are part of a controversy under the school laws. Sukin v. Northfield Board of Education, 171 N.J. Super. 184, 187 (App. Div, 1979).

DISCUSSION

For a request for interim relief or stay, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 requires as follows:

(b) A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;
3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

Petitioners must satisfy all four (4) requirements in order to be entitled to receive the relief requested.

Petitioners are parents of students at Hudson County Prep (County Prep) in Jersey City and Hudson County High Tech School (County Tech) in North Bergen.

Petitioners' claim that on March 18, 2010, Respondent proposed to eliminate sports programs at its school board meeting. On April 1, 2010, it was detailed at Respondent's Board of Estimate meeting that the sports program would be reduced by 65%. On April 22, 2010, Respondent approved the elimination of sport programs effective June 2010, at its school board meeting. The Petitioners further claim that the above actions were taken without proper public notice and participation, as required under the Open Public Meetings Law[2] and the various policies of the schools. Nonetheless, the budget was placed on the May 13, 2010, agenda of the Hudson County Board of Chosen Freeholders (Freeholders) for approval. Despite alternatives proffered by public members, the Freeholders ultimately approved the budget which included the elimination of the sports programs at County Prep and County Tech. At the next Freeholder meeting on June 21, 2010, a resolution to amend the County budget and to reinstate the sports programs was voted down.

Petitioners contend that the elimination of the sports programs at County Prep and County Tech was not motivated by monetary concerns. Petitioners represented also that this measure is harmful because students will have difficulty getting to the sports activities at the receiving districts, there will be fewer opportunities, the likelihood of college recruitment and/or scholarships will be diminished, and social concerns.

Respondent has rejected Petitioners' request to reinstate their sports programs for calendar year 2010-2011 in light of fiscal concerns. Specifically, Respondent cites to program costs, its five (5) percent decrease in state aid, and the need to eliminate its duplicative extracurricular activities offered in the other municipal schools within the County which its students can participate in.

After hearing the parties' arguments and reviewing the documents submitted, I CONCLUDE that Petitioners have not shouldered their burden of establishing the necessary elements to grant emergency relief under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b). Most specifically, there has been no showing of irreparable harm by Petitioners.

It is well settled that relief should not be granted except "when necessary to prevent irreparable harm." Crowe, supra 90 N.J. at 132. Harm is generally considered irreparable if it cannot be adequately redressed by monetary damages. Id. at 132-33.

[2] N.J.S.A. 10:4-6, et seq.

In other words, it has been described as "'substantial injury to a material degree coupled with the inadequacy of money damages.'" Judice's Sunshine Pontiac, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., 418 F. Supp. 1212, 1218 (D.N.J. 1976) (citation omitted). See New Jersey Dep't of Environmental Protection v. Circle Carting, Inc., 2004 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 968 (April 2, 2004) (finding no irreparable harm in connection with the revocation of respondent's solid waste license in that financial loss is generally insufficient to demonstrate this requirement). The moving party bears the burden of proving irreparable harm. More than a risk of irreparable harm must be demonstrated. Continental Group, Inc. v. Amoco Chemicals Corp., 614 F. 2d 351, 359 (D.N.J. 1980). Injunctive relief requires a "'clear showing of immediate irreparable injury,'" or a "'presently existing actual threat; (an injunction) may not be used simply to eliminate a possibility of a remote future injury, or a future invasion of rights, be those rights protected by statute or by common law.'" Ibid. (citation omitted.)

Moreover, in context with the nature of this case, it is well established that participation in an extracurricular activity is a privilege and not a fundamental right, and therefore a student's lack of participation thereof does not rise to the level of irreparable harm. Daniel K. Palmer, et als. v. Peter L. Merluzzi, et als., 689 F. Supp. 400, 1988 U.S. Dist. Lexis 9857 (1988).

It is axiomatic that participation in extracurricular activities by law is considered a privilege and not a fundamental right, notwithstanding their positive ability to build character and life skills in youth. Further, students at County Prep and County Tech will not be foreclosed from the opportunity to participate in sports at alternate schools within the County. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE emergent relief is not warranted.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that Petitioners' application for emergent relief be DENIED.

This Order on application for emergent relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this Order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RESIGNATION

This Settlement Agreement and Resignation (the "Agreement"), is entered into this 13th day of July, 2010, by and between MICHELE TIMBERMAN ("Mrs. Timberman") and the BRIDGETON BOARD OF EDUCATION, CUMBERLAND COUNTY (the "Board") (collectively, the "Parties"). For purposes of this Agreement, the term the "Board" shall mean and include the Bridgeton Board of Education, a body public. The term "Mrs. Timberman" shall mean and include Michele Timberman and any and all of her heirs, executors, administrators, successors, predecessors, assigns, agents, representatives and privies. This Agreement constitutes the complete and final settlement of any and all disputes arising from or relating to Mrs. Timberman's employment by the Board.

WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, the Board prepared and filed tenure charges ("Tenure Charges") based on charges of conduct unbecoming a staff member, incompetence and insubordination against Mrs. Timberman pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and said charges were certified and are pending under Agency Docket No. 12-1/10 and OAL Docket No. EDUTH 00456-2010S; and

WHEREAS, the Parties desire to enter into this Agreement to fully and finally settle and resolve any and all claims, complaints, charges and actions of any kind whatsoever, whether known or unknown, which the Board may have against Mrs. Timberman; and

WHEREAS, the Board acknowledges and agrees that this Agreement shall cause the Board to voluntarily dismiss, waive and withdraw any and all administrative actions of any kind against Mrs. Timberman and the Board has agreed to request that the Commissioner of Education approve the Board's voluntary dismissal of the tenure charges;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the promises and mutual covenants contained in this Agreement, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. (A) Mrs. Timberman agrees that upon signing this Agreement and by signing her Resignation which is attached hereto as Appendix A, she is irrevocably resigning her employment with the Board effective at least by June 30, 2011 pursuant to the remaining terms of this Agreement.

(B) As a result of the tenure charges being certified and contested as represented in the prior introduction, Mrs. Timberman was not paid for 120 days and as a part of this Agreement, she will not seek any reimbursement for those days.

2. (A) Mrs. Timberman will remain employed in a secretary position until the date of her resignation which is June 30, 2011. Thereafter, she will have no claim to any employment with the Bridgeton Board of Education. Mrs. Timberman's employment is contingent upon her compliance with work rules, attendance and proper conduct attendant to the position.

(B) Mrs. Timberman, for the consideration given by the Board as set forth above, which she acknowledges is adequate and satisfactory to her, hereby commits as follows:

(1) Mrs. Timberman irrevocably and unconditionally remises, releases, waives and forever discharges the Board from any and all manner of liabilities, actions, causes of action, contracts, agreements, promises, claims and demands of any kind or nature whatsoever, in law or equity, whether known or unknown, which Mrs. Timberman has ever had or now has against the Board in connection with her employment with the Board, the resignation of her employment, compensation and/or benefits with the Board and the charges. Mrs. Timberman further understands and agrees that this Agreement shall act as a complete bar to any claim, demand or action of any kind whatsoever which could be or could have been brought by her and which seeks personal, equitable or monetary relief for her against the Board, including but not limited to: any claims of wrongful discharge; breach of express or implied contract; fraud; discrimination; retaliation; wages; benefits; other compensation; misrepresentation; defamation; liability in negligence or tort; and any claims of any kind which may be brought in any court of law or equity or an administrative agency; claims for arbitration in any forum; the U.S. Constitution, as amended; the Constitution of the State of New Jersey; Title VII of the U.S. Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; the U.S. Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967; the U.S. Americans with Disabilities Act; the U.S. Age Discrimination in Employment Act; the U.S. Employment Retirement Income Security Act; the U.S. Fair Labor Standards Act; the United States Family and Medical Leave Act; the New Jersey Family Leave Act; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; the New Jersey Department of Personnel; and any other federal, state or local law, regulation or ordinance relating to employment; related torts; and employment, discrimination; employee benefits; collective bargaining agreement; and the termination of employment; and any other claim arising from or relating to Mrs. Timberman's employment. Mrs. Timberman understands that she is not releasing any claims she may have to enforce the provisions of this Agreement. This release covers both claims that Mrs. Timberman knows about and those she may not know about, except for claims (i) that may arise after the date Mrs. Timberman executes this Agreement; (ii) for a breach of this Agreement; or (iii) with respect to any benefits in which Mrs. Timberman has a vested interest under the terms and conditions of any of the Board's employee benefit plans. Mrs. Timberman further agrees not to file a lawsuit or administrative claim or demand for arbitration to assert any of the claims she has given up, released or waived. Any substantial or material breach of this Agreement shall entitle the non-breaching party to an injunction or any action at law or equity to remedy the breach and an award of reasonable attorneys' fees, other professional fees, costs and expenses incurred to remedy and defend against said breach.

(2) All of these releases shall operate from June 1, 2010 retroactively to the inception of her employ with the Board. The release does not cover the period of time from June 1, 2010 through June 30, 2011, but any action shall only be allowed as it relates to any damages for the period from June 1, 2010 through June 30, 2011. If no incidents whatsoever occur, then the acceptance of her resignation which is attached hereto as Appendix A to be effective June 30, 2011 shall act as a release for that stated period from June 1, 2010 through June 30, 2011.

3. The Board agrees to request that the Commissioner of Education approve the Board's voluntary dismissal of the tenure charges, Agency Docket No. 12-1/10, OAL Docket No. EDUTH 00456-2010S, with prejudice in light of Mrs. Timberman's resignation after one year of resumed employment as a secretary and her waiver of the 120 days of non-pay. In executing this Agreement, Mrs. Timberman understands the ultimate decision with regard to the resolution of the tenure charges lies with the Commissioner of Education and in the event that the New Jersey Commissioner of Education rejects the settlement between the Board and Mrs. Timberman, then this agreement is completely null and void and the tenure charges currently pending will continue to be processed.

4. With respect to any inquiries directed to the Bridgeton School Board's Department of Human Resources regarding Mrs. Timberman's status, the Board shall have the responsibility only as provided below. If any inquiries are made, there will be a neutral reference and Appendix B shall be read to the inquiring party.

5. This Agreement is not and shall not in any way be deemed to constitute an admission or evidence of any wrongdoing or liability on the part of the Board or Mrs. Timberman. Rather, this Agreement constitutes the good faith settlement and release of disputed claims, and it is acknowledged and agreed by the Parties that this Agreement is being entered into by the Parties solely to avoid the burden, expense, delay and uncertainties of further litigation and to fully and finally resolve, settle and dismiss with prejudice, any and all claims of any kind whatsoever, whether known or unknown, which the Board or Mrs. Timberman has ever had or now has against each other arising out of or relating to her employment with the Board.

6. This Agreement may not be changed orally and no modification, amendment or waiver of any provision contained in this Agreement, or any future representation, promise or condition in connection with the subject matter of this Agreement shall be binding upon any party hereto unless made in writing and signed by such party and subject to approval by the Board.

7. This Agreement contains the entire agreement and complete settlement between the Parties and supersedes any and all previous agreements of any kind whatsoever between them, whether written or oral. All prior and contemporaneous discussions and negotiations have been and are merged and integrated into, and are superseded by this Agreement. This is an integrated document.

8. In the event that any provision of this Agreement or the application thereof should be held to be void, voidable, unlawful or, for any reason, unenforceable, the remaining portion shall remain in full force and effect and to that end, the provisions of this Agreement are declared to be severable.

This Agreement is made and entered into, and shall be subject to, governed by and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey and shall be fully enforceable in the courts of that state, without regard to principles of conflict of laws. The parties agree that any suit, action or other legal proceeding arising out of this Agreement shall be brought in the Superior Court for the State of New Jersey, County of Cumberland.

9. Mrs. Timberman agrees that she shall be responsible for her own attorney's fees and costs incurred in connection with any matter mentioned in this Agreement.

10. In executing this Agreement, Mrs. Timberman has had an opportunity to speak to her attorney and has relied upon the legal advice of her attorney as to the terms of this Agreement, which have been completely read by her and explained by her attorney, and those terms are fully understood and voluntarily accepted.

11. This Agreement shall not be executed in counterparts and shall be enforceable only if executed by Mrs. Timberman and the Board.

12. This Agreement shall become effective immediately following the execution by Mrs. Timberman and the Board.

WHEREFORE, intending to be legally bound, the Parties have agreed to the aforesaid terms and indicate their agreement by signing below.

APPENDIX B

Joint Statement of Michele Timberman, Cumberland County

Michele Timberman was employed by the Board on or about Sept. 1, 2001 and she resigned on June 30, 2011.

RESOLUTION OF
THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF BRIDGETON

WHEREAS, the Board of Education has filed tenure charges against Michele Timberman for conduct unbecoming a staff member, incapacity, insubordination, and other just cause; and

WHEREAS, on the first day scheduled for trial, all parties appeared and conferred over the appropriate resolution of the charges; and

WHEREAS, Michele Timberman is a non-certificated secretary having acquired tenure under the New Jersey Statutes in her employment with the Bridgeton Board of Education; and

WHEREAS, in order for this matter to proceed there may be a submission of an extensive number of documents, proofs and the requirement of a number of trial days to come to a conclusion; and

WHEREAS, the parties have conferred;

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, as follows:

The Bridgeton Board of Education hereby determines that it is in its best interest and the best interest of the public to agree to the settlement agreement attached hereto which settlement agreement includes the resignation of Michele Timberman from employment in the School District of the City of Bridgeton and which settlement agreement resolves the non-certificated secretary's tenure charge;

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that among the reasons the Board of Education determines that this is in the best interests of the public are as follows:

1. Attached hereto is the comprehensive settlement agreement prepared and executed by the parties which sets forth in particular the documentation as to the nature of the charges, an explanation of the circumstances justifying the settlement, evidence of the consent of both the charged and charging parties, evidence that the charged party entered into the agreement with full understanding of her rights and proof of knowledge of her rights are specifically set forth in significant detail in the settlement agreement.

2. The staff member in question is a non-certificated individual.

3. The resignation of the charged party shall be in compliance with the New Jersey Open Public Records Act, NJSA 47:1A-et seq. wherein employment information of the charged party shall be made public including the individual's name, title, position, salary, payroll record, length of service, date of separation and reason therefor and the amount and type of any pension received.

4. It is anticipated that trial in this matter would consume many days of additional trial time which all parties indicate under the circumstances and pursuant to the agreement of the parties is not in anyone's best interest.

5. The anticipated trial would result in substantial financial expense to the Bridgeton Board of Education with respect to the loss of staff time, mileage and fees that could conceivably be assessed.

6. It is anticipated that the loss of work days for the Superintendent of Schools, the Principal of Bridgeton High School, the two High School Nurses, the Board of Education Human Services Director, one EEO employed by the Bridgeton School District, the one main office secretary at Bridgeton High School, and the supervisor in this case and other possible witnesses would amount to over thirty (30) days in lost work time for school personnel.

7. The Board of Education, for the settlement not to take place, would be responsible to resume paying salary without the benefit of work performed beyond the length of time for the anticipated hearing which would result in additional expense to the Board of Education.

8. Due to the fact that a tenure hearing may be a complicated and involved matter and the fact that the employee involved is a non-certificated individual, there are clearly significant uncertainties of litigation and the Board of Education determines that it is in its best interest to approve the agreement in order to bring some finality to this matter and avoid possible continued litigation and expense including possible appellate expense that could be anticipated were the matter to proceed.

9. It has been reported by the Principal of the Bridgeton High School that there are certain personal circumstances involved with the staff member in question and that her removal from Bridgeton High at this time is more than sufficient and appropriate to deal with this entire matter.

10. It is clearly a business decision to come to the agreement between the Board of Education and Michele Timberman as it will clearly save the Board of Education time, money and give the Board of Education the flexibility in staffing.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the President of the Board of Education and the School Business Administrator are hereby authorized to execute this agreement on behalf of the Bridgeton Board of Education.

The foregoing resolution was moved by Brenda Dellaquilla; and seconded by Marie Bernstein.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 372-12/09

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF BRIAN YUKNA, CAMDEN COUNTY TECHNICAL SCHOOL DISTRICT.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
	:	DECISION

The record of this matter, the proposed settlement agreement (Agreement) and board resolution, and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been considered.

Upon review, the Commissioner approves the settlement terms with the following comments and adjustments. First, it is the Commissioner of Education's responsibility – pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a), which articulates the standards set forth in In re Cardonick, 1990 S.L.D. 842, 846 (State Board, April 6, 1983) – to review and approve or disapprove a settlement of tenure charges against a teaching staff member. The Commissioner finds that the six standards articulated in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a) have been met in this case.

Second, while Paragraph 8 characterizes the Agreement as "confidential," the parties are reminded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(b), no settlement terms may restrict access to information deemed public by law – including this Commissioner final decision incorporating the Agreement. By way of contrast, the exhibits to the letter which the parties agree to attach to the Agreement, may not be annexed to the agreement. These exhibits include letters written by minors and are subject to privacy laws.

Third, Paragraph 2 of the Agreement references an action that may have already taken place, and may therefore have preceded consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, with the foregoing amendments, providing that the parties have either successfully implemented the settlement terms, or have agreed upon mutually satisfactory alternate dates for the effectuation of same. Assuming the foregoing, the matter is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement.

AMENDED RESOLUTION

RESOLUTION APPROVING SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT BETWEEN BRIAN YUKNA AND THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CAMDEN COUNTY TECHNICAL SCHOOLS

WHEREAS, the Camden County Technical Schools' Board of Education previously certified Tenure Charges against Mr. Brian Yukna on December 16, 2009, which Tenure Charge is attached hereto and incorporated by reference herein as Exhibit "A". Said Charge related to the change of a placement test score by Mr. Yukna on an incoming accepted student; and

WHEREAS, Mr. Yukna through his counsel has contested the charge; and

WHEREAS, the matter was referred to the Office of Administrative Law for a full hearing on the Tenure Charge under the caption I/M/L v. THE TENURE HARING OF BRIAN YUKNA, CAMDEN COUNTY TECHNICAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, CAMDEN COUNTY, OAL Docket No. EDU163-10, Agency Docket No. 372-12-09; and

WHEREAS, on the day of hearing, the parties entered into extensive settlement negotiations in an effort to see if the matter could be resolved to the satisfaction of both parties; and

WHEREAS, as a result of said negotiations, it has been determined that this matter should be settled in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and the Settlement Agreement attached hereto and incorporated by reference as Exhibit "B"; and

WHEREAS, the Settlement Agreement is submitted for approval to the Commissioner of Education and for an Order withdrawing the tenure charge; and

WHEREAS, the reasons for entering into the Settlement Agreement are:

That a review of Mr. Yukna's personnel record indicates there is no other progressive discipline against Mr. Yukna;

That for over three years, Mr. Yukna had been performing the required duties of Director of Student Personnel Services, including admitting students to the Pennsauken Campus of the Technical Schools;

That initially the Board of Education was under the impression the placement test was administered to determine if the student should be admitted, which upon further review with staff, it has been determined that the student was already admitted;

That Mr. Yukna acknowledged that after admitting the student he decided to give the student a mathematics placement test to determine whether tutoring would be necessary; that the student completed the test quickly with a failing score which he felt was because the student failed to understand the instructions and that he changed the test score to the minimum passing which still reflected tutoring may be necessary and which was not a detriment to the student.

WHEREAS, it has been determined that Mr. Yukna should not return to his previous position as Director of Student Personnel Services because of his mistake in judgment by changing this placement test score, but that a position is available to be offered to him as a Counselor at the Technical Institute Division (Adult) at the Gloucester Township Campus beginning on July 1, 2010, which will be the return to work date for Mr. Yukna, conditioned on approval of this proposed Settlement Agreement and dismissal of the Tenure Charge; and

WHEREAS, it has further been determined that Mr. Yukna shall not be entitled to any salary increase for the school year 2010-2011 in the position as a Counselor at the Technical Institute at the Gloucester Township Campus; and

WHEREAS, Mr. Yukna's new position will require him to transfer from the Administrator II Union to the FESP Union; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Education for the Camden County Technical Schools has reviewed this matter and the findings set forth hereinabove, and taking into consideration that there is no other progressive discipline against Mr. Yukna since his employment at the Camden County Technical Schools, that Mr. Yukna had for over three (3) years performed his required duties in his position as Director of Student Personnel Services and was the decision maker on admitting students to the Technical Schools Pennsauken Campus without any issues, that the student on whom the placement test score was changed had already been admitted by him and the Board was under a misimpression that the test was for admission purposes which was incorrect, that Mr. Yukna acknowledged that he changed the score for the student on the Mathematics placement test which is a mistake in judgment by him, that Mr. Yukna indicated the test was given to determine the Mathematic capabilities of the student in order to determine necessity of tutoring which test score change still indicated tutoring may be required and was not a detriment to the student, that because of his mistake in judgment he will be removed from his position as Director of Student Personnel Services at the Pennsauken Campus to placement as a Counselor at the Technical Institute (Adult Division) at the Gloucester Township Campus with no salary increase for school year 2010-2011, that for these reasons it is determined not to be in the public interest to proceed with the Tenure Charge but to accept this Settlement and permit Mr. Yukna to retain employment with the Camden County Technical Schools and continue to be a viable staff employee; and

WHEREAS, the Settlement on this matter was placed on record before the Honorable Bruce M. Gorman on April 20, 2010; and

WHEREAS, the consent of both parties to accept this Settlement was placed on the record through the testimony and acknowledgement under oath by both Dr. Albert Monillas, Superintendent of the Camden County Technical School and Mr. Brian Yukna; and

WHEREAS, the Court further took testimony from Mr. Yukna that he fully understood his rights in regard to the matter before the Court and that he was voluntarily entering into this Settlement Agreement; and

WHEREAS, the Members of the Camden County Technical Schools Board of Education have reviewed the Settlement Agreement and have determined that same should be approved in the best interest of the Board of Education and Mr. Yukna and that the Tenure Charge should be withdrawn without further pursuing lengthy and costly litigation against Mr. Yukna in order to permit him to remain a viable member of the Technical School Staff; and

WHEREAS, Mr. Yukna has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for any action against his Certificate.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the Vice President and Members of the Camden County Technical Schools Board of Education that based on the statements set forth hereinabove, it hereby approves the attached Settlement Agreement dated April 20, 2010 between Camden County Technical Schools Board of Education and Mr. Brian Yukna.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a certified copy of this Resolution shall be submitted to the Commissioner of Education's Office as required.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner's position as a tenured teacher of consumer science was eliminated in a reduction in force (RIF), effective in June 2007. She alleged that the appointment of a non-tenured individual as a teacher of culinary arts for the 2009-2010 school year violated her tenure and seniority rights, as petitioner claimed that she had taught essentially the same material in her cooking classes that is now included in the culinary arts curriculum. After her position ended in June 2007, petitioner collected unemployment compensation until obtaining employment in another district in February 2008. She went on to retire from teaching in March 2008. The Board maintained that: petitioner's voluntary retirement in 2008 ended any recall rights she may have had; and the new culinary arts program – which was implemented during the 2009-2010 school year – is substantially different from the family and consumer science program, as it is a vocational program geared to prepare students for careers in food services production and requires instructors to hold culinary arts teacher certification. Consequently, the Board contends that petitioner was not qualified to teach culinary arts and suffered no violation of her tenure rights.

The ALJ found that: petitioner's recall rights to any position with the Board expired with her retirement from teaching in March 2008, and the culinary arts teaching position did not become available for more than a year later; petitioner lacked the certifications and practical restaurant experience necessary to teach in the new culinary arts program; and petitioner presented no evidence to support her contention that the Board hired or retained a non-tenured teacher to teach business, computer or technology education courses in violation of her tenure, seniority and recall rights. The ALJ denied petitioner's appeal and dismissed the case.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

BEFORE JESSE H. STRAUSS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Betsy Carey, a laid-off former tenured teacher with the Township of Springfield Board of Education (Board), protests the appointment of a non-tenured individual rather than her recall to a teacher of culinary arts position for the 2009-2010 school year. She contends that the appointment was to a non-tenured individual who was hired before the Department of Education approved a new program and that, in her cooking classes, she taught substantially all the material included in the culinary arts curriculum.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the Department of Education (DOE) referred the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on November 2, 2009, as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. I heard the matter on April 27, 2010. The parties requested a transcript and the opportunity to submit briefs. After several extensions requested by counsel for petitioner, I closed the record on July 9, 2010, upon the receipt of briefs.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The facts are largely undisputed. I FIND the following FACTS:

Carey is duly certified by the DOE with an Instructional Certificate with endorsements to teach business education and consumer science. She began her employment with the Board in 1999 as a consumer science teacher and earned tenure in September 2002. During her tenure she taught sewing, introduction to foods, and advanced foods and baking.

During the 2006-2007 school year, due to a budget shortfall, the Board reorganized its programs for the following year. It reduced its family and consumer science program from three family and consumer science teachers to one. It dismissed a non-tenured teacher as well as Carey who, although tenured, had less seniority than the one retained teacher. Carey retained recall rights. During the 2007-2008 and 2008-2009 school years, the Board employed only the one remaining family and consumer science teacher, Carolyn Roberti. Roberti retired effective July 1, 2009. After Carey's employment ended on June 30, 2007, due to the reduction-in-force, she collected unemployment compensation until obtaining employment with the Livingston Board of Education in February 2008 as a family and consumer science teacher for seventh and eighth-grade students. She retired and began collecting a pension around the end of March 2008.

Ellyn Atherton is the director of human resources and professional development for the Board. She testified without contradiction that, for several years, there had been ongoing discussions between the Board and its administration regarding the establishment of a culinary arts program. The retirement of Roberti as the last remaining family and consumer science teacher gave the Board the opportunity to move forward with its desire to abolish the family and consumer science program and establish a culinary arts program.

Atherton described the culinary arts program as vastly different from the family and consumer science program in that it was geared to prepare students for food services production. It would be a vocational program based under DOE career and technical education guidelines, which are uniquely different than those for family and consumer science. To meet these goals, the superintendent created a new curriculum through the "Careers through Culinary Arts Program" (C-CAP), a national culinary arts program aimed at preparing students for careers in the restaurant and hospitality industries.

The Board started to meet with the Executive County Superintendent for Union County to confirm that this program would be vocational in nature even though the high schoolwas not a vocational school. . Although the Board desired to replace the family and consumer science program and establish a culinary arts program, it was unsure whether it could attract a qualified teacher for the new curriculum. Therefore, around April 2009, it placed an advertisement in the Star Ledger newspaper for a "culinary arts/family & consumer science teacher." The Board did not recall Carey for the culinary arts teacher position. Instead, in the end of June 2009, the Board hired William Doring for the culinary arts teacher position commencing on September 1, 2009. He holds a certificate in culinary arts and a Servsafe certification required under the culinary arts program. The culinary arts teacher certification is a vocational license that requires a professional experience of having worked in a position such as a chef or in the hotel/restaurant industry. Additionally, in order to meet the demands of the new curriculum, during the summer of 2009, the Board completely renovated the old family and consumer science room to create two new rooms that would support the culinary arts program. It installed "professional quality appliances," and a service area for students to learn how to prepare, serve, and clean up.

Oddly, the Board hired Doring and made the room alterations before it formally submitted its application to the DOE for the new program and before it had received DOE approval. The Board approved the curriculum for culinary arts and food service management through an August 17, 2009, resolution. The Board needed to convince the DOE that its proposed program would meet certain requirements. On September 3, 2009, the Board submitted to the DOE its approval application for the career and technical education program of "Cooking and Related Culinary Arts" to prepare students for an entry-level job in the occupation; to include academic, career, and technical content; to be aligned with business and/or labor; and to be able to lead to an industry-recognized credential or certificate at the secondary level. (R-10.) The Board received verbal approval for its program in early September 2009, after the school year had already begun. It obtained formal approval by September 29, 2010, after working with DOE Representative Roger McCloughan who required follow-up information as to academic and technical resources and verification that the teacher of this program would hold a Servsafe certificate. McCloughan also recommended that the Board partner with the American Culinary Federation. (R-15.) In anticipation of approval, students who had registered for family and consumer science courses for 2009-2010 were given the option to switch to the new culinary arts program.

Unlike Doring, Carey never worked in a restaurant; was not required to visit any restaurants as part of her course study in college; does not hold a culinary arts certification; does not hold a Servsafe certificate, and has never taken a Servsafe course.

In order to implement the new culinary arts program, the Board created a three-year curriculum guide for a "Career and Technical Education Program in Culinary Arts & Food Service Management." (R-1.) It consists of six courses of pre-restaurant 1 and 2, food fundamentals 1 and 2, and restaurant 1 and 2. The goals of these courses are: to introduce students to the foodservice job market with its versatility and limitless career opportunities, R-1, p. 396, and to reinforce math skills by giving specific training in the areas of costing foods and figuring out profit margins and tax on menu items offered in commercial restaurants, R-1, p. 414. The units in these courses include career awareness; personal hygiene, safety and sanitation; terminology, nutrition, tools, knives and utensils; weights and measures; mise en place; ingredients; eggs; dairy; vegetables; fruits; potatoes; pasta, rice, and other starches; garnishes; salads and dressings; appetizers; industry math; use and care of equipment; dish and ware washing; soups and stocks; sauces and gravies; meat; poultry; seafood; quick breads; yeast products; cookies; pies and pastries; cakes and icing; pudding and desserts; costing and portion control; ordering, receiving and storing; computer usage; garde manger; sandwiches; hot station, dessert plating and preparation; regional cooking; international cooking; management training; catering; job readiness; kitchen and dining room maintenance, menu planning; front of the house service; table setting; and beverages.

The family and consumer science curriculum had consisted of courses in introduction to food and nutrition; advanced foods and nutrition; baking I; international cuisine; strategies for living; and family lifestyles. (R-3 to R-7.) Much of the course content for the food-related courses is similar to that in the culinary arts curriculum although geared to home economics rather than commercial culinary arts. The philosophy of the family and consumer science curriculum was described as: teaching practical life skills that students can take with them for survival so they will be able to take care of themselves and recognize the importance of family and consumer science in everyday life, R-3, p. 306; helping students to become well-rounded individuals and working contributors to a democratic society, R-4, p.298; and teaching students to develop consumer, family, and life skills necessary to be a functioning member of society. (R-5, p. 258.)

Again, many of the food preparation units in the family and consumer science curriculum and the culinary arts curriculum are similar. Indeed, Carey credibly testified that she taught advanced foods and nutrition and baking which included shopping, increasing or decreasing recipes, planning a menu, making dinner for an entire class, serving the food, food safety, and how to maintain appliances and clean work areas. It is clear, however, from the comparison of the two curricula that the focus of the culinary arts curriculum is exposure to career opportunities as opposed to learning how to take care of oneself. For example, although required by the culinary arts curriculum, Carey did not teach the requirements of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, food service terminology, or use of a baker's scale. Although she taught the preparation of many of the same foods, instructional strategies were different and more basic. She did not explore the entrepreneurial aspect of a career in the food-services industry and the labor market or discuss the versatile hour requirements that accompany food-services careers. She conceded that she did not use in her courses the instructional strategies set forth in the culinary arts curriculum. She did not have her students inspect a food-service facility to determine if it met state and local health codes or discuss common kitchen pests. She did not use "restaurant preparations" in her class although they used measures. Carey's students did not participate in a banquet or catered event or practice having several entrees ready at the same time. Her students did not learn how to do restaurant pricing, calculate the tax on a guest check at a restaurant or how to operate commercial-kitchen equipment such as slicers, cash registers, band saws or dough dividers. She did not teach management training or how to apply for restaurant positions. She did not teach how to do trade math, or how to complete a purchase requisition form, read a daily food-production report or gauge the number of portions in commercial cans and packages. Carey summed up her testimony by acknowledging that her teaching focused on cooking and baking and cleaning for the home and family, for personal use, and not for commercial use.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The Tenure Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1 to -18, specifically defines the conditions under which teachers achieve tenure protection. Spiewak v. Bd. of Educ. of Rutherford, 90 N.J. 63, 72 (1982). More specifically, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 provides:

> The services of all teaching staff members . . . which require them to hold appropriate certificates issued by the board of examiners, serving in any school district . . . , excepting those who are not the holders of proper certificates in full > force and effect . . . shall be under tenure during good behavior and efficiency . . . after employment in such district or by such board for:

> (a) Three consecutive calendar years, or any shorter period which may be fixed by the employing board for such purpose; or
>
> (b) Three consecutive academic years, together with employment at the beginning of the next succeeding academic year; or
> (c) The equivalent of more than three academic years within a period of any four consecutive academic years.

"In order to acquire the status of a permanent teacher under a tenure law and with it the consequent security of permanent employment, a teacher must comply with the precise conditions articulated in the statute." Zimmerman v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 38 N.J. 65, 72 (1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 956, 83 S. Ct. 508; 9 L. Ed. 2d 502 (1963). No teaching staff member shall acquire tenure in any position in the public schools who is not the holder of an appropriate certificate for such position issued by the State Board of Examiners, in full force and effect. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-4.

A tenured teacher dismissed as part of a reduction in force must be placed on a "preferred eligible list in the order of seniority for reemployment whenever a vacancy occurs in a position for which such person shall be qualified and he shall be reemployed by the body causing such vacancy." N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12.

For several reasons, I CONCLUDE that Carey lacks recall rights to the culinary arts teacher position.

Carey's recall rights to any position with the Board expired with her retirement from teaching in March 2008. The culinary arts teaching position did not become available until more than a year later. In Murray v. Board of Education of the Northern Highlands Regional High School District, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 351, a tenured German foreign-language teacher retired because of the pending abolishment of his position. He later challenged the Board's employment of a non-tenured teacher to act in the place of an English teacher taking an approved maternity leave. He was certified as an English teacher. The Commissioner and the State Board of Education held that, since Murray had not rescinded his retirement, Murray was not entitled to be placed on a preferredeligibility list for reemployment when a vacancy occurred for which he was qualified. When his retirement duly took effect, his employment relationship with the district was severed. Carey was still retired at the time the culinary arts teacher position became available.

Carey claims, in essence, that the culinary arts program is only a thinly disguised effort to repackage the family and consumer science program. I disagree. The Court in Dennery v. Board of Education of the Passaic County Regional School District #1, 131 N.J. 626, 639 (1993) held:

> When the duties of the position in which a teaching-staff member has acquired tenure are substantially identical to those of the position that the person seeks, a local school board may not sidestep an educator's tenure rights by simply renaming the position or tacking on additional meaningless requirements.

However, a mere overlap of duties does not render the two positions equivalent for tenure purposes. "If a newly-created position is similar to a tenure holder's abolished position but also required additional duties or different responsibilities, then the newly-created position is not considered to be substantially similar to the former position." Id. at 640. The creation of the culinary arts program by the Board consisted of much more than simply renaming the family and consumer science teacher position or tacking on additional meaningless requirements.

(A) The Board had to satisfy the rigorous requirements of the DOE. Although Carey argues that the Board "jumped the gun" by hiring Doring and making the physical renovations before obtaining DOE approval for its proposed culinary arts program, such early action does not negate the fact that the Board had to ultimately satisfy the DOE requirements in order to move forward with its program. The Board had to file a formal and specially designed application to create a "career and technical education program." Unlike the family and consumer science program, the Board had to verify that the primary aim of the culinary arts program is to prepare students for an entry-level job in a specific occupation; to include career and technical content; to be aligned with business; and to possibly lead to an industry-recognized credential or certificate. DOE Representative McCloughan required the Board to form a partnership with Servsafe, a company that provides food-safety training, and to hire a Servsafe-certified instructor, which it did in Doring. The Board also complied with his request that it partner with the American Culinary Federation.

(B) As discussed above, the entire curriculum guide for culinary arts was adopted from a national program. Although the program in part taught students to cook the same types of food taught in the family and consumer science courses, the focus of the multi-year culinary arts program is on vocation rather than consumer life skills.

(C) The Board converted an ill-equipped home-economics facility into a professionally equipped facility; hardly indicative of an effort to merely repackage an old product under a different name. As sewing disappeared with the demise of the family and consumer science curriculum, the room formerly used for that purpose became a food service area.

(D) Unlike a teacher of family and consumer science, the culinary arts teacher is required to hold a valid New Jersey technical and career education teacher of culinary arts certificate, as well a sanitation and food safety and protection certificates. The vocational certificate requires a professional-experience phase.

(E) Despite similarity between the programs on how to prepare certain types of food, Carey acknowledged that the culinary arts program uniquely focused on the relationship between the labor market and the food industry, and the teaching strategies for culinary arts were so geared.

There is no merit that the actions of the Board in creating the culinary arts program was merely a subterfuge "rammed through after school began" in order to avoid Carey's recall rights as she suggests. Even though the formal application filing with the DOE occurred after the Board hired Doring, the April 2009 advertisement for a culinary arts or a family and consumer science teacher, the extensive summer renovations, and the Board's adoption of a comprehensive and new curriculum in August 2009, in addition to the filing, collectively demonstrate an extraordinary effort to create a new program rather than a mere charade to prevent a particular teacher from exercising her recall rights. Simply, Carey lacked the certifications and the practical restaurant experience to teach the program contemplated by the Board in the spring of 2009. Also, there is no merit in Carey's argument that she should have been recalled to teach at least the introductory pre-restaurant culinary arts classes given in the first year of the new program. She presented insufficient evidence to conclude that she could teach all aspects of the introductory courses no less the advanced courses. The teaching vacancy was for an individual who was qualified to teach all six courses of the multi-year vocational program. Doring met those qualifications. Carey did not.

I CONCLUDE that the Board has not hired or retained a non-tenured teacher to teach business, computer or technology education courses in violation of Carey's tenure, seniority and recall rights. Although Carey made such an allegation in her petition, she presented no evidence in support of it and made no argument to support it in her brief.

JOHN DACRES, PETITIONER, V. NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, CRIMINAL HISTORY REVIEW UNIT, RESPONDENT.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a school bus driver – appealed the Department's determination to suspend his school bus endorsement pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28 after an alleged incident in which a kindergarten student was left on his bus in December 2008 as the result of petitioner's failure to conduct the mandated visual inspection at the end of his route. Respondent filed a motion for summary decision, supported by certifications from several people with knowledge of the incident.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: on December 5, 2008, a five-year-old student, K.B., was placed on a school bus driven by petitioner; petitioner parked the bus at the end of his route and failed to perform the mandated visual inspection of the vehicle's interior before exiting, as is required by N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28; K.B. remained on the bus after it was parked; the child – crying but otherwise unharmed – managed to exit the closed bus and sought help from a high school teacher who was in the parking lot; and petitioner presented no evidence of any sort in opposition to the facts offered in evidence through the certifications presented by respondent. Accordingly, the ALJ granted summary decision in favor of respondent, ordered a six-month suspension of the petitioner's school bus endorsement – which is the mandatory penalty for a first offense pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28 – and dismissed the petition.

Upon full review and consideration of the record, the Acting Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the Office of Criminal History Review is entitled to summary decision in this matter. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed and the respondent was directed to notify the Motor Vehicle Commission of its obligation to suspend petitioner's school bus endorsement pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28 et seq., and to notify petitioner's employer that he is ineligible for the period of suspension for continued employment as a school bus driver.

JOHN DACRES,

Petitioner,

v.

NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, OFFICE OF CRIMINAL HISTORY REVIEW UNIT,

Respondent.

Edward A. Cridge, Esq., for petitioner (Wills, O'Neill & Mellk, attorneys)

Bryant Lawrence Horsley, Jr., Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Paula T. Dow, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: July 2, 2010 Decided: July 26, 2010

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

The New Jersey Department of Education, Office of Criminal History Review Unit, intends to suspend John Dacres' bus driver's license "S" endorsement due to an incident in which it is alleged that Dacres, while serving as a school bus driver for the South Plainfield Board of Education, left a child on the school bus which he drove. The child was discovered walking alone in the parking area of the South Plainfield High School on December 5, 2008. He had been a passenger on the bus, which transported him from the morning enrichment program at Roosevelt School to the afternoon kindergarten at the Riley School. It is claimed that the child feel asleep on the bus and that Dacres and the aide assigned to the bus failed to notice him and exited the bus. The child was then left on the bus, from which he managed to exit while it was parked in the lot between the High and Middle Schools. The child was unharmed. Dacres was indicted for fourth degree child abuse, abandonment and neglect in violation of N.J.S.A. 9:6-1 and 6-3 and was granted Pre-Trial Intervention, thereby postponing final disposition of the criminal charges for a period of eighteen months.

On January 7, 2009, the respondent advised Dacres by letter that it intended to suspend his "S" endorsement to operate a school bus, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28, which provides for such a suspension in a first instance of a driver's failure to conduct the required visual inspection of the bus at the end of a transportation route to assure that no pupil is left on the bus.[1] Dacres requested a hearing to challenge the suspension and, once the matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law, moved for a stay of the proceedings pending the disposition of the criminal matters, which resolution would not be final until he either successfully completed the PTI program or failed to do so and such other disposition as might then occur was finalized. I denied that application by Interlocutory Order dated October 15, 2009.

The respondent has now moved for summary decision, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. In support of the motion, it has presented a series of certifications. One is from the child's mother, who states that the child was left on the bus and managed to open the doors and was discovered by high school personnel. Another is from the Roosevelt School aide, Bori, who escorted the child to the bus that picks up students for transport to the Riley School and who states that the bus was driven by Dacres. A third is from the principal of Riley Elementary School, Czech, who advises that the child was marked

"A school bus driver shall visually inspect the school bus to which he is assigned at the end of the transportation route to determine that no pupil has been left on the bus. . . . ."
N.J.S.A. 18A:39-29. Violation, suspension, revocation of school bus endorsement "In the event that, after notice and opportunity to be heard, a school bus driver is found to have left a pupil on the school bus at the end of his route, his school bus endorsement shall be:
a. suspended for six months, for a first offense; or
b. permanently revoked, for a second offense."

present at Roosevelt that morning, was marked absent from the afternoon kindergarten at Riley, and that he was informed at 1:15 pm that the child was in the school nurses' office after being picked up by teachers during a South Plainfield High School evacuation that resulted from a suspected gas leak. He also states that the child told him that he had fallen asleep on the bus, awoke to find no one else on the bus and then managed to open the bus door and exit the vehicle.

Additionally, Egan, a teacher at South Plainfield High School, states that she was assisting in the evacuation when the boy walked up to her, in tears, and asked for help. He told her that he was coming from a bus. She turned the child over to the High School's vice-principal.

Marlene Steele, the supervisor of Transportation for the South Plainfield School District, states that on December 5, 2008, there was one bus assigned to transport children from Roosevelt's kindergarten enrichment program to the afternoon kindergarten program at Riley. At the end of the morning bus route the bus driver parks the bus in the South Plainfield bus lot between the high and middle schools. She further certifies that on December 5, 2008, John Dacres was assigned as a substitute bus driver for that bus and Angelina Manno was the assigned aide on the bus. When the incident was reported to Steele she went to her office to speak to Dacres and Manno in person, but they refused to make any written statement. They were accompanied to this meeting by their respective union representatives. They were each told not to report to work until further notice. The respondent did not present any certification from the child, K.B., who, according to a Middlesex County Prosecutor's Detective Bureau report supplied as an exhibit with the motion for summary decision, was five years old at the time of the incident.

In arguing on behalf of its motion, the respondent contends that the sole factual issues material to the matter are that K.B. was left on the school bus on December 5, 2008, and that Dacres was the driver of the bus that day. It argues that the materials offered in support of the motion amply establish these facts and that Dacres has failed to demonstrate the existence of any genuine dispute of material fact that might defeat summary decision and require a full evidentiary hearing. In fact, Dacres' response to the motion asserts that, in the face of continuing potential for criminal jeopardy due to the ongoing PTI period, he has validly invoked his Fifth Amendment privilege and that as he has not admitted any facts about the case, there is no competent evidence upon which an adjudication can be based and the motion must therefore be denied. Moreover, he asserts that "fundamental fairness" requires that he have the opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses against him and testify in his defense, should he elect to do so. He contends that if his silence at this time is utilized against him in connection with the determination of the motion for summary decision, such would be an unlawful "penalty" that cannot be imposed on one who validly relies on the Fifth Amendment privilege. Any adverse inference that may be drawn from his silence would also constitute an unlawful penalty arising from the rightful use of the privilege.

SUMMARY DECISION

Summary decision, or as it is known in judicial matters as summary judgment, is a well-recognized procedure for resolving cases in which the facts that are crucial to the determination of the matters at issue are not actually in dispute and the application to that set of material facts of the applicable law and standard of proof lead to a determination of the case without the necessity of a hearing at which evidence and testimony need be taken. The procedure is equally applicable in judicial as well as executive-branch administrative cases. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. The standards for determining motions for summary judgment were defined by Justice William Brennan, then a New Jersey Supreme Court Justice, in Judson v. People's Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74-75 (1954). The Supreme Court later elaborated on the motion and its standard in Brill v. The Guardian Life Insurance Company of America, et al., 142 N.J. 520 (1995). Under the Brill standard, as in Judson, a motion for summary decision may only be granted where there are no "genuine disputes" of "material fact." The determination as to whether disputes of material fact exist is made after a "discriminating search" of the record, consisting as it may of affidavits, certifications, documentary exhibits and any other evidence filed by the movant and any such evidence filed in response to the motion, with all reasonable inferences arising from the evidence being accorded to the opponent of the motion. In order to defeat the motion, the opposing party must establish the existence of "genuine" disputes of material fact.

The facts upon which the party opposing the motion relies to defeat the motion must be something more than "facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, fanciful, frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious, . . . ," Judson, supra., at 75 (citations omitted). The Brill decision focuses upon the analytical procedure for determining whether a purported dispute of material fact is "genuine" or is simply of an "insubstantial nature." Brill, supra at 530. Brill concludes that the same analytical process used to decide motions for a directed verdict is used to resolve summary decision motions. "The essence of the inquiry in each is the same: 'whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so one-sided that a party must prevail as a matter of law.' " Id. at 536, quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 251-52, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 2512, 91 L.Ed.2d 202, 214. In searching the proffered evidence to determine the motion, the judge must be guided by the applicable substantive evidentiary standard of proof, that is, the "burden of persuasion" which would apply at trial on the merits, whether that is the preponderance of the evidence or the clear and convincing evidence standard. If a careful review under this standard establishes that no reasonable fact finder could resolve the disputed facts in favor of the party opposing the motion, then the uncontradicted facts thus established can be examined in the light of the applicable substantive law to determine whether or not the movant is clearly entitled to judgment as a matter of law. However, where the proofs in the record are such that "reasonable minds could differ" as to the material facts, then the motion must be denied and a full evidentiary hearing held.

While Dacres claims that summary decision should not be granted because he has not had an opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses against him or present his own testimony, the very essence of the summary decision procedure is that in the appropriate case, the issues necessary to decide the case, that is, the material facts to which the applicable law must be applied to decide the matter, are not themselves the subject of any genuine dispute and therefore, there is no need for a testimonial proceeding. If, instead, the examination of the affidavits, certifications, and documentary evidence offered for and against the motion shows that there is a genuine dispute about any of these material facts, the motion must fail. As such, the appropriate question to be considered is, what are those material facts and are they in genuine dispute? To determine the first question, it is necessary to look at the words of the statute upon which the respondent bases its attempt to suspend Dacres' endorsement.

The statutes that underlie the proposed suspension are very simple in form and there are few facts that must exist to form the basis for action thereunder. N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28 only requires that a driver perform a visual inspection at the end of a route. The reason for this is stated as the need to assure that no pupil is left on the bus. Thus, evidentially it is necessary to establish that Dacres was the driver of the bus in question, and the certifications of Bori and Steele support this fact. If a child is left on the bus at the end of the route, the driver is to be suspended. Evidentially, that a child is left on a bus at the end of a route is itself at the very least prima facie evidence of a failure on the part of the driver to properly inspect the bus at the end of the route. The evidence offered by the DOE demonstrates that K.B. was placed on the bus, (Bori), was transported on the bus, was found, in tears, in the parking lot after the bus had been parked, (Egan), and reported being left on the bus, (C.B. and Egan). There is clearly a prima facie showing that he was not properly removed from the bus when it arrived at his intended destination, at which he was initially marked absent (Czech). Taken together, this evidence leads to a seemingly inevitable conclusion that is, that K.B. was left on the bus after it was parked, obviously without having been discovered there by the driver whose duty it was to inspect the bus and assure that no child was left behind.

It is the responsibility of a party opposing a motion for summary decision to present certifications or other evidence to establish the existence of genuine disputes of material fact. Mr. Dacres has chosen to offer nothing in response to the DOE's evidence. In a civil matter, a party who has a genuine concern that his answers to interrogatories or other discovery demands may incriminate him has the right to plead the Fifth Amendment and refuse to answer, but unlike in the criminal context, the person invoking the right is not altogether shielded from consequences as a result of that action. It is lawful for a finder of fact to draw a negative inference from the invocation of the privilege, Baxter v. Palmigiano, 425 U.S. 308, 319-20 (1976); State, Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement v. Merlino, 216 N.J. Super. 579 (1987), aff'd, 109 N.J. 134 (1988), and, perhaps more importantly in the context of a motion for summary decision, even without resorting to such inference the failure of the opposing party to offer any evidence whatsoever to support a dispute of material fact in opposition to the motion can itself support the grant of the motion. A party who may properly invoke the privilege is not necessarily precluded from producing other evidence to oppose a motion for summary decision that in itself is not incriminating or likely to lead to incriminating evidence. And contrary to Dacres' statement that in the face of a denial of "all of Respondent's allegations, rather than invoking his Fifth Amendment Privilege, Respondent's Motion . . . would not be entertained and a plenary hearing would be held," it is only where a properly plead motion is opposed by evidence of genuine dispute of the material issues that the motion is doomed. A mere denial is insufficient to defeat a properly supported motion.

Mr. Dacres has not offered anything to suggest that there is any genuine issue as to the material facts of this case. His pleas for "fundamental fairness" to allow him to test the trustworthiness of evidence and to explain and rebut it at a plenary hearing, suggest that he either misunderstands or ignores the very purpose of a motion for summary decision.

Based upon the evidence offered by the respondent, giving all reasonable inferences to the opposing party, Dacres, I FIND that on December 5, 2008, K.B., a five-year-old student, was marked present in his morning class at the Roosevelt School. John Dacres then drove a school bus between the Roosevelt and the Riley Schools on which K.B. had been placed. I FIND that Dacres parked the bus between the High and Middle Schools and failed to properly inspect the bus, as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28. As a result, he failed to discover that K.B. remained on the bus after it was parked and otherwise emptied. K.B., who was initially marked absent from his afternoon kindergarten class at Riley School, managed to exit the bus after Dacres and the aide had departed from the bus. He approached Ms. Egan, a high school teacher who was on the parking lot due to an evacuation of the high school then in progress. The child was in tears, but was otherwise not harmed. I FIND that Mr. Dacres has presented no evidence of any sort in opposition to the facts offered in evidence on the motion by the respondent through certifications of the persons who placed the child on the bus, observed that Dacres was the driver, was approached by the child in the parking lot, determined the K.B. was present in school at Roosevelt, but initially marked as absent at Riley, and who arranged for the child to be reunited with his mother. Given the limited facts that must be established to support a violation of the duty imposed by the Legislature on a school bus driver to properly inspect the bus at the end of a route to assure that no child is left on the bus, the unopposed certifications offered by the DOE amply support summary decision in its favor. And given the mandatory nature of the penalty for a first time violator of the mandate, the six-month suspension is the only outcome where the violation is proven. N.J.S.A. 18A:39-29a. The motion for summary decision is hereby GRANTED and it is hereby ORDERED that the petitioner's "S" endorsement shall be suspended for six months.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter, the proposed Settlement Agreement and Release (Agreement), and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Article II of the Agreement appears to contemplate certain actions that may have preceded consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner. The parties are reminded that a proposed settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same.

Accordingly, the Acting Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case providing that the parties have either successfully implemented the settlement terms, or have agreed upon mutually satisfactory alternate dates for the effectuation of same. Assuming the foregoing, the matter is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

No one appearing for respondents Air Control Technologies, Inc., Eagle Mechanical, Inc., and/or Falasca Mechanical, Inc.

BEFORE JOHN R. FUTEY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In this matter, petitioner Surety Mechanical Services (hereinafter "petitioner" or "Surety") seeks emergent relief to invalidate the July 15, 2010, resolution of respondent, the Board of Education of the Camden County Vocational School District (hereinafter "Camden" or the "district") which had rejected all bids for certain mechanical work as part of a capital improvement project at its Gloucester Township campus, which mechanical work is commonly known as HVAC. This rejection included the three above-captioned respondent contractors along with petitioner. Petitioner further asserts and demands by way of emergent relief that the three respondent contractors' bids should be declared as unresponsive, that Camden should be compelled to award the project contract to petitioner and, that petitioner should be awarded attorney's fees and costs of suit. Camden contends that the bid by petitioner was substantially cost excessive and well beyond the authorized cost estimate for the project, thereby making its rejection appropriate under the circumstances. The other three bids were rejected as being non-compliant relative to the status of certain subcontractors. As a result, Camden rejected all of the four bids submitted for the project, along with two additional ones whose interests are not in issue in this matter. Camden asserts that it should then have the right to consider the bids received as a result of the issuance of a second bid invitation by it on July 27, 2010 for the mechanical work for the project and that it be permitted to award the HVAC bid to a qualified contractor who meets the bid specifications and is within the $200,500.00 cost estimate for that part of the project. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for emergent hearing as a contested case on August 5, 2010, and received at the OAL on August 6, 2010, on petitioner's application for emergency relief. It was assigned to and received by this administrative law judge on August 9, 2010. The matter was scheduled for oral argument on August 11, 2010. After having considered the status of the three responding contractors and after concluding that no one intended to appear on their behalf, the matter proceeded to hearing, with the understanding that should any of those respondent parties arrive late they would be given the opportunity to be heard under the circumstances, with an appropriate opportunity to respond by the other parties in attendance. No one did appear on their behalf, however. As a result, on that date, oral argument was held and concluded. At the conclusion of that hearing, the record closed with respect to the application for emergent relief.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

For purposes of deciding the application for emergent relief, the following facts are determined to be undisputed, this having occurred after this tribunal received oral arguments with reference to the requested relief as well as the extensive submissions of petitioner which were a part of the transmittal packet (and which I have sua sponte accepted into evidence as petitioner's exhibits P-A through P-N) as well as the extensive response received on behalf of Camden, which had been hand delivered to the OAL on August 10, 2010, although it was not personally retrieved from the OAL mail room and received by this administrative law judge until the commencement of the hearing on August 11, 2010 (which I have similarly sua sponte accepted into evidence as respondent's exhibits R-A through R-F). All of those submissions were considered as part of the decision on the Order here in.

This matter involves a challenge to the District's bidding procedure, which, in essence, and as stated hereinabove, rejected the bids of the three top mechanical contractors due to their respective and individual failures to be compliant with the bidding specifications and which further rejected the bid of petitioner, the fourth in line bidder, when it determined that petitioner's bid was significantly over the predetermined cost estimates, which had been set at $200,500.00 for the mechanical work. Petitioner's bid was $243,000.00, which meant that it exceeded the cost estimate for mechanical work by $42,500.00.

As noted in the chronology of events in the affidavit of James Clark, business administrator (P-I), (and as corroborated in the affidavit of Dirk Muits III, architect for the project) (P-M), Camden has sought to undertake a capital improvement project at its Gloucester Township campus for its "newly developed and well received performing arts program" (see paragraph two of the Clark affidavit) which includes, among other aspects of the project, construction work, electrical work, and certain mechanical work, the last of which is under the heading of HVAC. The mechanical work portion requires public bidding, which resulted from an estimated cost of mechanical work identified in the HVAC category, as indicated hereinabove, in the amount of $200,500.00. Based upon the uncontroverted facts in the Clark affidavit, the projected budget was properly listed, identified and targeted as early as June, 2010 when bids were placed on the project estimated cost sheet (form DOE-130) as well as by July 1, 2010, when the superintendent of schools completed his part of the cost estimate project.

Six bids were received on July 8, 2010, opened and read. The only bidder within the approved cost estimate was Air Control Technologies at $183,500.00. The others all exceeded the estimates figured either slightly or, in the case of petitioner, substantially. Upon compliance review, it was then determined that Air Control Technologies did not meet all of the bid requirements relative to the identification and qualification of subcontractors. The second lowest bid was by Eagle Mechanical and came in at $208,000.00. It also failed to meet the requirement regarding identification and qualifications of subcontractors. The third bid, which was by Falasca Mechanical, came in at $215,560.00, which also failed to meet the requirements regarding subcontractors for the project. As noted, the fourth bidder in line was Surety which came in at $243,000.00. All the parties were advised in writing by notice from Clark of the rejection of their respective bids on July 12, 2010, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A: 18 A-22. In a follow up e-mail exchange between Thomas Paul, president of Surety, and Clark, on July 14, 2010, Clark reiterated the basis for the rejection as being pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A: 18A-22 and then further supplied and identified the subsections a and b on the same statutory section, which allows a school district to reject bids based upon either (1) the lowest bid substantially exceeds the cost estimate for the goods or services or (2) the board wants to substantially revise the specifications for the goods and services. This email exchange between those parties occurred one day before the district formally passed a resolution in which it indicated: "that the bids for the new Mechanical Systems, Gloucester Township Campus, Building number 2, Room 1, accepted on July 8, 2010, be rejected and that the specifications pertaining thereto be revised and rebid." (P-I) (Emphasis added).

Petitioner argues that the district resolution is automatically and patently defective, and the actions relative to same by the district are arbitrary and capricious inasmuch as it fails to give an explanation regarding the rejection of any of the bids. Further, even though the notice indicated that revisions were to be made to the specifications and then rebid, it resulted in only minor, incidental changes, at best, as a result of which it created the perception, at a minimum, of some type of tampering in order to control the bid process, which would also make such action arbitrary and capricious. The district concedes that the resolution was not artfully drawn and counsel for the district admitted that had he been on vacation at the time it is more likely than not that he could have clarified any misunderstanding or misconception or could have been more artful when it was otherwise issued. In any event, he nonetheless noted that the language quoted and emphasized hereinabove regarding the rejection of the bids stands by itself and that, as only as it pertained to the original top three bidders, the specifications were to be revised. In essence, he contends that everyone knew that their bids were rejected and that the e-mail exchange between Clark and Paul further clarified any questions about the reason for the rejection of his bid prior to the formal action by the district board. He also conceded that the issue over whether or not the changes which were effectuated were substantial or not is one that could be the subject of later fact finding, should it become necessary to do so. However, he nonetheless asserted that one does not have to get to that level since the district had the affirmative right, duty and obligation to reject all of the bids on the basis of their respective deficiencies as noted hereinabove. And, as it specifically pertains to Surety, the district maintains that it could not responsibly award a bid to Surety in light of the significantly higher bid which it had tendered, which greatly exceeded that of the others. Thus, although, as counsel suggested, a potential adjustment to the bid level could have been considered a possibility five years ago, the current budgetary crisis in New Jersey, the scrutiny and demands being placed upon school districts, and the obligations on the part of the New Jersey Department of Education to demand fiscal responsibility from those districts dictates a rejection of any bids which are at significant variance from the authorized level mandated for any project. Thus, although the district has absolutely no problem with the integrity of the work which could have been generated by Surety, its inappropriate bid made it fall outside the realm of being a responsible bidder under the circumstances.

Surety also contends that the determinations, rejections and notice by Clark on July 12, 2010, which occurred before the July 15, 2010, meeting by the district, demonstrate that the actions by the district were arbitrary and capricious. While conceding that the procedure which the business administrator used in advance of the formal board meeting appears somewhat odd or, as he described it, "unusual", counsel for the district nonetheless maintains that it was merely the result of bad timing (since he was on vacation at the time and unable to marshal it through properly) and does not reflect any negative effort to manipulate the bid process against Surety. Rather, the district was acutely concerned about completing this necessary part of the larger construction project prior to the start of school in September in order to avoid any adverse impact upon the students there at that time. As a result, it attempted to advance the procedural bidding agenda by having the construction completed before the arrival of the students and also in light of the requirement that the State Department of Education be given the opportunity to approve it in a timely fashion as part of that process. I FIND complete merit with that explanation by the district and applaud the candor with which it was expressed by its attorney. I strongly suspect that as a result of the confusions or potential misconceptions which may have attended the manner in which the bidding process in this matter occurred, he will become engaged more directly by the district in the future earlier on in the process. Thus I FIND the explanation of the district to be plausible under the circumstances.

Finally, Surety argues that the submission of the budgetary analysis by the district to the Department of Education only after the issuance of the bid rejection resolution demonstrates that it acted in bad faith and attempted to bootstrap a late hour argument onto its prior rejection of the Surety bid. The district responds by denying any nefarious effort to thwart responsible bidding. Its submission of the supportive documentation to the New Jersey Department of Education could only have been made and done after an official resolution by the district board was made on July 15, 2010. As to this last argument and after having considered the positions of both sides in that regard, I FIND that Surety's argument is specious at best. The district followed a routine, realistic, plausible procedure which is devoid of any tampering with the bid process. Its actions in that regard do not appear to reflect any ulterior motive to deny Surety appropriate entitlement since the State Department of Education also must approve the project in any event and, as result, the district was only following standard procedure in order to provide that information to the State accordingly.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

Petitioner claims that the respondent district's actions in this matter are arbitrary, unreasonable and capricious, and that it violate its due process rights because the district has denied them an entitlement as being the lowest responsible bidder under the circumstances.

The district maintains that it properly rejected all four of the bids and that, in the particular case of Surety, it could not have permitted the significantly higher bid of Surety to have been accepted or acceptable in light of its obligation to maintain fiscal responsibility as well as pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A: 18A-22. Thus it contends that Surety was not a responsible bidder in light of its significantly high bid.

N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6(a) provides for the granting of emergency relief where authorized by law and where irreparable harm will result without an expedited decision granting or prohibiting some action or relief connected with a contested case. In such circumstances, emergency relief pending a final decision may be ordered upon the application of a party. Subparagraph (f) of this section provides that temporary relief may be granted if there is a finding that immediate and irreparable harm will probably result, if there is the likelihood that the moving party will prevail, and if the relief is as limited in scope and as temporary as possible. The granting of emergent relief is an extraordinary remedy which can only be awarded based upon a showing that irreparable harm will result if it is not granted, and a further showing that there is a likelihood of success on the merits. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6; Stroh Assoc., Inc. v. Bd. of Educ. of the Twp. of Hillsborough, Somerset County, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 235.

The foregoing regulation embodies the principles of law announced by the Supreme Court in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132 (1982). These legal principles may be summarized as follows:

1. Emergency relief should not issue except when necessary to prevent irreparable harm. Harm is generally considered irreparable if it cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages. In certain circumstances, severe personal inconvenience can constitute irreparable injury justifying issuance of injunctive relief. Pecuniary damages may be inadequate because of the nature of the injury or of the right affected.

2. Emergency relief should be withheld when the legal right underlying the claim of the requesting party is unsettled.

3. Emergency relief should not issue where all material facts are controverted. Thus, to prevail on an application for emergency relief, the party requesting the relief must make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits. That requirement is tempered by the principle that mere doubt as to the validity of the claim is not an adequate basis for refusing to maintain the status quo. The point of emergency relief is to maintain the parties in substantially the same condition when the final decision is issued, as they were when the litigation began.

4. The final test in considering the granting of emergency relief is the relative hardship to the parties in granting or denying relief. The relief granted should be no broader than necessary to preserve the status quo pending a full hearing on the merits.

Petitioner must meet all four criteria to prevail on this application. See Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982); DEC Electric, Inc. v. Bd. of Educ. of the S. Gloucester County Reg'l High Sch. Dist. and USA Elec. Contractors, Inc., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 789, 790 (citing DEC Electric, Inc. v. S. Gloucester County Reg'l High Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. and USA Elec. Contractors, Inc., EDU 10833-95, Order Denying Emergent Relief (Dec. 6, 1995) adopted, Comm'r (Dec. 26, 1995) (denied unsuccessful bidder's request for emergent relief because it was unable to establish that it would suffer immediate and irreparable harm, although it was able to establish a reasonable likelihood of success on the merits and that the parties opposing the motion would not suffer undue harm). The moving party bears the burden of proving each of the elements for emergent relief "clearly and convincingly." Waste Mgmt of N.J. v. Union County Util. Auth., 399 N.J. Super. 508, 520 (App. Div. 2008).

In order for Surety to demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits, it must first show that the district's procedural acts relative to its rejection of the Surety bid mandate that its actions be overturned and, moreover, that Surety should be entitled to the contract award as the "lowest responsible bidder." In accordance with well established law, this tribunal may not overturn the District's action unless it finds that the decision was an abuse of discretion. Serenity Contracting Group, Inc. v. Borough of Ft. Lee, 306 N.J. Super. 151, 154 (App. Div. 1997), certif. denied, 153 N.J. 214 (1998) (determination by a governing body not to award a contract to a bidder will be reviewed on an abuse of discretion standard); Tec Elec., Inc. v. Franklin Lakes Bd. of Educ., 284 N.J. Super. 480, 488 (Law Div. 1995) (standard of review to determine whether the denial of the waiver by the Board of Education was the ordinary abuse of discretion standard); Palamar Constr., Inc. v. Twp. of Pennsauken, 196 N.J. Super. 241, 250 (App. Div. 1983) ("A reviewing court cannot overturn the decision of a municipal body unless it finds that the decision is arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable. Even when doubt is entertained as to the wisdom of the action, or as to some part of it, there can be no judicial declaration of invalidity in the absence of clear abuse of discretion by the public agencies involved.").

It is noted that the purpose of competitive bidding for local public contracts is not protection of individual interests of bidders, but rather advancement of the public interest in securing the most economical result by inviting competition in which all bidders are placed on equal footing. See Twp. of River Vale v. R.J. Longo Construction Co., 127 N.J. Super. 207 (Law Div. 1974). Courts have consistently held that the purpose of the competitive bidding process is to secure the most economical result in the expenditure of public moneys by promoting uninhibited competition and guarding against "favoritism, improvidence, extravagance and corruption." Twp. of Hillside v. Sternin, 25 N.J. 317 (1957); see L. Pucillo & Sons, Inc. v. Mayor of New Milford, 73 N.J. 349 (1977). Accordingly, statutes authorizing competitive bidding demand that publicly advertised contracts be awarded to the "lowest responsible bidder."

Although case law suggests that strict compliance with public-bidding guidelines is required, see, e.g., Pucillo, supra, 73 N.J. at 349 ("[w]e are not, however, willing to transform the mandatory requirement in these specifications into a polite request."), competitive bidding provisions should not be construed in such a way as to thwart the primary purpose of achieving economy. Tec Elec., Inc. v. Franklin Lakes Bd. of Educ., 284 N.J. Super. 480, 484 (Law Div. 1995). As such, material conditions contained in bidding specifications may not be waived, while immaterial deficiencies may be waived. See Meadowbrook Carting Co. v. Island Heights Borough, 138 N.J. 307, 314 (1994) (holding that the inclusion of a consent of a surety is a material condition precedent to a responsive bid). These goals are also intended to be achieved through the Public School Contracts Law (PSCL). Tec Elec., 284 N.J. Super. at 483 (citing F.S.D. Industries, Inc. v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Paterson, 166 N.J. Super. 330, 334 (App. Div. 1979)).

Under the PSCL, contracts for the performance of work to be paid out of school funds generally are required to be made only after public advertisement for bids and after the bidding have taken place. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4. The contract must be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-37. The "lowest responsible bidder" is the one whose response to a request for bids offers the lowest price and is responsive and who is responsible. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(t). "Responsible" means able to complete the contract in accordance with its requirements, including but not limited to requirements pertaining to experience, moral integrity, operating capacity, financial capacity, credit, and workforce, equipments, and facilities available. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-

2(x). "Responsive" means conforming in all material respects to the terms and conditions, specifications, legal requirements and other provisions of the request. N.J.S.A.18A:18A-(y). Thus, "all bids must comply with the terms imposed, and any material departure invalidates a nonconforming bid." Meadowbrook, supra, 138 N.J. at 314. Minor or inconsequential discrepancies and technical omissions can be waived. And, as noted hereinabove, the bid cannot substantially exceed the cost estimate for the goods or services. If it does, then its entitlement falls short of constituting responsible bid conduct.

It is parenthetically noted that the distinction between conditions which may or may not be waived "stems from a recognition that there are certain requirements often incorporated in bidding specifications which by their nature may be relinquished without there being any possible frustration of the policies underlying competitive bidding." Terminal Construction Corp. v. Atlantic City Sewerage Auth., 67 N.J. 403 (1975). The Supreme Court of New Jersey held that advertised conditions:

> whose waiver is capable of becoming a vehicle for corruption or favoritism, or capable of encouraging improvidence or extravagance, or likely to affect the amount of any bid or to influence any potential bidder to refrain from bidding, or which are capable of affecting the ability of the contracting unit to make bid comparisons, are the kind of conditions which may not under any circumstances be waived.

In determining whether waiver of the Board's advertised conditions is capable of precipitating the effects cited in Terminal, the Court turns to the two prong test of materiality set forth in River Vale, supra, 127 N.J. Super. at 215:

> There must, therefore, be applied two criteria in determining whether a specific noncompliance constitutes a substantial and hence nonwaivable irregularity – first, whether the effect of a waiver would be to deprive the municipality of its assurance that the contract will be entered into, performed and guaranteed according to its specified requirements, and second, whether it is of such a nature that its waiver would adversely affect competitive bidding by placing a bidder in a position of advantage over other bidders or by otherwise undermining the necessary common standard of competition.

If both of these questions are answered in the negative, then the deficiency may be waived.

The above language from Terminal underscores the notion that public entities must anticipate that their actions are to be viewed from the concept of transparency and that close scrutiny will attend a review of their actions in order to determine whether or not there has been some effort to manipulate the bidding process in favor of one party over another. Thus, although it is not the province of this reviewing tribunal to second guess and replace its own opinion over the best actions of the district, it is nonetheless incumbent to determine whether or not the actions by the district reflect such an effort at manipulation. If so, then those actions can be considered arbitrary and/or capricious.

Irreparable harm

Under the emergent relief criteria of Crowe, and as to the first requirement for a showing of irreparable harm, the petitioner asserts that dire, non-monetarily recoverable consequences could attach if the bidding process proceeds at this time. Surety maintains that it did not receive the economic benefits of being awarded the contract and that satisfying the "irreparable harm" requirement is a given in a public-bidding matter due to the fact that damages are not an available remedy to a party asserting a violation of public-bidding statutes. The district has not automatically denied this assertion. But, while money damages are not available to petitioner in this matter, there has been no showing of substantial injury to petitioner to a material degree. In that regard, Surety cannot be said to have suffered irreparable harm where it simply lost out in an attempt to secure a contract, which is a risk that it presumably would take as part of the routine function of its business.

However, by contrast, the harm that would attach to the school district should it be forced into re-adressing an award to Surety could also adversely affect its obligations relative to its financial responsibility. The greater harm would inure to the public which the district serves. Thus, I FIND the argument by petitioner to be specious at best. If anything, if the stay were to be granted, it could also have a great adverse impact upon the ability of the district to timely advance a project for the benefit of its students and its citizen constituency. Thus, I FIND the greater harm would be to the district if the stay were to be granted at this time. Thus, petitioner's request fails as to this element. On balance, there is no showing of irreparable harm to petitioner under the circumstances. And I so FIND.

Right to underlying claim must be settled

As to the requirement that the right underlying the claim of a requesting party must be settled, it is clear that each school district is obligated to provide a thorough and efficient system of education to all children residing in its school district. N.J. Const. (1947), Art. VIII, 1, N.J.S.A. 18A:33-1. To carry out this policy, local boards of education have been granted discretionary authority at N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1c. and d. to adopt rules for the management of the public schools of the district, and to perform all acts and do all things necessary for the lawful and proper conduct of the public schools of the district. This includes providing appropriate and necessary physical plant accommodations to meet the educational needs of its students. And it also must be done in a safe and efficient manner so as to minimize any adverse physical and/or environmental exposure to the students during the construction phase of those facilities.

In the present matter, counsel for respondent has represented that the respondent district attempted to advance the agenda for the construction of the performing arts project for the benefit of children in order to assure completion before the arrival of the students in September. This effort appears to be salutatory and appropriate in accordance with the mandate noted above. Thus, I FIND that the unusual timing of the notice from Clark to the contractors on July 12, 2010, and the in artfully drawn resolution by the district on July 15, 2010, do not translate into such substantial deviations from acceptable bid procedure conduct to warrant relief being granted to petitioner. Nor does it reflect manipulation with the bidding process, absent any other viable proofs to the contrary. Such action is entitled to a presumption of correctness and will not be upset by the courts unless there is an affirmative showing that such decision is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Thomas v. Bd. of Educ. of Morris Twp., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), affirmed, 46 N.J. 581 (1966). In assessing this, the local school board's factual determinations must be accepted if supported by substantial credible evidence. Quinlan v. Bd. of Educ. of North Bergen Twp., 73 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 1962). Thus, although counsel for respondent has acknowledged that there might exist some possible dispute relative to the extent of the changes made from the original bid, it is not necessary to get to that point in this instant matter because the challenge by petitioner and the rejection of its bid by the district is based upon its substantial deviation from an acceptable bid amount, which is a entirely separate segment of the statute for which the district may reject all bids. Thus, the right underlying the claim of petitioner is not settled.

In general, a board of education's actions are entitled to a presumption of lawfulness and good faith. Where board actions are challenged, the challenger bears the burden of proving that such actions were unlawful, arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Schuster v. Ed. of Educ. Montgomery Twp., 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 670, 676 (citing Schnick v. Westwood Ed. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 448 (App. Div. 1960), and Quinlan v. Bd. of Educ. of North Bergen Twp., 73 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 1962)).

The "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable" standard of review imposes a heavy burden on challengers of board actions. This standard has been defined by the New Jersey courts as follows:

> In the law, "arbitrary" and "capricious" means having no rational basis. Arbitrary and capricious action of administrative bodies means willful and unreasoning action, without consideration and in disregard of circumstances. Where there is no room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached . . . Moreover, the court should not substitute its judgment for that of an administrative or legislative body if there is substantial evidence to support the ruling.

[Piccoli v. Ed. of Educ. of Ramapo Indian Hills Regional School District, OAL Dkt. EDU 1839-98 (January 22, 1999) (citing Bayshore Sewage Co. v. Dent. of Envir. Protection, 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199-200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974).]

In the absence of a clear showing of abuse of discretion, the Commissioner of Education will not substitute his or her own judgment for that of the board of education. Massaro v. Bd. of Educ. of the Boro. of Bergenfield, 1965 S.L.D. 84, 85. In Kopera v. Bd. of Educ. of West Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960), the Appellate Division stated, "the well established rule that action of the local board [of education] which lies within the area of its discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently without rational basis or induced by improper motives." See also G.M. v. Roselle Park Boro. Bd. of Educ., 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 107, 109 (where the Commissioner adopted the decision of the ALJ when in a challenge to board action, the ALJ stated, "it is the management prerogative of boards of education that will not be usurped or assumed by the Commissioner of Education absent a definitive showing of bad faith or arbitrary actions taken in bad faith without a rational basis."). As long as the record reflects a rational basis for the action, as well as an absence of bad faith, a board's action shall be upheld. In the G.M. case, supra, the ALJ, after a full hearing, found the board's decision to change geographic boundaries for kindergarten pupil placement, with a goal of evenly distributing the pupils at different schools within the district, to be a reasonable exercise of authority.

Based upon the foregoing and after having considered all the arguments advanced as well as the proofs offered by both sides, I FIND that the right underlying petitioner's claim is settled against the petitioner's position. Therefore, I FIND that petitioner has failed to establish the right to relief and has failed to show that the action of respondent is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, this having occurred after having given petitioner all due deference and a full and a complete opportunity to present such arguments at the emergent relief hearing.

Requirement to show reasonable probability of prevailing on the merits

The most difficult requirement for the moving party to establish or in order to show entitlement to emergency relief is the third factor. In order to prevail on one's application for emergency relief, the party requesting the relief (the fourth unsuccessful bidder in this matter) must make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits. If the point of emergency relief is to maintain the parties in substantially the same condition of the final decision as when this matter began, it must be established by the moving party that it will probably win on the merits. It is with respect to this that petitioner has great difficulty. Petitioner must show that respondent's actions in this matter are arbitrary and capricious and unreasonable. Petitioner must show that respondent's actions violated petitioner's due process rights because of its rejection of all of the bids, including that of petitioner, and the offering of a second bid opportunity to all interested parties. Since, as noted hereinabove, the district is allowed by statute to reject any bid which substantially exceeds the cost estimate for the goods or services, the plain facts of this matter dictate that the actions by the district were appropriate and allowable. In fact, as properly noted by counsel for the district, the need for fiscal responsibility and responsiveness in the current climate is of such significant concern that to do otherwise would thwart the public good as well as violate the obligation of the district to adhere to such standards. Therefore, I FIND that petitioner has failed to show the likelihood of prevailing on the merits in light of its significantly higher bid.

Relative hardship to the parties.

The final test in considering the granting of emergency relief is the relative hardship to the parties in granting or denying relief in order to preserve the status quo pending a full hearing on the merits. As found hereinabove, the bid submission by petitioner is part of the act of doing business, and by contrast, I am concerned that the granting of a stay at this time would unreasonably deny the district the opportunity to proceed with the project on behalf of its students in a timely fashion and would deny it the reasonable and timely opportunity to present it to the State Department of Education for its approval as part of the process. The relative hardships of the parties weigh in favor of denying the relief of petitioner under the circumstances. And I so FIND.

CONCLUSION

Based upon the foregoing, I FIND and CONCLUDE that for purposes of deciding this application for emergency relief, petitioner has failed to establish (1) the existence of irreparable harm, (2) that petitioner's claim is based upon a settled right, (3) that petitioner is likely to prevail on the merits, or that (4) Surety would suffer a relative hardship pending a full hearing on the merits. In view of the fact that petitioner has failed to establish any or all of the requirements for emergency relief, I CONCLUDE that petitioner's request should be DENIED.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's request for emergency relief seeking to stay the continued award of the bid process, as well as its other requests for relief in this application, is DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISIONER OF EDUCATION who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISIONER OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Dear Counsel:

I have reviewed the materials filed in connection with the Montgomery Township Board of Education's ("Board") Motion for a Stay pending appeal of the Commissioner's June 24, 2010 decision to certify a general fund tax levy in the amount of $63,359,787 to the Superior Court, Appellate Division in the matter of Montgomery Township Board of Education v. State of New Jersey, Commissioner of Education, Agency Dkt. No. 471-8/10. In addition to a stay of the June 24, 2010 decision, the Board is also seeking the issuance of a temporary general tax fund levy – pending the outcome of the appeal – in the amount of $65,439,585, which represents the Board's original base budget amount.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b), a grant of emergent relief is considered an extraordinary remedy that can only be issued upon a finding that petitioner has met the four-pronged standard set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). The party seeking such relief must demonstrate the existence of each of the following: 1) the movant will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted; 2) the legal right underlying the movant's claim is settled; 3) the movant has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and 4) when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the movant will suffer greater harm than the other party if the requested relief is not granted. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).

Upon review of the parties' submissions, the Commissioner finds that the Board has failed to meet the standard required for emergent relief. Most notably, the Board has failed to demonstrate the requisite irreparable harm. The majority of the Board's arguments concernin irreparable harm go to the contention that the budget reductions made by the Commissioner in the June 24, 2010 decision will significantly increase the budget gap for the 2011-2012 school year. As was pointed out in the Department's opposition papers, the Board's speculative projection of a 2011-2012 budget gap does not rise to the level of irreparable harm, and any claimed harm for the 2011-2012 school year is not imminent. The Board also argued that the reduction in funds allotted to student transportation services and employee tuition reimbursement would ultimately require the Board to make cuts in other areas during the 2010-2011 school year that will implicate instructional programs. The Board alleges that it would be required to pull funds from other sources in order to avoid breaching its transportation contract as well as the collective bargaining agreement. That alleged risk of harm is, again, too speculative in nature, and does not rise to the level of irreparable harm.

Additionally, the Board has failed to demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits of the underlying appeal. The Board maintains that because the Commissioner's cuts will adversely affect the Board's ability to operate the school system, and will affect its ability to provide the students with a thorough and efficient education, it will succeed on the merits. The Department, however, points out that the Board has presented no evidence that it will not be able to provide a thorough and efficient education, and also contends that the Board actually over budgeted on certain line items that were reduced by the Commissioner. It is clear from the parties' submissions that there are material facts that remain in dispute.

There is also evidence in the record to suggest that the Commissioner's budget reductions were reasonable, and will not prevent the Board from providing a thorough and efficient education. The budget reductions that were contained in the Commissioner's June 24, 2010 decision were recommended by the Executive County Superintendent. Additionally, before the budget was submitted to the Commissioner for review and a determination of the general fund tax levy amount, the Rocky Hill Borough Council voted to approve certain budget reductions. As a result, the Commissioner finds that the Board has also failed to demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits.

Accordingly, the Board's request for a stay of the June 24, 2010 decision is hereby DENIED. *

Sincerely,

Rochelle R. Hendricks

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE RAMAPO INDIAN HILLS REGIONAL, HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners challenged the Board's adoption and implementation of Regulation 6145, entitled "Extracurricular Activities", which sets forth requirements related to students' conduct both on and off school grounds and specifies consequences for failure to comply therewith. Regulation 6145 was adopted in an effort to minimize the use of drugs and alcohol among students, but is not limited to drug or alcohol-related conduct. Consequences of violating the requirements of the regulation include the temporary revocation of participation in extracurricular activities. Petitioners contend that Regulation 6145 violates various provisions of the New Jersey and United States Constitutions and several New Jersey statutes and regulations. Both parties moved for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the authority of a board of education over its students is subject to limitations, and is no greater than the authority conferred by statute; the authority of the board applies to student conduct on school grounds and at school-sponsored functions, with limited exceptions where the exercise of that authority is reasonably necessary for the student's physical or emotional safety, security and well-being, or for reasons relating to the safety, security and well-being of other students, staff or school grounds; Regulation 6145 not only restrains students from the use, possession or distribution of drugs or alcoholic beverages, but also applies to violations of the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice and/or applicable municipal code or ordinance provisions; respondent has disregarded the limitations on its authority over conduct of students away from school grounds, and has no authority in regard to the New Jersey criminal code or municipal code or ordinance provisions. Accordingly, the adoption of Regulation 6145 was ultra vires, and its enforcement is therefore unlawful. Additionally, the ALJ found that the Board disregarded parental rights protected by the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. The ALJ granted petitioners' motion for summary decision and ordered that Regulation 6145 is null and void.

Upon consideration and review, the Commissioner determined that Regulation 6145 gives the Board authority beyond the scope of the governing regulatory provisions, and is therefore unlawful. In so deciding, the Commissioner found that it was not necessary to reach to the constitutional arguments discussed by the ALJ. The Commissioner directed the Board to revise its policy to bring it into compliance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6.

PETITIONERS,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE RAMAPO INDIAN HILLS REGIONAL, HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the respective exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by petitioners and the Board of Education. This case involves the interpretation of Regulation 6145, which contains a provision that enables the Board to deny participation in extracurricular activities based on student conduct away from school grounds. Although the Board adopted Regulation 6145 in an effort to minimize the use of drugs and alcohol among students, a violation of the policy and regulation is not limited to drug or alcohol related conduct.

In their exceptions, the petitioners did not dispute any of the findings made by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) but rather ask the Commissioner to reference the applicable regulatory provisions in the Final Decision, and to make a finding that extracurricular activities are an integral part of a thorough and efficient education, and that the exclusion therefrom based on charges unrelated to the school would violate B.M.M.'s rights guaranteed by the New Jersey Constitution.

In its exceptions, the Board initially argues that the petitioners did not have standing to bring this action because Regulation 6145 was never applied to B.M.M., and similarly that the Commissioner does not have jurisdiction to decide the constitutionality of Regulation 6145 because it amounts to a facial challenge. The Board also takes exception to the ALJ's reliance on three newspaper articles that were attached to the petitioner's certification.

Additionally, the Board takes exception to the ALJ's finding that Regulation 6145 is unconstitutional. The Board maintains that because the constitutionally protected interest of a parent's right in the care, custody, and control of their children does not extend to the circumstances at issue in this case, Regulation 6145 is not unconstitutional. Finally, the Board takes exception to the ALJ's determination that Regulation 6145 is ultra vires and violates the applicable regulatory provisions. Specifically, the Board argues that Regulation 6145 complies with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 because it is designed to maintain the order and integrity of the school environment. The Board further argues that the revocation of a student's ability to participate in extracurricular activities is not discipline because such participation is a privilege not a right, and thus N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6. does not apply in this case.

After consideration and review, the Commissioner finds that Regulation 6145 gives the Board authority that is beyond the scope of the governing regulatory provisions, and is therefore unlawful.[1] Although there were constitutional arguments presented by the parties and discussed by the ALJ, this case can be decided by evaluating whether Regulation 6145 is consistent with the regulations governing the Board's authority to deny participation in extracurricular activities for conduct that occurs off school grounds that is unrelated to a school event. N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6.

[1] The Commissioner also finds that the petitioners did have standing to bring this action. Although the Board had never determined that B.M.M. violated Regulation 6145, the petitioners were asked to sign a consent form at the beginning of the school year stating that they had received a copy of the policy. It is well recognized that the courts apply a liberal approach to standing in New Jersey, and the fact that they were asked to sign the policy and that the policy would be applied to all students is a sufficient stake and adverseness to establish standing. See, Crescent Park Tenants Ass'n v. Realty Equities Corp. of N.Y., 58 N.J. 98, 107 (1971).

The relevant portions of Regulation 6145 state the following:

1. General Behavioral Expectations:

   a. Students are expected to comply with all of the Board's policies and regulations at all times ... and the District's Code of Student Conduct.

   b. Students are required to conform to reasonable standards of acceptable behavior, to respect the rights, person and property of others, to preserve the degree of order necessary for the conduct of the educational program, and to obey those in authority.

   c. Students shall not engage in activities that constitute criminal offenses or juvenile delinquency as defined by law.

2. Use of Alcoholic Beverages and/or Drugs:

   a. Expectations: All student participants in Board-sponsored extracurricular activities must refrain from the use, possession or distribution of any alcoholic beverage or other drugs (unless prescribed by a physician) both on and off school grounds, during the season or activity in which the student wishes to participate in the extracurricular activity.

Consequences for Violations of Conduct Requirements:

1. Alleged violations of the above behavioral expectations occurring on school grounds and/or at school sponsored events will be reported by supervising staff member to the building administrator. With respect to conduct occurring away from school grounds/events, an alleged violation of the above conduct requirements shall occur if a student is formally charged and/or arrested by law enforcement for an alleged violation of the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice, and/or applicable municipal codes or ordinance provisions.

2. Following notification of a student's alleged violation, the building administrator shall conduct a conference with the student and his/her parents, which shall include the student assistance counselor (SAC) and other district personnel, as appropriate, at which time the student shall be provided the opportunity to address the alleged violation.

3. At the conclusion of the conference, the administrative personnel shall determine whether or not a violation of this Policy and Regulation has occurred.

4. If a violation has occurred, appropriate consequences under this Policy and Regulation shall be determined following consideration of all the facts and circumstances of a particular situation, but shall include as a minimum the following:

    a. First Violation: The student may not participate in any extracurricular activities for seven (7) school days, and/or, at the discretion of the administrator, through and including the next scheduled competitive game and/or event.

    b. Second Violation: The student may not participate in any extracurricular activities for ninety (90) school days.

    c. Third Violation: The student may not participate in any extracurricular activities for one-hundred eighty (180) school days.

It is undisputed that the Board has an obligation to establish a code of conduct for students, and that the Board's desire to limit drug and alcohol abuse is a reasonable objective. The New Jersey Administrative Code contains provisions that establish the parameters by which all boards of education ("board") are bound in the establishment of student conduct codes. N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 provides in pertinent part,

> Each district board of education shall develop, adopt and implement a code of conduct which establishes standards, policies and procedures for positive student development and student behavioral expectations on school grounds, including on school buses or at school sponsored functions, and as appropriate, for conduct away from school grounds, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.2 through 7.5, 7.8 and 7.9. [N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1(a)].

Further, "[a] district board of education may deny participation in extracurricular activities, school functions, sports or graduation exercises as disciplinary sanctions, where such measures are designed to maintain the order and integrity of the school environment." N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1(e). As such, there is no doubt that under certain circumstances a board may deny participation in extracurricular activities.

The regulations, however, place limits on a board's authority to deny participation in extracurricular activities for conduct that occurs off school grounds that is unrelated to a school event. Under N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6, a board has the authority to "impose a consequence on a student for conduct away from school grounds ... that is consistent with the district board of education's code of student conduct". The board, however, can only exercise that authority when:

1. "it is reasonably necessary for the student's physical or emotional safety, security and well-being or for reasons relating to the safety, security and well-being of other students, staff or school grounds pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:25-2 and 18A:37-2" [N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)1] and

2. "the conduct which is the subject of the proposed consequence materially and substantially interferes with the requirements of appropriate discipline in the operation of the school." [N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)2]

It is against this backdrop that Regulation 6145 must be evaluated. As a threshold matter, the Board has attempted to suggest that the revocation of a student's ability to participate in extracurricular activities is not discipline but merely a "non-disciplinary consequence" because such participation is a privilege, not a right. The Board's argument is unfounded, and appears to be an attempt to circumvent the limitations on the authority of the Board imposed by N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6. The Commissioner agrees that participation in extracurricular activities is a privilege, and not a right, but that does not negate the fact that a board's decision to revoke a student's ability to participate amounts to a form of discipline. Therefore, the Commissioner finds that Regulation 6145 must comply with the requirements relating to discipline for conduct away from school grounds that is outlined in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6.

The Commissioner further finds that Regulation 6145 does not meet the elements contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a), which must be established in order for the Board to revoke a student's ability to participate in extracurricular activities as a result of conduct that occurs off school grounds. The plain language of Regulation 6145 encompasses too many potential conduct violations that would not meet the elements of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a). Although the purpose behind Regulation 6145 is the deterrent of drug and alcohol abuse, the Regulation can also be violated if a student is merely charged with any "violation of the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice, and/or applicable municipal codes or ordinances". It is too much of a stretch to find that all off-school-grounds conduct that may result in one of those violations would automatically make it necessary for the Board to suspend or revoke a student's ability to participate in extracurricular activities in order to protect the well-being of the student, other students or the school staff. Further, the requirement in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)2 that authorizes a board to revoke a student's ability to participate in extracurricular activities when the student's off-school-grounds conduct "materially and substantially interferes with the requirements of appropriate discipline in the operation of the school" emphasizes the notion that there must be some link between the conduct and the school environment. See also, R.R. v. Bd. of Ed., Shore Reg. H.S., 109 N.J. Super. 337, 343-344 (Ch. Div. 1970).

Finally, the Commissioner is mindful that Regulation 6145 contains a due process provision that gives the student an opportunity to be heard once a charge is reported to the Board. However, Regulation 6145 does not require the Board to take into consideration the mandates contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a) before the Board suspends or revokes participation in extracurricular activities. Regulation 6145 equates to a blanket authorization permitting the Board to suspend participation in extracurricular activities based on off-school-grounds conduct without the requirements imposed by N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a).

It is important to recognize that the regulations clearly distinguish between a board's authority to impose discipline for conduct that occurs on-site or at a school event as opposed to conduct that is completely unrelated to the school system. Certainly the Board has broad authority to impose discipline for student conduct that occurs on school grounds or at school events, which includes a ban on participation in extracurricular activities. Further, the Commissioner recognizes that there will be occasions where a student's conduct away from school grounds would necessitate the revocation of a student's ability to participate in extracurricular activities. As it is written, however, Regulation 6145 gives the Board more authority than is authorized by the New Jersey Administrative Code.

In light of the fact that Regulation 6145 does not comply with the governing regulatory provisions, there is no need to explore the constitutional arguments made by the petitioner and discussed by the ALJ. Accordingly, the recommended decision of the ALJ is adopted with respect to his finding that Regulation 6145 is unlawful. The Board is directed to revise its policy to bring it into compliance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6.

G.D.M. AND T.A.M., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILD, B.M.M., Petitioners,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE RAMAPO INDIAN HILLS REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY,

Respondent.

G.D.M., Esq., for petitioners
(Price, Meese, Shulman & D'Arminio, attorneys)

Stephen R. Fogarty, Esq., for respondent
(Fogarty & Hara, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 11, 2010 Decided: June 11, 2010

BEFORE RICHARD McGILL, ALJ:

This matter involves a challenge by G.D.M. and T.A.M. on behalf of their daughter, B.M.M. (hereinafter collectively "petitioners") to Regulation 6145, entitled "Extracuricular Activities," which was adopted by the Board of Education of the Ramapo

Indian Hills Regional High School District (hereinafter "respondent") on June 22, 2009, and implemented within the school district at the commencement of the 2009-2010 school year. Regulation 6145 sets forth requirements related to students' conduct both on and off school grounds and specifies consequences for failure to comply therewith. More specifically, in addition to general behavioral expectations, the conduct requirements relate to use of alcoholic beverages and/or drugs and compliance with the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice, and/or applicable municipal codes or ordinance violations. The consequences of a violation of the requirements set forth in Regulation 6145 include the temporary revocation of participation by the student in extracurricular activities. Petitioners maintain that Regulation 6145 violates various provisions of the New Jersey and United States Constitutions and several New Jersey statutes and regulations. Both parties new move for summary decision.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners filed their petition with the Commissioner of Education on September 2, 2009, invoking the Commissioner's authority to hear and determine controversies arising under the school laws pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. On September 21, 2009, respondent filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(g). The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on September 21, 2009, for determination as a contested case.

On October 6, 2009, petitioners filed a motion for summary decision. In addition to supporting the motion, petitioner's brief opposed respondent's motion to dismiss. On November 13, 2009, respondent filed a cross-motion for summary decision. After the submission of various responsive papers, respondent's motion to dismiss was denied by Order dated June 11, 2010.

MOTIONS FOR SUMMARY DECISION

A. Legal Standard

A motion for summary decision should be granted where there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). The same standard is applied in the courts of this State pursuant to R. 4:46-2. Summary judgment "is designed to provide a prompt, businesslike and inexpensive method" to dispose of actions which do not present any genuine issue of material fact. Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954). The movant must show that there is no genuine issue of material fact, and all inferences of doubt are drawn against the movant. Id. at 74-75. However, excessive caution which would undercut the purposes of a motion for summary judgment should be avoided. Pierce v. Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp., 84 N.J. 58, 65 (1980). Thus, if the opposing party offers only facts which are immaterial or insubstantial in nature, these circumstances should not defeat a motion for summary judgment. Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. at 75. Although the pleadings may raise a factual issue, summary judgment procedure pierces the allegations in the pleadings, where the other papers show the absence of any genuine issue of material fact. Ibid.

In determining whether there exists a genuine issue as to a material fact, the judge must "consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party in consideration of the applicable evidentiary standard, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 523 (1995).

B. Issues

The issues in this proceeding are as follows: (1) whether Regulation 6145 violates N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 or -7.6 or any other State regulation; (2) whether Regulation 6145 is unconstitutional; (3) whether Regulation 6145 is ultra vires; (4) whether Regulation 6145 violates the student's rights to a thorough and efficient education; and (5) whether Regulation 6145 infringes on the parental rights of petitioners.

C. Facts

In support of their motion for summary decision, petitioners submitted a statement of facts and a certification of T.A.M. with twenty-three exhibits attached thereto. Respondent submitted a statement of facts and a certification of C. Lauren Schoen, its Superintendent of Schools. The parties characterize Regulation 6145 somewhat differently, but the document speaks for itself. There is no question as to the wording of Regulation 6145. Petitioners presented a number of newspaper articles concerning an extended consideration of Regulation 6145 presumably to show its intent. Newspaper articles are not inherently reliable as a source of facts, but they seem to provide an indication as to some of the concerns that led to the adoption of Regulation 6145. After a review of the submissions of the parties, I am satisfied that there is no genuine issue concerning the following facts.

Based upon the submissions of the parties, I FIND as follows:

1. Petitioners are taxpayers and property owners in the Borough of Franklin Lakes and are the parents and natural guardians of their daughter, B.M.M., who is a senior at respondent's Indian Hills High School.

2. Franklin Lakes is one of three towns that share two public high schools operated by respondent.

3. During her first three years at Indian Hills High School, B.M.M. participated in numerous extracurricular activities and plans to engage in those same activities during her final year.

4. In 2007, respondent proposed a regulation granting the school district the authority to temporarily deny students the opportunity to participate in extracurricular activities.

5. Thereafter, respondent held numerous public hearings between 2007 and 2009 to discuss the proposed regulation.

6. T.A.M. attended all but one of the public hearings in regard to Regulation 6145.

7. G.D.M. and T.A.M. spoke against the proposed regulation at the public hearings.

8. A primary motivation for the proposed regulation was concern about illegal use of drugs and alcohol by students.

9. An article in the Franklin Lakes and Oakland Suburban News on August 20, 2008, in regard to the proposed regulation stated in part as follows:

> The impetus of the policy, officials say, was a survey of student drug and alcohol use conducted by the Rocky Mountain Behavior Science Institute in 2005.
>
> "The statistics that jumped off the page were the high percentage of students drinking at home with parental knowledge, [Schools Superintendent Paul] Saxton said. "That was alarming. We have data that reflects a significant problem."
> Saxton said the policy is meant to be a deterrent to illegal activities.

10. An article in The Villadom Times on July 16, 2008, concerning the proposed regulation stated in part as follows:

> Saxton explained that the policy was created after a survey of the district's students indicated by grade level the degree to which students were experimenting with alcohol and drugs. "The results scared us to death," he said, adding that the survey also indicated that an alarming number of kids were drinking alcohol at parties when the parents were home.
> "How do you wrap your arms around a problem like that?" he said. "We felt compelled, as educators, to do something constructive.

11. An article in The Record on August 17, 2007, concerning the proposed regulation stated in part as follows:

> School officials first thought of banning Ramapo and Indian Hills High School students from sports and clubs for off-camps misbehavior when they saw the district's survey on drug and alcohol use two years ago.
>
> The survey found that students who drank alcohol did it at home approximately 85 percent to 90 percent of the time, district Superintendent Paul Saxton said.
>
> To curb the bad behavior, officials last week introduced a draft of a pledge that students would be required to sign before they participate in clubs and sports. The pledge states that they will face suspension from extracurricular activities if they break school rules or the law.
>
> "If I thought the parents were dealing with them, we wouldn't be doing this," Saxton said, referring to the pledge. "I'm not making a blanket statement that all parents aren't taking action ... but are they aware of where [their children] are and what they're doing?"

12. On June 22, 2009, respondent voted to adopt Regulation 6145, which provides in pertinent part as follows:

Introduction:

Participation in Board-sponsored extracurricular activities is a privilege enjoyed only by students in good academic and disciplinary standing. This privilege is earned through compliance with all applicable rules and regulations. This policy is intended to be a positive statement in support of our students as they strive to remain free of all drugs and alcohol as required by state law. This policy also encourages a student to maintain good attendance and grades, abide by all school rules, and to be a good citizen. The Board has the authority to restrict or revoke a student's privilege to participate in extracurricular activities.

The consequences set forth in this Policy and Regulation relate solely to limiting the opportunity of any student found to be in violation of this Policy or Regulation to participate in Board-sponsored extracurricular activities. Nothing set forth in this Policy or Regulation shall limit the District's ability to discipline/impose additional consequences upon a student whose conduct amounts to a violation of any Board Policy or Regulation and/or the Code of Student Conduct.

Conduct Requirements:

1. General Behavioral Expectations:

   a. Students are expected to comply with all of the Board's policies and regulations at all times, including but not limited to Board Policy and Regulation No. 5131 ("Student Conduct/Discipline"), Board Policy No. 5131.6 ("Substance Abuse"), Board Policy No. 6145.1 and 2 ("Intramural Competition/Interscholastic Competition") and the District's Code of Student Conduct.

   b. Students are required to conform to reasonable standards of acceptable behavior, to respect the rights, person and property of others, to preserve the degree of order necessary for the conduct of the educational program, and to obey those in authority.

   c. Students shall not engage in activities that constitute criminal offenses or juvenile delinquency as defined by law.

2. Use of Alcoholic Beverages and/or Drugs:

a. Expectations: All student participants in Board-sponsored extracurricular activities must refrain from the use, possession or distribution of any alcoholic beverage or other drugs (unless prescribed by a physician) both on and off school grounds, during the season or activity in which the student wishes to participate the extracurricular activity.

Consequences for Violations of Conduct Requirements:

1. Alleged violations of the above behavioral expectations occurring on school grounds and/or at school sponsored events will be reported by supervising staff member to the building administrator. With respect to conduct occurring away from school grounds/events, an alleged violation of the above conduct requirements shall occur if a student is formally charged and/or arrested by law enforcement for an alleged violation of the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice, and/or applicable municipal codes or ordinance provisions.

2. Following notification of a student's alleged violation, the building administrator shall conduct a conference with the student and his/her parents, which shall include the student assistance counselor ("SAC") and other district personnel, as appropriate, at which time the student shall be provided the opportunity to address the alleged violation.

3. At the conclusion of the conference, the administrative personnel shall determine whether or not a violation of this Policy and Regulation has occurred.

4. If a violation has occurred, appropriate consequences under this Policy and Regulation shall be determined following consideration of all the facts and circumstances of a particular situation, but shall include as a minimum the following:

    a. First Violation: The student may not participate in any extracurricular activities for seven (7) school days, and/or, at the discretion of the administrator, through and including the next scheduled competitive game and/or event.

    b. Second Violation: The student may not participate in any extracurricular activities for ninety (90) school days.

c. Third Violation: The student may not participate in any extracurricular activities for one-hundred eighty (180) school days.

. . . .

13. Regulation 6145 was implemented within the school district at the commencement of the 2009-2010 school year. The students were notified of this policy through start-of-year assemblies, the Student Handbook and the school website.

14. Additionally, some athletic teams were specifically notified of this policy by coaching staff at the commencement of the practice season.

15. At the beginning of the 2009-2010 school year, each student including B.M.M. was given a Student Handbook, together with a Consent Form, to be signed by students and parents acknowledging receipt of the Handbook and that students will be held accountable for their behavior and will be subject to the disciplinary consequences outlined in the Handbook.

16. G.D.M., T.A.M. and B.M.M. refused to sign the Consent Form based upon the belief that they were waiving constitutional rights and would be bound by Regulation 6145.

17. On September 22, 2009, B.M.M. was called to the Indian Hills High School Administration Office and asked to explain why she did not sign the Consent Form. B.M.M. was told that the matter would be referred to the high school's principal.

18. G.D.M. and T.A.M. received a notice entitled "Mandatory Consent Form" stating that "(i)f you fail to return the signed Consent Form, the matter will be turned over to the Administration, and it is likely that your parent's access to Genesis will be blocked."

19. Genesis is the high school's online parental tool that allows parents real-time access to vital information regarding the student's conduct in the school, including missing homework assignments and grades.

20. In response, G.D.M. and T.A.M. sent a letter to the high school principal on September 23, 2009, stating that they and their two children, including B.M.M., would not sign the Consent Form, because they believed that it was unlawful.

D. Law and Analysis

The United States Supreme Court delineated parents' liberty interest in the care, custody and control of their children in Troxel v. Granville, 530 U.S. 57, 120 S. Ct. 2054, 147 L.Ed. 2d 49 (2000) as follows:

> The Fourteenth Amendment provides that no State shall "deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." We have long recognized that the Amendment's Due Process Clause, like its Fifth Amendment counterpart, "guarantees more than fair process." Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 719, 138 L. Ed. 2d 772, 117 S. Ct. 2258 (1997). The Clause also includes a substantive component that "provides heightened protection against government interference with certain fundamental rights and liberty interests." 521 U.S. at 720; see also Reno v. Flores, 507 U.S. 292, 301-302, 123 L. Ed. 2d 1, 113 S. Ct. 1439 (1993).
> The liberty interest at issue in this case – the interest of parents in the care, custody, and control of their children – is perhaps the oldest of the fundamental liberty interests recognized by this Court. More than 75 years ago, in Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390, 399, 401, 67 L. Ed. 1042, 43 S. Ct. 625 (1923), we held that the "liberty" protected by the Due Process Clause includes the right of parents to "establish a home and bring up children" and "to control the education of their own." Two years later, in Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510, 534-535, 69 L. Ed. 1070, 45 S. Ct. 571 (1925), we again held that the "liberty of parents and guardians" includes the right "to direct the upbringing and education of children under their control." We explained in Pierce that the child is not the mere creature of the State; those who nurture him and direct his destiny have the right, coupled with the high duty, to > recognize and prepare him for additional obligations." 268 U.S. at 535. We returned to the subject in Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158, 88 L. Ed. 645, 64 S. Ct. 438 (1944), and again confirmed that there is a constitutional dimension to the right of parents to direct the upbringing of their children. It is cardinal with us that the custody, care and nurture of the child reside first in the parents, whose primary function and freedom include preparation for obligations the state can neither supply nor hinder." 321 U.S. at 166.

> In subsequent cases also, we have recognized the fundamental right of parents to make decisions concerning the care, custody, and control of their children. See, e.g., Stanley v. Illinois, 405 U.S. 645, 651, 31 L. Ed. 2d 551, 92 S. Ct. 1208 (1972) ("It is plain that the interest of a parent in the companionship, care, custody, and management of his or her children 'comes to this Court with a momentum for respect lacking when appeal is made to liberties which derive merely from shifting economic arrangements'" (citation omitted)); Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 232, 32 L. Ed. 2d 15, 92 S. Ct. 1526 (1972) ("The history and culture of Western civilization reflect a strong tradition of parental concern for the nurture and upbringing of their children. This primary role of the parents in the upbringing of their children is now established beyond debate as an enduring American tradition"); Quilloin v. Walcott, 434 U.S. 246, 255, 54 L. Ed. 2d 511, 98 S. Ct. 549 (1978) ("We have recognized on numerous occasions that the relationship between parent and child is constitutionally protected"); Parham v. J.R., 442 U.S. 584, 602, 61 L. Ed. 2d 101, 99 S. Ct. 2493 (1979) ("Our jurisprudence historically has reflected Western civilization concepts of the family as a unit with broad parental authority over minor children. Our cases have consistently followed that course"); Santosky v. Kramer, 455 U.S. 745, 753, 71 L. Ed. 2d 599, 102 S. Ct. 1388 (1982) (discussing "the fundamental liberty interest of natural parents in the care, custody, and management of their child"); Glucksberg, supra, at 720 ("In a long line of cases, we have held that in addition to the specific freedoms protected by the Bill of Rights, the 'liberty' specially protected by the Due Process Clause includes the right ... to direct the education and upbringing of one's child" (citing Meyer and Pierce)). In light of this extensive precedent, it cannot now be doubted that the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment protects the fundamental right of parents to make decision concerning the care, custody, and control of their children. [Id., at 56-57.]

After citing Troxel v. Granville, supra, the Third Circuit Court of Appeals stated in Gruenke v. Seip, 225 F.3d 290 (3rd Cir. 2000) that the United States Supreme Court recognized that:

for some portions of the day, the children are in the compulsory custody of state-operated school systems. In that setting, the state's power is "custodial and tutelary, permitting a degree of supervision and control that could not be exercised over free adults." Vernonia Sch. Dist. v. Acton, 515 U.S. 646, 655, 132 L. Ed. 2d. 564, 115 S. Ct. 2386 (1995). For some purposes, then, "school authorities act[ ] in loco parentis." Bethel Sch. Dist. v. Fraser, 478 U.S. 675, 684, 92 L. Ed. 2d 549, 106 S. Ct. 3159 (1986). But see New Jersey v. T.L.O., 469 U.S. 325, 336-37, 83 L. Ed. 2d 720, 105 S. Ct. 733 (1985) (school authorities are not merely parental surrogates but also exercise public authority for Fourth Amendment purposes.).

Thus, there may be circumstances in which school authorities, in order to maintain order and a proper educational atmosphere in the exercise of police power, may impose standards of conduct on students that differ from those approved by some parents. See, e.g., Vernonia, 515 U.S. at 664-65 (allowing participation in school athletics to be conditioned upon testing for illegal drugs); Hazelwood Sch. Dist. v. Kuhlmeier, 484 U.S. 260, 273, 98 L. Ed. 592, 108 S. Ct. 562 (1988) (permitting censorship of school-sponsored publication); T.L.O., 469 U.S. at 347-48 (upholding warrantless search of student's effects).

Although a student may not enjoy a right of privacy to the same extent as a free adult, there are nevertheless limitation on intrusions by school authorities. Thus, in Vernonia, although the Court approved drug tests, it was also careful to indicate that the tests were inappropriate to determine "whether the student is, for example, epileptic, pregnant, or diabetic." 515 U.S. at 658. In describing the justification for the random, coerced drug testing in Vernonia, the Court pointed out that the State must demonstrate "an interest that appears important enough to justify the particular search at hand, in light of other factors that show the search to be relatively intrusive upon a genuine expectation of privacy." Id. at 661.

It is not unforeseeable, therefore, that a school's policies might come into conflict with the fundamental right of parents to raise and nurture their child. But when such collisions occur, the primacy of the parents' authority must be recognized and should yield only where the school's action is tied to a compelling interest.

As the Court said in Roberts v. United States Jaycees, 468 U.S. 609, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462, 104 S. Ct. 3244 (1984), "the Court has long recognized that because the Bill of Rights is designed to secure individual liberty, it must afford the formation and preservation of certain kinds of highly personal relationships a substantial measure of sanctuary from unjustified interference by the State." Id. at 618.

> Familial relationships are the quintessential "personal bonds" that "act as critical buffers between the individual and the power of the State." Id. at 619-20. [Id., at 304-305.]
> The Court of Appeals further stated:
>
> School-sponsored counseling and psychological testing that pry into private family activities can overstep the boundaries of school authority and impermissibly usurp the fundamental rights of parents to bring up their children, as they are guaranteed by the Constitution. See Merriken v. Cressman, 364 F. Supp. 913, 922 (E.D. PA. 1973) (questionnaire probing family relationships by school authorities held unconstitutional). Public schools must not forget that "in loco parentis" does not mean "displace parents."
> It is not educators, but parents who have primary rights in the upbringing of children. School officials have only a secondary responsibility and must respect these rights. State deference to parental control over children is underscored by the Court's admonitions that "the child is not the mere creature of the State," Pierce, 268 U.S. at 535, and that it is the parents' responsibility to inculcate "moral standards, religious beliefs, and elements of good citizenship." Yoder, 406 U.S. at 233. [Id., at 307.]

The authority of a school district over students derives from statute. One applicable statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:25-2, provides in pertinent part as follows: "A teacher or other person in authority over such pupil shall hold every pupil accountable for disorderly conduct in school and during recess and on the playgrounds of the school and on the way to and from school." Another statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-1, states as follows: "Pupils in the public schools shall comply with rules established in pursuance of law for the government of such schools, pursue the prescribed course of study and submit to the authority of the teachers and others in authority over them."

Causes for suspension or expulsion of pupils are set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2, which lists ten specific reasons. Nine of the ten reasons are clearly related to school. The other reason refers to conduct of such character as to constitute a continuing danger to the physical well-being of other pupils. This type of situation could be based on conduct off school property and totally unrelated to school activities, e.g., R.R. v. Bd.

of Educ. of the Shore Reg'l High School District, 109 N.J. Super. 337, 343-44 (Ch. Div. 1970) (where R.R. allegedly visited a neighbor's home after school and hit her on the back of the head with a piece of wood and cut her four times with a knife, the Court upheld a suspension from school out of concern for the safety and emotional well-being of other students, teachers and school property.).

Two regulations related to student conduct are applicable to this situation. One regulation, N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1(a), provides in part as follows:

> Each district board of education shall develop, adopt and implement a code of student conduct which establishes standards, policies and procedures for positive student development and student behavioral expectations on school grounds, including on school buses or at school-sponsored functions, and, as appropriate, for conduct away from school grounds, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.2 through 7.5, 7.8 and 7.9

The reference to "conduct away from school grounds" is clarified by N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6, which provides as follows:

> (a) School authorities have the right to impose a consequence on a student for conduct away from school grounds, including on a school bus or at a school-sponsored function that is consistent with the district board of education's code of student conduct, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1.
>
> 1. This authority shall be exercised only when it is reasonably necessary for the student's physical or emotional safety, security and well-being or for reasons relating to the safety, security and well-being of other students, staff or school grounds, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:25-2 and 18A:37-2.
>
> 2. This authority shall be exercised only when the conduct which is the subject of the proposed consequence materially and substantially interferes with the requirements of appropriate discipline in the operation of the school.
> 3. The consequence pursuant to (a) above shall be handled in accordance with the district board of education approved code of student conduct, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1, and as appropriate, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.2, 7.3 or 7.5.

All of the above-mentioned provisions of the United States Constitution and New Jersey statutes and regulations indicate that the authority of a district board of education over students is subject to limitations. The powers of a district board of education are no greater than the authority conferred by statute. With limited exceptions, the authority of the board of education applies to student conduct on school grounds and at various school-sponsored functions. The right to impose a consequence for conduct away from school grounds is specifically limited to situations where the exercise of that authority is reasonably necessary for the student's physical or emotional safety, security and well-being or for reasons relating to the safety, security and well-being of other students, staff or school grounds.

In Regulation 6145, respondent purports to require students to refrain from use, possession or distribution of any alcoholic beverage or other drugs both on or off school grounds. In addition, Regulation 6145 applies to violations of the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice and/or applicable municipal code or ordinance provisions. In so doing, respondent has disregarded the limitations on its authority over conduct of students away from school grounds. Moreover, respondent has no authority whatsoever to enforce, determine guilt or otherwise impose a consequence for alleged violations (or violations) of the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice and/or applicable municipal codes or ordinance provisions. It follows that the adoption of Regulation 6145 was ultra vires. Enforcement of Regulation 6145 is therefore unlawful.

In addition, respondent disregarded parental rights protected by the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. It seems evident that dealing with charges against a teenager unrelated to school is the proper function of the parents without interference from school authorities. This is particularly true where the student's alleged misconduct occurred in the parent's home. In short, Regulation 6145 is grossly overbroad.

Based upon the above, I CONCLUDE that Regulation 6145 is ultra vires, unlawful and unconstitutional in that it violates petitioners' parental rights. In view of this determination, which addresses the essence of the situation, it is unnecessary to reach petitioners' other arguments.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that:

1. Petitioners' motion for summary decision is granted.

2. Respondent's motion for summary decision is denied.

3. Respondent's Regulation 6145 is null and void.

4. Respondent shall refrain from enforcing or applying its Regulation 6145.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

PETITIONER, :

V. : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF EAST ORANGE, STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE GREATER NEWARK CHARTER SCHOOL, ESSEX COUNTY. : DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner sought a determination that the Board of Education of the City of East Orange (Board) is responsible for both the transportation costs and placement of her son, J.B. – a student eligible for special education and related services – during the time in which petitioner resided in the East Orange School District and J.B. attended an out-of-district placement at the North Hudson Academy (NHA). Respondents contended that the controversy is moot since petitioner and her son have moved to North Carolina, and dismissal of the petition is therefore appropriate.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: although petitioner argues that this case "involves important public issues concerning special education for disabled children enrolled in charter schools," the actual education of J.B. is not at issue in the case since J.B. maintained his educational placement at NHA until April 2009, when the petitioner moved to North Carolina; if the petitioner's claim is that the Board failed to provide a Free and Appropriate Public Education by not providing transportation for J.B. to NHA, a due process hearing within the framework of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act would be the primary vehicle for resolving the dispute, but no due process petition was filed by petitioner in this regard; petitioner's allegation that the "parties have an interest in determining which district is responsible for payment of private school placements where a charter school places a student in a private school for the handicapped, since there is a likelihood that this issue will arise again" is unsupported by any evidence that would substantiate any payment from petitioner to NHA for J.B.'s educational placement; NHA is not a party to this matter; petitioner has moved to North Carolina, and there is no claim for unpaid tuition. The ALJ concluded that the disputed issues have become moot and accordingly dismissed the petition.

Upon full review of the record in this matter, the Acting Commissioner adopted the conclusion of the ALJ that the case is moot. The petition was dismissed.

V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF EAST ORANGE, STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE GREATER NEWARK CHARTER SCHOOL, ESSEX COUNTY.	:	DECISION

The Acting Commissioner has reviewed the record, Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and parties' exceptions and reply exceptions, and agrees with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the matter is moot as to the sole petitioner. While the issue of who was responsible for payment of J.B.'s tuition at North Hudson Academy (NHA) was never finally adjudicated, the jurisdictional requirements for such adjudication are no longer satisfied.

There is no showing in the record that petitioner paid or was charged for J.B.'s tuition at NHA, and NHA itself was neither a petitioner nor an intervenor in the case. Thus, the Acting Commissioner may not award damages for tuition. Similarly, since the record contains no proofs itemizing the transportation costs which petitioner alleges that she incurred, no award for same may be granted.

As the ALJ advised, the law instructs that courts will not decide cases in which the issue is hypothetical, a judgment cannot grant effective relief, or the parties do not have concrete adversity of interest, Anderson v. Sills, 143 N.J. Super. 432, 437 (Ch. Div. 1976). (Initial Decision at 6.) Accordingly, the Acting Commissioner adopts the conclusion of the ALJ that the case is moot, and dismisses the petition.

BEFORE IMRE KARASZEGI, JR., ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner E.M. on behalf of her minor child, J.B., seeks a determination that the East Orange School District is the responsible school district for both the transportation costs and placement of J.B., a student eligible for special education and related services, during the time in which petitioner resided in the East Orange School District and J.B. attended an out-of-district placement at the North Hudson Academy (NHA).

On September 26, 2008, petitioner filed a petition for declaratory and emergency relief with the Commissioner. On October 6, 2008, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case. On October 9, 2008, I heard oral argument on the emergent-relief application and denied petitioner's application on the same date. On October 24, 2008, the Commissioner of Education reversed and ordered that the East Orange Board of Education "pay the costs of J.B.'s special education placement and related services, including transportation, effective September 4, 2007, and continuing as long as petitioner is a resident of East Orange or until further order of the Commissioner." On November 7, 2008, East Orange Board of Education appealed the Commissioner's October 24, 2008, decision on application for emergent relief to the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division.

On August 4, 2009, the Appellate Division dismissed the emergent appeal as moot, noting that E.M. and J.B. relocated to North Carolina during the pendency of the appellate action. The Court also noted that the "only unresolved issue is who should be held responsible for the costs associated with J.B.'s placement at NHA after he moved to East Orange and before he left for North Carolina." I directed the parties to submit briefs as to the issues of why, in light of E.M. and J.B.'s move to North Carolina, the underlying petition before the OAL should not be dismissed because the issue is moot and petitioner lacks standing.

The following material FACTS are undisputed.

E.M. is the mother of J.B. J.B. has been identified as having learning and behavioral disabilities and has been classified as eligible for special education. E.M. and J.B. resided in the City of Newark, where J.B. was enrolled at the Greater Newark Charter School (GNCS) during the 2006-2007 school year. In May 2007, GNCS prepared a justification for out-of-district placement at NHA, an approved private school for the disabled located in North Bergen, New Jersey. J.B. subsequently began to attend NHA. In or about August 2007, E.M. and J.B. moved to the City of East Orange, where E.M. completed an East Orange School District registration form for J.B. While the East Orange District offered in-district programs for J.B., which it believed were consistent with the supports set forth in J.B.'s Individualized Education Plan (IEP) dated October 4, 2006; E.M. instead requested that the East Orange Board of Education recognize the special education placement at NHA as well as pay for tuition and transportation.

On or about October 18, 2007, E.M. filed a petition for due process under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), seeking to have her son, J.B., remain at NHA with transportation. On June 26, 2008, the Honorable Leslie Z. Celentano, ALJ, held that J.B. was properly enrolled in GNCS and, as such, J.B.'s placement at NHA was appropriate.

J.B. remained at NHA until April 7, 2009, at which time E.M. and J.B. moved to North Carolina. NHA was not a party in this case.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules provide the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) with broad discretion to employ a variety of procedural mechanisms to assist in the efficient disposition of cases. For example, if required in individual cases, the judge at any time of the proceeding may convert any form of proceeding into another, whether more or less formal or whether in-person or by telephone. N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.6(d). The ALJ may also render any ruling or order necessary to decide any matter presented to him or her which is within the jurisdiction of the transmitting agency or the agency conducting the hearing. N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.6(h). Finally, the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules also provide a "catch-all" provision:

> The judge may take such other actions as are necessary for the proper, expeditious and fair conduct of the hearing or other proceeding, development of the record and rendering of a decision.
> [N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.6(p).]

Here, petitioner has requested declaratory relief and respondents move for dismissal of the petition. Respondents contend that dismissal is appropriate because the controversy is moot and the petitioner lacks standing. I converted the motion to dismiss to a motion for summary decision, sua sponte, in accordance with the objective of the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules to ensure the expeditious development of the record and rendering of a decision.

Summary decision is the administrative counterpart to summary judgment in the judicial arena. Summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). In order to defeat a summary-decision motion, the adverse party must respond by affidavits setting forth "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding." Ibid. Use of the summary-decision procedure is aimed at "'the swift uncovering of the merits and either their effective disposition or their advancement toward prompt resolution by trial.'" Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954) (citation omitted).

The New Jersey Supreme Court has encouraged trial-level courts "not to refrain from granting summary judgment when the proper circumstances present themselves." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 541 (1995). While cautioning that a judge should not weigh the truth of the evidence or resolve factual disputes at this early stage of the proceedings, the Court clarified that "when the evidence 'is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law,' the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment." Id. at 540 (citation omitted).

In this case, petitioner argues that her claims are not moot because they involve issues of "significant public importance" and this case "involves important public issues concerning special education for disabled children enrolled in charter schools." However, the actual education of J.B. is not at issue in this case because J.B. maintained his educational placement at NHA, without interruption, until April 7, 2009, when E.M. and J.B. moved to North Carolina.

If petitioner's claim is, that by not providing transportation for J.B. to NHA, the East Orange Board of Education "failed in its duty" to provide a Free and Appropriate Public Education (FAPE), a due process hearing within the framework of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) would be the principal vehicle for resolving disputes between parents of children with disabilities and school districts concerning identification, evaluation, placement or provision of FAPE. 34 C.F.R. § 300.511. Here, no due process petition was filed by petitioner in this regard. Furthermore, whether transportation is a "related service" for purposes of implementing J.B.'s IEP is a determination that cannot be reached in the context of a school-law dispute heard pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. See Golden Door Charter Sch. v. State-Operated Sch. Dist. of the City of Jersey City, Hudson County, Comm'r of Educ. (March 15, 2007), http://www.nj.gov/education/legal/comm.html.

Petitioner also alleges that the "parties have an interest in determining which district is responsible for payment of private school placements where a charter school places a student in a private school for the handicapped, since there is a likelihood that this issue will arise again." Respondents indicate that in this case, no evidence was presented substantiating any payment from petitioner to NHA for J.B.'s educational placement. NHA, the party that would benefit from resolution of this tuition issue, was not a party in this matter. Petitioner moved to North Carolina and there has been no claim for unpaid tuition. Respondents note the explanation provided in Anderson v.

Sills, 143 N.J. Super. 432, 437 (Ch. Div. 1976), regarding the dismissal of moot cases. "[F]or reasons of judicial economy and restraint, courts will not decide cases in which the issue is hypothetical, a judgment cannot grant effective relief, or the parties do not have concrete adversity of interest." Id. at 437.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that a controversy no longer exists and the disputed issues have become moot.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that summary decision is GRANTED in favor of respondents and the petition is DISMISSED as moot.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. BERGEN COUNTY.	:

The record, settlement agreement, and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner observes that the Superintendent, Tracey Stellato, signed the settlement agreement on behalf of the Board. The settlement agreement was not signed by the Board's attorney, who is the Board's duly authorized representative in litigation, nor does the file contain a copy of the Board's resolution approving the settlement and designating the Superintendent to sign the agreement on its behalf. Therefore, the Commissioner cannot approve the within settlement agreement.

Accordingly, the Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the Stipulation of Settlement consistent with the concerns set forth above. DISMISSAL

AGENCY DKT. NO. 45-3/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF JOHN BLEVIS, LYNDHURST SCHOOL DISTRICT

Alfred F. Maurice, Esq., for petitioner (Springstead and Maurice, attorneys)

Karen M. Reis, Esq., for respondent (Francis J. DeVito, P.A.)

Record Closed: August 6, 2010 Decided: August 6, 2010

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALJ:

This matter involves tenure charges of incapacity, conduct unbecoming and policy violations based upon John Blevis (Blevis) hostile and aggressive behavior, certified by the Lyndhurst Board of Education (Lyndhurst) against Blevis under the Tenure Employees' Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to -18.1.

Blevis is a tenured teacher employed by Lyndhurst. Lyndhurst accused Blevis of deviation from normal physical and mental health, resulting in fear for the safety of students and staff. Lyndhurst requested a physical examination and psychiatric evaluation.

On or about January 11, 2010, Lyndhurst filed its written charges with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner). Subsequently, the matter was referred by the Commissioner to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on March 24, 2010 for a hearing as a contested case.

After numerous discussions pertaining to the OAL matter, the parties agreed to have an independent psychiatric evaluation to determine Blevis' fitness. The parties have agreed and have prepared a Preface and Settlement Agreement indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein, as approved by the Superintendent, Tracey Stellato.

In accordance with the decision of the State Board of Education in In re Cardonick, State Board decision of April 6, 1983 [1990 School Law Decisions (S.L.D.) 842, 846] and as codified by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6, the record of any proposed settlement must include:

> . . . the nature of the charges, the length of the teacher's employment, circumstances justifying the settlement, consent or authorization by the Board of Education and the teacher to the proposed agreement, the administrative law judge's finding that the teacher entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his or her rights and [a finding] that the agreement is consistent with the public interests.

Based upon my review of the record, I FIND that the proposed settlement is consistent with the public interests for the following reasons:

1. Blevis has been employed as a teacher in the Lyndhurst school system since 1986.

2. The nature of the charges has been documented by the submission of a Statement of Charges.

3. It is anticipated that the hearing in this matter would be protracted and costly.

4. Litigation of the charges would lead to the disruption of the District's educational program due to the great amount of time lost by administrators and other personnel who would be required to testify to the incidence which led to the filing of the tenure charges against an employee who has forfeited his custodial position and who is barred from obtaining public employment in the future.

5. Under the proposed settlement, Blevis will be paid back pay and benefits if determined to be fit for duty with a credit to Lyndhurst of any earnings to Blevis during his suspension earned during regular school hours.

6. Under the best of circumstances, the hearing needs to be conducted and then the administrative law judge would have forty-five days to prepare an initial decision and the
7. Commissioner would have an additional forty-five days for review and issuance of a final decision.
8. If the tenure matter proceeds to hearing, both parties would incur costs of paying their attorneys for a likely lengthy hearing.
9. The preface and settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy.
10. The proposed settlement agreement is with the consent of all parties.
11. By the terms of the proposed settlement agreement, the charged party has entered into this agreement with a full understanding of his rights.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the terms of settlement are in the public interest.

It is ORDERED that the parties comply with the terms of settlement and that these proceedings are hereby concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

DIRECTOR AND

PREFACE

WHEREAS, Petitioner, Lyndhurst Board of Education ("Board"), filed tenure charges against Respondent, teaching staff member, John Blevis, under AGENCY DKT. NO.:45-3/10 on or about January 11, 2010; and

WHEREAS, Respondent, John Blevis filed an answer to those charges and is prepared to vigorously defend the same; and

WHEREAS, the parties recognize the substantial expense associated with bringing the matter to trial, including the cost of production of lay and expert witnesses, counsel fees, document production and the lost productivity of administration and staff. The parties also recognize the unpredictability of litigation, the likelihood of appeals and costs in terms of time, resources and expense of this endeavor; and

WHEREAS, the parties have come to an agreement that addresses the principal concerns of the Petitioner in bringing the charges and provides the Respondent of a means to address these issues without the expense in time and resources described above; and

WHEREAS, the parties are also involved in a civil action pending in the United States District Court filed on or about October 10, 2006 and served on Petitioner on or about November 28, 2006 in which Respondent is the Plaintiff and Petitioner is a Defendant arising out of the same facts and circumstances described in the charges which also is diverting the parties time, effort and resources from the business of education;

As a result of the foregoing, Petitioner and Respondent have reached a global resolution of all the matters in difference for the following reasons:

1. Petitioner's principal concern in bringing the subject charges was the Respondent's fitness to teach in the District;
2. The parties have agreed on a plan that includes the selection of and examination by an independent forensic psychiatrist, that will assure Respondent's fitness for work before re-entering the classroom thus alleviating Petitioner's principal concern;
3. By way of background, Respondent is a tenured science teacher in petitioner's employ, and, has been so employed since 1986.
4. There have been no previous proceedings involving the Respondent, in his entire tenure with the district, regarding either his performance or conduct prior to the initiation of these charges. There have never been any disciplinary charges or performance related increment withholding proceedings initiated against him.
5. There is a civil action pending in the United States District Court in which Respondent is the Plaintiff and Petitioner is a Defendant arising out of the same facts and circumstances described in the charges. In said action, Petitioner is charged with various civil violations of Respondents rights and there are claims for money damages. The defense of this action and the uncertainty of the result have also led the parties to reach a global settlement in the best interests of Petitioner, respondent and the public.
6. As a result of all of the above, Petitioner and Respondent have reached the following agreement.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This settlement Agreement and Release ("Agreement") is made this 22nd day of July 2010 by and between John Blevis ("Blevis") and the Lyndhurst Board of Education ("Board"), WHEREAS, Blevis and the Board have been engaged in civil litigation in the United States District Court (Civil Action No. 06-4857), in which Blevis was a Plaintiff and the Board is a Defendant and in administrative proceedings before the Commissioner of Education of New Jersey under AGENCY DKT. NO.:45-3/10 and in which the Board is the Petitioner and Blevis was the respondent; and

WHEREAS, the parties desire to make a full and final settlement of all of the claims, defenses and issues between them and to suspend and forever withdraw their claims between them and against each other in their mutual interest; and

WHEREAS, the parties declare that the settlement and withdrawal of all of the claims between them, as contemplated by this agreement, does not constitute an admission of liability, wrongdoing, guilt, malfeasance or nonfeasance by any party to this agreement and is made for the sole purpose of terminating all proceedings.

NOW WHEREFORE, in consideration of the promises, agreements, undertakings and representations contained herein, the receipt and sufficiency of which the parties acknowledge, the parties hereto, covenant and agree to be legally bound as follows:

1. Counsel for the parties, with the consent of their clients, have selected an independent psychiatrist with appropriate credentials to perform a forensic "fitness for duty" examination for Mr. Blevis and provide a report setting forth his findings to the parties. The selected physician has no connection with any party, doctor or attorney in this or the federal litigation and is deemed to be truly independent.

2. Each party will pay for one half (1/2) of the fee charged by the psychiatrist for his services so there is no issue as to the allegiance of the doctor. Counsel for the parties have collectively reviewed the Curriculum Vitae and credentials of a number of qualified psychiatrists and selected a physician from among those deemed to be qualified for this engagement.

3. Counsel for the respective parties have contacted the selected psychiatrist and confirmed his willingness and availability to perform an exam and issue a report with reasonable promptness. Mr. Blevis has contacted the selected physician and made an appointment for the examination and report contemplated by this agreement.

4. All communications with the selected physician shall be made jointly by counsel for the respective parties. (Except that Mr. Blevis or counsel may contact the physician for the purpose of arranging and attending the examination)

5. The examination will be completed in 1 day with the expectation that a report be submitted shortly thereafter.

6. The parties have notified the independent psychiatrist, that the examination contemplated by this agreement, be completed in one day and that Mr. Blevis will make himself available for the entire day as may be required by the physician. The selected psychiatrist has been contacted by the parties and he has agreed to this procedure.

7. The physician will be provided with the reports of Dr. Head (11/10/2008,11/25/2008 &1/6/2010 reports), Dr. Sostowski (undated) and Dr. Gallina, (12/3/2009) for use in the examination and report process in such fashion as said physician shall determine. If additional records are requested by the doctor, the parties shall confer and determine which documents shall be submitted with the intention of presenting a fair and balanced record for the physician's use. It is preferable that the doctor could reach his determination without outside influence.

8. Upon Mr. Blevis submitting to the subject examination, the Board agrees to withdraw the pending administrative tenure charges against the Respondent with the consent of the Administrative Law Judge to whom the matter is assigned. Upon approval of this settlement by the Commissioner of Education, Mr. Blevis will dismiss the pending Federal law suit without receipt of any payment. The parties will notify the federal court judge of the pending settlement with the expectation that the trial will be deferred until the Commissioner of Education acts. In any event, Blevis agrees not to seek any compensation in the federal court action if the settlement is ultimately approved by the Commissioner or the parties are otherwise satisfied with the resolution of the matter. The parties shall execute such additional documents as may be necessary to effectuate the intentions of this paragraph. The parties understand that should the Commissioner of Education not approve this agreement, the administrative tenure charges and federal court action will be reinstated.

9. If the results of the referenced examination establish that Mr. Blevis is "fit to teach", he will be immediately reinstated to a position with the Petitioner (Lyndhurst Board of Education) with back pay and benefits (pension contributions, sick and personal days, etc.) and be assigned to a teaching position within the scope of his certifications effective September, 2010. In calculating back pay, the Board will be credited with the amount of any earnings by Blevis during his suspension period earned during regular school hours.

10. If the subject examination and report results in a finding that Mr. Blevis is currently unfit, Mr. Blevis will be granted the two year statutory period from the date of the determination to prove his fitness to work. Upon establishing, his fitness, by certification of an independent professional, or such other person upon whom the parties mutually agree, Mr. Blevis will be reinstated. During the leave period, while Mr. Blevis is receiving professional assistance, he may use his accumulated sick leave and accrue sick leave as provided in the collective negotiations agreement between the Lyndhurst Education Association and Board policy and remain as an active employee of the Board. If counseling or other professional assistance is required either while working or in advance of reinstatement, Mr. Blevis will follow that direction. Mr. Blevis shall retain his contractual health insurance benefits during any recuperative period.

11. Upon completion of the requirements of paragraphs 8 and 9, Mr. Blevis personnel file will be purged of all objectionable material as permitted by law.

12. The parties mutually agree that their shall be no retaliation by any party against the other as the result of initiating the proceedings set forth in this agreement or as the result of entering into this agreement. The parties agree to refrain from disparaging each other either orally or in writing as the consequence of anything that has arisen in the underlying litigation described herein or based upon the facts or assertions set forth therein or upon which said actions were based.

13. Applicable Law. Any dispute about this Agreement that cannot be resolved by agreement shall be decided under the terms of the general contract law of the State of New Jersey.

14. Promises of Confidentiality. Blevis, the Board agree and will instruct their individual agents, servants, employees and representatives not to divulge the contents of this Agreement. Blevis and the Board agree not to publically disseminate the matters raised in this agreement, the civil action and the administrative charges before the Commissioner, including those set forth in the administration's statement dated January 12, 2010, that are the subject hereof, the facts surrounding the same and the terms of this Agreement is of essence of this Agreement. Blevis and Board agree to be bound by the confidentiality provisions of this Agreement. This confidentiality provision shall survive, and be given full force and effect separately from any invalid, unenforceable or inoperative provision of this Agreement.

Neither Blevis nor the Board, publicly or privately, shall characterize the settlement of these matters as either a victory or a defeat. The parties, shall only state that the matters in difference were settled to the mutual satisfaction of the parties.

Blevis and the Board represent and warrant that they have not disclosed or disseminate and will not disclose or disseminate to any person or entity the terms or conditions of this Agreement, nor shall Blevis or the Board disclose or disseminate the facts surrounding the same except that disclosure is permitted:

(1) as necessary with regard to any proceeding for the enforcement of this Agreement,

(2) as may be required by a court order from any court of competent jurisdiction; and

(3) As may be required by law. It shall not be considered a breach of the obligation of confidentiality for Blevis to make disclosure of the terms of this Agreement to his spouse or counsel or to make disclosure of the terms of this Agreement and the underlying events of this Agreement in order to obtain private and confidential professional advice, or to respond to any inquiry from any governmental entity or agency.

15. Non-Retaliation/Non-Disparagement. The parties agree that they shall refrain from retaliating against any other party as the result of the participation in any civil or administrative action or because of the prosecution or defense of any claims in any of the proceedings described in this agreement.

In addition, the parties agree that they will not publicly, orally, in writing or through electronic or other media, make any disparaging remarks, statements or innuendo about any other party either by inclusion or omission in any publication. Neither party will make any statement to the press or public. If asked by the press or public about any of the matters addressed in this agreement, the parties shall respond only that all civil and administrative actions have been dismissed or withdrawn

16. Entire Agreement. The parties hereby acknowledge that no promises or inducement which is not herein expressed has been made, and in executing this Agreement. This Agreement contains the sole and the entire agreement between the parties, and completely and fully supersedes and replaces any and all prior contracts, agreements, discussions, representations, negotiations, understandings and any other communications between the parties pertaining to the subject matter hereof, the parties represent and acknowledge, in executing this Agreement, that they have not relied upon any representation or statement not set forth in this Agreement made by either party or their counsel or representatives with regard to the subject matter of this Agreement. No other promises or agreements shall be binding unless in writing, signed by the parties hereto, and expressly stated to represent an amendment to this Agreement.

17. Accord and Satisfaction. This Agreement reflects a compromise and settlement of disputed claims in complete accord and satisfaction thereof. Neither the execution of the Agreement or performance of its terms and conditions shall be considered by any party or by any other person as an admission of liability or non-liability of any of the parties. The parties state that each of them has carefully read this Agreement and the attached Releases and that they have been fully explained to each by his/their attorneys, and that each fully understands that upon execution and performance of the covenants herein, are final and binding. The parties agree that they are bound by this Agreement.

18. Attorneys' Fees and Costs. Each party agrees to be responsible for their own attorney's fees and costs associated with this matter.

19. The parties represent that they are fully authorized to execute this agreement and that all formalities attendant to the execution of this agreement have been satisfied.

20. This agreement may be executed in counterparts, which when taken together, will constitute a completely and properly executed document.

21. If any provision, paragraph, or clause in this agreement is found to be void or illegal, the remainder of the agreement shall remain in full force and effect. Notwithstanding this provision, the cessation of all administrative proceedings against Blevis and the withdrawal of litigation against the Board are of the essence of this agreement and without which this agreement cannot stand.

The undersigned warrant and represent that they are duly authorized to sign this Agreement, and by doing so, said Agreement has been carefully read, and that the foregoing Agreement is binding on all parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF MARIA PARISE,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH	:	DECISION
OF BUTLER, MORRIS COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

In 2003, the Board certified tenure charges of inefficiency, conduct unbecoming, insubordination and other just cause against respondent – a tenured social worker in the district. The charges were stayed pending disposition of a related matter in Superior Court. The tenure charges allege that respondent produced incomplete and/or incorrect work, falsified her timesheets, was unable to communicate with other Child Study Team members, disposed of school property without permission, and refused to follow directions of her superiors and written procedures. The matter was heard in the OAL in 2007, and the ALJ found that the Board had substantiated its charges. The Commissioner rejected the initial decision, finding that the record did not demonstrate that the Board had satisfied the regulatory requisites for the bringing of inefficiency charges; the Commissioner therefore dismissed these charges and remanded the matter for further factual finding and penalty recommendation on the remaining charges. Pursuant to a motion for reconsideration, the Commissioner ruled that additional testimony and factual findings would be allowed with respect to the Board's motion claim that in actuality it had satisfied the requisites for an inefficiency charge.

On remand, subsequent to receipt of additional testimony and evidence, the ALJ found, inter alia, that: on the charge of inefficiency, the Board complied with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1c by providing the respondent with a 90-day remediation period and a modified professional improvement plan, however, respondent failed to correct her inefficiencies and avail herself of the assistance offered to her; on the charge of conduct unbecoming, the Board met its burden to prove that the respondent engaged in conduct unbecoming a public employee that was sufficiently flagrant to warrant her dismissal; respondent failed to follow administrative directives on numerous occasions, failed to timely file required documents, failed to attend counseling sessions, failed to respond to parent complaints, and failed to attend meetings of the child study team – all of which constitute insubordination; and respondent either refused to or was incapable of performing her duties as a social worker, which resulted in serious consequences that put the District out of compliance with the timelines and requirements of the Special Education Code. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that the respondent be dismissed from her tenured position.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Acting Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the Board has sustained its charges against respondent, thereby warranting her termination from tenured employment. Accordingly, the Acting Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, and terminated respondent as of the date of this decision. The matter was transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate as that body deems appropriate.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF MARIA PARISE,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH	:	DECISION
OF BUTLER, MORRIS COUNTY.	:

The record of this remanded matter and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon contemplative consideration of this matter – which included transcripts of the hearing on remand conducted on April 8, April 21 and April 23, 2009 – the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), for the reasons comprehensively detailed in her decision, that the District has sustained its charges of Inefficiency, Unbecoming Conduct and Insubordination against respondent, warranting her termination from her tenured position.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter. Respondent is hereby terminated from her tenured social worker position in the Butler School District as of the date of this decision. This matter shall be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate as that body deems appropriate.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF BUTLER, MORRIS COUNTY,

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 05793-03

James F. Schwerin, Esq., for petitioner, Board of Education of the Borough of Butler, Morris County (Parker, McCay and Criscuolo, attorneys)

Nancy I. Oxfeld, Esq., for respondent, Maria Parise (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

Record Closed: September 3, 2009 Decided: August 13, 2010

BEFORE IRENE JONES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On March 26, 2008, the undersigned issued an Initial Decision, Board of Education of the Borough of Butler, Morris County v. Maria Parise, OAL Docket Number EDU 5793-03, sustaining the tenure charges filed by The Butler Board of Education (Board or District) that resulted in the removal of Maria Parise (Parise or respondent) a tenured school social worker. The Initial Decision concluded that the District had presented sufficient evidence to sustain all the tenure charges of 1) conduct unbecoming; 2) insubordination; and 3) incompetence. Further, it was concluded that given the respondent's overall performance and conduct, there was no need for the Board to comply with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c).

On August 7, 2008, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision and issued a Summary Final Decision that dismissed the inefficiency charge on the basis that the Board had failed to comply with statutory requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and the regulatory requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c); collapsed the incompetence charge into the charge of inefficiency; and remanded for further fact-finding, the remaining charges of conduct unbecoming and insubordination.[1]

Thereafter, petitioner moved for reconsideration of the Summary Final Decision. On September 29, 2008, the Commissioner vacated dismissal of the inefficiency charges (and by extension, the incompetence charge) and remanded the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for further findings and conclusions of law on " . . . the Board's compliance with the applicable procedural requisites of its inefficiency charges . . . in addition to considering the remaining charges as directed in . . . [the] August 7, 2008, decision." (Comm'r's Decision, p. 3 (September 29, 2008).)

Pursuant to the Commissioner's Decision, remand hearings in the instant matter (OAL Docket Number EDU 0593-03) were held on April 8, 21 and 23, 2009. By letters dated February 27 and March 4, 2009, the parties stipulated that no additional testimony was needed on the issues of insubordination and conduct unbecoming. On or about March 6, 2009 an Order was issued by the undersigned directing the parties to file Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law on the Charges of insubordination and Conduct Unbecoming. Consistent with the Order, filings were made by the parties on March 20, 2009. The remand hearings were held exclusively on

[1] The precise wording of the Commissioner's August 7, 2008, Final Decision is as follows:

> "Accordingly the Initial Decision of the OAL is rejected. The charges of inefficiency are hereby dismissed, and this matter is remanded to the OAL for further fact-finding and a recommended penalty determination on the charges of conduct unbecoming and insubordination."

the charge of inefficiency. After receipt of post-hearing submissions, the record closed September 3, 2009. Due to a voluminous caseload, the time for the issuance of this Initial Decision was extended to July 19, 2010.

The Charges of Inefficiency as set forth in the tenure charges allege that Parise:

1. Failed to complete required documents in a timely Manner
2. Failed to coordinate with other members of the Child Study Team;
3. Failed to properly classify;
4. Failed in her dealing with parents;
5. Ignored transportation needs for her students; and
6. Failed in her case management.

GENERAL FINDINGS

I FIND the following facts to be undisputed, thus they are adopted as the FACTS herein:

1. Maria Parise (respondent) was employed by the respondent, Butler Board of Education (the Board or District) as a full-time school social worker. Parise commenced her employment with the District in 1989 and was granted tenure in 1992.[2]

2. She was also a member of the District's Child Study Team (CST) at the schools where she was assigned.

[2] The employment history of petitioner's tenure with the District was set forth in my previous Initial Decision as was the full Procedural History, as well as testimony of the District Superintendent James Smith, The Director Special Services Kathy Gordon, the Principal of the Richard Butler School Andrea Vladichak, Social Worker Iris Stock, Learning Consultant Judith Rivers and Deborah Priestner, secretary for the Special Services Department. Their testimony and the exhibits entered into evidence in that docket will not be repeated in their entirety herein but is incorporated by reference as if it were fully set forth herein. The exhibits from the previous docket is designated with a "P" while the exhibits in this remand matter are referred to as "PR" for petitioner's remand exhibits and "RR" for respondent's remand exhibits.

3. Dr. James Smith (Dr. Smith or Smith) was the District's Superintendent of Schools from 1997 until 2005, when he retired.

4. Dr. Smith filed tenure charges against Maria Parise in December of 2002.

5. Smith agrees that where one is charged with inefficiency, an individual has a ninety-day remediation period in which to improve.

6. Smith met with the Parise's supervisor, Kathy Gordon the Director of Special Services and Andrea Vladichak, the principal of the Richard Butler School ("RBS) where Parise was assigned. He directed them to evaluate her in certain areas and to prepare a modified Professional Improvement Plan (PIP) so that Parise would have an opportunity to improve the affected areas within the ninety-day period.

7. Smith left it to them to develop modified PIP and to meet with Parise. (PR -2.) Thereafter, he received letters and memos from Gordon which provided that things were not going well. (PR-5, PR-14, PR-38.)

8. In April of 2003, he again met with Gordon and Vladichak and received a final report, which was a summary of what Parise had not accomplished. (P-38; RR-3.)

9. Smith recalled being personally involved in the remediation period, specifically when he was advised that Parise was leaving the school building without informing a superior about her whereabouts. He sent Parise a memorandum about the incident and when he did not receive a response, he sent her a second memorandum.[3] (T1 11:16 to T1 12:7.)

[3] "T1" refers to transcript dated April 8, 2009.

10. On April 3, 2003, Smith advised the Butler Board of Education that in accordance with the "law" Parise was given a modified PIP and a ninety-day period to correct address and remediate the charges of inefficiency. However, Parise failed to correct any of the inefficiencies charges. (RR-2.)

11. Respondent's original PIP is dated September 10, 2002. It consists of five (5) pages and has observations and recommendations in the following areas: record keeping, school procedures and personal attributes. Respondent refused to sign the original PIP. (P-56.)

12. Smith admitted that while the tenure charges allege that Parise failed to secure transportation for her students, there was nothing in the Final report to support the charge. (RR-3.)

13. He could not recall whether the incident regarding the transportation charge preceded the ninety-day remediation period.

Inefficiency

Parise was cited for inappropriate classifications of her students, attendance issues, as well as failure to communicate and get along with other staff members. There was also an allegation that Parise submitted a false report about her whereabouts.

Based on the record, I FIND following the FACTS on the Count of Inefficiency:

1. The January 2, 2003, PIP consisted of two areas: Record Keeping and Reports and Professional Staff Procedures. (PR-3.)

2. With respect to record keeping and reports, the PIP directed Parise to meet weekly with the director of special services for purposes of reviewing and refining her Individualized Educational Plan reports (IEP's). One of the objectives in the PIP was "avoid omissions and discrepancies" in Parise's IEPs. (PR-3.) In this regard, Gordon testified that Parise's IEPs were devoid of goals and objectives; devoid of supportive documentation to justify a classification proposed in the IEP; and contained conflicting dates and programs.

3. The PIP required that Parise submit a weekly tracking chart on Fridays of each week to the Principal to help her maintain accurate records for the timely completion of student reviews and reevaluations. After submission of the weekly report, respondent was to meet on Monday mornings with the director of special services to review the chart. (PR-3.) The first meeting took place on January 13, 2003, thereafter, meetings were held on January15, 21, 29, February 10, 19, and 24, and then March 12, 17, 24 and 31, 2003.

4. The PIP also required Parise to coordinate all social educational and psychological summaries with each IEP. (PR-3.)

5. The PIP required Parise to comply with the deadlines as set forth in the State Special Education Code. N.J.A.C. 6A:14-1.1 to -10.2.

6. With respect to professional staff procedures, the PIP set forth nineteen areas of needed improvement. It required Parise to:
   (a) Be familiar with classification criteria for inclusion in her IEP's or social assessment.
   (b) Be familiar with classification categories as set forth in Title 6A of the Administrative Code.
   (c) Conduct eligibility meetings with the parents.
   (d) Be familiar with State requirements for the mainstreaming of students and extended school year programs.
   (e) Complete student transportation forms in a timely fashion for students who were being bused to out of district placements.

(f) Sign-in/Sign-out in the presence of the building Principal and notify the Principal of any in changes in her location during the day.

(g) Revise IEP's during the school year to reflect changes in student programs.

(h) Review IEPs with teachers and meet with them on request.

(i) Communicate daily with other CST members.

(j) Be familiar with her case files and obtain teacher input before parent conferences.

(k) Obtain prior permission from Director of Special Services for an extension of time to complete/submit IEP's.

(l) Attend District and internal building CST meetings.

(m) Follow the chain of command for communicating with the District superintendent.

(n) Refrain from writing personal memorandums during the scheduled work day.[4]

7. In addition to weekly meetings with Gordon and Vladichak, the PIP provided respondent with assistance by offering her computer courses to enhance her "technology skills"; workshops to enhance her organizational and time management skills; and provided five (5) sessions of psychological/social skills counseling to address her interpersonal and problem solving skills. (PR-3.)

8. The PIP had a review date of April 2, 2003, ninety days from its inception date. (PR-3.)

9. On January 29, 2003, Gordon advised Parise that her student, T.B. was due for reevaluation in October 2002 and that an appointment needed to be scheduled. (PR-4.) The memorandum also referred to numerous other reports that were late or other appointments that needed to be scheduled. Specifically, PR-4 noted that students J.S., L.B., S.G. and J.Z. were all due for an appointment, annual review and or completion of an IEP. Deadlines were set forth in the memorandum. (PR-4.)[5]

[4] This is not exhaustive but represents a significant portion of the items contained in PR-3.

10. On February 21, 2003, Gordon advised Parise that her IEP revisions contained shortcoming and omissions. (PR-5.) For example, PR-5 notes that the IEPS for students T.B., A.B., L.C., A.C., E.E., K.H., J.G. and S.M. were missing schedules, meeting dates, parental signatures and effective dates. In order to meet the regulatory deadline as set forth in Special Education Code, N.J.A.C. 6A:14-1.1 to -10.2, other CST members were required to provide the missing information.

11. PR-5 also noted that IEP revisions were missing for students, S.M., D.S. and J.Z.

13. As part of PIP, Gordon referred respondent to New Bridge Healthcare Services (NBH) for assistance in developing time and organizational strategies. (PR-1, PR-2.) Gordon made the referral on January 3, 2003, and spoke to Parise about the referral at their PIP meeting on January 13 and again on January 15, 2003. (PR-6.)

14. Parise refused the referral to NBH, instead she related that she would use her own counselor. In an effort to monitor Parise, Gordon requested that she sign a Release of Information Form to allow her to get confidential reports from her counselor. (PR-6.)

15. On January 21, 2003, Parise was still having trouble completing her revised IEPs in a timely fashion, thus Gordon advised her again to seek assistance from NBH to help her develop organizational skills. (PR-8.)

[5] Respondent asserts that if it is true that most of these items predate the PIP. However, this contention is rejected as the modified PIP dealt with late IEP reports that needed to be completed, thus they are relevant to the ninety-day remediation period.

16. On January 21, 2003, Parise was still exhibiting difficulties with classifying at least one of her students, J.Z. (PR-9.) Further, Gordon advised Parise that the revised IEPs that she had submitted were not in fact revised at all while others had been previously revised and were already in the file. (PR-8.)

17. Parise asked to videotape their weekly meetings. Gordon advised Parise that her request to videotape their weekly sessions was not approved by the Board's attorney. (PR-7.)

18. On January 23, 2003, Gordon's memorandum to Parise advised her that since she was no longer providing a weekly schedule in accordance with her PIP, she (Gordon) would create a weekly schedule for her to follow. Further, Gordon advised Parise that her failure to attend New Bridge Counseling required Gordon develop a timeline for Parise to submit delinquent assignments. Gordon included a schedule in the memorandum. (PR-10.)

19. On January 23, Gordon's memo to Parise admonished her for failure to follow-up with a parent about her concerns with her child J.S.'s IEP. Gordon set a deadline for Parise to meet with J.S.'s parent. (PR-11.)

20. On January 30, 2003, Gordon advised Parise that her refusal to attend workshop/counseling sessions at NBH to help her develop organization and interpersonal skills results in a perpetuation of IEP inaccuracies and non-compliance issues. (PR-13.)

21. On February 5, 2003, Gordon again admonished Parise about omissions and revisions to her student's IEPs. Attached to this memorandum was a three-page chronology of flawed IEPs and missing evaluations (PR-15). For example, for the month of January 2003, student J.P. was due for annual evaluation in January and a reevaluation in February. As of February 3, no meetings were scheduled. Likewise, for student, W.H. an annual review was scheduled but Parise was absent on that date and she failed to reschedule the meeting. G.S. was also due for an annual review; however, there was no correspondence about the meeting nor was there a typed IEP. M.C. was scheduled for reevaluation planning meeting, however Parise left the building on the day of the meeting, thus cancelling the scheduled meeting. A parent also requested CST testing for her child and Parise failed to contact the parent. (PR-15.)

22. On February 4, 2003, Gordon removed a student, C.S., from Parise's caseload after receiving a parental complaint about Parise's failure to schedule an appointment with the parent. (PR-16.) The parent had called Parise four times requesting an appointment with her.

23. On February 10, 2003, Gordon advised Parise that her coworker, Amy DeMarco, had failed to receive three (3) IEPs for students on Parise's caseload, thus DeMarco was unable to make any modifications to their classification assignments. (P-17.)

24. In a February 18, 2003, memorandum, Gordon advised Parise that she agreed with the recommendation of two CST members to declassify T.B. where test results and the student's classroom performance did not justify his being classified. (P-19.) Gordon advised Parise if she disagreed with the two CST members she needed to support her recommendation for classification with information related to the student's academic performance.

25. Gordon notified Parise that her PIP required her to improve her management skills, thus she recommended a two-day workshop dealing with case management at Rutgers University on June 19, 2003. (PR-20.)

26. Gordon's February 27, 2003, memo continues to admonish Parise about IEP revisions for students, P.D., E.E., S.M., and J.Z. (P-21). On that same date, a separate memo from Gordon advised Parise that teacher Amy

DeMarco was still waiting for the goals and objectives for the three students in her classroom. (P-17; PR-22.) A second teacher was also waiting for an updated IEP. Gordon advised Parise that her refusal to comply with the teachers requests was a violation of the Special Education Code as it put IEP's out of compliance with statutory and regulatory deadlines. Gordon further advised Parise that her refusal to comply with these administrative requests was insubordinate. (PR-22.)

27. On March 3, 2003, Gordon questioned Parise's management decision on scheduling students for evaluations that were not due until months later while ignoring past due evaluations. Further, Gordon noted the absence of any math goals and objectives in student B.G.'s IEP. (PR-25.)

28. On March 5 Parise and Gordon met with T.B.'s mother regarding his classification. Despite the conclusions in Judith Rivers's educational evaluation and the CST that T.B. should not be classified based on his test results and classroom performance, Parise publicly disputed Gordon during the meeting and gave the parent information to file a Due Process claim. Further, while in the meeting Parise ignored Gordon's (her supervisor) recommendation, as well as the CST and the educational consultant recommendation against classification. When Gordon asked her to justify her recommendation, Parise failed to answer but insisted that Gordon should be creative. Such conduct caused the CST team to look disorganized and inconsistent in the presence of the parent. Further, Gordon looked out-of-control as the director of special services. (PR-26.)

29. In March 2003, Parise was still omitting essential information from revised IEPs, such as parental signatures from the IEPs. (PR-28, PR-31.) Further, she was still not familiar with her caseload. For example, Parise conducted a meeting with a parent about out-of-district placement and identified herself as the case manager when in fact the student was assigned to another CST member. (PR-29, PR-29(a), PR-29(b).)

30. On March 7, 2003, a parent sent a letter to Gordon complaining about Parise's interview at her home which she found to be too long, from 9:15 a.m. to 12:00 noon. The parent stated that Parise was proceeding at an "unusually slow pace." Further, the parent complained that Parise called her several times before the meeting seeking directions to her home. When she arrived, the parent observed Parise driving on the wrong side of the street. (PR-30.) The parent concluded in her letter that Parise "was not sharp enough to occupy a position like this." (PR-30.)

31. Parise would conduct planning meetings without notifying or involving the appropriate CST members, thus necessitating more than one meeting (PR-32, PR-32A.) During a staffing meeting regarding for J.H.'s program, Parise was unprepared, thus wasting her colleague's time. (PR-33.)

32. Parise acted in direct contravention to the District's suicide prevention policy and her actions regarding A.K.'s suicidal ideation, thus necessitating that Gordon remove A.K. from her caseload. (PR-34.)

33. Parise refused to talk to her CST team but elected to write them numerous memorandum. Further, Parise was abusive and abrasive with other CST members (PR-67, PR-38, P-72, P-75, P-76).

34. PR-45, PR-46, PR-50, and PR-52 are notes from meetings with CST members and/or Gordon. They reflect the acrimonious nature of the meeting. Further, they reflect past due revisions for IEPs and Gordon's attempts to schedule daily activities for Parise.

35. On January 10 and 21, 2003, Vladichak wrote memos to Parise reminding her of her obligation to sign in and out of RSB when she arrived at the building and at any time that she left the building. Despite these reminders, Parise refused to adhere to the time requirements set forth in her PIP. (PR-55, 56, 57, 58, PR-63.)

36. Parise signed out to go to the Windsor School when she actually went to a medical clinic. (P-14.)

37. Parise continued to manifest time-management issues, such as missing evaluation conferences with parents (PR-60); and missing parent conference meetings due to her frequent absences (PR-59, PR-60, PR-62, PR-61, PR-46; P-70, P-71, P-78, P-82.)

38. Due to the numerous delinquent IEPs the District had to contract with the Morris County Educational Service Commission to prepare the delinquent reevaluations. (PR-23.)

39. Parise held an IEP meeting with only her and the parent being present in violation of Special Education Code. (PR-32, PR-32(a).)

40. Deborah Priestner (Priestner) has been employed by the Butler BOE as a secretary in the Special Services Department for seven years. She is responsible for reviewing special education documents for classified students to make sure they are completed, and if they are not, she contacts the individual CST member.

41. Priestner related that the respondent's IEPs were often incorrect or incomplete. Further, she did not follow proper procedure when drafting revisions to IEPs. (P-83, P-93.)

42. Her attempts to assist Parise in learning how to properly revise an IEP were rejected. (P-85.)

43. Judith Rivers (Rivers) has been employed by the Butler BOE as a Learning Consultant for sixteen years and is part of the CST with Parise. Rivers was assigned to many of the respondent's cases that were overdue, incomplete, incorrect, or missing necessary documents. (P-95 to P-106.) She was aware that the incomplete IEPs left the District open to litigation.

44. Rivers recalled that the respondent did not attend any of the CST meetings in the year before tenure charges were filed against her. (P-104.)

45. Parise also refused to communicate directly with her. Indeed, Rivers recalled one incident where she called Parise regarding a student's case, and Parise hung up on her. (P-107.)

46. Iris Stock (Stock) has been employed by the Butler BOE as a social worker for fifteen years and is a member of the CST with Parise. Her duties include preparing evaluations of classified students, case management for special education students, and assisting students and families with any crisis or emotional problems.

47. Stock had to complete many of the respondent's cases because they were overdue, incomplete, incorrect, or missing necessary documents. (P-108 to P-116, P-31.) She requested information from Parise on certain students; however, Parise did not follow through with her requests for documents which made it difficult for her to be effective and efficient with her own duties. (P-31.)

48. Stock was forced to request outside help with completing Parise's files. (P-116.)

49. Stock concludes that the respondent barely did any work while she was at Aaron Decker School, the District's elementary school.

DISCUSSION ON INEFFICIENCY

The Legislature has imposed a number of obligations on a local Board of Education that seeks to remove a tenured employee on grounds of inefficiency in this State. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c) provides that:[6]

> (c) In the event that the tenure charges are charges of inefficiency, . . . the following procedures and timelines shall be observed:
>
> 1. Initial charges of inefficiency shall be stated with specificity as to the nature of the inefficiency alleged and filed by the appropriate administrator with the secretary of the district board of education or the State district superintendent along with a statement of evidence in support thereof executed under oath . . . .
>
> 3. The district board of education, through its board secretary, or the State district superintendent shall direct that the employee be informed in writing that, unless such inefficiencies are corrected within the minimal 90-day period, or any longer period provided by the district board of education . . . , the district board of education or the State district superintendent

[6] The enabling statute N.J.S.A.18A:6-11 to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c) provides that:

> Any charge made against any employee of a board of education under tenure during good behavior and efficiency shall be filed with the secretary of the board in writing, and a written statement of evidence under oath to support such charge shall be presented to the board. The board of education shall forthwith provide such employee with a copy of the charge, a copy of the statement of the evidence and an opportunity to submit a written statement of position and a written statement of evidence under oath with respect thereto. After consideration of the charge, statement of position and statements of evidence presented to it, the board shall determine by majority vote of its full membership whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charge and whether such charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary. The board of education shall forthwith notify the employee against whom the charge has been made of its determination, personally or by certified mail directed to his last known address. In the event the board finds that such probable cause exists and that the charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary, then it shall forward such written charge to the commissioner for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, together with a certificate of such determination. Provided, however, that if the charge is inefficiency, prior to making its determination as to certification, the board shall provide the employee with written notice of the alleged inefficiency, specifying the nature thereto, and allow at least 90 days in which to correct and overcome the inefficiency. The consideration and actions of the board as to any charge shall not take place at a public meeting.

> intends to certify charges of inefficiency to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-11
>
> 4. Concurrent with notifying the employee of such charges of inefficiency, the district board of education or the State district superintendent shall direct that there be a modification of the individual professional improvement plan mandated by N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.3 or -4.4, to assure that such plan addresses the specific charges of inefficiency and comports with the timelines established for correction.
>
> 5. Upon completion of the minimal 90-day period for improvement, or such longer period as may be provided by the district board of education or the State district superintendent, the administrator(s) responsible for bringing such charges to the attention of the district board of education or the State district superintendent shall notify the district board of education or the State district superintendent in writing of what charges, if any, have not been corrected.
>
> 6. The district board of education or the State district superintendent, upon receipt of the written notification or upon the district board's determination in the case of a chief school administrator, shall notify the affected employee in writing that all of the inefficiencies have been corrected or, in the alternative, which of the inefficiencies have not been corrected. The time from the expiration of the minimal 90-day period, or such longer period as may be provided by the district board of education or the State district superintendent, to the notification of the employee by the district board of education or the State district superintendent shall not exceed 30 calendar days . . . .

The parameters of the regulation and the statute was reviewed by the Appellate Division in Rowley v. Board of Education of Manalapan-Englishtown, 205 N.J. Super. 65 (App. Div. 1985), and it was held that:

> [t]he Commissioner of Education has consistently construed the statutory mandate in the light of this guideline, concluding that "if a board chooses to file tenure charges of inefficiency against any teacher, the administration bears the heavy responsibility to render positive assistance to the teacher in an effort to overcome his inefficiencies."
>
> . . . [u]nder N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, a local board of education is duty bound to assist a tenured teaching staff member, against whom it has filed charges of inefficiency, in improving his teaching performance before removing him from his teaching position. The rationale underlying this rule is that a teacher whose teaching effectiveness is called into question after years of meritorious service in a school district should, in recognition of that contribution, be afforded an opportunity to demonstrate that he is still capable of effective teaching. He can only avail himself of that opportunity if he understands clearly the basis for the criticism supporting the allegations of inefficiency and is offered constructive advice as to how he might restore his teaching skills.
> [Id. at 71 (citations omitted) (emphasis added).]

Thus, the only question herein is whether the District offered Parise "constructive advice" and "meaningful assistance." The record indicates that a multitude of memos detailing Parise's shortcomings and failures. These memorandums reiterate the tasks she needed to complete. The burden of proof is on the Board to prove its case by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962).

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

On the Charge of Inefficiency, I FIND that the District provided respondent with a Professional Improvement Plan (PIP) on January 2, 2003. The PIP set forth a ninety-day remediation period. It provided the respondent with counseling and professional service from the New Bridge Mental Health Facility to assist her with organizational strategies for the management of her caseload.

I FIND that the PIP set forth guidelines and deadlines for the submission of social histories, IEPs, parental conferences and a weekly schedule to meet with the director of special services and the School Principal Vladichak.

I FIND that despite the efforts of the director of special education to assist the respondent, the respondent refused to avail herself of any assistance and as a consequence respondent was late with her IEPs reports, failed to meet with her student's parents in a timely fashion, and failed to complete social histories in a timely fashion. This constitutes Case Management Failure. (PR-17.) I FIND that the Board has successfully met its burden of proof on this charge.

I FIND as a consequence of respondent's refusal to accept any assistance, other members of the CST had to pick up her work and when the backlog became so onerous the District had to hire an outside social worker to complete overdue IEPs and reevaluations.

I FIND that the District gave the respondent a voice-activated computer to assist her in the completion of her work. Further, the PIP provided respondent with computer classes to enhance her technology skills. I FIND credible Gordon's unrefuted testimony that the respondent did not use the computer, rather she instructed the school's custodian to "get rid of it."

I FIND that a new PIP was created in January 2003 and it superseded the September 10, 2002, PIP. (P-56) While it did not include the word "Modified" in its caption, I am persuaded that it was indeed a modified PIP as it included a ninety-day review period and provided positive meaningful assistance to the respondent. Moreover, it differed from the September 10, 2002, PIP. (P-56)

I FIND that the District has proved by a preponderance of the credible evidence that petitioner's work was inefficient.

I FIND that respondent failed to meet and coordinate with other members of the CST.

I FIND and CONCLUDE that the District has complied with intent and the spirit of the requirements to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c). I am satisfied that the PIP it provided did satisfy the statutory mandate in that there was a ninety-day remediation period; a detailed list of inefficiencies; a corrective plan; and assistance from both inside sources (weekly meetings with the director of special services and the school principal) and outside source (New Bridge Mental Health Facility); and a voice-activated computer to assist her with the production of her IEP, annual reviews and social histories.

While the District did not provide testimony from a parent regarding the charge "Failure in Dealing with Parents," PR-16 is a memo from Dr. Gordon to Parise that details a telephone conversation between Dr. Gordon and a parent. The parent requested—for the fourth time—a meeting to review the need for an evaluation with her child. Dr. Gordon testified that since Parise's non-responsiveness to the parent's requests continued, she transferred the case to another social worker. I FIND that the District has met the required burden of this charge.

As to the charge of Ignoring Transportation, Dr. Smith admitted that he could not recall who it was who supplied him with the information upon which he based that charge, and further admitted that there was no indication that Parise failed to improve as regards transportation. (T1, p. 20 (April 9, 2009)). Thus, I FIND that the District failed to meet its burden on this charge, and thus this charge is hereby DISMISSED.

Based on respondent's failure to correct her inefficiencies and avail herself of the assistance offered to her, I FIND and CONCLUDE that dismissal was warranted on the charge of inefficiency.

Conduct Unbecoming

On the charge of Conduct Unbecoming, I FIND the following FACTS:

1. Respondent admits that she falsified her timesheets on at least two occasions. (PR-63)

2. Respondent was rude, abrasive, and non-communicative with members of the CST and her superiors, Gordon and Vladichak. (PR-67.) PR-67 reflects that respondent was rude to the Principal in the presence of a parent; refused to acknowledge the parent's presence and was rude to a Mrs. Bistromowitz. (PR-60.)

3. The testimony of Gordon and Vladichak is urefuted that respondent failed to communicate with her colleagues, choosing instead to communicate by writing voluminous memoranda.

4. Respondent's work was incomplete and inept. Work fell on her coworkers to complete or redo. (PR-34.; P-108 to P-116; P-31.) Further, it caused the Board to hire an outside social worker to complete many of Parise's assignments. (P-116.) .

5. Respondent requested a voice-activated computer and when given one, failed to use it and directed the building custodian to get rid of it. (P-6.)

6. Gordon's testimony that Parise attempted to take a student for ice cream off the school premises in violation of Standard Operating Procedure is unrefuted.

DISCUSSION ON CONDUCT UNBECOMING

In Board of Education of the Borough of Butler, Morris County v. Parise, OAL Docket Number EDU 5793-03, the term "Conduct Unbecoming" a public employee is an elastic one. It includes any conduct which "adversely affects the morale of efficiency" of the public entity or "which has a tendency to destroy public respect for . . . [public] employees and confidence in the operation of . . . [public] services." In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960) (citation omitted.); see Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998.) Further, behavior rising to the level of unbecoming conduct need not be predicated upon a violation of any particular rule or regulation and may be based simply upon a violation of the implicit standard of good behavior. City of Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955); In re Tuch; 159 N.J. Super. 219, 224 (App. Div. 1978).

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS ON CONDUCT UNBECOMING

I FIND and CONCLUDE that the District has met its burden that respondent engaged in conduct unbecoming a public employee.

I FIND that respondent's conduct with other teaching staff members, the CST, and her superiors constitute conduct unbecoming a public employee. Respondent's conduct and treatment of her coworkers was arrogant and contemptuous at best. Her failure to communicate, to complete her assignments, her rudeness, her unchecked comings-and-goings at her pleasure, were all corrosive to employee morale and the CST's efficiency.

Further, I FIND and CONCLUDE that the respondent's behavior with respect to the computer also constitutes conduct unbecoming. I am persuaded that she intended that the custodian discard the computer.

Respondent admits to falsifying her timesheets on two occasions. Accordingly, I FIND that there is sufficient credible and legally competent evidence to support a conclusion that the respondent did falsify her sign-out timesheet.

Based on the totality of the incidents herein, I CONCLUDE that respondent engaged in conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member that was sufficiently flagrant so as to warrant her dismissal. I am mindful that any of these incidents, standing alone, would be insufficient to sustain a removal. However, when viewed collectively, a penalty of dismissal is more than warranted.

Insubordination

In its tenure charges the petitioner alleged that respondent committed acts of insubordination when she (1) habitually and repeatedly failed to abide by District policy when signing in and out; (2) refused to follow a directive that she call in her absences to substitute services; in lieu of calling the District secretary and (3) refused to follow directives regarding the installation and use of her computer equipment.

On the charge of Insubordination, I FIND the following FACTS:

1. The testimony of Board's witness, Vladichak, and the memorandums support that Parise failed to sign in and sign out in accordance with her January 2, 2003 PIP. (PR-55, PR-56, PR-58).

2. The memorandums of Gordon support that Parise failed to complete IEPs, annual reviews, schedule parent conferences and provide a weekly schedule of her activities as directed in her PIP. (PR-15, PR-11, PR-16, PR-17, PR-22, PR-28, PR-31.)

3. Gordon's testimony that Parise did not use the computer that she requested is unrefuted. Gordon's testimony that Parise instructed the janitor to get "rid" of it is also unrefuted.

4. I find credible Gordon's testimony that Parise ignored her and contradicted her during a parent IEP conference. (PR-26.)

5. Respondent was directed by Smith to call in her absences to substitute services and she failed to adhere to this directive. (P-77.)

6. I FIND credible the testimony of Gordon that Parise failed to attend NB counseling nor did she see her own counselor (PR-6, PR-13.)

DISCUSSION ON INSUBORDINATION

It is well established that a failure to follow an administrative directive can constitute insubordination and/or unbecoming conduct by a teacher. In re Bradley, 1990 S.L.D. 790, aff'd, State Bd. of Educ., 1991 S.L.D. 2521 (Bradley). Further, a failure to timely file required documents constitutes insubordination. In re Richardson, EDU 5560-97, Initial Decision (June 1, 1998), aff'd, Comm'r (July 15, 1998), aff'd, State Bd. of Educ. (January 6, 1999). Finally, it is axiomatic that willful disobedience of a substantive nature by a tenured teacher towards a supervisor constitutes insubordination. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Edgewater v. Scarpignato, 1983 S.L.D. 311, 317, aff'd, State Bd. of Educ., 1983 S.L.D. 338, aff'd, App. Div., 1984 S.L.D. 2013.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS ON INSUBORDINATION

I FIND credible the testimony of Vladichak that respondent failed to sign in and out in the presence as directed by the PIP.

I FIND that respondent failed to call the substitute services on one occasion.

I FIND that Parise requested and was given a computer which she did not use. Her directive to the janitor to "get rid" of the computer constituted an insubordinate act, and as previously noted, conduct unbecoming a public employee.

I further FIND that pursuant to the PIP, respondent was to meet on Wednesdays of each week to review her performance. The meetings were also attended by a representative from the Butler Education Association. Parise refused to provide a weekly schedule of her activities, contrary to her PIP. (PR-10.) I FIND that her refusal to provide said schedule constitutes insubordination.

I FIND that respondent also refused to attend New Bridge for counseling, contrary to her PIP. Nor did respondent verify her attendance with her own personal counselor, contrary to the representations that she made to Gordon that she would see her own personal counselor. I FIND that her request to attend any counseling constitutes insubordination.

I FIND that Parise failed to respond to a parent complaint despite being directed to do so by Gordon. (PR-16.) Further, she failed to hold a CST meeting with a parent, despite being directed by Gordon to hold the meeting. (Ibid.) I CONCLUDE that her conduct herein constitutes insubordination.

I FIND that Parise's failure to attend internal CST meetings was insubordinate. See In re Birch, 1978 S.L.D. 63.

I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has proven the charges in Count III. I further CONCLUDE that the appropriate penalty on this Count is removal.

Other Just Cause

It is important to emphasize that Parise is not a classroom teacher. Thus, there are no formal classroom observations where her performance could be evaluated. Nor are there any lesson plans to review. Rather, as an SW, Parise works on a one-on-one basis with special education students. She is required to work in conjunction with the CST and classroom teachers to help reduce a student's disabilities and to maximize their abilities and help them to effectively cope with their disabilities. As was recognized in the Commissioner's Final Decision in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Margaret Sidberry, School District of the Township of Willingboro, Burlington County, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 0952-97S[.]

> . . . the untimely preparation and submission of [respondent] reports delayed the initial or re-evaluate placement of students in appropriate education programs and placed the District in unnecessary jeopardy of potential legal action for failure to comply with federal and state statutes and regulations governing the rights of classified students.
> [(Comm'r's Final Decision at p. 53.)]

In the Sidberry matter, the respondent therein was a school psychologist and a member of the CST. She failed to submit evaluations and psychological reports in a timely basis. The District offered her time-management audio tapes and attendance at workshops; an aide to assist her; and other assistance. The Commissioner found that:

> . . . Notwithstanding the District significant efforts . . . to encourage her improvement, whether due to unwillingness or inability, respondent failed to reach an acceptable level of performance. Even duly weighing her years of service in District . . . there can be no reasonable expectation that respondent can conform her performance to the level reasonably expected of a CST member . . . in the foreseeable future.
> [Id. at p. 54.]

Here, respondent either refused to or was incapable of performing her duties as a SW. Her refusal has serious consequences as it put the District out of compliance with the timelines and requirements in the Special Education Code. I am mindful that petitioner is a tenured long term employee. However, I CONCLUDE that this fact alone is insufficient to warrant her continued employment where her inabilities has such a deleterious impact on the CST and the other teachers that she must work with to provide an IDEA to special education students.

ORDER

Consistent with the aforementioned FINDINGS and CONCLUSIONS, It is hereby ORDERED that Charge I is hereby AFFIRMED, except as to transportation; Charge II is hereby AFFIRMED; and Charge III is hereby AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Order of Suspension Decision by the State Board of Examiners, May 3, 2010

For the Respondent-Appellant, Charles I. Auffant, Esq.

For the Petitioner-Respondent State Board of Examiners, Susan Huntley, Deputy Attorney General (Paula T. Dow, Attorney General of New Jersey)

The Acting Commissioner has thoroughly reviewed the record and the papers filed in connection with respondent's appeal of the State Board of Examiners' order of May 3, 2010, suspending his teaching and administrative certificates for six months.

After full consideration of the record and all submissions, the decision of the State Board of Examiners is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein.*

ACTING COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Date of Decision: 9/22/10
Date of Mailing: 9/22/10

*This decision may be appealed to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court pursuant to P.L. 2008, c. 36.

IN THE MATTER OF	:	NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
THE CERTIFICATES OF	:	STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS
ANTHONY PARASKEVOPOULOS:		ORDER OF REVOCATION
_____	:	DOCKET NO: 0708-207

This case arose when the State Board of Examiners received a tenure case from the Commissioner of Education captioned In the Matter of the Tenure of Anthony Paraskevopoulos, Dkt. No. 22-1/08 (Commissioner's Decision, October 1, 2008.) In that matter, the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark (Newark) certified tenure charges against Paraskevopoulos alleging that he had fabricated an allegation that he had seen another music teacher inappropriately touch students on numerous occasions. Paraskevopoulos and Newark settled the tenure case when Newark withdrew the charges and Paraskevopoulos resigned his tenured position in the district. In a decision dated October 1, 2008, the Commissioner approved the settlement and dismissed the tenure matter. (Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 2.) The Commissioner also referred the matter to the Board of Examiners. Ibid. Paraskevopoulos currently holds a Teacher of Music certificate, issued in February 2003, School Administrator and Principal Certificates of Eligibility, both issued in March 2006 and a Supervisor certificate, issued in April 2006. Based upon all of the foregoing information, at its meeting of February 23, 2009, the State Board of Examiners issued Paraskevopoulos an Order to Show Cause why his certificates should not be revoked.

The Board sent Paraskevopoulos the Order to Show Cause by regular and certified mail on February 25, 2009. The Order provided that if Paraskevopoulos desired to file an Answer, it must be filed within 30 days. Paraskevopoulos responded on March 25, 2009.

In his Answer, Paraskevopoulos admitted that Newark had certified tenure charges against him which were later settled but denied the allegation that he had "fabricated any allegation about another teacher." (Answer, ¶ 3.) Paraskevopoulos also asserted that the Order to Show Cause failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. (Answer, Affirmative Defense, ¶ 1.) Paraskevopoulos claimed that he acted in good faith at all times. (Answer, Affirmative Defense, ¶ 3.)

After receiving Paraskevopoulos' response, the Examiners transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Ellen Bass heard testimony on September 10 and 11, 2009. After receiving post-hearing submissions, the record closed and the ALJ issued an Initial Decision on November 5, 2009. In the Matter of the Certificates of Anthony Paraskevopoulos., Dkt No. EDE 03955-09 (Initial Decision, November 5, 2009.)

ALJ Bass found that on May 7, 2007, Paraskevopoulos had engaged in a heated altercation with another music teacher, Anthony Perales, over the best way to play a piece. Id. at 3. When Paraskevopoulos later demanded an apology, he believed that Perales used obscene words and gestures toward him. Id. at 5. Paraskevopoulos found this behavior threatening and went to his principal, Carolyn Granato, to intervene. Id. at 5. During his conversation with Granato, Paraskevopoulos raised concerns that Perales was excessively touching students. Id. at 4, 7. Granato immediately called DYFS, which investigated and ultimately determined that his concerns were unfounded. Id. at 7-8. The ALJ found that Paraskevopoulos' concerns were sincere and that, upon further reflection, he regretted sharing his thoughts about Perales with Granato. Id. at 8. Paraskevopoulos wrote two letters on May 10 and 11, 2007 retracting his claims against Perales with regard to his behavior with children. Ibid. ALJ Bass found that Paraskevopoulos did not recant his claims about Perales and their altercation and explained that his mispercceptions about Perales were due to his heightened emotional state after their altercation. Id. at 8-9.

After reviewing the testimony, ALJ Bass concluded that the Board of Examiners did not meet its burden of proof. Id. at 11. She found that "Paraskevopoulos sincerely believed that there might be a reason for concern about Perales' conduct with children." Ibid. She also determined, however, that "Paraskevopoulos' allegations about the children, however sincere, disrupted school operations, and were unfair to Perales." Ibid. Despite this finding, ALJ Bass concluded that Paraskevopoulos had not engaged in conduct unbecoming a teacher and ordered that no action be taken against his certificates. Id. at 11-12, 14.

The Deputy Attorney General (DAG) representing the Board of Examiners filed Exceptions to the Initial Decision and Paraskevopoulos filed Reply Exceptions. In her Exceptions, the DAG argued that ALJ Bass erred when she concluded that Paraskevopoulos was a credible witness whose statements regarding Perales' behavior with students was an exaggeration caused by his emotional state. (Exceptions, pp. 1-5.) The DAG also claimed that the ALJ erred in "not recognizing that [Paraskevopoulos'] statement concerning the nature of Perales' touching of students was tantamount to fabricating an allegation that Perales inappropriately touched students because his report was not motivated by a genuine concern for students but by anger and was made in retaliation for an earlier argument with Perales." (Exceptions, p. 5.) The DAG recounted the testimony of Paraskevopoulos' colleague who had told him prior to the incident of May 7, 2007, that Perales was demonstrative with students because of his cultural background. (Exceptions, pp.6-7.) Finally, the DAG further argued that Paraskevopoulos' conduct warranted the suspension or revocation of his certificates because his act of reporting a false claim was relevant to his fitness to teach. (Exceptions, pp. 7-10.)

In his Reply Exceptions, Paraskevopoulos urged the Board to give deference to ALJ Bass' credibility determinations. (Reply Exceptions, pp. 2-8.) He also argued that the ALJ correctly concluded that he did not fabricate his concerns regarding Perales' interactions with students and argued that his "testimony was rational and consistent with the evidential record." (Reply Exceptions, pp. 8-9.) Finally, Paraskevopoulos argued that the ALJ correctly found that his actions did not constitute unbecoming conduct warranting a penalty. (Reply Exceptions, pp. 9-12.) Paraskevopoulos noted that ALJ Bass recognized that "none of the conduct alleged here took place in the presence of children" and highlighted his long and successful teaching career. (Reply Exceptions, p. 11.)

The Board must now determine whether to adopt, modify or dismiss the Initial Decision in this matter. At its meeting of March 25, 2010, the Board reviewed the Initial Decision, the Exceptions and Reply Exceptions. After full and fair consideration of the Initial Decision, the Exceptions and Reply Exceptions and the issues raised therein, the Board voted to adopt the findings of fact in the Initial Decision, but modify the conclusions drawn and the penalty assessed.

There is no doubt that the ALJ is in the best position to render credibility determinations in this matter. Accordingly, the Board will defer to those findings. In fact, the Board is convinced, as was the ALJ, that Paraskevopoulos' statements regarding Perales were uttered as a result of his emotional state after their altercation. Where the Board differs from the ALJ, however, is in the conclusion that must be drawn from this behavior. Regardless of Paraskevopoulos' motivation or the fact that all of these interactions occurred solely among adults, his conduct was inappropriate and merits consequences beyond the loss of his tenured position. As a teacher with exemplary evaluations, Paraskevopoulos should know the standards required of professional behavior. The damage he inflicted on Perales' reputation and the potential harm he could have caused to Perales' career should not be minimized simply because he acted in a fit of pique and later attempted to retract his allegations. Moreover, as ALJ Bass noted, Paraskevopoulos' actions resulted in a DYFS investigation that disrupted school operations. Initial Decision, slip op. at 11. The Board believes that Paraskevopoulos' conduct is unbecoming a teaching staff member and reflects negatively on his ability to act as a role model to both students and colleagues. Thus, the Examiners disagree with the ALJ's conclusion and find that the Board has met its burden of proving that Paraskevopoulos engaged in conduct unbecoming a teacher.

The State Board of Examiners may revoke or suspend the certification of any certificate holder on the basis of demonstrated inefficiency, incapacity, conduct unbecoming a teacher or other just cause. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.5. Thus, the only issue that remains in this matter is the imposition of the appropriate sanction. Although Paraskevopoulos' behavior falls short of expectation, the Board does not believe that revocation is warranted in this case. Although his impulsive behavior led to some damaging consequences, in this instance, his entire career as an educator should not be sacrificed because of it. Therefore, the Board finds that a six month suspension of all of his certificates is appropriate.

Accordingly, on March 25, 2010, the Board of Examiners voted to modify the Initial Decision and suspend Paraskevopoulos' certificates for a period of six months. On this 29th day of April 2010, the Board of Examiners formally adopted its written decision to modify the Initial Decision in this matter, and it is therefore ORDERED that Anthony Paraskevopoulos' Teacher of Music and Supervisor certificates and School Administrator and Principal Certificates of Eligibility be hereby suspended for a period of six months effective immediately. It is further ORDERED that Paraskevopoulos return his certificates to the Secretary of the State Board of Examiners, Office of Licensure, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625-0500 within 30 days of the mailing date of this decision.

I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Wendy Chandler.,	:	BEFORE THE OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
Petitioner,	:	OAL DKT. No. EDUTH01307-2010N AGENCY REF. No. 374-12/09
vs.	:
High Point Regional High School District Board of Education, Sussex County	:	SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE
Respondent.	:

This Settlement Agreement and Release is made this 6th of August, 2010 to bind Wendy Chandler (hereinafter "Chandler") who resides at 206 Main Street, Ogdensburg, New Jersey 07439 and the High Point Regional High School District Board of Education, with its principal offices located at 299 Pidgeon Hill Road, Sussex, New Jersey 07461 (hereinafter the "Board");

WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, Chandler is currently employed by the Board as a tenured secretary; and

WHEREAS, the Board filed a Tenure Charge proceeding against Chandler bearing the caption and docket number as set forth above; and

WHEREAS, Chandler disputes the allegations of the tenure charges; and

WHEREAS, Chandler had further caused to be served on the Board a Notice of Tort Claim and then filed and served a Complaint and Jury Demand in Superior Court of New Jersey Law Division: Sussex County with Docket No. SSX-L-603-10; and

WHEREAS, at the completion of discovery and a full investigation of the facts through available witnesses and taking into account the uncertainty of litigation, each of the parties hereto has concluded that it is in the public interest to enter into a Settlement Agreement in resolution of the charges and litigation stipulating the terms of Chandler's separation from all employment with the Board together with the Release of all her tenure and seniority rights as an employee of the Board and further resolving all of the claims that were the subject of her Affirmative Defenses to the Answer to the Charges, the Notice of Tort Claim, and the Complaint and Jury Demand, as well as providing for the exchange of General Releases of any and all claims which the parties may have against the other arising from Chandler's employment or otherwise arising out of or relating to each of the above-named matters; and,

WHEREAS, the terms of this settlement take into account the public interests and the terms of this Agreement will not present any risk of harm to students and/or the safe operation of the School District; and further it takes into consideration the undue interruption and disruption to the educational programming within the Board due to the absence of administrators, teachers and students who could be required to testify at hearings as well as it takes into consideration the fact that the Board has incurred and will continue to incur substantial financial cost to continue the litigation and that settlement of these claims has been determined to be cost effective at a time when the Board faces substantial budgetary constraints;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises of the parties and in exchange for the consideration more particularly noted below, it is hereby agreed:

1. Simultaneously with the execution of this Agreement, Chandler shall provide an irrevocable letter of resignation from all employment with the Board effective at the close of business on November 30, 2010. The resignation letter shall be in the form annexed hereto as Exhibit A and shall be expressly conditioned upon the Board's compliance with this Settlement Agreement. The letter of resignation shall be null and void if all of the terms of this Settlement Agreement are not met, but is otherwise irrevocable. The Board waives all statutory and contractual claims for notification of Chandler's resignation. Once resigned, Chandler shall have no right to re-employment and shall not apply for any future employment with the Board.

2. The Board, by resolution, will publicly approve and accept the resignation of Chandler simultaneously with the approval and acceptance of this Agreement.

3. Through and until November 30, 2010, Chandler shall be paid at the salary level (prorated for the 2010-2011 school year) that she is receiving as a tenured secretary pursuant to statutory requirements set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14; to wit, a total annual salary inclusive of longevity for the 2009-2010 school year in the amount of Forty Six Thousand, Five Hundred Sixty Five Dollars ($46,565.00); and a total annual salary inclusive of longevity for the 2010-2011 school year (which is payable through the effective date of her resignation or no later than November 30, 2010) in the amount of Forty Seven Thousand One Hundred Fifteen Dollars ($47,115) . Subject to paragraph 6 below, all salary shall be paid to Chandler in the normal course of business, net of normal payroll deductions for State and Federal income taxes, pension contributions, etc.

4. As part of approval to this Settlement Agreement, Chandler shall request and be granted a leave of absence, with full pay, for personal reasons and shall continue to be provided with health insurance benefits applicable to secretaries employed by the Board through the effective date of resignation, but by no later than November 30, 2010. The form of Chandler's letter requesting a leave of absence is attached hereto and made a part hereof as Exhibit B.

5. If Chandler obtains other employment prior to November 30, 2010 that provides her with insurance coverage, Chandler shall immediately notify the Board in writing of that fact, as well as the effective date of insurance coverage from new employment, and once the insurance coverage from other employment takes effect, the Board will be relieved of the obligation to continue providing paid health coverage for Chandler, and may terminate same, without further credit or consideration to Chandler.

6. If Chandler obtains other employment, Chandler shall immediately notify the Board in writing of that fact, and the effective dates of her leave of absence and resignation shall be modified to be effective on the date she commences new employment. All salary which the Board would have thereafter been obligated to pay to Chandler during the remainder of the time through November 30, 2010 will be paid in one lump sum, without deductions, within thirty (30) calendar days of the Board Resolution effecting the change to her resignation date. The Board shall provide an IRS Form 1099-Misc. with Box 3 checked (Other Income) reflecting the payment of the lump sum set forth in this paragraph to Chandler no later than February 1, 2011.

7. Upon the termination of Chandler's employment with the Board and provided Chandler does not have insurance coverage from other employment at such time of termination from employment under this Agreement, and consistent with her rights under the Consolidated Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1986 (also known as "COBRA"), Chandler shall be able to purchase, at her own cost and expense, the insurance coverage presently provided to other staff members employed by the Board. The terms of such exercise of COBRA benefits shall be consistent with law and with that provided to other similarly situated prior employees of the District.

8. The Board hereby agrees that the Tenure Charge in this matter shall be dismissed with prejudice subject to the approval of this Agreement by the Administrative Law Judge and the Commissioner of Education, and further that the Complaint and Jury Demand aforementioned shall also be dismissed with prejudice immediately upon the approval of this Agreement by the Commissioner.

9. Parties acknowledge that this Agreement shall be submitted to the Administrative Law Judge assigned to hear this matter and to the Commissioner of Education for review and approval, and that the terms of the Agreement are expressly made subject to and contingent upon such review and approval by the Administrative Law Judge and Commissioner of Education. In the event that either the Administrative Law Judge assigned this matter or the Commissioner of Education disapproves and/or rejects the terms contained herein, this Agreement shall be null and void and shall not be evidential or used by any party in any proceeding involving any party to this Agreement. In addition, each of the parties shall return to their same position which they held prior to this Agreement and all rights are expressly reserved in such an event.

10. Effective with the signing of this Agreement and its approval by the Board of Education, for submission to the Administrative Law Judge for approval, Chandler agrees to immediately return any and all Board property including but not limited to keys, documents, electronic or otherwise, or any other Board property to the Central Office (Office of the Superintendent). An appointment shall be scheduled and the Board further agrees to permit Chandler to collect any personal effects she may have left in the District at the time of her returning Board property.

11. Neither Chandler nor the Board entering into this Settlement Agreement and Release shall be deemed constitute, nor shall it be interpreted as, an admission of wrongdoing or guilt, or liability in any manner on either party's part.

12. By entering into this Settlement Agreement, Chandler expressly and knowingly waives and releases any and all rights to tenure, seniority, recall, reinstatement, and re-application for employment of any nature with the Board as of the effective date of her resignation. It is further understood and agreed that Chandler shall not, as of the effective date of her resignation, receive any other compensation or benefits or emoluments of employment except as specifically set forth in this Settlement Agreement.

13. In consideration of the above, Chandler agrees for herself and her heirs, successors and assigns, to release irrevocably and unconditionally, and discharges the Board, its members past, present and future; welfare and/or pension plans; trustees, officers, supervisors, employees, students, and agents of the Board ("Releasees"), past, present and future, of and from any debts, obligations, claims, demands, judgments, claims for attorneys' fees, claims seeking employment or reemployment with the Board, claims for contributions and/or in tort, contract, by statue, or on any other basis, whether in law or in equity, which he, or his estate, might otherwise have or have had. This Release includes but is not limited to all claims set out in the Tenure Charge, the Notice of Tort Claim, the Complaint and Jury Demand, and claims under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1965, The Civil Rights Act of 1866, The Civil Rights Act of 1991, The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, The Americans With Disability Act of 1990, The employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, The Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974, The New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, The New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act, the New Jersey Employer-Employee Relations

Notwithstanding the signing of the release by Chandler, the Board shall remain obligated to indemnify Chandler against claims raised by other parties arising on or prior to the date of her resignation in accordance with applicable controlling law.

14. The Board, its members, agents, servants and employees ("Releasees"), agree to release irrevocably and unconditionally, and discharge Chandler from any and all claims wich it may have against Chandler. It specifically releases Chandler from any and all claims arising out of the employment relationship, including but not limited to any cause of action pursuable before any state or federal court or agency (including the filing and/or certification of tenure charges under the N.J. Tenure Employees' Hearing Law), or any other federal or state statutory provision, administrative regulation, collective negotiations agreement or other act that has the force and effect of law; as well as any claims for counsel fees, or any statutory or common law claim or cause of action for defamation, libel, tortious interference, breach of duty or loyalty, harassment, or for discrimination on the basis of race, color, sex, religion, national origin, age, handicap or disability, sexual orientation, veteran's status, or marital status or any other prohibited basis.

15. The parties agree that, subsequent to the date of this Agreement, any inquiries from potential employers regarding Chandler shall be channeled solely to the then Superintendent of Schools. Responses to such inquiries shall be limited to providing only the dates of Chandler's employment, her position, her salary, and that she left the District voluntarily to pursue other career opportunities. A written letter of recommendation shall also be provided per attached Exhibit C.

16. Nothing in this Settlement Agreement and in the Releases set forth above shall preclude a party from bringing an action to enforce performance of any term of this Agreement should there be a default in performance.

17. The parties expressly agree that they shall act in good faith to ensure implementation of this Settlement Agreement. The parties mutually agree to refrain from retaliation, in any manner, against the other party (or, their families, members, agents and employees). The parties further acknowledge that they fully understand the duties and obligations enumerated herein and that each has been informed of their legal rights and obligations. The parties further acknowledge that the Tenure Charge does not represent a danger to the public welfare or to the School District.

20. This Settlement Agreement and Release shall be subject to the laws of the State of New Jersey.

21. The undersigned representatives of the Board hereby acknowledge that they have been duly authorized by the Board to sign this Settlement Agreement and bind the Board to its terms. The record of this emergent matter – which included a digital recording of the hearing conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on September 14, 2010 – along with the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed.

Upon such review, the Acting Commissioner adopts the recommended order denying emergent relief as she concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons clearly presented in his Order – that petitioner has not satisfied its burden of establishing any of the requirements necessary for the granting of such extraordinary relief as set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).

Accordingly, the instant application for emergent relief is hereby denied. This matter is being returned to the OAL for a hearing on the merits as contemplated by the ALJ and the parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY, Respondents.

Bruce A. Seidman, Esq., and Hillary A. Fraenkel, Esq. for petitioner (Marshall, Dennehey, Warner, Coleman & Goggin, attorneys)

R. Scott Eveland, Esq., and Paula Mercado Hak, Esq. for respondent (Jersey City Public Schools, attorneys)

BEFORE MICHAEL ANTONIEWICZ, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner challenges the determination by the Jersey City Board of Education that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-13 (implemented through N.J.A.C. 6A:27-3.1(b)), the requirement to provide transportation to district remote students attending the Jersey City Community Charter School can be satisfied by issuing bus tickets. On September 2, 2010, petitioner filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner). Petitioner also filed a motion for Emergent Relief seeking a Stay barring respondents from implementing its policy to issue bus tickets to remote students who attend the Jersey City Community Charter School. In support of the motion, petitioner submitted a memorandum of law and a certification of petitioner (Carletta Martin-Goldston Aff.). Respondents submitted briefs in opposition to the motion, which the undersigned received on September 10, 2010. Petitioner submitted a reply brief on September 13, 2010. Oral argument on the motion was held on September 14, 2010.

A summary of the pertinent evidence presented follows.

Carletta Martin-Goldston is the head of the Jersey City Community Charter School (hereinafter referred to as JCCCS). Martin-Goldston Aff. at pp. 1. JCCCS is a non-profit corporation which is organized to provide public education as a charter school pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-2. Martin-Goldston Aff. at pp.2. JCCCS provides public education to students in grades K-8. Martin-Goldston Aff. at pp. 3. There are students who attend JCCCS who live more than two (2) miles from the school. Martin-Goldston Aff. at pp 6.

Since 1997 when JCCCS began its operation, the Board of Education for the City of Jersey City has provided transportation to the district remote students who have attended JCCCS. Martin-Goldston Aff. at pp. 7. On July 29, 2010, the respondent sent a letter to Ms. Martin-Goldston advising her that beginning with the inception of the 2010-2011 school year, transportation services as provided in past years would be discontinued. Martin-Goldston Aff. at pp 8. The respondent proposed that they would instead provide bus tickets to all district remote students who attend JCCCS regardless of grade. Martin-Goldston Aff. at pp 9. The Jersey City School District (District) has had students attending public schools located more than two miles from their home. Wojcik Cert. at pp 6. However, the petitioner asserts that upon information and belief, there are no remote elementary students in the Jersey City Public School system because these students attend neighborhood schools which are situated two (2) miles or less from all students' residences. Martin-Goldston Aff. at pp 14. The District's remote public school students in grades K through 5 receive bus tickets for transportation from their home to school. Wojcik Cert. at pp 7.

Petitioner averts that the District has failed to present any written policy approved by the Board of Education and that the absence of such proof the District cannot maintain the position that the District provides transportation to remote charter students on the same terms and conditions provided to remote district students. The District states that it does not provide school bus transportation for its remote public school students in grades K through 5. Wojcik Cert. at pp 8. The school year has begun on September 8, 2010. Martin-Goldston Aff. at pp 15.

Petitioner states that the District issued a Manual which set forth its transportation policy for students attending charter schools (i.e. that children in grades K-4 will be provided busing on pre-planned bus routes and not via bus tickets). Petitioner claims that it has never been advised that the Manual has been revoked, rescinded or repealed. District responded with evidence that the Board never adopted a resolution approving the Manual and that it was distributed by an overzealous clerk. Simmons Aff. at pp 14 and 15. As such it is the District's position that the Manual does not constitute policy and thus does not bind the District and that its only obligation is to follow state statutes and regulations.

Prior to 2003, the District provided all charter schools in the District with the following options: (1) utilize bus tickets or (2) enter into agreements where the District provides school bus routes in exchange for reimbursement from the charter school covering the difference between the cost of tickets and the cost of school transportation. Wojcik Cert. at pp 9. For the school year 2010/2011 and thereafter, the District ceased its practice of offering charter schools the option of utilizing school bus transportation and instead offered bus tickets for use by the remote students. Simmons Cert. at pp 4. The District argues that this new practice fulfilled its obligation to provide transportation to charter school students "on the same terms and conditions" as transportation provided to remote public school students.

It is against this backdrop that petitioner's application for emergent relief is considered.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) sets forth the standards governing motions for emergent relief. The regulation instructs in salient part:

> A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. Degioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):
>
> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
>
> 2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;
>
> 3. The petitioner has the likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
>
> 4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).]

Petitioner has the burden of establishing each of the above requirements in order to warrant relief in its favor.

Turning to the first criteria, it is well settled that relief should not be granted except "when necessary to prevent irreparable harm." Crowe, supra 90 N.J. at 132. In this regard, harm is generally considered irreparable if it cannot be adequately redressed by monetary damages. Id. at 132-33. In other words, it has been described as "'substantial injury to a material degree coupled with the inadequacy of money damages.'" Judice's Sunshine Pontiac, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., 418 F. Supp. 1212, 1218 (D.N.J. 1976) (citation omitted). See New Jersey Dep't of Environmental Protection v. Circle Carting, Inc., 2004 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 968 (April 2, 2004) (finding no irreparable harm in connection with the revocation of respondent's solid waste license in that financial loss is generally insufficient to demonstrate this requirement). The moving party bears the burden of proving irreparable harm. More than a risk of irreparable harm must be demonstrated. Continental Group, Inc. v. Amoco Chemicals Corp., 614 F. 2d 351, 359 (D.N.J. 1980). The requisite for injunctive relief requires a "'clear showing of immediate irreparable injury,'" or a "'presently existing actual threat; (an injunction) may not be used simply to eliminate a possibility of a remote future injury, or a future invasion of rights, be those rights protected by statute or by common law.'" Ibid. (citation omitted.)

Petitioner argues that the respondent's determination provides potential harm to the safety and well-being of the young students. The petitioner raises a number of unfortunate scenarios which "could possibly unfold" (emphasis added) which will cause dramatic and irreparable harm to JCCCS. Petitioner further argues that parents will be unwilling to allow their children to be transported (unsupervised) on public transportation. Petitioner asserted that one family has withdrawn a child from its charter school as a result of this transportation issue.

I accept respondents' position that petitioner has failed to demonstrate irreparable harm. Petitioner's Affidavit does not support a finding that the respondent's determination created dramatic and irreparable harm to JCCCS. Rather, as argued by the respondent, the petitioner is in a position whereby it could bid for bus routes during the time the request for emergent relief is heard until this matter is fully heard on the merits and thereafter make a claim to the respondent for the cost of same in the event the petitioner is successful at that time. Accordingly, JCCCS has an adequate remedy at law. Although it may be an inconvenience to petitioner to bid on such bus routes and supply such a service, this does not rise to the level of an irreparable harm. Petitioner's claim of irreparable harm was couched in terms of a possibly and not a certainty. It is well established law in New Jersey that the claim of irreparable harm must not only be imminent, but must also be concrete and non-speculative. Subcarrier Communications v. Day, 299 N.J. Super. 634, 639 (App. Div. 1997). In short, whether petitioner's students from K through 8 will experience the alarming events contrary to their safety and welfare is speculative in nature. The respondent has presented evidence that the Jersey City School District provides bus tickets to all of its K through 8 public and charter school students without incident. In sum, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to meet his burden of establishing a clear showing that it will suffer immediate irreparable injury unless the requested relief is granted.

Apart from this, in order to prevail on an application for an emergent relief, petitioner must demonstrate that the legal right underlying his claim is settled and must make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits. Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 133.

Both petitioner and respondent agree in their submissions that the charter school students "shall be provided transportation" on the "same terms and conditions as transportation is provided to students attending the schools of the district." N.J.S.A.18A:36A-13. The respondent presented evidence that "school bus transportation has never been provided to any of the district's remote public school students under any terms or conditions, the District, for the school year 2010-2011 and forward, ceased its practice of offering charter schools the option of utilizing school bus transportation." Ms. Melissa Simmons Aff. at pp 4. Simmons further sets forth that "the District's new practice for the school year 2010-2011 and forward is to provide all remotely located regular education students in grades K-8, both charter and public students, with bus tickets for transportation between their homes and school." Simmons Aff. at pp 11. There remains a factual dispute as to whether the District provides bus tickets to public school students.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to shoulder its burden of proving that the legal right underlying its various claims is settled and that it has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of its claims. In this regard, petitioner merely speculates "upon information and belief, there are no elementary students residing in Jersey City who are remote from their school of attendance in the Jersey City Public Schools." Martin-Goldston Aff. at pp 13. Such evidence is not sufficient for the petitioner to carry its burden that it is likely to prevail on the merits of its claims.

Finally, in balancing the equities and interests of the parties, the scales tip in favor of respondents. The petitioner has options whereby it can adequately address its transportation issue pending a final hearing on this matter. The claim that the petitioner will lose students, staff, and funding is speculative. The petitioner's claim of irreparable harm have fallen short as the school year has in fact begun and the speculative allegations of such harm have not materialized. The respondent has offered the bus tickets to the petitioner and the petitioner refused to accept same for its remote students K through 5. Wojcik Aff. at pp 16. I further CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed in showing that the equities favor it and will suffer greater harm.

Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to meet the requirements set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) warranting a stay or emergent relief in this matter. Accordingly, I ORDER that petitioner's application for such relief be and hereby is DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Regarding employment references, the Board agrees that it will place a note in Petitioner's personnel file identifying her dates of employment, positions held, final salary, and that she resigned in good standing from his employment with the Board. V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, a non-tenured teacher formerly employed by respondent's school district, appealed the Board's determination not to renew her contract for the 2009-2010 school year. Respondent Board filed a motion to dismiss, based on petitioner's failure to timely file her petition.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: a May 14, 2009 letter from the Board advising petitioner that she would not be reappointed for the 2009-2010 school year marked the beginning of the regulatory 90-day period for the filing of appeals; petitioner's appeal, filed in April 2010, is time barred pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i); and the Board's motion to dismiss is more appropriately under the purview of a motion for summary decision. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that summary decision be granted in favor of the Board, and dismissed petition of appeal as untimely.

Upon a full and independent review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge – for the reasons clearly presented in her decision – that petitioner's claim is time-barred and presents no compelling case for relaxation of the 90-day rule. The Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon such review, the Acting Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) – for the reasons presented on pages 3-6 of her decision – that this matter is appropriately dismissed as untimely filed.[1]

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the instant petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

JODI JACKSON,
Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY.
Respondent.

Jodi Jackson, pro se

Karen A. Murray, Esq. for respondent (Elizabeth Public Schools Legal Department, attorney)

Record Closed: July 19, 2010 Decided: August 18, 2010

BEFORE KELLY J. KIRK, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner Jodi Jackson (Jackson), a teacher, appeals the determination of respondent, Board of Education of the City of Elizabeth, Union County (Board), that her contract would not be renewed for the 2010-2011 school year.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On April 14, 2010, Jackson filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education. On May 17, 2010, the Board filed a Motion to Dismiss the Petition in Lieu of Answer with the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (Bureau) of the Department of Education (Department). On May 19, 2010, the Department transmitted the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on June 3, 2010. Review of the file revealed that Jackson had not filed a response to the Board's Motion. A telephone conference was held on June 29, 2010, and Jackson was given until July 12, 2010 to file a response, and the Board was given until July 19, 2010 to file a reply, if any. Jackson filed opposition to the Board's Motion on July 8, 2010, and the Board filed a reply on July 19, 2010. Jackson filed an additional submission on July 21, 2010, which does not address the merits of the Board's motion.

The Board's motion was filed as a motion to dismiss, which is not recognized by the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules (UAPR). Rather, the motion falls within the purview of a motion for summary decision. When required in individual cases, the administrative law judge at any time of the proceeding may convert any form of proceeding into another, whether more or less formal, or whether in-person or by telephone. N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.6(d). The judge may render any ruling or order necessary to decide any matter presented which is within the jurisdiction of the transmitting agency or the agency conducting the hearing. N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.6(h). Additionally, the judge "may take such other actions as are necessary for the proper, expeditious and fair conduct of the hearing or other proceeding, development of the record, and rendering of a decision." N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.6(p). In light of the foregoing, the matter is hereby converted to a motion for summary decision, and accordingly is governed by N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

The file contains a letter to Jackson, dated May 14, 2009, from Pablo Munoz (Munoz), Superintendent of Schools (Superintendent), which states, in pertinent part:

> Your current employment contract expires on June 30, 2009. At that time, you will have received your entire annual wage. In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A 9:6-3 [sic], N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, and N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10, you will not be offered a contract of employment for your services for the 2009-2010 school year, which begins September 2009.

The file also contains a letter, dated May 14, 2009, from Jackson acknowledging receipt of the May 14, 2009 letter from Munoz, requesting written documentation and an opportunity to meet with someone to discuss the situation. Accordingly, I FIND that Jackson received the Superintendent's letter of May 14, 2009 on that same date.

On May 18, 2009, Aida Garcia, Assistant Superintendent for Human Resources sent a letter to Jackson in response to Jackson's request for a statement of reasons for her non-renewal, which letter stated that Jackson was non-renewed for performance based upon administrators' observations.

Jackson filed a Petition of Appeal on April 14, 2010, and I so FIND.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

The Board argues that the Petitioner's appeal is untimely, and should be dismissed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), which states:

> The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing. This rule shall not apply in instances where a specific statute, regulation or court order provides for a period of limitation shorter than 90 days for the filing of a particular type of appeal.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:27-10, on or before May 15 in each year, each non-tenured teaching staff member continuously employed by a board of education since the preceding September 30 shall receive either a written offer of a contract for employment from the board of education or a written notice from the chief school administrator that such employment will not be offered. An employee whose employment contract is not renewed has the right to a written statement of reasons for non-renewal and to an informal appearance before the board. N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(b). Jackson requested a written statement of reasons, but did not request an informal appearance before the board. Nevertheless, there is no dispute that Jackson was notified on May 14, 2009, that her contract was to expire on June 30, 2009 and she would not be offered a contract for the 2009-2010 year. Accordingly, the notice was sufficient to trigger the ninety-day time period, and Jackson would have had until August 12, 2009 to file a Petition of Appeal.

In her opposition to the Board's Motion, Jackson asserts that immediately following her dismissal she contacted either the Board or the Superintendent and requested a statement of reasons for her nonrenewal, and that she contacted her Union. She further asserts that she spent the summer of 2009 pursuing answers and evidence from the Elizabeth Education Association (EEA). She met with EEA attorney, Gregory Syrek, Esq. (Syrek), on August 20, 2009, and asserts that she was not advised by Syrek of "alternative ways to find justice in this issue". However, by the time she met with Syrek, the ninety days to file a Petition of Appeal had already expired. Finally, Jackson asserts that her correspondence in June 2009 through October 2009 was ignored.

Although I found that the May 14, 2009 letter triggered the ninety-day time period, even if the May 18, 2009 letter setting forth the reason for her non-renewal triggered the ninety-day time period, she would have had to file her Petition of Appeal by August 16, 2009. Moreover, although Jackson contends that correspondence in June 2009 through October 2009 was ignored, even ninety days after October 2009 would have required that she file a Petition of Appeal no later than the end of January 2010. Yet, Jackson did not file a petition until April 14, 2010, eleven months after she received notice that she was not being offered a contract for the 2009-2010 school year. Thus, even giving Jackson the benefit of any favorable inference, the filing of the Petition of Appeal was nevertheless untimely.

In Kaprow v. Bd. of Educ., 131 N.J. 572, 583 (1991), New Jersey Supreme Court discussed the ninety-day limitation period, and determined that such period "represents a reasonable procedural requirement," provides "finality in education matters," and has withstood tangential review. Additionally, the court opined:

> Adequate notice must be sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate. Moreover, adequate notice under the regulation must be sufficient to further the purpose of the ninety-day limitations period. A limitations period has two purposes. The first is to stimulate litigants to pursue a right of action within a reasonable time so that the opposing party may have a fair opportunity to defend, thus preventing the litigation of stale claims. The second purpose is "'to penalize dilatoriness and serve as a measure of repose'" by giving security and stability to human affairs.
> Kaprow, supra at 587. [Citations omitted].

In Kaprow, the petitioner attempted to resolve his claim through negotiations with the Board. However, the Supreme Court found that such attempt did not negate that he had received adequate notice on a date certain, nor did it roll the running of the limitations period. Similarly, in the present matter, Jackson contends that she pursued "alternative ways to find justice," and attempted to resolve her dispute by contacting the EEA and/or school personnel. However, she nevertheless received adequate notice on May 14, 2009, that her position was not being renewed by the Board, and her attempts to resolve her dispute did not toll the running of the ninety-day limitations period within which she was permitted to file a petition of appeal.

A contested case before the Office of Administrative Law "can be summarily disposed of before an ALJ without a plenary hearing in instances where the undisputed material facts, as developed on motion or otherwise, indicate that a particular disposition is required as a matter of law." In re Robros Recycling Corp., 226 N.J. Super. 343, 350 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 113 N.J. 63 (1988). N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b) provides, in pertinent part:

> The motion for summary decision shall be served with briefs and with or without supporting affidavits. The decision sought may be rendered if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is not genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. When a motion for summary decision is made and supported, an adverse party in order to prevail must by responding affidavit set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that this matter is appropriate for summary decision, as Jackson has failed to set forth any specific facts which demonstrate that there is a genuine issue requiring a hearing. Although the Board's motion was filed as a motion to dismiss, I CONCLUDE that pursuant to the regulations, the matter may be converted to a motion for summary decision. There is no dispute that Jackson was advised on May 14, 2009 that her contract would not be renewed, but she failed to file a Petition of Appeal until April 14, 2010, eleven months later, and long after the applicable ninety-day limitations period had expired. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Jackson's Petition of Appeal was untimely filed, and her Petition of Appeal should be dismissed.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that summary decision be GRANTED in favor of the Board, and that Jackson's Petition of Appeal be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS DKT. NO. 0304-277
OAL DKT. NO. EDE 5320-05
COMMISSIONER APPEAL NO. 3-3/09A

IN THE MATTER OF THE TEACHING CERTIFICATES OF RUTH MEGARGEE, NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN SERVICES.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

Appellant challenges the determination of the New Jersey State Board of Examiners (Board of Examiners) that her actions warranted the suspension of her teaching certificates for one year.

The facts underlying this controversy will not be completely detailed in this decision, as they are amply set forth in the various adjudications – including a decision by the Superior Court, Appellate Division – of the tenure charges brought against appellant. The Acting Commissioner has, however, thoroughly reviewed those facts, the legal arguments made below, and the evidence and legal discussion presented in the proceedings before the Board of Examiners. Upon consideration of same, as well as the parties' appellate briefs and appendices, the Acting Commissioner concurs with the Board of Examiners' holdings.

An examination of appellant's papers reveals little of merit. First, the Acting Commissioner finds that appellant's contention that the Board of Examiners bore – and did not sustain – the burden of proof is a red herring. The finding of appellant's unbecoming conduct was established in the tenure proceeding. The Board of Examiners provided appellant with the opportunity to present information that might militate against action on her certificates. To the extent that the Board bore the burden to show that appellant's unbecoming conduct warranted a one-year suspension of her certificate, it did so by identifying as grounds appellant's intractability and the effect it had upon the Department of Human Services' (DHS) ability to effectively deliver educational services.

Second, the Acting Commissioner rejects appellant's suggestion that the Board of Examiners was required to prove that she was unfit to instruct. Under N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.5, a finding of unbecoming conduct may serve as the basis for revocation or suspension of certification. As referenced above, in the tenure proceeding against her, appellant was found to have engaged in unbecoming conduct – not due to instructional incompetence, but rather to her unreasonable rejection of teaching assignments to the detriment of the DHS's ability to efficiently deliver instructional services. That is unquestionably grounds for a finding of unbecoming conduct, even where medical issues exist. See, e.g. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frances R. Metallo, School District of the City of Union City, Hudson County, Commissioner Decision No. 244-03, May 12, 2003; In the Matter of the Certificates of Frances Metallo, State Board of Examiners Dkt. No. 405-123 (May 5, 2005).[1] Hence, no finding of poor pedagogy was or is necessary.

The Commissioner's and Appellate Division's finding of unbecoming conduct based on excessive absenteeism is the law of the case and will not be relitigated here. The Board of Examiners independently and justifiably found that appellant's unbecoming conduct rose to a level that supported suspension of her certification.

Third, appellant suggests that because respondent – at the hearing in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on behalf of the Board of Examiners – did not present witnesses to rebut her testimony, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) and Board should have found in her favor. However, the ALJ and Board correctly determined that the evidence about appellant's unbecoming conduct supported a certificate suspension, her testimony about her teaching record and her frame of mind notwithstanding. The Acting Commissioner further notes that appellant was given a significantly shorter suspension than Metallo received, despite respondent's demands for a greater penalty.

[1] The Acting Commissioner rejects appellant's argument that Metallo can be distinguished because in that case, respondent – in addition to being charged with excessive absenteeism – was also accused of suggesting improper tactics to students participating in a mathematics competition. In both the Commissioner of Education and State Board of Examiners decisions, however, the respective arbiters found that the evidence of Metallo's excessive absenteeism independently supported a finding of unbecoming conduct. Commissioner Decision at 18 and Board of Examiners Decision at 4.

In summary, the Acting Commissioner is not persuaded that there is any basis to disturb the decision of the Board of Examiners suspending her certificates for a year. Accordingly, it is affirmed for the reasons set forth therein, and the appeal is dismissed.

IN THE MATTER OF	:	NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
THE CERTIFICATES OF	:	STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS
RUTH MEGARGEE	:	ORDER OF SUSPENSION
_____	:	DOCKET NO: 0304-277

At its meeting of June 10, 2004, the State Board of Examiners reviewed a decision forwarded by the Commissioner of Education dismissing Ruth Megargee from her tenured position with the Department of Human Services (DHS) for charges of unbecoming conduct. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Ruth Megargee, Docket No. 196-6/00 (Commissioner's Decision, December 31, 2001). DHS had alleged that Megargee was absent from her teaching position without permission. Megargee currently holds a Teacher of the Handicapped certificate, issued in June 1978 and a Teacher of Nursery School certificate, issued in October 1980.

This case originated when DHS certified tenure charges against respondent, Ruth Megargee. Megargee was employed as a Teacher at various DHS facilities during her long tenure. DHS charged her with unbecoming conduct for repeatedly refusing to return to work after an injury even though reasonable accommodations had been made for her.

The Commissioner of Education transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Lillard Law heard testimony for seven days over a three-month period in 2001. After receiving post-hearing submissions, the record closed and the ALJ issued an Initial Decision on November 8, 2001. *In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Ruth Megargee and Ruth Megargee v. New Jersey Department of Human Services,*Dkt. Nos. EDU 4693-00 and CSV 8265-00 (November 8, 2001.)

In that decision, ALJ Law focused on whether Megargee's unauthorized absence from duty constituted conduct unbecoming a teacher and, if so, whether her absences warrant her dismissal from her tenured position? (Initial Decision, slip op. at 65). ALJ Law concluded that Megargee was a disabled individual under the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, *N.J.S.A.*10:5-1 et seq., due to a work-related injury, who was entitled to a reasonable accommodation at work for her handicap. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 65-66.) The ALJ also noted that the DHS went beyond Megargee's restriction of not being able to lift anything over 40 pounds and offered her positions that required no lifting at all. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 66-67.) Moreover, the ALJ found credible DHS' contention that "the heaviest thing [Megargee] would have to lift all day is a piece of chalk and a textbook." (Initial Decision, slip op. at 68.)

ALJ Law determined that the tenure charges against Megargee were established and that her unauthorized absence from work constituted unbecoming conduct. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 69.) In fact, the ALJ held that DHS "has endured respondent-appellant's absence from duty to the detriment of its obligation to maintain its efficiency." (Initial Decision, slip op. at 70.) According to the ALJ, Megargee's refusal to resume her employment "on unfounded and unsubstantiated grounds" warranted her removal from her tenured position. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 70.) The ALJ therefore entered summary judgment for DHS and removed Megargee from her tenured position with DHS. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 71.)

In a decision dated December 31, 2001, the Commissioner of Education affirmed the ALJ's Initial Decision as to the tenure charges against Megargee. The Commissioner agreed with the ALJ that Megargee "was guilty of unbecoming conduct when she refused to return to work despite ample forewarning by her superiors that tenure proceedings would ensue if she did not." (Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 82.) The Commissioner further opined that DHS had offered a reasonable accommodation to Megargee that required no lifting or restraining of pupils even though Megargee was not restricted from the latter activity. (Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 82.) The Commissioner found that Megargee's claim that she was brought up on tenure charges for a three day absence to be disingenuous. (Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 82.) According to the Commissioner, "the record supports the determination that, in addition to a history of extensive absences, there were problems related to respondent's acceptance of assignments and/or returning to work, which were antecedent to the filing of the tenure charges." (Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 83.) Accordingly, the Commissioner affirmed Megargee's removal from her tenured employment with DHS and transmitted the matter to the State Board of Examiners for appropriate action regarding Megargee's certificates. Both the State Board of Education and the Appellate Division of the Superior Court of New Jersey affirmed the decision to terminate Megargee's tenure.

Thereafter, on June 10, 2004, the State Board of Examiners issued Megargee an Order to Show Cause as to why her certificates should not be suspended or revoked. The Order was predicated on the charges of unbecoming conduct that had been proven in the tenure hearing.

The Board sent Megargee the Order to Show Cause by regular and certified mail on July 27, 2004. The Order provided that Megargee's Answer was due within 30 days. Megargee filed an Answer on August 26, 2004. In her Answer Megargee admitted that

DHS had brought tenure charges against her. She also stated that the tenure charges were based on only a three day absence from her work and that the absences were legitimate. (Answer, ¶ 3.) In the remainder of her Answer, Megargee admitted the outcome of the tenure proceedings, but denied that there was any basis to revoke or suspend her certificates. (Answer, ¶¶ 4-6.) Megargee also argued that she had always proceeded in good faith, that the tenure charges against her were brought in retaliation for a lawsuit she had brought against DHS for discrimination and retaliation, and that she had applied for a disability pension after the tenure charges were filed and a State doctor found her to be totally disabled. (Answer, Affirmative Defenses.)

After receiving Megargee's response, the Examiners transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for the limited purpose of determining whether Megargee's unbecoming conduct warranted action against her certificates. Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Maria Mancini LaFiandra heard testimony and after receiving post-hearing submissions, the record closed and the ALJ issued an Initial Decision on December 8, 2008. In the Matter of the Certificates of Ruth Megargee, Dkt No. EDE 5320-05 (Initial Decision, December 8, 2008).

In that decision, ALJ La Fiandra determined that the "only issue remaining to be resolved in this matter is whether the unbecoming conduct in which Respondent engaged is so serious or egregious as to merit suspension or revocation of her working certificates." (Initial Decision, slip op. at 5.) The ALJ further noted that Megargee's certification hearing "is not one in which respondent may relitigate the tenure case, which respondent clearly attempted to do in the presentation before me." (Initial Decision, slip op. at 6.) The ALJ summarized that the Commissioner, State Board and Appellate division all found that Megargee's conduct was more serious than just absence without authorization for three days." (Initial Decision, slip op. at 6.)

ALJ La Fiandra found that the testimony and evidence Megargee presented, much of it hearsay, was unpersuasive given the nature of Megargee's conduct. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 6-7.) The ALJ held that while Megargee's conduct did not endanger the well-being of students, it was recalcitrant: "[s]he not only resisted authority in refusing to return to work, she flouted it as well by ignoring the caveat that tenure charges would follow if she failed to return to work." (Initial Decision, slip op. at 7.) The ALJ therefore ordered Megargee's teaching certificates suspended for one year. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 7.)

Both the Deputy Attorney General (DAG) representing the Board of Examiners and Megargee filed Exceptions to the Initial Decision.[1] The DAG argued that while the reasoning of the Initial Decision in collaterally estopping Megargee from relitigating the issues surrounding her tenure removal was correct, the penalty the ALJ imposed was too lenient. (DAG Exceptions, pp.1-3.) The DAG urged that the Initial Decision should be modified to impose a more stringent penalty. (DAG Exceptions, p.3.)

In her Exceptions, Megargee argued that there was no authority to suspend her certificates based on her absenteeism for bona fide medical reasons. (Megargee Exceptions, pp. 8-18.) Megargee also argued that the Board of Examiners had not met its burden of proving that she was unfit to be a teacher. She noted that "but for the dispute over her absence caused by her disability (and whether the accommodation offered to her was reasonable or not), respondent was an exemplary teacher, who had no blemish on her career spanning over two decades." (Megargee Exceptions, p. 18.) Accordingly, Megargee argued that the Initial Decision should be modified to provide for no action against her certificates. (Megargee Exceptions, p. 20.)

In Reply Exceptions, the DAG claimed that ALJ LaFiandra properly rebuffed Megargee's attempt to reintroduce facts that were fully decided during the tenure matter, hearsay evidence unsupported by legally competent evidence and evidence concerning events which occurred subsequent to Megargee's unbecoming conduct. (Reply Exceptions, pp. 2-4.) The DAG also argued that the Examiners did not need to present fact witnesses regarding Megargee's conduct since that was already proven in the tenure hearing. (Reply Exceptions, p. 6.) Rather, the only issue that remained before ALJ La Fiandra was one of penalty, which is legal in nature and only called for Megargee to present evidence in mitigation. (Reply Exceptions, p. 6.) Accordingly, the DAG reiterated her argument that the Initial Decision should be affirmed for its reasoning and a stricter penalty imposed. (Reply Exceptions, p. 7.)

The Board must now determine whether to adopt, modify or dismiss the Initial Decision in this matter. At its meeting of January 13, 2009, the Board reviewed the Initial Decision, Exceptions and Reply Exceptions. After full and fair consideration of the decision and the issues raised therein, the Board voted to adopt the Initial Decision. Since Megargee's unbecoming conduct was established in the tenure proceedings, the only issue remaining here is whether that conduct is sufficient to warrant sanctions against Megargee's certificates.

There is no doubt that the ALJ is in the best position to render credibility determinations in this matter. Accordingly, the Board will defer to those findings.

Contrary to Megargee's assertions, she is not being "punished" merely for missing three days of work or being unable to physically perform her job. As ALJ LaFiandra made clear in her decision, it was Megargee's recalcitrant behavior in cooperating with DHS that warranted the one-year suspension of her teaching certificates. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 7.) Moreover, in examining the entire record in this case, the Board notes (as did the Commissioner, State Board and Appellate Division) that Megargee clearly evinced no desire to return to her employment unless the job presented none of the "imagined" pitfalls Megargee ascribed to it. Her intractability undermined DHS' ability to effectively function and the Examiners therefore agree with the ALJ's assessment that the proper sanction in this case is a one-year suspension of Megargee's certificates. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 7.)

Accordingly, on January 13, 2009 the Board of Examiners voted to suspend Ruth Megargee's Teacher of the Handicapped and Teacher of Nursery School certificates for one year. On this 23rd day of February 2009 the Board of Examiners voted to adopt its formal written decision and it is therefore ORDERED that the one-year suspension of Megargee's certificates be effective immediately. It is further ORDERED that Megargee return her certificates to the Secretary of the State Board of Examiners, Office of Licensure, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625-0500 within 30 days of the mailing date of this decision.

Petitioner hereby acknowledges that the execution of this Agreement and the General Release and Waiver which accompanies it shall absolutely bar any such claim, action or suit against any releasee identified in the General Release and Waiver. This release specifically excludes any pension based or workers compensation claims. Ms. Covert is unaware of any factual basis for such claims.

In the event that either party is required to commence an action in law or equity to enforce its rights under this Agreement and it prevails, the party against whom the action is brought shall be required to pay the prevailing party reasonable attorneys fees and costs in addition to any damages which may be recoverable.

6. It is understood that neither the execution of this Agreement nor any other action taken by the Respondent in connection with this settlement constitutes an admission by the Respondents or any other person or entity identified in the General Release and Waiver as a releasee, of any violation of any law, duty or obligation, or that any decision or action with respect to the employment of Petitioner was unwarranted, unjustified, retaliatory, discriminatory or otherwise unlawful. The Respondent specifically disclaims any liability to Petitioner or any other person. The parties have entered into this Agreement solely to compromise disputed claims. No findings of any kind have been made or issued by the Commissioner on the merits of the claims in this action and neither party purports to be the prevailing party in this action.

Subsequent to the Agency's receipt of the recommended decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) in this matter, by letter dated August 26, 2010 and copied to counsel for the Department, counsel for petitioner reported: "Without a lengthy explanation, the impediment which we asked to be removed in the petition has been accomplished because of a change in the expungement law. Therefore, the issue asked to be adjudicated in the petition is now moot and I ask that it be withdrawn."

Having received no objection from counsel for the Department – either as to the mootness of this matter or its consequential withdrawal at this point in time – the Commissioner accepts petitioner's withdrawal of his petition of appeal on the ground of mootness.

Accordingly, as there is no justiciable controversy in need of resolution in this matter, the recommended Initial Decision of the OAL is rejected as unnecessary.

Record Closed: July 5, 2010 Decided: August 18, 2010

BEFORE JOSEPH F. MARTONE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 4, 2009, petitioner filed a verified petition with the New Jersey Department of Education dated May 4, 2009 (C-1), asserting that the current version of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 is being applied retroactively, thus causing a "manifest injustice," and violating "notions of fundamental fairness." (See, C-1 at 3.) The Department transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on June 16, 2009, for hearing as a contested case. In lieu of an answer, respondent submitted a motion to dismiss the petition, dated June 12, 2009, based on its position that "petitioner has failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." (See R-1 at 2.) In response, petitioner filed a brief in opposition to respondent's motion, dated July 22, 2009 (P-1). Respondent filed a reply letter brief in reply to petitioner's opposition to the motion to dismiss dated July 28, 2009 (R-2).

In response to my letter of September 3, 2009, expressing my concern that the record may be incomplete, I conducted a telephone conference on September 23, 2009. At that conference attorney for respondent requested an opportunity to contact petitioner's employing school district to confirm petitioner's claims. Following additional submissions by the parties (R-3 and P-2), I scheduled oral argument on the motion, which occurred on December 9, 2009.

On January 15, 2010, I received a letter from attorney for petitioner (P-3) advising that a new Expungement Act (P.L. 2009, c.188) had been signed into law on January 12, 2010, and requesting that I stay my decision in this case pending the outcome of petitioner's expungement request under the new law. I conferred with counsel on February 3, 2010, and determined to grant this request. However, after researching this issue, I decided to close the record and issue this initial decision.

The issue in this case is whether, in cases involving criminal record checks of public school teachers, the version of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 in place at the time the record check was conducted or the version in effect at the time a teacher was hired should govern the teacher's disqualification.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

After reviewing the facts and allegations, I have determined that this case should be decided as a motion for summary decision rather than as motion to dismiss. That which follows is a brief summary of the relevant facts of this case, all of which are undisputed.

In 1977, petitioner was charged with, and convicted of, possession of marijuana with intent to distribute. (See C-1 at 1.) Approximately nine years later, in 1986, petitioner obtained a teaching position with the Ocean City School District. (Id. at 2.) Petitioner held this position until 2009, when he was disqualified pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1, for having a criminal record. (Ibid.)

Prior to 1989, petitioner's conviction was not a disqualifying offense under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1. (Ibid.) A 1989 amendment to the statute made petitioner's 1986 conviction a disqualifying offense. (Ibid.) The amendment also provided that, although a conviction may be disqualifying, an employee could avoid being disqualified if he or she could demonstrate rehabilitation. (Ibid.) In 1998, the Legislature amended the statute yet again, and removed the rehabilitation provision. (Ibid.)

In 2009, the New Jersey Department of Education's Criminal History Review Unit required petitioner to be fingerprinted so that a criminal record check could be conducted. (Ibid.) Petitioner asserts that the Department never conducted a criminal record check prior to 2009, and this assertion has not been disputed by respondent. The background check revealed petitioner's 1977 drug conviction. (Ibid.) Petitioner was subsequently dismissed from his teaching position with the Ocean City School District based on the discovery of his prior criminal conviction. (Ibid.)

Based on the guidance given in prior administrative decisions in similar cases,[1] on September 3, 2009, I sent a letter to the attorneys expressing my concern that the record in this case may be incomplete. (C-2.) The basis of my concern was that, at that point, neither party had presented any evidence concerning petitioner's performance after being hired nor did either party address whether petitioner had been asked to provide a criminal background at the time of hiring, and whether any misrepresentation concerning a past criminal record had been made. (C-2.)

In response to my concerns, attorney for respondent submitted a letter dated October 23, 2009 (R-3), providing a photocopy of petitioner's application for a teaching position in the Ocean City public schools. (Attachment to R-3.) In that application, signed by the petitioner on July 21, 1986, there is the question "Have you ever been convicted of a crime? Yes____No____." The application further states "If 'Yes', please fill in the following:" The application then asks when, where and what offense. The completed application supplied with the letter contains no responses to these questions, indicating that the petitioner failed to respond. It is noted that these questions are on the same page of the application as petitioner's dated signature.

In his letter dated October 28, 2009 (P-2), attorney for petitioner does not dispute this, and acknowledged the petitioner did not answer the above questions. He also correctly points out that the school district ignored petitioner's incomplete application at the time of hiring. (P-2.)

Finally, by letter dated January 14, 2010, attorney for petitioner notified this tribunal and attorney for respondent of the enactment of P.L. 2009, c.188, effective date March 15, 2010, codified at N.J.S.A. 2C:52-2. This legislation provides for the expungement of criminal records in certain circumstances. Attorney for petitioner asserts that this new expungement act allows the criminal history review unit to remove petitioner's disqualification if ordered by a judge of the Superior Court, thus having the effect of rendering the within case moot. Attorney for petitioner indicated that on March 12, 2010, he forwarded the expungement petition to the Superior Court.

[1] These cases are discussed in the Legal Discussion section of this initial decision.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

The first issue in this case is, which version of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 should be applied regarding petitioner's disqualification, the version in effect at the time petitioner was originally hired, or the version in place at the time petitioner's criminal record check was conducted?

A second issue raised is whether the expungement of petitioner's disqualifying conviction during the pendency of this case should have an effect on the outcome?

As to the first issue, the current version of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 reads, in pertinent part,

> A facility, center, school, or school system under the supervision of the Department of Education and board of education which cares for, or is involved in the education of children under the age of 18 shall not employ for pay or contract for the paid services of any teaching staff member . . . unless the employer has first determined consistent with the requirements and standards of this act, that no criminal history record information exists on file in the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Identification Division, or the State Bureau of Identification which would disqualify that individual from being employed or utilized in such a capacity or position . . .
>
> An individual, except as provided in subsection g. of this section, shall be permanently disqualified from employment or service under this act if the individual's criminal history record check reveals a record of conviction for any crime of the first or second degree; or
>
>
> b. An offense involving the manufacture, transportation, sale, possession, distribution or habitual use of a "controlled dangerous substance" as defined in the "Comprehensive Drug Reform Act of 1987," N.J.S.2C:35-1 et al. or "drug paraphernalia" as defined pursuant to N.J.S. 2C:36-1 et seq.;

> g. This section shall first apply to criminal history record checks conducted on or after the effective date of P.L.1998, c.31 (C:18A:6-7.1c et al.) . . .
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 (emphasis added).]

In general, the courts of this State favor a prospective application of statutes rather than a retroactive application. The New Jersey Supreme Court recently held:

> We "have long followed a general rule of statutory construction that favors prospective application of statutes." This preference is based on our long-held notions of fairness and due process.
>
> Although the rule favoring prospectivity is, "a sound rule of statutory interpretation," "if the Legislature expresses an intent that the statute is to be applied retroactively, the statute should be so applied." As we have recently commented, the Legislature may express its intent explicitly or by implication "in that 'retroactive application may be necessary to make the statute workable or to give it the most sensible interpretation.'"
>
> Consequently, the preference for prospective application is not applied mechanistically to every case. To be sure, retroactivity is appropriate, in general, when it is expressed, when an amendment is curative, or when the expectations of the parties so warrant. Only if one of these grounds is present, will we give a statute retroactive effect.
> [Cruz v. Central New Jersey Landscaping, Inc., 195 N.J. 33 (2008) (citations omitted).]

When the Ocean City School District originally hired petitioner, the offense for which he was convicted in 1977 was not listed in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 as a disqualifying offense. The offense was added to the statute in 1989, approximately three years after petitioner was hired. Petitioner asserts that since his conviction was not "disqualifying" at the time he was hired, it is improper to apply the 2009 version of the statute, in which petitioner's offense is listed as disqualifying, because it would be a retroactive application of the statute.

Respondent contends that the language contained in subsection g. of the statute is prospective, not retroactive. The provision explicitly states that the section will apply only to "criminal record checks conducted on or after the effective date . . ." The criminal record check in this matter was conducted in 2009, approximately eleven years after the statute became effective (P.L. 1998, c. 31). Therefore, according to respondent, the statute is clear on its face and is not being applied retroactively.

According to the relevant case law regarding this type of case, the determining factor is the date that the criminal background check is conducted. The version of the statute in effect at the time the criminal record check is conducted generally applies. Thus, the statute applies prospectively. In Cidoni v. Bd. of Education of the City of Camden and Department of Education, Office of Criminal History, EDU 6088-03, Initial Decision (December 22, 2005), adopted Comm'r (February 27, 2006), the administrative law judge (ALJ) found that the statute was clear on its face and that the petitioner was properly disqualified after a criminal record check was performed and uncovered a conviction which was not disqualifying at the time the petitioner was originally hired. The ALJ and the Commissioner both held that it was the date that the criminal record check is conducted which is important, not whether or not the prior conviction was a disqualifying offense at the time petitioner was hired. If the prior conviction is a disqualifying offense at the time the criminal record check is conducted, the teacher is disqualified. See Cidoni v. Bd. of Education of the City of Camden and Department of Education, Office of Criminal History, EDU 6088-03, Final Decision (February 27, 2006), at 5, footnote 1; see also, Nunez v. Department of Education, EDU 3689-02, Initial Decision (June 9, 2006) (The ALJ and Commissioner both held that the date that the criminal record check is conducted is determinative.).

Based on this, I CONCLUDE that in the absence of circumstances giving to petitioner an equitable entitlement to relief, since petitioner's prior conviction was a disqualifying offense at the time the criminal record check was conducted, petitioner should be disqualified.

I will now address whether the circumstances of this case entitle petitioner to equitable relief. Although the version of the statute in effect at the time the criminal record check was conducted was found to apply in the majority of cases according to both Cidoni and Nunez, the Commissioner also acknowledged "the possibility of an equitable entitlement, demonstrable on appeal, for a petitioner to have his or her corrective action check re-evaluated by the Department on a nunc pro tunc basis, and, assuming a favorable outcome, to make a claim for reinstatement by the employing board of education." Cidoni, supra at 5-6. The Commissioner further held that, the question turns on whether the petitioner "demonstrated such an entitlement." Id. at 6.

In Nunez, the ALJ and Commissioner both found that petitioner was entitled to equitable relief because he had been working for the school district for over two (2) years and "fulfilled all requirements of the application process, including completing all of his responsibilities and turned all documents for the background check over to [r]espondent" at the time he was hired. Nunez, supra.

In Cidoni, it was held that petitioner was not entitled to "equitable entitlement" because he was less than forthcoming regarding his past criminal record. Petitioner made several misrepresentations concerning his prior conviction; including denying that he had ever been convicted of any crime or misdemeanor. Cidoni, supra at 7. Therefore, in that case, the Commissioner found that the petitioner was not entitled to equitable relief. Id. at 6.

In the present matter, petitioner's attorney alleged that he possessed an unblemished record throughout his approximately twenty-three year career with the Ocean City School District. At first, neither party presented any evidence concerning petitioner's conduct after being hired. After my inquiry of September 3, 2009, the respondent did not dispute this assertion by petitioner's attorney. Therefore, I will accept that petitioner's record is unblemished during his service as a teacher. Petitioner also asserts that the Department never asked him to submit his fingerprints for a criminal record check prior to 2009. This also was not disputed by the respondent.

However, based on the submitted copy of petitioner's application for a teaching position in the Ocean City public schools, (Attachment to R-3), it is clear that petitioner was not forthcoming in response to the school district's question whether he had ever been convicted of a crime. In that application, signed by the petitioner on July 21, 1986, the petitioner never responded to the question "Have you ever been convicted of a crime? Yes____No____." He also never responded to the further inquiry "If 'Yes', please fill in the following:" asking when, where and what offense. The petitioner's application contains no responses, and the petitioner does not dispute that he did not respond. Because these questions are on the same page of the application as petitioner's dated signature, it cannot be argued that he missed seeing them. Therefore, based on the undisputed fact that petitioner failed to respond to the school district's inquiry into his criminal background, I CONCLUDE that petitioner misrepresented the absence of any past criminal record by his failure to respond. I further CONCLUDE that under these circumstances he is not entitled to equitable relief from the version of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 in place at the time of the criminal record check.

Finally, there is the question whether the subsequent expungement of petitioner's disqualifying conviction renders this case moot. Based on the guidance in Cidoni and Nunez, supra, I CONCLUDE that since the conviction in question was a disqualifying offense at the time the criminal record check was conducted, petitioner is disqualified notwithstanding there may be a subsequent expungement of the disqualifying conviction. An order of expungement cannot nullify the fact that at the time of the criminal record check, the petitioner was burdened with a disqualifying conviction.

DECISION AND ORDER

For the reasons stated above, I ORDER that respondent's motion seeking an order of dismissal of petitioner's petition is hereby GRANTED, and the petition is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter, the parties' revised settlement agreement, and the Initial Decision on Remand of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), have been reviewed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1. Upon review of the revised agreement and the record on remand, the Commissioner finds that the deficiency identified in the prior agreement has been corrected. The Commissioner also concurs with the ALJ that the proposed settlement is consistent with the established standards governing the settlement of tenure matters. In re Cardonick, decided by the Commissioner April 7, 1982, aff'd State Board April 6, 1983, 1990 S.L.D. 842, 846.

Record Closed: August 31, 2010 Decided: September 10, 2010

BEFORE JOHN R. FUTEY, ALJ:

This is a remand from a previously submitted initial decision settlement under OAL DKT. No. EDU 10720-09.

In this matter, petitioner, the Board of Education of the City of Trenton, Mercer County (hereinafter "Trenton") preferred and filed tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education on November 5, 2009, against respondent Kurt Halvorsen (hereinafter "Halvorsen") in which it charged Halvorsen, a tenured teacher, with insubordination and unbecoming conduct, as a result of which it sought his removal. He appealed that action. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (hereinafter "OAL") on November 18, 2009, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. An in-person prehearing conference was held on January 7, 2010, at which time Halvorsen was then represented by Arnold M. Mellk of the firm of Wills, O'Neal and Mellk. The due process hearing was then set to be heard on February 4, 5, 8 and 10, 2010, at the OAL, Trenton, New Jersey, and a prehearing order relative to same was thereafter issued on January 11, 2010.

On the first scheduled hearing date, the parties orally agreed under oath and on the record to all of the terms of a settlement and which was to be followed up with an appropriate resolution by Trenton thereafter. Edward A. Cridge, Esq, appeared on behalf of the Wills firm at that time with Halverson. However, when the executed agreement was not forthcoming, Trenton moved to have the terms of the agreement enforced, which motion was stayed pending the substitution of counsel on behalf of Halvorsen after the Wills firm moved for withdrawal on his behalf on April 15, 2010. At the same time, although the substitution of attorney was granted by this tribunal, it was also ordered that any entitlement to back pay would be stayed and that he would remain in no-pay status until a final administrative decision on the merits of the pending tenure charges due to the delays occasioned by him in this matter. Halverson and his new counsel, whom he ultimately retained on April 23, 2010, were invited to appear at the OAL to answer the motion for enforcement by Trenton on April 26, 2010. At that time and instead of pursuing that motion, the parties met and agreed to resolve all disputed matters, subject once again to obtaining all of the requisite signatures and the Board resolution by Trenton. Upon receipt of the fully executed original agreement, which included the signatures of the Trenton board President and the Trenton board Secretary (J-1), on July 2, 2010, the hearing record closed and the initial decision incorporating and approving it was forwarded to the Acting Commissioner of Education for final agency approval. It was remanded by Decision of the Commissioner, dated August 6, 2010. Upon receipt of that decision and after conferring with counsel, this tribunial received the copy of the revised resolution, dated August 30, 2010, along with the original signature and certification of Jayne S. Howard, Board Secretary. The amended resolution, signed by Board president Nicola Tatum and Board Secretary Jayne S. Howard, states, in relevant part: "The Board designates and authorizes the Board President to execute the Stipulation of Settlement on the Board's behalf..." (P-1).

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and the authorizations affixed thereto and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their duly authorized representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

Therefore, I ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

IN THE MATTER OF TENURE CHARGES AGAINST KURT HALVORSEN, BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF TRENTON, MERCER COUNTY	BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION, STATE OF NEW JERSEY OAL DOCKET NO.: EDUTH 10720-2009S AGENCY REF. NO.: 307-11/09

STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

WHEREAS, the Board of Education of the City of Trenton ("the Board") is a body politic and corporate, organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1, which is entrusted with maintaining and conducting the public schools of the Trenton Public School District; and

WHEREAS, Kurt Halvorsen ("Halvorsen") is a tenured teacher employed by the Trenton Public Schools; and

WHEREAS, the Board drafted a Statement of Tenure Charges and Statement of Evidence against Halvorsen dated August 18, 2009, attached hereto as Exhibit A, with the charges being based upon Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct; and

WHEREAS, a copy of the Statement of Tenure Charges and Statement of Evidence were forwarded by Jayne S. Howard, Business Administrator and Board Secretary to Halvorsen via regular and certified mail, return receipt requested under cover dated August 18, 2009, attached hereto as Exhibit B; and

WHEREAS, the cover letter from Ms. Howard to Halvorsen dated August 18, 2009 provided Halvorsen with the required fifteen (15) day period to respond to the charges in writing and notified him of his right to attend the meeting of the Trenton Board of Education on September 29, 2009, at which time the Board would discuss the charges and provide Halvorsen with an opportunity to respond to the Board directly; and

WHEREAS, Halvorsen failed to respond to the charges in writing within the fifteen (15) day period and failed to attend the Board meeting on September 29, 2009; and

WHEREAS, on October 16, 2009, the Board passed a Resolution and executed a Certificate of Determination in approval of a Statement of Tenure Charges and Statement of Evidence against Halvorsen, attached hereto as Exhibit C; and

WHEREAS, the Statement of Tenure Charges and Statement of Evidence were filed with the Commissioner of Education under cover dated November 5, 2009, attached hereto as Exhibit D, under Docket Number EDUTH 10720-2009S; and

WHEREAS, Halvorsen, through counsel, filed an Answer to the Statement of Tenure Charges dated November 10, 2009, attached hereto as Exhibit E, generally denying all allegations; and

WHEREAS, the parties have exchanged discovery; and

WHEREAS, said discovery demonstrated that the tenure charges concerned allegations that Halvorsen did not complete mandatory requirements of teachers regarding the academic assessment of students, and not any allegation of malicious conduct, nor conduct involving moral turpitude; and

WHEREAS, the parties, wishing to resolve the within matter amicably without the need for further, protracted litigation, while achieving the goals of both parties and the public interest, hereby stipulate to settle same, subject to the terms and conditions set forth herein, upon approval by the Commissioner of Education; and

WHEREAS, Halvorsen has been advised by counsel of the Commissioner's sole discretion to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of certificate; and

WHEREAS, Halvorsen will submit a letter of resignation of his employment to the Board, effective February 8, 2010, upon execution of this agreement;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants and promises contained herein, the legal sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged by the parties, they agree as follows:

1. Dismissal of All Claims

This Stipulation is expressly contingent upon and subject to approval by the Commissioner of Education of New Jersey. The parties agree and consent that upon approval of this Stipulation of Settlement by the Commissioner, the within tenure charges shall be dismissed. Halvorsen agrees to resign from his employment with the Board effective upon the adoption of this agreement by the Board of Education. Halvorsen further waives any right to, and will not, seek reinstatement in his tenured position, and releases any and all claims that could have been raised in the tenure proceeding. Halvorsen agrees that he will not apply for any future position of employment with the Board. Halvorsen further acknowledges that he is permitted to keep and negotiate four (4) payroll checks that he erroneously received from the Board subsequent to the filing of the tenure charges against him. However, Halvorsen and the Board agree that the 120-day period of unpaid suspension directly following the filing of tenure charges will now begin on December 22, 2009 instead of on November 6, 2009. The Board has no objection to, and will not oppose, any application by Halvorsen for unemployment benefits. The Board agrees to fulfill its obligations under applicable law with respect to Halvorsen's COBRA rights and benefits. Both parties agree, however, that in the event this agreement is not approved by the Commissioner of Education, they fully reserve their rights to proceed with this litigation and/or any other cause of action that they might have against one another and that their obligations under this agreement shall be null and void.

2. Public Interest

Settlement of this matter is in the public interest as it avoids the financial, legal and administrative burden which will result from continued litigation where all parties agree to these terms of settlement. The parties are in agreement that it is in the best interests of all parties for Halvorsen to resign from his employment with the Board. Therefore, the parties agree to move forward with a prompt settlement, which causes the Board no financial prejudice, and which avoids further unnecessary litigation.

3. No Admission

The execution of this agreement does not constitute any admission by either party as to the nature, quality, veracity, or demonstrability at trial of the allegations set forth in the tenure charges. The parties mutually acknowledge that this matter has been litigated and resolved in good faith, and agree that Halvorsen is resigning from his employment with the Board in good standing. The Board shall respond to any inquiry by a prospective employer by providing Halvorsen's dates of employment, position, and salary history, and shall indicate that his reason for leaving his employment was "resignation in good standing."

4. Board Approval

The Board President has been duly authorized by the Board at its Executive Session on February 8, 2010 to execute this Agreement on behalf of the Board of Education. The Board will execute a Resolution adopting the terms of settlement shortly after the February 8th Board Meeting.

5. Assent to Terms

Both parties hereby acknowledge having entered into this agreement with a full understanding of their rights and that they were fully informed of the implications of this agreement by legal counsel. Neither party enters into this agreement under duress. Both parties enter this agreement by their free will and volition. Both parties were given the opportunity to fully consider the terms and conditions of this settlement. Either party may revoke their consent to this Stipulation of Settlement within seven (7) days from the execution thereof by delivering written notification of revocation to the other party. It is understood that if this agreement is revoked, it will not be effective or enforceable. By signing this Stipulation of Settlement, Halvorsen acknowledges the Commissioner's sole discretion to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of certificate.

6. Entire Agreement

This agreement represents the entire understanding of the parties as to the settlement and may be modified only in a subsequent written instrument, duly executed by the parties. No other representations of any kind shall be binding upon the parties.

7. Governing Law

This agreement and all provisions hereof shall be governed by and construed under the laws of the State of New Jersey.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have knowingly and voluntarily executed and delivered this Stipulation of Settlement on the dates set forth below.

Order of Revocation by the State Board of Examiners, April 29, 2010

For the Respondent-Appellant, Harold N. Springstead, Esq.

For the Petitioner-Respondent State Board of Examiners, Bryant Horsley, Jr., Deputy Attorney General (Paula T. Dow, Attorney General of New Jersey)

The Acting Commissioner has thoroughly reviewed the record and the papers filed in connection with respondent's appeal of the State Board of Examiners' Order of April 29, 2010, revoking his teacher and supervisor certificates and his Principal Certificate of Eligibility.

After full consideration of the record and all submissions, the decision of the State Board of Examiners is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein.*

IN THE MATTER OF	:	NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
THE CERTIFICATES OF	:	STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS
WILLIAM CASTEL	:	ORDER OF REVOCATION
_____	:	DOCKET NO: 0708-163

At its meeting of February 21, 2008, the State Board of Examiners reviewed information the Division of Criminal Justice had forwarded indicating that William Castel had been accepted into a Pre-Trial Intervention Program (PTI). The Bergen County Prosecutor had charged Castel with Endangering the Welfare of a Child and Harassment for making numerous phone calls and leaving messages for a former eighth grade student. As a condition of entry into PTI, Castel was required to forfeit his tenured position in the East Rutherford School District. Castel currently holds a Teacher of Industrial Arts certificate, issued in October 1983, a Teacher of Elementary School certificate, issued in September 1994, a Supervisor certificate, issued in August 2006 and a Principal Certificate of Eligibility, issued in August 2006. On March 27, 2008, the State Board of Examiners issued Castel an Order to Show Cause as to why his certificates should not be revoked. The Order was predicated on the conduct underlying the criminal charges.

The Board sent Castel the Order to Show Cause by regular and certified mail on April 4, 2008. The Order provided that Castel's Answer was due within 30 days. Castel filed an Answer on April 25, 2008. In his Answer, Castel admitted that he had been charged with Endangering the Welfare of a Child and Harassment, but denied the charges. (Answer, ¶ 3.) He admitted making the phone calls to the student, but denied that they were harassing. (Answer, ¶ 3.) Castel stated that he did not enter a plea of guilty to any charge and denied that his conduct provided just cause for consideration of the revocation of his certificates. (Answer, ¶ 4.)

Thereafter, on May 5, 2008, the Board transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case. A hearing was conducted before Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) JoAnn LaSala Candido on June 23 and October 27, 2009. After the record closed, ALJ Candido issued her Initial Decision on February 16, 2010. In the Matter of the Certificates of William Castel, Dkt. No. EDE 05768-08 (Initial Decision, February 16, 2010). In that decision, ALJ Candido determined that Castel developed a friendship with two middle school students, S.R. and V.V., which began in school when he was their shop teacher. Id. at 19. Castel would discuss personal matters with S.R. and would contact her by cell phone on many occasions. Id. at 19. At one point when she was not returning his calls, Castel became frustrated and called her approximately ten times. Id. at 12. Castel also invited S.R. and V.V. to his house to swim on one occasion. Ibid. Castel also apparently pulled S.R. and V.V. out of their science class to talk to them. Id. at 8-9. The ALJ found that S.R. and V.V. gave credible testimony and did not believe that they "harbored a motive or bias to fabricate their testimony." Id. at 13. In fact, ALJ Candido found that S.R.'s credibility "was enhanced by her candid admission that she had lied to her mother when she went to respondent's home in New York." Ibid. The ALJ also held that Castel's testimony lacked credibility. Ibid.

ALJ Candido concluded that Castel had engaged in conduct unbecoming a teacher and that his conduct constituted just cause for revocation of his teaching certificates. Id. at 22. She held that Castel's voice messages to S.R. were "reprehensible and totally inappropriate" particularly for a teacher. Ibid. Moreover, she noted that even if Castel was motivated, as he claimed, by a desire to help S.R. through a difficult time, he had other more appropriate avenues available to him such as referring her to a counselor or talking to her parents. Id. at 23. The ALJ concluded that Castel exhibited "extremely poor judgment" by developing a personal relationship with a student and the lack of evidence of a sexual or romantic involvement did not mitigate the seriousness of his actions. Ibid. Finally, the fact that Castel's behavior "was not confined to a single incident but evolved into a pattern which continued through S.R. and V.V.'s eighth grade school year" led ALJ Candido to conclude that all of his certificates should be revoked. Ibid.

Both Castel and the Deputy Attorney General (DAG) representing the Board of Examiners submitted Exceptions and the DAG also submitted Reply Exceptions. The DAG's Exceptions included a list of corrections of minor factual errors in the Initial Decision. (Exceptions, p. 3.) In his Exceptions, Castel argued that the ALJ's credibility determinations were based upon a faulty review of the testimony and documentary evidence. (Exceptions, pp. 4-13.) Castel noted that although the ALJ stated that his evaluations were satisfactory, she neglected to mention that his supervisor said they were good and that a satisfactory rating was the highest anybody could get. (Exceptions, p. 5.) Castel also contended that the ALJ erred when she did not note that the students testified they thought Castel was joking when he offered them a beer while they visited his house. (Exceptions, pp. 6-7.) He maintained that since S.R. never had a cell phone in eighth grade, the ALJ's recitation of the facts was misleading in implying that Castel called S.R. constantly on her cell phone during the school year. (Exceptions, pp. 8-9.) Castel also stated that S.R. changed her testimony regarding her father's reason for taking her cell phone away. (Exceptions, pp.10-11.) In addition, Castel claimed that the ALJ did not mention or consider certain exhibits. (Exceptions, p. 11.) Finally, Castel argued that revocation was too severe a penalty, especially in view of his long career of dedicated teaching and coaching. (Exceptions, pp. 13-14.)

In his reply, the DAG argued that "The Findings of Fact and witness credibility assessments are well supported by the record." (Reply Exceptions, pp. 4-12.) He noted that there was consistent, credible evidence that Castel pulled both V.V. and S.R. out of their science class repeatedly so he could spend time with them. (Reply Exceptions, pp. 4-6.) The DAG also stated that the record supported the ALJ's finding that Castel repeatedly made unsolicited comments about V.V.'s and S.R.'s physical appearance. (Reply Exceptions, pp. 6-7.) The DAG further claimed that ALJ Candido's finding that Castel offered the two minor girls a beer while in his home was amply supported by the record and argued that Castel's intentions, whether joking or not, were immaterial to the issue of the inappropriateness of the offer. (Reply Exceptions, pp. 7-8.) He also noted that S.R. credibly testified as to having a cell phone at the end of eighth grade and cited Castel's own testimony that he spoke to S.R.'s mother on S.R.'s cell phone. (Reply Exceptions, pp. 9-11.) The DAG argued that the ALJ was correct in determining that a penalty of revocation was warranted here due to Castel's repeated phone calls to S.R. asking her to "hang out" and "get together," his pattern of pulling S.R. and V.V. out of class and his decision to become personally involved with a student. (Reply Exceptions, pp. 13-18.) Finally, the DAG argued that Castel was in error in arguing that mitigation of his penalty was warranted because he had good teacher evaluations and his relationship with S.R. was not sexual in nature. (Exceptions, pp. 18-20.) The DAG noted that Castel's own Superintendent described the evaluations as "cookie-cutter" and "not meaningful." (Reply Exceptions, pp. 18-19.) Moreover, the DAG recalled ALJ Candido's statement that even if Castel's actions were motivated purely out of concern for S.R., "there were other measures he should have taken, such as contacting S.R.'s parents or referring her to counseling services offered by the school,...." (Reply Exceptions, p. 20.) Accordingly, the DAG noted that "the record demonstrates that Castel's unbecoming conduct warrants revocation of his certificates." (Reply Exceptions, p. 23.)

The Board must now determine whether to adopt, modify or dismiss the Initial Decision in this matter. At its meeting of March 25, 2010, the Board reviewed the Initial Decision, Exceptions and Reply Exceptions. After full and fair consideration of the Decision, Exceptions and Reply Exceptions and the issues raised therein, the Board voted to adopt the Initial Decision.

As a preliminary matter, the Board must note that members of its Legal Committee listened to the voicemails Castel left for S.R. that were admitted into evidence at his hearing before the OAL. The frequency and tone of the voicemails belies any claim Castel can make that his interest in S.R. was merely "concern." Rather, his persistence in contacting her and his increasing petulance and anger at not hearing from her was disturbing and gave the adults listening to the tape pause. It is frightening to think of the effect those calls would have on a middle school student.

There is no doubt that the ALJ is in the best position to render credibility determinations in this matter. Accordingly, the Board will defer to those findings. As noted above, ALJ Candido found that Castel engaged in inappropriate and, at times, reprehensible conduct with regard to his relationship with two students. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 22, 23.) The record is replete with examples of Castel's behavior that fall so wide of the mark of a role model that there is no justification for any penalty other than revocation. In fact, his behavior was harmful to these students both for the inappropriate nature of the contact he maintained with them and because they lost valuable instructional time when he was pulling them out of their science class. The Examiners therefore agree with the ALJ's conclusion that the only appropriate response to Castel's breach is the revocation of his teaching certificates. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 23.) Furthermore, the Board is convinced that Castel's administrative as well as instructional certificates should be revoked as there is a sufficient nexus between his unbecoming conduct and his ability to supervise effectively. In short, his behavior was inappropriate for a holder of any type of certificate.

Accordingly, on March 25, 2010, the Board of Examiners voted to adopt the Initial Decision and revoke Castel's teaching certificates. On this 29th day of April 2010, the Board of Examiners formally adopted its written decision to adopt the Initial Decision in this matter, and it is therefore ORDERED that William Castel's Principal Certificate of Eligibility and his Teacher of Industrial Arts, Teacher of Elementary School and Supervisor certificates be hereby revoked effective immediately. It is further ORDERED that Castel return his certificates to the Secretary of the State Board of Examiners, Office of Licensure, P.O. IN THE MATTER OF THE CERTIFICATES OF WILLIAM CASTEL.

Brian Horsely, Jr., Deputy Attorney General, for petitioner (Paula T. Dow, Attorney General of New Jersey)

Record Closed: January 7, 2010 Decided: February 16, 2010

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The New Jersey Department of Education, State Board of Examiners (Board), seeks the revocation or suspension of William Castel's (Castel) Principal certificate of Eligibility and Teacher of Industrial Arts, Teacher of Elementary School and Supervisor certificates under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-38 and the implementing regulation, N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.5, for conduct unbecoming a teacher or other just cause. The Board found Castel guilty of unbecoming conduct by taking advantage of a former fourteen-year-old student by frequently calling her, taking her to his home in New York, and otherwise making inappropriate contact with her. More specifically by:

1. Calling S.R. at late hours of the evening and asking her to go out to lunch, dinner and to party with him;
2. Pulling S.R. out of class on various occasions;
3. Engaging in intimate conversation with S.R. regarding personal details of his life including wanting a girlfriend;
4. Taking S.R. across state lines to his home in Nanuet, New York without parental consent; and
5. By telling S.R. that "Spanish girls are pretty."

The Board also found Castel guilty of unbecoming conduct by taking advantage of another former fourteen-year-old student V.V. by:

1. Taking V.V. across state lines to his home in Nanuet, New York without parental consent, and
2. Repeatedly calling V.V. on her cellular phone and requesting to know the whereabouts of S.R.

Castel disputes the charges, asserting that the purported misconduct never occurred.

On March 27, 2008, the Board issued an Order to Show Cause (OSC) why Castel's teaching certificates should not be suspended or revoked. On or about April 23, 2008, Castel filed an Answer to the Order to Show Cause denying any wrong doing. The OSC reflects that the Division of Criminal Justice provided information to the Board regarding allegations set forth in charges that had been brought against Castel by the Bergen County Prosecutor for endangering the welfare of a child in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:24-4(a), and harassment in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:33-4(a), by making numerous phone calls and leaving messages to a former eighth grade student. (P-1.) With regard to those criminal charges, Castel enrolled in the Pre-Trial Intervention Program (PTI) for ten months and was required to resign from his teaching position with the East

Rutherford Board of Education. He did not enter any plea as a condition of his PTI. (P-2.)

The Board transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case. A hearing was held on June 23 and October 27, 2009. At the conclusion of the hearing, the record remained open for the receipt of transcripts and post-hearing submissions. The parties submitted briefs and reply briefs as well as a stipulation of the facts, the last of which was received on January 7, 2010, on which date the record closed.

ISSUE

The issue presented is whether Castel engaged in conduct unbecoming a teacher or other just cause warranting the suspension or revocation of his teaching certificates.

TESTIMONY

The Board presented testimony from Gayle Strauss, superintendent of Byron Township Schools. Strauss testified that she was contacted by the principal of the middle school sometime in December 2006 and advised of charges being filed against Castel. Strauss, after listening to a voicemail from Castel's cellular phone (cell phone) provided to her during her investigation, contacted the Board attorney and scheduled an emergency meeting with the Board for determination of a suspension. The cellular-voicemail messages were played during Strauss' testimony. The following was heard:

This completes the original recording.

[(P-59 to -66.)]

Strauss found this behavior totally inappropriate since there is sufficient time during the school day to speak to the student. Furthermore, a teacher should contact the parents if he or she needs to speak to a student. There is no situation when it would be appropriate for a teacher to contact a student on his or her cell phone. She also found it inappropriate for a teacher to "hang out" and party with a student. A teacher's job is to educate, not to be a personal friend. If a student needs to talk with a school professional, there are guidance counselors on staff for that purpose.

Strauss prepared the Statement of Charges against Castel. (P-5.) Even though the student is no longer at Faust Middle School, she felt that there was no need for Castel to be in touch with her. She also considered it inappropriate for Castel to remove S.R. from science class on several occasions, causing the student to miss valuable learning time, without checking with the principal's office first. Strauss emphasized that a teacher should never be left alone with a student. Nor should a teacher be making inappropriate comments such as "Spanish girls are pretty."

As to the charges pertaining to V.V., Strauss was told by police and S.R. that Castel called V.V.

Strauss further stated that taking S.R. and V.V. across a state line to his home is unbecoming conduct because the girls' parents were unaware.

Strauss confirmed that Castel's prior evaluations were satisfactory. She based her decision to have tenure charges brought based upon the recordings, the charges by the police, the interview with S.R.'s parents, and upon her belief that Castel's behavior was unbecoming a teacher. She felt that a teacher—especially a middle school teacher such as Castel—should be a good role model for his or her students.

W.R., the father of S.R., testified on behalf of the Board. In December 2006, S.R. played voicemails for him recently left on her cell phone by Castel. W.R. felt his daughter was "scared" of Castel. He took the cell phone to the police station and submitted a statement. (P-22.) Prior to this, he was not aware that Castel had been calling his daughter or that she went to his home in New York. W.R. never gave Castel permission to contact his daughter or take her to lunch or to his home.

H.V., the father of V.V., also testified on behalf of the Board. He never gave Castel his daughter's cell phone number, nor did he give him permission to call his daughter. Nor did he ever give his daughter permission to go to Castel's home.

R.R., the mother of S.R., testified that she did not know Castel; never spoke with or ever wrote to him. She never gave permission for her daughter to speak with Castel or to go to his home in New York.

G.V., mother of V.V., also testified on behalf of the Board. She never spoke with or ever wrote to Castel, nor ever gave him permission to take her daughter to his home in New York.

V.V. testified on behalf of the Board. She is currently a high school student. V.V. was an eighth grade student during 2005-2006 at the same school where Castel was a teacher. Castel was her "shop" teacher in the eighth grade. She also had science class five days a week with Ms. Di Yang. Castel called her out of science class five or six times during the school year. He would come to the science classroom while class was in session and take her and S.R. to the shop classroom. She felt uncomfortable going with him but did so in order to "get out of class." V.V. felt she was given preferential treatment in shop class because she received better grades than what she thought she deserved.

Castel would tell her either that brunettes are pretty or that she looked nice that day, which she estimated occurred approximately once every two weeks.

V.V. further testified that towards the end of the eighth grade school year Castel told her and S.R. not to lose contact with him and he invited both of them to his home to go swimming. Castel would call her on her cell phone, usually after 10:00 p.m., looking for S.R and asking if S.R. was angry with him and generally how she was doing. There were times when V.V. would not answer her cell phone when Castel called looking for S.R. even though S.R. was with her but did not want to speak to him.

V.V. explained that "a couple of days" before she went to Castel's home in New York in the summer 2006 to go swimming, he called her on her cell phone to invite her and S.R. to lunch and swimming. Castel asked her to get her parents permission, but she did not. Castel picked up V.V. and S.R. a few doors down from V.V.'s home. Both minors got into the back seat of the car. They first went to a diner on the border of New Jersey and New York. They were there for approximately thirty minutes. Castel then brought S.R. and V.V. to his home. He showed them the bathroom and kitchen. V.V. went upstairs and changed into her two-piece bathing suit and went outside to the swimming pool where there were ten people in the pool area. S.R. put her feet in the water and wore shorts. Castel spoke with a retired female police officer at the pool, telling her that V.V. and S.R. were his former students. V.V. went swimming for a few minutes and then went into Castel's home and changed into her clothes before watching television. Then Castel offered her a beer. She thought he was joking.

V.V. testified that Castel told her and S.R. to keep the trip to his home between them because "he could get in trouble for this." She agreed because she did not want any problems.

On cross-examination, V.V. testified that S.R., W.R., and she went to the police station so that S.R.'s father could file a complaint. She acknowledged that she telephoned Castel on July 6, 2006, and spoke with him for twenty minutes. (P-46.) She also telephoned him on July 12, 2006, at 11:02 p.m. (P-48.)

V.V. also acknowledged that when Castel gave her and S.R. detention, causing them to miss a class trip, he apologized for that.

S.R., who was currently completing her junior year in high school, testified on behalf of the Board. During the eighth grade, Castel was her shop teacher. She also had Ms. Di Yang for science, which met five days a week. Castel would come to her science class, tell Ms. Di Yang that he needed help with his computer and take her out of class to his shop class three or four times a week. Castel never had a computer problem but would then tell her about his life and his girlfriend. Castel asked about her grades and they would discuss problems she was having with her family. There were no other adults in the room and Castel would keep the classroom door open. Castel would tell her almost every day, mostly in the morning, that she was beautiful and attractive.

S.R. testified that when she was in "in school suspension" and Castel was the moderator, he would talk about his life and tell S.R. that his girlfriend was jealous of her. Since she would get in "trouble a lot," she was with Castel in in-school suspension every two weeks. Upon graduation, Castel told her that he would miss her and that he would call her.

S.R. said that V.V. had given Castel her cell phone number and he would call her four times a day. If she did not answer, he would call V.V.'s cell phone. V.V. had to call Castel back to tell him to stop calling S.R. When S.R. did talk to Castel, he told her not to tell anyone of their conversations so that he would not get in trouble. S.R. stated that "he would call her constantly" but she did not want to be mean and tell him to stop. At the end of the year, he got her in trouble when he would not give them permission to go into the building and she was not able to go on a field trip. She then told Castel to stop talking to her because she was angry with him.

On a Saturday in July 2006, Castel picked her and V.V. up near V.V.'s home and took them to a diner in New Jersey before going to his home to go swimming. Castel told S.R. to get her parents' permission to go to his home. S.R. told Castel that she did, when in fact she did not. She felt uncomfortable going to his home. While at his home, S.R. stated that Castel told a guest who was a retired police officer that she and V.V. were there on a field trip because they were good students.

S.R. further testified that at one point her father was going to take her cell phone away and she asked if she could check her voicemail before he took the phone. She listened to her voicemails via speaker phone and her father was able to hear the messages Castel left for her.[1] S.R.'s father then took her cell phone to the police.

On cross-examination, S.R. reiterated that she had not gotten her mother's permission to go to Castel's home, even though she told Castel that she did. She further confirmed that her father listened to Castel's voicemails before taking her cell phone away. S.R. confirmed that Castel had called her to ask her not to tell anyone about the calls or he would get into trouble with the police. She initially thought Castel was nice and concerned for her, but as time went on she thought he was "perverted."

No other witnesses testified in behalf of petitioner.

Patricia Chalmers, Castel's live-in girlfriend testified on his behalf. She stated that Castel had plans to take S.R. and V.V. swimming at his home because he felt bad for getting them into trouble at the end of the school year. Castel told her that he obtained permission from both mothers.

Chalmers recalled hearing one message from S.R. and V.V. on Castel's answering machine at his home in New York. She thought that S.R. and V.V. were students who confided in Castel and did not feel it was unusual for Castel to speak to teenagers after 11:00 p.m. She has never met either student.

Castel testified in his own behalf. He holds certificates for principal and supervisor, as well as certificates for industrial/technology arts K-through-eight and elementary education. S.R. had been a student in his shop class from fifth to eighth grade and in basic skills math class for sixth grade. Castel would see S.R. and V.V. in the lunch room and in detention when he was assigned to cover those rooms.

Castel further testified that he asked the science teacher, Ms. Di Yang, to permit S.R. and V.V. to leave class so that they could come to the shop class to help him with the computer. He acknowledged that he once had a conversation with S.R. where he mentioned that Spanish girls are attractive, referring to a former girlfriend of his who was Spanish. Castel gave S.R. a keychain at the end of the eighth grade that he received from Ms. Di Yang earlier in the school year. He further acknowledged that they hugged each other when he wished her well in high school. Castel felt that S.R. had low self-esteem and he cared for her like a daughter.

Castel stated that his relationships with S.R. and V.V. became strained towards the end of their eighth grade school year because he had to write a report denying them permission to leave building during recess. Because of this, S.R. and V.V. were not permitted to participate in graduation activities. Castel felt bad and a few weeks before graduation invited them to his home to go swimming. He claimed that he spoke with V.V.'s mother using V.V.'s cell phone and obtained her permission for her daughter to go swimming. Castel also spoke to S.R. and while on the phone, she asked her mother for permission to go swimming.[2] On one occasion while covering for the principal, he met with S.R.'s parents to discuss an issue she was having with other girls in the school.

Castel acknowledged that on July 26, 2006, he picked up V.V. and S.R. near V.V.'s home around 10:00 a.m. and proceeded to a diner. Upon arriving at his townhouse complex, he took S.R. and V.V. directly to the swimming pool. After they finished swimming, he took both girls to his townhouse to show it to them. They changed, using the bathroom on the second floor. He then drove them home. He did not speak to either girls' parents after this trip.

Castel admitted that he telephoned V.V. on her cell phone a few times in August. On November 3, 2006, S.R. called him to give him her cell phone number and to tell him she was trying out for the high school play. He called her back on that date. Castel's phone records indicated that S.R. called him again on November 5 and 15, 2006. (P-70 to -74.) Castel called S.R. when he returned from a vacation on November 12, 2006. He wanted to take S.R. out to lunch. (P-59.) Castel left a message on S.R.'s voicemail suggesting they "hang out and party." He claimed that he used those words as a figure of speech. When S.R. was not returning his phone calls, he became frustrated and kept calling her. Castel called S.R. approximately ten times. He likened her to a daughter, and felt he did nothing wrong. He wanted her to do well in school. He mentioned that in hindsight, he should not have kept calling S.R.

Castel stopped calling S.R. when he was arrested on December 11, 2006, and was criminally charged with harassment and two counts of endangering the welfare of a child. He entered into a Pretrial Intervention Program and resigned from his position as a teacher.

[2] S.R.'s mother only speaks Spanish so she asked speaking Spanish.

In evaluating the evidence, the trier of fact must assess and weigh the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings as to the disputed facts. Credibility is the value that a finder of fact gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, its internal consistency, and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. U.S., 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). "Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself" in that "[i]t must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances." In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness . . . when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." Id. at 521-22; see D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997).

Based upon these principles, I FIND that the witnesses who testified for the Board were deemed credible and forthright. Each was compelling and straightforward. I am not persuaded that they harbored a motive or bias to fabricate their testimony. Similarly, the undersigned is not persuaded by respondent's efforts to infer retaliation by V.V. and S.R., since he had to write them up for misbehavior resulting in their inability to go on a class trip. S.R.'s credibility was enhanced by her candid admission that she had lied to her mother when she went to respondent's home in New York.

On balance, Castel has the greater stake in the outcome of this proceeding since the revocation or suspension of his certificates is involved. I FIND that Castel's testimony was deemed lacking in credibility. He claimed that he cared about his students and for that reason he interacted with S.R. and V.V. by taking them out of science during valuable class time only to talk and then bringing them to his home to swim. He also admitted that in hindsight he should not have called S.R. as often as he did.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon a review of the totality of the evidence, and having had the opportunity to listen to the testimony, observe the demeanor of the witnesses who testified and assess their credibility, I FIND the following additional FACTS:

S.R. and V.V.'s initial interactions with Castel occurred only in school. Castel and S.R. formed a friendship and they discussed personal matters such as Castel's relationship with his girlfriend and S.R.'s issues at home. The relationship between Castel and S.R. continued to develop over the course of time during the school year and came to involve V.V. The interactions between Castel and S.R. increased during her eighth grade year that he would, on numerous occasions, take her out of science class and bring her to his shop class to "talk." While there was no physical contact between Castel and S.R., he spoke with her by cell phone on many occasions and left several voice messages as enumerated above.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The Board of Examiners is entrusted with the issuance and revocation of certificates to teach in public schools under the rules and regulations prescribed by the State Board. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-38. The regulations direct that the chief school administrator of a district must notify the Board of Examiners when "tenured teaching staff members who are accused of . . . unbecoming conduct resign or retire from their positions." N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.4(a)(1). Following receipt of information from a district pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.4, "[t]he Board of Examiners may issue an order to show cause to a certificate holder if the Board of Examiners believes that the conduct of the holder may warrant the revocation or suspension of the certificate(s) held . . . ."

N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.6(a)(2). The Board of Examiners must determine by public vote whether to initiate a revocation or suspension proceeding and, should the Board of Examiners move for revocation or suspension, an order to show cause shall be issued. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.7(a).

The Examiners need only show by a preponderance of the competent, relevant, and credible evidence that the certificate holder engaged in the conduct alleged in the Order to Show Cause. In re the Certificates of Papdaniil, EDE 8821-00, Initial Decision (March 13, 2002), adopted, State Bd. of Exam'rs (May 9, 2002), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. "Evidence is found to 'preponderate' if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact alleged and generates a reasonable belief that the tendered hypothesis . . . is true." State Bd. of Exam'rs v. Ferreira, EDE 3390-04, Initial Decision (July 5, 2005), adopted, Exam'rs (Sept. 22, 2005), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. The certificate holder must then demonstrate facts that counter the charges set forth in the Order to Show Cause. State Bd. of Exam'rs v. Brown, 91 N.J.A.R.2d (EDE) 5.

N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.5 identifies the grounds for revocation and suspension of certification, stating that "[t]he Board of Examiners may revoke or suspend the certificate(s) of any certificate holder on the basis of demonstrated inefficiency, incapacity, conduct unbecoming a teacher or other just cause."

It is well settled that "teachers are held to a high standard of conduct because of the influence they exercise over the students." State Bd. of Exam'rs v. Charlton, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDE) 18, 21. "'That the school authorities have the right and the duty to screen the officials, teachers and employees as to their fitness to maintain the integrity of the schools as part of ordered society, cannot be doubted.'" In re Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13, 30 (App. Div. 1974), certif. denied, 65 N.J. 292 (1974) (citation omitted). In the context of tenure proceedings, the Commissioner has frequently emphasized the sensitive position held by teachers and the high standard against which their conduct will be measured. It is recognized that "those persons who enter the teaching profession exercise a significant influence upon those they teach and, consequently, must exhibit a high degree of exemplary behavior." In re Tyler, 13 N.J.A.R. 297, 308.

Teachers "hold positions demanding public trust, and in such positions they teach, inform, and mold habits and attitudes, and influence the opinion of their pupils." In re Tordo, 1974 S.L.D. 97, 98-99.

Conduct unbecoming a teacher includes a broad range of behavior that impacts a teacher's ability to perform his duties or otherwise renders him unfit to have the responsibility for the care of children. See Charlton, supra, 96 N.J.A.R.2d 18; In re Fargo, 91 N.J.A.R.2d (EDE) 1. Although "conduct unbecoming" a teacher or other public employee is not defined in the statutes or regulations, it has been described as an "'elastic" phrase that includes "'conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency'" of the public entity or "'which has a tendency to destroy public respect for . . . [public] employees and confidence in the operation of [public] services.'" In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960) (citation omitted). The touchstone of the charge is a teacher's fitness to discharge the duties and functions of his position. See Laba v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 23 N.J. 364, 385-88 (1957). Unfitness to hold a position in a school system may be demonstrated by a series of incidents or a single incident if sufficiently flagrant. Redcay v. State Bd. of Educ., 130 N.J.L. 369, 371 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd, 131 N.J.L. 326 (E. & A. 1944).

Inappropriate conduct between a teacher and students entrusted to the teacher's care has been found to be a sufficient basis to warrant suspension or revocation of a teacher's certificate. See In re Chavez, EDE 11443-03, State Bd. of Educ. (April 9, 2007), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (suspending certificate for two years for unbecoming conduct where teacher engaged in inappropriate horseplay by putting ice down the blouse of a female student and making inappropriate comments to another student); In re Nieves, EDE 3867-04, Initial Decision (November 10, 2005), adopted, State Bd. of Exam'rs (March 8, 2006), aff'd, State Bd. of Educ. (December 6, 2006), aff'd, A-2627-06T3 (App. Div. April 7, 2008), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (revoking certificates where teacher had sent suggestive notes to an eighth-grade student, including a note asking to "hang out" with the student during a school holiday when he said they could get together without anyone knowing); In re Resto, EDE 3869-04, Initial Decision (August 10, 2005), adopted, State Bd. of Exam'rs (October 31, 2005), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (suspending certificate for two years where teacher had, among other actions, given her cell phone number to a student and exchanged personal text messages with the student over the course of a month and a half); In re Younger, EDE 3111-03, Initial Decision (December 6, 2004), modified, State Bd. of Exam'rs (March 7, 2005), aff'd, State Bd. of Education (January 6, 2006), aff'd, A-2800-05T3 (App. Div. November 15, 2006), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (Board of Examiners concluded that teacher "exercised poor judgment in allowing female students to remain in his hotel room for a substantial period of time, regardless of what behavior occurred" during a track meet while he was an assistant track coach, and the teacher engaged in conduct unbecoming a teacher which warranted a two-year suspension of his certificates); Papdaniil, supra, EDE 8821-00 (teaching certificate revoked predicated on a teacher's sexual relationship with a student); In re Mantone, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDE) 5 (certificates revoked stemming from "inappropriate overtures" toward two female students which included, among other things, the teacher writing unsolicited notes and commenting about the student's physical attractiveness); Fargo, supra 91 N.J.A.R.2d 1 (teaching certificate revoked based upon the teacher's sexual and emotionally abusive behavior toward his classified students).

CONCLUSIONS

Based upon the facts adduced and legal principles cited above, I CONCLUDE that Castel engaged in conduct unbecoming a teacher. I further CONCLUDE that his conduct constitutes just cause for revocation of his teaching certificate.

The voice messages left by Castel on S.R.'s cell phone were reprehensible and totally inappropriate, particularly for someone who was her teacher and who stood in a position of trust and respect. On one such call, for example, on a Sunday afternoon he stated that he wanted "to see if [S.R.] wanted to get together" followed by "This Friday night, I'll even take you to dinner if you want. Hang out, oh, whatever you want to do. We'll hang out. Go to dinner. And ah maybe hang out and party a little bit. Or whatever, you know. Whatever you want to do. You know. I ah, I'd like to, I'd like to see you." In addition to his several cell phone calls, there was his pattern of pulling

S.R., and V.V. out of eighth grade science class for no legitimate purpose but to have contact with them. To make matters worse, he then takes S.R. and V.V. across state lines to his home.

Although Castel claims that the time he spent with S.R. was motivated by his desire to help her when she was going through a difficult time, there were other measures he should have taken, such as contacting S.R.'s parents or referring her to counseling services offered by the school, as noted by Strauss.

In short, Castel's interactions with S.R. and V.V. were totally inappropriate and crossed the permissible line of his duties as a teacher. Castel exhibited extremely poor judgment by becoming an active participant in a personal relationship with a student. The absence of evidence of sexual or romantic involvement does not mitigate the seriousness of Castel's actions. Such poor judgment by an experienced teacher such as Castel cannot be countenanced. As a teacher, Castel occupied a position demanding public trust and was held to a higher standard of conduct. He was required to exhibit exemplary behavior and mature self-control. He was to uphold an image of utmost trust. Instead, his actions were inappropriate, irresponsible and unprofessional. Castel's reprehensible conduct represented a significant departure from what the public is to expect from those who teach their children.

Castel's behavior was not confined to a single incident but evolved into a pattern which continued throughout S.R. and V.V.'s eighth grade school year. Considering the high standard of conduct expected from those entrusted with the care and custody of children, I CONCLUDE that Castel's conduct was so unbecoming and flagrant to warrant the revocation of his certificates for principal and supervisor, as well as certificates for industrial/technology arts K-through-eight and elementary education.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, I ORDER that respondent's teaching certificates be and are hereby REVOKED.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the State Board of Examiners does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the SECRETARY OF THE STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS, 1000 Riverview Plaza, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF GREG YOUNG,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE	:	DECISION
BOROUGH OF SOUTH PLAINFIELD,	:
MIDDLESEX COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning Board certified tenure charges against respondent – a school guidance counselor – for conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member, insubordination and other just cause for dismissal. The charges stem from a series of incidents which began in the 2003-04 school year and continued through the 2008-09 school year, wherein respondent: used profane, sexually explicit or inappropriate language in interactions with co-workers; made unwelcome flirtatious overtures toward female co-workers; and repeatedly used obscene language to criticize administration and colleagues. Respondent denied the charges.

The ALJ found that: the Board has carried its burden to prove the charges against respondent by a preponderance of the credible evidence; respondent engaged in a pattern of improper interactions with co-workers over the course of several school years, and continued this unbecoming conduct even after repeated warnings that his behavior was not consistent with the professionalism expected of a teaching staff member; each charge against respondent, standing alone, would not warrant his dismissal from employment; in this case, however, respondent – after repeated efforts by the Board to counsel, transfer, and reprimand him – shows no understanding that his behavior is intolerable and incompatible with the mission of public schools. Accordingly, the ALJ recommended respondent's removal from his tenured employment.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter. Respondent was dismissed from his tenured employment, and the matter transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF GREG YOUNG,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE	:	DECISION
BOROUGH OF SOUTH PLAINFIELD,	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions and the District's reply thereto – submitted in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in making her determination herein.

Respondent's exceptions essentially recast and reiterate his arguments made before the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) below. As it is determined that these were fully considered and addressed in the Initial Decision, they will not be revisited here.

Upon comprehensive consideration of the record of this matter, which includes transcripts of the 7 days of hearing at the OAL,[1] the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's findings and her conclusion that the Board has proven its charges against respondent by a preponderance of the credible evidence and that – based on the totality of the record here – termination of his employment is warranted. In so determining, the Commissioner has given full consideration to all evidentiary proofs which comprise the record and recognized that of particular importance was the ALJ's assessment of the credibility of the witnesses. Such being the case – and the ALJ having had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the various witnesses who appeared before her, and having made findings of fact based upon their testimony – the standard governing the Commissioner's review is clear and unequivocal:

[1] Hearing was held on December 16, 2009, March 25, April 7, April 27, April 29, May 13 and June 8, 2010.

> The agency head may not reject or modify any findings of fact as to issues of credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by sufficient, competent and credible evidence in the record. (N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c))

The Commissioner's reasoned review of the entire record before her provides no basis whatsoever for any alteration of the ALJ's determinations.

With respect to the appropriate penalty, the Commissioner is mindful that "Factors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstances of the incidents or charges, the teacher's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students and staff, and the likelihood of such behavior recurring." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Deborah Suitt-Green, State-operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, decided by the Commissioner October 14, 1997, slip. Op. at 32, citing In re Hearing of Ostergren, Franklin School District, 1966 S.L.D. 185; In re Hearing of Kittell, Little Silver School District, 1972 S.L.D. 535, 541; In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967). The charges in the instant matter establish that during the course of his employment in the District, which began in September 2000, respondent has engaged in a pattern of behavior[2] wherein he used profane, sexually explicit or inappropriate language in interactions with co-workers, made unwelcome flirtatious overtures to female co-workers, and criticized administration and colleagues repeatedly using obscene language, depriving these individuals of the dignity to which they are entitled as District employees, creating an uncomfortable work environment, and impairing the ability of the individual targets of his improper behavior to effectively discharge their duties. Although the Commissioner is in agreement with the ALJ that each of the seven charges against respondent – standing alone – would not typically warrant his dismissal from his position of employment but, rather, would call for administrative counseling or minor discipline (Initial Decision at 21), she also recognizes that this pattern of conduct persisted over a prolonged period of time, and – despite repeated warnings, reprimands, admonitions and opportunities for improvement afforded him – respondent has remained unwilling or unable to conform his conduct to that which must reasonably be expected from a professional teaching staff member. Additionally, the Commissioner finds particularly disquieting respondent's adamant refusal to accept personal responsibility for his actions and to exhibit any modicum of sincere regret. Rather, he casts aspersions upon the truthfulness of the victims of his actions and attempts to shift the blame for his wrongdoings onto them. Respondent apparently views himself as a victim rather than a perpetrator, claiming that he is being singled out and harassed, and that his character is being defamed. Consequently, based on this record, it cannot be said that respondent's behavior is an aberration; nor can it be said that it is less likely than not that such conduct would be repeated in the future. This does not portend a positive learning environment for students or a harmonious working relationship with District staff. Under these circumstances, the Commissioner cannot entertain the prospect of respondent's return to the District and the resultant potential for the perpetration of an unhealthy educational environment.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter for the reasons expressed therein. Respondent is hereby dismissed from his tenured position with the School District of the Borough of South Plainfield. This matter will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 9771-09
AGENCY REF. NO. 200-8/09

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF GREG YOUNG, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH OF SOUTH PLAINFIELD, MIDDLESEX COUNTY.

Nicholas Celso, III, Esq., for petitioner (Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein, Celso and Zitomer, attorneys)

William F. Koy, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: July 23, 2010 Decided: September 3, 2010

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Greg Young is employed by petitioner, the South Plainfield Board of Education (the Board), as a guidance counselor under tenure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. On July 9, 2009, tenure charges were filed with the Board by Superintendent of Schools Jose R. Negron, and served on Young. Young filed a response, under oath, on August 5, 2009. On August 12, 2009, the Board determined that probable cause existed to credit the evidence in support of the charges, and that the charges, if so credited, warranted Young's dismissal from his employment. The Board suspended Young without pay, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14.

On August 13, 2009, the Board certified charges of unbecoming conduct, insubordination, and other just cause against Young pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. An answer was filed and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on August 27, 2009. Hearings were conducted on December 16, 2009, March 25, 2010, April 7, 2010, April 27, 2010, April 29, 2010, May 13, 2010, and June 8, 2010. Post-hearing briefs were submitted on July 23, 2010, at which time the record closed.

Young denies that just cause exists for his dismissal from his tenured position.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

Background Facts

The parties stipulated to the following background facts and I FIND:

1. Young holds a B.A. in education from Newark State College in Union, New Jersey.
2. Young holds an M.A. in student personnel services from Kean University in Union, New Jersey.
3. Young holds an instructional certificate issued by the New Jersey Department of Education as an elementary teacher; administrative certificates as a supervisor, school administrator, and principal; and an educational services certificate in the area of student personnel services.
4. Young began his employment with the Board on September 1, 2000, as a guidance counselor.
5. Prior to his suspension, Young was a tenured guidance counselor assigned to the elementary schools in South Plainfield.

The Testimony

The Board filed seven charges of unbecoming conduct against Young. These charges allege that he used profane, sexually explicit or inappropriate language in interactions with co-workers, made unwelcome flirtatious overtures to female co-workers, and criticized administration and colleagues repeatedly using obscene language. The charges span several school years, dating back to 2003-2004. Charge Six additionally alleges insubordination, asserting that Young's conduct continued despite warnings and reprimands. Charge Seven asserts that the charges demonstrate a pattern of conduct that warrants Young's removal from his tenured position of employment.

Young testified that he loves his position as a guidance counselor, and has been devastated by the charges against him. He began his career as a teacher of mathematics and science in 1970, but left education for seventeen years to pursue a career in real estate sales. Young returned to education, which he described as his true passion, in 2000, when the Board employed him as a guidance counselor. Young's formal evaluations uniformly describe his performance as satisfactory, and Young often received "commendable" and "exemplary" ratings for his work.

Several witnesses attested to his winning ways with children, and to the compassion and skill he brings to his work as a guidance counselor. Young's evaluations compliment his ability to work well with colleagues. An evaluation at Grant School notes that Young is, "[a] man of integrity, he seeks to correct misunderstandings and mediate conflict." While working at the high school, Young was described as promoting "a positive image of the guidance department to staff, parents and students." An elementary school evaluation states that Young "has worked cooperatively with building principals, teachers and support personnel . . . ." Young additionally shared complimentary notes and cards from a parent and from colleagues. (R-7.)

But the evidence presented by the Board paints quite a different, disturbing picture of Young. Young responded to the tenure charges with firm denials, urging that he never made offensive comments to co-workers. Young strenuously asserted that the obscene words attributed to him were not a part of his lexicon. A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). In making a credibility determination, it is appropriate to consider contradictory testimony, or testimony impeaching the witness's truth and veracity. After carefully considering the testimonial and documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses at hearing, I did not deem Young's testimony to be credible.

Young's presentation was rife with inconsistencies. His testimonial account often differed from his written response to the charges (R-1), and he claimed an inability to recall events with detail, even though his written response is highly detailed, and encompasses approximately twenty pages of text. His answers to interrogatories provide yet another version of the events. (P-26.) Young generally and flatly denied making offensive remarks to his co-workers, but did admit the only remark made in the presence of a witness. Young consistently focused his presentation on the conduct of others. According to Young, his co-workers could not be telling the truth because they did not complain soon enough, or vigorously enough, or continued to maintain professional or friendly relationships with him after he had allegedly offended them. Young urged that it was actually the complaining witness who enjoyed engaging in sexual banter, or favored profane language. Administrators and the outside consultant who investigated Young's conduct disliked him, were plotting against him, or bore grudges that dated back to college days, and fraternity and football rivalries.[1] Persons who could vouch for him were either afraid to testify, or unable to be located.

During the 2003-2004 school year Young was assigned to Grant School, as was teacher Dana Bender Hauk. Hauk testified that she had a cordial relationship with Young, and she considered him a friend. They talked together about non-professional, personal matters in the way that friends might, and were part of a group of teachers that gathered on Fridays after work for drinks at Buzzy's, a nearby establishment. February

[1] Mr. Young is a man in his 60's, and thus many years removed from college.

5, 2004, was a chilly day, and the school had evacuated for a fire drill. As the students and faculty re-entered the building, Hauk recalled that she had her arms folded across her chest, underneath her breasts, to brace against the cold. She was wearing a v-neck shirt. Young was holding the door open, and he looked down her shirt and commented, "I like it when you squeeze them together like that." Hauk testified that she did not reply because she was in shock. Young's comment was made with students less than five feet behind her.

The next day Hauk complained to her principal, Janis Burchell, and she memorialized her concerns in a written statement. (P-1.) Ms. Burchell met with Young and Hauk on February 6, 2004, and Hauk's allegations were discussed. Hauk testified that Young stated that he thought his comment was acceptable because he and Hauk were friends. He apologized and Hauk accepted his apology. Burchell memorialized the discussion at the meeting in a memorandum dated February 6, 2004, (P-2) which was placed in the Grant School files.

Young testified that he did not make an offensive comment to Hauk about her breasts. He contended that, upon observing that Hauk was cold, he simply remarked about the weather and she misunderstood him. Indeed, Young asserted that the statement attributed to him is not a part of his jargon, and he urged, "I don't even know what it means." Young is an adult man, and this testimony strained credulity. His statement is likewise inconsistent with his answers to interrogatories, in which he contended that sexual repartee was "commonplace at Buzzy's on the Friday's [sic] we were there." Thus, by his own admission, Young was not naive about crude conversation.

According to Young, Hauk enjoyed lewd discussions. Young recounted in his interrogatory answers that Hauk and Assistant Principal Robert Richkus bantered during an in-service day about the size of Richkus's penis. Hauk likewise engaged in sexual banter at Buzzy's. Young stated that "I know that Dana Bender [Hauk] would hardly be offended by any type of 'inappropriate' language she THOUGHT I had used." (P-26 (author's emphasis).) The testimony of former Board member Jeff Seider was offered to corroborate Young's assertions that crude conversation was commonplace among the professional staff in the South Plainfield Public Schools. Seider recounted several occasions when he was at Grant School after school hours and stopped by to greet teachers who were socializing, among them Dana Hauk. According to Seider, crude conversation was the norm. His testimony appeared to suggest that accordingly, Young's alleged remark to Hauk should not have upset her. But this is a surprising defense for someone who honestly commented only about the weather.

Burchell memorialized her meeting with Hauk and Young, stating, "Mr. Young apologized for anything that he may have said that appeared inappropriate and will be more sensitive to the comments that he is making." (P-2.) Young concurred that he apologized to Hauk because he felt badly that Hauk had taken offense to something he had said. But how could a comment about the weather even remotely appear inappropriate, and what about such a comment would require greater sensitivity in the future? Moreover, Young never formally or informally sought to correct Burchell's statement until a year later, and described her memorandum in his written reply to the charges as "fairly amorphous." Young's denials lack credibility. Thus, I FIND that Young made a remark to Hauk about her breasts during a fire drill in February 2004, and that this remark was made in a busy school hallway with elementary students present.

Hauk attempted to maintain a professional relationship with Young, and was somewhat successful in doing so until the spring of 2005. Young approached Hauk and asked if she would be willing to agree to have Ms. Burchell remove the February 6, 2004, memorandum from his file. Young explained that he wished to apply for administrative positions in the district, and that the memorandum could be detrimental to his chances for promotion. Hauk replied that she would need to think it over. Young testified that he had initially approached Burchell with his request, and that Burchell had told him that she would have to secure Hauk's approval. According to Young, Burchell directed him to ask Hauk to speak with her. It is uncontroverted that once Young approached Hauk, however, the topic of removing the memorandum was discussed. Young testified that Hauk inquired why she needed to see Burchell, and he explained it was because he sought removal of the controverted memorandum.

Indeed, Young and Hauk offered essentially consistent descriptions of their conversation. While Young adamantly urged that he did not "pressure" Hauk to agree to remove the Burchell memorandum, he conceded that he "asked" her to do so. The semantics of whether Young "asked" Hauk to agree to remove the memorandum or whether Young "pressured" her to do so is a distinction without a difference. Hauk credibly testified that she felt pressure to accede to Young's request, and her feelings are consistent with Young's presentation of his request as having high stakes professional ramifications.

The next day, Hauk met with Burchell and shared her hesitancy to acquiesce to Young's request. After several conversations, Burchell advised that Hauk could not dictate if the memorandum would remain or be removed, and that the ultimate determination whether to grant Young's request was a matter for administration's sole discretion. Hauk was concerned and upset. She turned to her union, which declined to assist her because her complaint was against a fellow union member. Accordingly, she met with the Assistant Superintendent of Schools and Affirmative Action Officer Anthony Massaro. Massaro proceeded to investigate Hauk's complaint.

Massaro advised Young that he had exercised poor judgment when he asked Hauk to agree to remove Burchell's memorandum. Massaro indicated at the hearing, and in a memorandum to Young dated May 5, 2005, (P-5) that Young's request should have been directed to administration. Young was advised to reflect upon his conduct, which Massaro stated did not "enhance our ability as a school system to promote an environment conducive to learning and teaching." Massaro's May 5, 2005, memorandum was placed in Young's personnel file. Young strenuously asserted that Massaro mischaracterized his interactions with Hauk; that he had directed his request initially to administration, and had only approached Hauk at Burchell's request. But Young himself clearly recounted that Burchell did not suggest or instruct that he discuss removal of the memorandum directly with Hauk, but only that Hauk be sent to speak with her about the issue.[2] Accordingly, I FIND that Massaro accurately described Young's conduct in his letter of reprimand.

Hauk testified that subsequent to the request by Young that the letter be removed her relationship with him deteriorated. At a faculty meeting on September 26, 2005, Young publicly criticized the union and its vice-president, Diana Joffe, noting that Joffe was married to Massaro, and that this created a conflict of interest. Furthermore, he stated that staff members were "using their power" to create conflicts with co-workers, a comment which Hauk felt was directed at her, and was a public criticism. Hauk was serving as a union negotiator at the time, and felt humiliated. A co-worker, Allison Schneider, corroborated Hauk's recollection of the events. She likewise took Young's comment as a criticism of Hauk's ability to effectively discharge her union-related duties. Schneider emphasized on cross-examination that the import of Young's comments were that Hauk had slandered him, and did not have the best interests of the union at heart.

Hauk testified that the comments at the faculty meeting came in the wake of escalating tension between her and Young. She felt he was purposefully harassing her. Hauk no longer began to receive important guidance related documents, such as standardized test forms, and student schedules. She felt that other staff members were angry at her, and were snubbing her. She found herself crying daily about her treatment at school. She memorialized her concerns in a September 25, 2005, letter to her principal, Leo Whalen. (P-3.) Hauk stated in her letter that she felt she was working "in an unsafe and threatening environment." Young denied engaging in any harassing conduct against Hauk.

I FIND that after Hauk declined to assist in the removal of the Burchell memorandum and complained to Massaro, her relationship with Young deteriorated, and he publicly criticized her at a faculty meeting. Hauk's testimony that Young did not direct guidance memoranda to her attention, and otherwise tried to impede her ability to effectively discharge her duties was credible and sincere, but she could offer no real evidence that Young was personally responsible for these misplaced school documents.

[2] Surprisingly, Young's witness, Jeff Seider, testified that he spoke to Burchell, who advised that she had directed Young to ask Hauk if it was all right to remove the letter. Again, Young has offered less than credible and contradictory defenses to the claims against him.

By his own admission, Young was quite angry about Massaro's letter of reprimand, and felt mistreated. According to the testimony, he made his feelings known. Robert Rosado testified that, in the spring of 2007, while serving as superintendent of schools, he received a verbal complaint from a high school guidance secretary, Roberta Aiello, regarding Young. The complaint was brought to his attention because he also was serving as the District's Affirmative Action officer.[3] Aiello reported that she felt uncomfortable in the workplace because Young persistently made profane comments in her presence about Diana Joffe and Anthony Massaro. Aiello objected to these comments because she considered Joffe and Massaro friends. She furthermore was most uncomfortable with Young's use of profanity, so much so that she could not actually repeat the words that he used in her presence. Rosado asked that Aiello put her concerns in writing. Aiello had also complained to her building principal, Kenneth May, who likewise asked that she put her concerns in writing, which she did in a letter to May written shortly after meeting with him on August 9 and 10, 2007. (P-9.)

Aiello, who is retired from her employment with the District, testified via telephone at the Board's request, and with the consent of Young's attorney. Aiello served the District as a high school guidance department secretary for twenty-five years. Her job responsibilities included generally assisting the counselors, serving as a receptionist, and assisting with student transcripts. She would have occasion, as part of her job responsibilities, to enter Young's office for filing or to provide information to him.

Aiello's letter, and her testimony, recounted that on the first day of school in September 2006, Young overheard a phone conversation she was having with Anthony Massaro. Young proceeded to malign Massaro, Joffe, and Rosado, who was then superintendent of schools. Young called Massaro a "liar" and a "snake in the grass." He stated that Joffe was "a bitch and couldn't be trusted." Young also stated that [3] Rosado retired from public education effective December 30, 2007. In or about September 2007 his replacement, Jose Negron, was retained by the Board. From September 2007 until the effective date of his retirement in December 2007, Dr. Rosado served as deputy superintendent with duties that intermittently brought him into the District.

Rosado could not be trusted. He indicated that he had no use for all three, because "sooner or later they will stab you in the back." Aiello advised Young that she found his remarks offensive, but the commentary continued, without any consideration for her feelings. Aiello stated that she would be forced to leave the office to avoid Young's criticism of these administrators and co-workers.

In late April of the 2006-2007 year, while Aiello was typing, Young again sat down next to her and began to speak ill of Massaro and Joffe. In her testimony Aiello remained uncomfortable repeating the words used, but she confirmed that she wrote them accurately in her letter to May. She wrote that, "[o]nce again the name-calling began (i.e. 'prick,' 'dick,' 'bitch,' 'asshole')." Aiello was forced to leave her duties, and walk away. She testified that she found the use of this language upsetting and stress inducing, and that it created an uncomfortable work environment for her. I was unable to observe Aiello, since she testified and was cross-examined via phone, but she nonetheless testified convincingly, and I deemed her testimony to be credible. Her testimony was likewise consistent with the information supplied in her letter to May, and with Rosado's recollection of her complaints.

During her conversations with May, Aiello had declined to name co-workers who could corroborate her allegations. When meeting with Aiello, Rosado renewed the request for names of staff members with similar complaints, and she reluctantly shared with Rosado that Patricia DeSantis and Mark Tweed could verify her concerns. Rosado followed up with DeSantis, who put her recollections about Young in writing in a letter dated November 2, 2007. (P-6.) DeSantis testified that she has been employed since 2006 as a duty aide at the high school. Her responsibilities include ensuring that the children are in class and not causing a disruption. During the 2006-2007 school year, she would assist with the sale of newspapers and Young would pick up a morning paper from her daily.

DeSantis was cordial when Young stopped by each morning, and Young quickly began to share personal information with her about his divorce. In an attempt to be sympathetic, DeSantis replied that her sister was divorcing and she knew it could be a stressful time. Young replied by asking if DeSantis could "fix her sister up" with him, a suggestion she found disquieting and one that Young nonetheless repeated during subsequent conversations.

DeSantis further testified that on another occasion, he exited the office and referred to Diana Joffe as "that fucking bitch." This comment was made during the school day, in the hallway where students could be present. DeSantis stated that the use of profanity was commonplace in Young's conversation, and that he frequently used the word "fuck" when he spoke to her. DeSantis stated that she became extremely uncomfortable, and moved her post in the hall so that it was not adjacent to the guidance office. She was a credible witness, whose testimony was consistent with her prior written statement.

Finally, Rosado interviewed Grant School teacher, Mark Tweed. Tweed shared with Rosado that in his presence, on a number of occasions, Young had "vented" about Joffe and Massaro using obscene language. While Tweed was very reluctant to become involved he ultimately agreed to sign a copy of a letter written by Rosado, in which Rosado recounts the information supplied to him by Tweed. (P-8.)

Tweed confirmed at the hearing that Rosado had accurately memorialized their conversation. Tweed reiterated that Young had used obscene language, noting that the conversation was private, and did not take place in the presence of either colleagues or students. But Tweed testified quite credibly that Young's language was memorable because it was shockingly profane, and that Young called Joffe a "fucking slut" and a "fucking cunt" in Tweed's presence. Young used the words "cocksucker," "bitch," and "slimeball," in describing his administrator and colleague to Tweed.

Young denied the allegations made by Aiello, DeSantis and Tweed. He testified that he simply does not use the words attributed to him, and has not done so since his college days. Relative to Aiello, he was quick to point out that they had a cordial relationship, and that, in fact, he had driven her home on occasion. He stated that DeSantis was not truthful in her allegations, and that they hardly ever spoke. Young denied asking to be fixed up on a date with DeSantis's sister, urging that he has not dated since his divorce. He urged that Tweed likewise vented about Massaro and Joffe, because Tweed was disgruntled about a transfer from the high school and he blamed Massaro. Young admitted that "some salty language" was used, but continued to deny that he used the words Tweed described, and asserted that Tweed used some foul language of his own.

Young's denials lacked credibility. Three witnesses attributed vulgar language to him, and in each case Young's offensive epitaphs were directed at two colleagues that Young admittedly disliked. May testified that he has known Young for many years, and that he did not know Young to use foul language in "mixed company." But May did confirm that such language was used by them when they conversed privately, thus demonstrating that Young was less than honest when he urged that obscenities are not a part of his vocabulary. I FIND that Young used obscene language when speaking to DeSantis during the 2006-2007 school year, and used such language to describe Diana Joffe. I FIND that Young maligned Joffe, Massaro, and Rosado in Aiello's presence and used obscene language when doing so. I further FIND that Young maligned Massaro and Joffe using vulgar language in his private conversations with Tweed.

Rosado summarized his findings in a memorandum to his successor, Jose Negron, dated November 13, 2007. (P-11.) Rosado made several recommendations to Negron including advising that consideration be given to an alternative workplace location for Young. Negron testified that he reviewed Rosado's findings, and determined to transfer Young from the high school. However, his planned transfer of Young to the middle school was thwarted by a middle school support-staff member, Linda Giannakis, who, upon hearing of the impending transfer asked to meet with Negron and relate an incident of concern to her. Giannakis met with Negron on November 7, 2007, and presented him with a written account of events which had occurred during the 2003-2004 school year. (P-7.)

Giannakis is currently employed as an administrative assistant in the middle school guidance department, and has served the District in that capacity for ten years. During the 2003-2004 school year she would interact with Young via telephone to conduct school District business. At that time, Young had been newly assigned as a guidance counselor in Grant School, which was being reconfigured as a centralized school for sixth-grade students. Giannakis, Young and two other school employees traveled that year to a training session in Pennsylvania. They all met at Grant School, and Young drove. On the trip home, Young accidentally struck an animal with his car. He stopped to investigate and discovered that the animal was a family pet. The owner came outside, and shortly thereafter the animal died. It was a most upsetting incident. When they returned to the school, Giannakis was the last to leave the car. She could see that Young was distressed, and so she asked if he was alright. She testified that he replied that he "would feel better if [she] gave [him] a hug and a kiss." Giannakis did not acquiesce to his request. This comment made her uncomfortable, but she testified that she "chalked it up" to a bad situation.

Thereafter, Giannakis's only continued interaction with Young was via telephone. When he would call to conduct school business she would politely ask "how are you," but she testified that he would reply with an overly personal discussion of non-school related matters. During several of these conversations Young invited her out for a drink. Giannakis was married, and she found these overtures unsettling and inappropriate. She would attempt to redirect the conversation to work related topics, and eventually became very terse when he called, tried to quickly address the school business at hand and end the conversation. Although a group of teachers would occasionally go for drinks after school, Giannakis confirmed that she did not typically join this group. Furthermore, Giannakis did not feel Young was inviting her to join the group, but rather was asking to go out drinking with her alone. .

Giannakis shared her uneasiness with administration when she learned that Young would be reassigned to the middle school. She stated that at times she worked late at night, and she felt that Young's presence in her school would make her uncomfortable. She memorialized her concerns in a letter to the Negron. Her testimony was consistent and credible. Giannakis stated that she waited to raise her concerns because she felt that as long as she was not in the same school as Young, she could manage to keep a safe distance from him.

Young responded to Giannakis's testimony with general denials, which again, lacked credibility. He urged that they did hug, and that their embrace was friendly and mutual, although on further questioning he vacillated—sometimes stating that Giannakis hugged him—sometimes stating he hugged her. He urged that her allegations were remote in time, and that the complained of conduct, even if true, did not rise to any form of harassment. He asserted that their relationship was cordial; describing a friendly discussion about sharing coffee in the office. Young offered testimony by Seider to corroborate his version of the events. Seider testified that he was a social friend of Giannakis and that she admitted to him that she hugged Young, but regretted it, and did not want her husband to find out. Giannakis adamantly denied that she so advised Seider during telephonic rebuttal testimony. Seider's testimony was the less credible of the two. Seider admitted to a lack of clarity for details during much of his testimony, whereas Giannakis wavered not at all in her version of the events.

I FIND that Young did ask for a hug and kiss in a manner that left Giannakis feeling uncomfortable and furthermore, thereafter, Young made overtures and comments when they talked via phone that exacerbated those feelings of discomfort.

Negron now felt it inappropriate to simply transfer Young, and accordingly, he suspended him with pay effective November 13, 2007, pending a complete investigation. The Board retained Dr. Louis Centolanza in January 2008 to conduct a comprehensive Affirmative Action investigation and supply the Board with a written report of his findings. Negron stated that he felt that the use of an outside consultant would ensure impartiality. Centolanza is a retired school administrator who had worked in public education since 1969, and is presently an adjunct professor and consultant. He testified that he did not know Negron, Rosado, or Massaro prior to his consultancy assignment for the Board. He did have a prior professional relationship with the Board attorney, Nicholas Celso, but testified convincingly that this relationship in no way impaired his impartiality. Centolanza conducted a comprehensive investigation. He met with Joffe, DeSantis, Giannakis, Tweed, and May. He interviewed Aiello via telephone. Centolanza found the witnesses he interviewed to be credible, and they renewed their allegations against Young.

Centolanza then interviewed Young, who generally denied the allegations against him. Young did admit to making unflattering comments about Joffe and Massaro to Tweed, but asserted that Tweed joined in the conversation, and made some unflattering comments of his own. Young advised Centolanza that he missed his role as a guidance counselor and wished to be reinstated. He was offered an opportunity to present any additional documents or data to Centolanza, but did not do so.

Centolanza's investigation culminated in a report to Negron dated February 19, 2008. (P-13.) He found that Young had engaged in a pattern of inappropriate conduct, had violated Board anti-harassment policies and should be subject to discipline. An executive summary of the report was prepared by Centolanza for review by the Board. (P-13.) That executive summary was shared with Young via letter dated March 3, 2008. (P-14.) Young responded via letter dated March 10, 2008, and declined to attend a meeting to discuss Dr. Centolanza's findings, citing a need for additional documentation and a disagreement with his attorney regarding the direction they wished to take in responding to the allegations against him. (P-22.)

Thereafter, I FIND that Negron sent Young a strongly worded letter of reprimand. (P-15.) He advised Young that his conduct was inconsistent with Board policy and "repugnant to the type of decorum and behavior expected of a professional staff member." Negron stated that "I wish to stress to you in the strongest possible terms that any recurrence of this type of conduct will result in the most severe disciplinary action, up to and including termination." Negron reassigned Young to the elementary schools, to serve as a character education coordinator on a rotating schedule, visiting each of four schools one day per week. The fifth weekday Young was assigned to the central administrative office.

Despite being the subject of an Affirmative Action investigation, and despite having been advised to desist from the complained of conduct, Young's problematic behaviors continued. In March 2009, Young was providing character education to the students in Alicia Vurchio's class at Kennedy School one Tuesday per month. Vurchio is a young woman who is currently in her fourth year as a teacher in the South Plainfield Schools. She stated that her conversations with Young always made her uncomfortable. She gave the example of references he made to a television program, "Two and a Half Men." Vurchio stated that she finds the show's sexual content inappropriate. Young told her that he lives like the character played by actor Charlie Sheen, who is "a single man always looking for a good time."

Vurchio recounted a conversation that took place outside her classroom, while she attempted to put student work on the bulletin board. He spoke of his divorce, and told her to be careful about marriage. On another occasion, Young apparently overheard Vurchio discussing St. Patrick's Day plans with a friend in the faculty room. They discussed that Vurchio might try her first "Guinness" that day, a reference to a brand of beer. Later, unsolicited, Young attempted to engage Vurchio in a conversation about the proper way to pour beer. This conversation took place in the classroom with children present. Finally, Vurchio recounted that in December 2008 she was taking a lunch count for her children. Young made the unsolicited comment that she should get him a cheeseburger, and asked "does that come with buns?" Vurchio felt this comment contained sexual innuendo, since hamburgers are always served between buns. Vurchio wrote in a statement dated April 3, 2009, that "Young is a much older man than I am and a lot of time when I would have conversations with him, I would leave questioning what he just said to me." (P-16.) These conversations often took place in her classroom, with first-grade children just inches away. Young made Vurchio uneasy, and she always tried to cut their conversations short.

On March 31, 2009, Vurchio had an encounter with Young that finally prompted her to complain to administration. She testified that in the morning he told her how well she looked that day, and he asked if she was dressed up for a special occasion. She was dressed as she typically did for work, but she accepted the comment as a compliment at first. But later in the day a co-worker advised that Young had told her that Vurchio looked good. Vurchio now found it unsettling that he would twice comment on her appearance in one day, and would do so to a co-worker. After lunch, as she was returning to her classroom in a hallway crowded with children, Young passed by and stated "Miss Vurchio with you looking this good today, I wish I was thirty years younger." Vurchio testified that she was now very upset. Another staff member overheard the comment, and gave her a "weird" look. Another suggested that she dress down on Tuesdays to avoid further comments of this nature from Young.

Vurchio's testimony regarding the incident of March 31, 2009, was corroborated by fellow teacher, Carol Christatos, who heard the remark, and recounted it at the hearing in much the same way. Christatos's testimony was consistent with a statement dated April 1, 2009, in which she wrote that she heard Young say "Looking at you today makes me wish I was thirty years younger." (P-17.) Christatos confirmed that Vurchio reacted with much discomfort. This was the one comment attributed to Young that he admitted, although he urged that he meant no harm, and thought the comment was an innocuous compliment. He denied making any other inappropriate comments to Vurchio, and denied engaging in less than appropriate conversations with her.

Vurchio testified that Young's presence in her building made her feel unsafe. She testified that she tried to avoid him, and wrote in her statement that she would lock herself in her classroom on Tuesdays. She clarified through testimony that she did not literally lock the door, but that when the children were gone she would dim the lights and close the door, to give the impression she was not there. She wrote in her statement that "I just cannot stop thinking how unfair it is that I do not feel safe on Tuesdays in my building." Vurchio's testimony was credible, and I FIND that Young made repeated unwelcome comments about her personal appearance, and that one of those comments was flirtatious. I further FIND that Young discussed personal matters with Vurchio such as his divorce, beer drinking, and television programs with adult content, and that these conversations took place in the presence of children, were uninvited by Vurchio and made her uncomfortable.

Negron testified that his concerns about Young and his conduct became heightened in light of Vurchio's complaints. A review of Young's personnel file brought the allegations earlier made by Dana Hauk to Negron's attention, and Hauk supplied him with a letter dated June 14, 2009, which verified the events at Grant School. (P-4.) Negron investigated Vurchio's concerns with the assistance of the Affirmative Action officer, Frederik Oberkehr. In a letter memo dated April 7, 2009, Oberkehr advised Negron that he felt that there was evidence of sexual harassment. (P-18.) Oberkehr followed up with a memorandum dated May 6, 2009, in which he stated that another teacher, Janine Turrise, had verified that Young had commented to her about Vurchio's appearance on March 31, 2009. (P-19.)

Negron stated that tenure charges were filed because Young had engaged in objectionable conduct at every level of instruction, including the high school, middle and elementary schools. Attempts to resolve each individual complaint by separating him from the staff member he had offended proved unsuccessful; indeed, there were no further District work locations where he could be assigned. Negron asserted, and I FIND that Young's conduct continued despite several warnings and reprimands and after three Affirmative Action investigations had substantiated concerns about his interactions with co-workers.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, a tenured teaching staff member cannot be "dismissed or reduced in compensation, except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." The Board bears the burden of proving the charges against a tenured staff member, such as Young, by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). Preponderance is the greater weight of credible evidence in the case; that is, the evidence having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). After giving careful consideration to the competent credible evidence, I CONCLUDE that the Board has met its burden of proof relative to each of the charges it has filed against Young.

"Unbecoming conduct" is a broadly defined, elastic term, encompassing any conduct that has a tendency to destroy public respect for government employees and competence in the operation of public services. Karins v. Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998). A finding of unbecoming conduct does not require a violation of any specific rule or regulation, but rather may be based on an implicit standard of good behavior, "which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). Educators are held to a particularly high standard of conduct, and allegations of unbecoming conduct call into question their fitness to discharge the duties and functions of their employment. They are professional employees "to whom the people have entrusted to care and custody of . . . school children with the hope that this trust will result in the maximum educational growth and development for each child. This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment." In re Sammons, 1972 S.L.D. 302.

Young's behavior toward Hauk, Aiello, DeSantis and Vurchio was inappropriate, and inconsistent with the dignity and self-control expected of a professional school employee. His sexually explicit and flirtatious remarks, and his profane language, were all used in school buildings, during the school day, and within earshot of children. Indeed, the Commissioner has held that such conduct is "all the more offensive when displayed before other staff and students." In re Zofchak, EDU 146-02, Final Decision (October 15 2002), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. It is not conduct that students should be encouraged to emulate. Ibid. Young made the work environment uncomfortable for his female colleagues, and impaired their ability to effectively discharge their duties. As a result, his behavior negatively impacted the delivery of educational services to the children of South Plainfield. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Board has demonstrated that Young is guilty of conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member relative to the allegations contained in Charges Two, Four, Five and Six.

Young's conduct toward Giannakis likewise was inappropriate. Although they were not with children at the time that he requested a hug and kiss, they were together on school business. His flirtatious behavior continued thereafter, and interfered with Giannakis's ability to perform her job duties, as Young repeatedly took ostensibly professional phone conversations in directions that made Giannakis quite uncomfortable. Indeed, she was so ill at ease that she felt the need to complain when she learned that Young might be transferred to her building. I CONCLUDE that the Board has demonstrated that Young is guilty of conduct unbecoming a staff member relative to Charge One.

Charge Three asserts that Young was guilty of conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member by using obscene language in conversations with Tweed. This charge, standing alone, might not rise to conduct unbecoming, as his conversations with Tweed were private, Young did not use profane language in the presence of children, and it does not appear that his language truly discomforted Tweed, who indeed, never complained and revealed the content of the conversations only when pressed to do so. But the conversations with Tweed need to be examined in the broader context of Young's repeated public and obscene diatribes against Massaro and Joffe, a superior and a colleague, respectively. The Commissioner has recognized that a public school can function effectively only where there is respect for the chain of command. He has consistently found derisive and disrespectful behaviors and speech toward members of administration to constitute conduct unbecoming. Pietrunti v Bd. of Educ. of Brick Twp., 128 N.J. Super. 149 (App. Div. 1974); In re Radwan, EDU 6259-97, Final Decision (January 14, 1999), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. In like measure, a modicum of decency and respect must be afforded to co-workers if the school environment is to remain conducive to learning. While Joffe was not a superior, Young's actions in maligning her and using repugnant and profane language in doing so is intolerable in a public school setting. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the conversations with Tweed, when considered in the context of Young's pattern of maligning Massaro and Joffe, constitutes conduct unbecoming a staff member, and that the Board has met its burden of proof as to Charge Three.

I CONCLUDE that the Board has likewise met its burden of proving that Young is guilty of insubordination. He was the subject of several investigations of his conduct, and told several times that his conduct was unacceptable and must change. He was transferred repeatedly to new work sites, those transfers clearly having been undertaken to separate him from co-workers who had complained about his behavior. He was formally reprimanded. But his behavior continued nonetheless, in clear defiance of directives from his superiors. Rather than responding to Massaro's directive that he reassess his behavior, Young proceeded to directly defy Massaro's authority, by sharing with co-workers, in obscene language, that he felt that Massaro, and the superintendent of schools, both were unfit to lead. Young is entitled to his opinions about administration, but he is not entitled to repeatedly share those opinions by using vituperative language which is distasteful and offensive to co-workers. See Pietrunti, supra, 128 N.J. Super. 149.

Young's assertion that much of the charges are old in time, and thus inappropriately used as evidence of misconduct by him is unavailing. The Commissioner of Education and our courts have recognized that unfitness to teach is best evidenced by a series of incidents. Redcay v. State Bd. of Educ., 130 N.J.L. 369, 371 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd, 131 N.J.L. 326 (E. & A. 1944); Zofchak, supra, EDU 146-02. Here the Board has told a story of its relationship with Young that spans several years in time, and necessarily so. It has allowed me to observe repeated efforts by administration to redirect Young's conduct and to place him in a setting where he can experience success. Only by looking back over the many years the charges span, was I able to see that despite these interventions, Young's conduct has continued unabated, and I CONCLUDE that the Board has proven that Young is guilty of a pattern of improper interactions with co-workers; conduct which has continued after repeated warnings that his behavior is not consistent with the professionalism expected of a teaching staff member. Finally, I concur with the Board that Young's conduct was inappropriate in a school setting, regardless of whether it created a "hostile work environment" as that term is defined by Lehmann v. Toys "R" Us, 132 N.J. 587 (1993).

The Board seeks Young's dismissal. Factors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstance of the incidents or charges, the teacher's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students and staff, and the likelihood of such behavior recurring. In Re King, EDU 4241-00, Final Decision (February 25, 2002), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (citing In re Suitt-Green, EDU 538-07 Final Decision (February 25, 2002), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>). Here, each charge against Young, standing alone, would not, in my view, warrant his dismissal from his position of employment. These are the sorts of incidents that would typically warrant administrative counseling or minor discipline. But here, the Board has counseled, transferred, and reprimanded Young repeatedly, yet he shows no understanding that his behavior is intolerable and incompatible with the mission of the public schools. He has responded to the charges against him with denials of personal responsibility and "the transference of blame to others." King, supra, EDU 4241-00. He is unrepentant.

Under similar circumstances, the Commissioner has aptly stated that a teacher's "apparent refusal to accept responsibility for his behavior does not portend a positive learning environment for the students entrusted to his care, or a harmonious working relationship with those administrators who supervise him." Zofchak, supra, EDU 146-02 (citing King, supra, EDU 4241-00). Based on this record, it cannot be said that Young's behavior is an aberration, nor can it be said that it is likely that his behavior will change. Ibid. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Young's conduct warrants his dismissal from his position as a tenured guidance counselor.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that Greg Young be DISMISSED from his tenured position of employment with the South Plainfield Board of Education.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured assistant superintendent, employed in various capacities by respondent since 1967 – appealed the district's withholding of her salary increment for the 2007-2008 school year. Petitioner contended that the Board's withholding of her increment was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, based primarily on the fact that a February 2007 performance review – consisting of a checklist of seventeen "Performance Indicators" – rated her satisfactory in all areas. The Board contends that the increment withholding was justified, predicated upon petitioner's unsatisfactory supervision of school administrators during the 2006-2007 school year.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: an individual contesting a salary increment withholding has the burden of proof to demonstrate that the Board's decision was unreasonable, arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives; petitioner's supervisor – the superintendent of schools – had numerous conversations with her during the 2006-2007 school year, during which he emphasized that petitioner was not supervising the schools well enough and continued to need too much direction from him; petitioner was aware that the superintendent felt her performance was deficient with respect to supervision and evaluation of principals, and acknowledged having those conversations with him throughout the year; accordingly, petitioner has not met her burden of establishing that respondent's action was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable; and respondent had a reasonable basis for its action. The ALJ concluded that the respondent appropriately withheld petitioner's salary increment for the 2007-2008 school year.

Upon independent review and consideration, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, finding that multiple comprehensive discussions took place between petitioner and the superintendent of schools concerning his assessment of her work and his expectations for firmer leadership and improvement in the proactive management of her staff. Accordingly, respondent's action in withholding petitioner's salary increment for the 2007-2008 school year was upheld, and the petition dismissed.

JENNIFER BARRETT,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioner, an assistant superintendent in the Elizabeth school district, challenged respondent's action in determining not to award her a full salary increment for the 2007-2008 school year. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) before whom the hearing was held in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) determined that respondent's action was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable and dismissed the petition. Upon consideration of both the record that was before the ALJ and the substance of petitioner's exceptions, the Acting Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

At the outset, petitioner's exceptions to the Initial Decision must be evaluated in the context of her burden of proof, i.e. she must persuade the Acting Commissioner that respondent's actions were arbitrary, capricious, and/or unreasonable.

In the first of eight exceptions, petitioner appears to contend that an increment withholding was inconsistent with her performance report, and that the ALJ should therefore have found respondent's action in withholding her increment arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. She focuses on the one-page performance report, dated February 23, 2007 (Petitioner's Exhibit P-10), consisting of a list of seventeen "Performance Indicators" which may be checked "Satisfactory" or "Needs Improvement." The "Satisfactory" boxes for all seventeen items were checked. However, the record indicates that petitioner's supervisor, District Superintendent Pablo Munoz, had: 1) discussed with petitioner areas in which she needed improvement; 2) given her goals; 3) explained the rationale of the goals; and 4) provided feedback.

For example, an area of concern memorialized in petitioner's May 2006 Performance Improvement Plan (PIP), Petitioner's Exhibit P-9, was "Thorough & Efficient Management." The designated course of improvement was petitioner's creation and implementation – during the 2006-2007 school year – of accountability tools to ensure that her staff would work toward the strategic plan goals of promoting excellence and closing the achievement gap in the district schools. The PIP was signed by petitioner. (Ibid.)

Nine months later, in a March 15, 2007 follow-up memorandum to petitioner's February 23, 2007 performance report conference (Petitioner's Exhibit P-11), Munoz reiterated his concern with petitioner's management performance. In the section entitled "Areas of Future Focus," Munoz identified the need for petitioner to make decisions, accept responsibility and be firm. (Ibid.) In the section entitled "Areas of self-reflection," Munoz urged petitioner to regard student achievement as the rationale behind professional (staff) development. And in the section entitled "General Comments and Questions," he articulated the need for petitioner to "create a more proactive agenda with principals" and indicated that her principal evaluations were too soft in light of the student test scores. He directed her to update him more frequently; expressed his desire that she be more commanding; and asked her to reflect on what she was doing to institutionalize excellence and eliminate the achievement gap.[1]

Petitioner's April 30, 2007 PIP for action in the 2007-2008 school year (Petitioner's Exhibit P-12) also reflected Munoz's continuing concern with "Thorough and Efficient

[1] At the OAL hearing, petitioner acknowledged that the foregoing was discussed at her February 23, 2007 conference with Munoz. (1T124)

Management," and an additional concern with petitioner's "Leadership Characteristics." The goals in the PIP, which was signed by petitioner, all related to petitioner's responsibility to make sure the principals knew their roles in monitoring and improving teaching and learning.

Additionally, as noted in the testimony of Munoz and Aida Garcia, Assistant Superintendent for Human Resources, Munoz's view that the principals were responsible for student achievement as measured by certain standardized tests – and that petitioner was responsible to evaluate whether the principals were properly executing that responsibility – was stressed in conversations between Munoz and petitioner, and was reinforced at the weekly "cabinet" meetings that Munoz held with the assistant superintendents. (2T15-17; 3T114-116)[2] In light of the foregoing, petitioner may not rely exclusively on the February 23, 2007, one-page performance report to show that her increment withholding was inconsistent with Munoz's verbal and written communications to her about her performance.

In her second exception, petitioner expresses her disagreement with Munoz's assessment of her performance and argues that – even if his assessment had merit – she was not given enough time to improve. More specifically, she contends that the period of time between Munoz' March 15, 2007 memorandum and the June 26, 2007 "Rice notice" alerting her that the Board of Education planned to discuss her employment (Petitioner's Exhibit P-14) was insufficient to allow her to correct deficiencies.

As to the first of petitioner's assertions, it is neither the ALJ's nor the Acting Commissioner's task – in the context of a controversy concerning the withholding of an increment – to second guess a superintendent's philosophy of educational management and his expectations for the management methods of his assistants. Rather, the question for the ALJ and Acting Commissioner is whether Munoz's – and the respondent Board's – actions were arbitrary and capricious.

Munoz testified at length about his training for the superintendency of a large urban district, and his consequent belief that administrator accountability is the key to pulling up school districts that are not properly performing. Munoz saw the mission of the Assistant Superintendent of Schools – the position held by petitioner – as one of constant observation of what was actually occurring in the schools, and of how the administrators were dealing with same. Munoz communicated this to petitioner on multiple occasions. (See, e.g. 3T43; 3T103-104)

As to the second of petitioner's assertions in this exception, the record indicates that Munoz had had concerns with petitioner's management skills since at least May of 2006. (Petitioner's Exhibit P-9) Those concerns were reiterated at petitioner's Performance Report conference on February 23, 2007, which was over four months prior to her June 26, 2007 "Rice notice." The Acting Commissioner cannot, under those circumstances, deem arbitrary and capricious either Munoz's conclusion that in four months petitioner had not made sufficient progress, or respondent's determination to accept Munoz's recommendation regarding the withholding of petitioner's increment.

In her third exception, petitioner contends that the ALJ should have found that it was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable for Munoz to base his recommendation against her salary increment upon the results of annual student achievement testing, which testing determined how many of the Elizabeth Schools had achieved adequate yearly progress (AYP). However, while Munoz freely asserted that student achievement would be the yardstick against which administrative employee performance would be measured, the record reveals specific, independent grounds for his recommendation against an increment for petitioner.[3] [3] See, e.g. the above discussion of petitioner's first exception.

For example, as referenced above, there are multiple references in Munoz's testimony to his concerns about petitioner's supervision and evaluation of the principals and other administrative staff for whom she was responsible, see, e.g. 3T79-80; 3T98-99; 3T103. In that vein, both Munoz and Garcia testified that an investigation had revealed that at least one of the principals whom petitioner supervised had not evaluated staff. Nonetheless, petitioner had not recommended a withholding of the principal's increment. (2T31-34) Indeed, despite the fact that in the 2006-2007 school year many of the Elizabeth schools were in need of improvement, petitioner brought no staff deficiencies to Munoz's attention (3T77), and submitted first-rate evaluations of her staff's performance. (3T80-81) Ultimately, Munoz took the initiative to recommend that increments be withheld from both petitioner and certain principals, assistant principals, house directors and other staff, and respondent accepted the recommendation. (Petitioner's Exhibit P-15 [the Board resolution withholding increments for petitioner and several other certificated employees for the 2007-2008 school year]; 2T30-32)

Munoz also felt that petitioner was not sufficiently diligent about communicating significant issues to him. He was troubled when he heard from the community about problems of which petitioner should have apprised him. (3T101) In summary, the Acting Commissioner cannot conclude that petitioner's increment was withheld due simply to student test results. Ironically, it was the AYP results that restored to petitioner half of her increment.

Petitioner's fourth exception urges that the ALJ erred in finding that petitioner had responsibility for the performance of the high school "House Directors."[4] She reasons that since § 14 of her job description (Petitioner's Exhibit P-5) directs only that she evaluate "principals," and since

[4] It appears undisputed that Elizabeth High School was comprised of several buildings called "Houses," each of which had a House Director who was in charge of the house in the same way that the principals of the Elizabeth elementary schools were in charge of their school facilities, employees and students. The titular "Principal" of Elizabeth High School – to whom each house director reported – was located in a separate office and was not physically in charge of a school facility. Thus, the house directors were assistants to the principal but served as functional equivalents of building principals.

the principal of Elizabeth High School formally evaluated the house directors, she should not have been held accountable for any lapses by house directors.

However, § 17 of petitioner's job description indicates that one of petitioner's duties was to "[m]ake recommendations to the Superintendent relative to appointments, transfers, promotion, and discipline of certified employees." (Petitioners Exhibit P-5) Accordingly, Munoz testified that petitioner was supposed not only to evaluate principals, but also to make ongoing assessments of vice principals and instructional coaches – thereby monitoring the three levels of leadership and ensuring that the "right people" were leading the schools. (3T59)

If a principal was not properly evaluating his or her subordinates, it was not only the petitioner's responsibility to correct the principal, but also see to it that the principal's subordinates were properly performing their duties. (3T74) Thus, if a principal was not addressing a failure on the part of a vice principal or other subordinate to do evaluations, it was petitioner's responsibility to see that the subordinate was corrected by the principal or by petitioner herself. (3T77) Petitioner herself testified that she could "do evaluations of all administrators and teachers and any of the people working with our students." (1T87-88)

Further, the record reveals that Munoz periodically directed Garcia to run off reports identifying district staff whose evaluations had not been submitted and the principal, vice principal, director or supervisor who was responsible for the evaluation. (3T74) The reports were given to petitioner for follow-up, i.e. discussions with and/or discipline of the staff members who had failed to conduct the evaluations. (Ibid.) Where no improvement occurred, petitioner was supposed to recommend the withholding of the staff members' increments. (3T76) This was the system in 2006-2007. (3T75-76) The Acting Commissioner must conclude from this that the ALJ did not err in finding that petitioner was responsible for addressing lapses in the performances not only of principals but also of house directors and other administrators, and was given the information she required to identify the staff who needed correction.[5]

Petitioner's contention in her sixth exception that she had not been apprised – prior to the withholding of her increment – of Munoz's concern about her supervisory performance, and that the ALJ therefore erred in so finding, has been addressed in the discussion of petitioner's first and second exceptions. The Acting Commissioner will not revisit the issue.

Petitioner's seventh exception quotes dictum from the Initial Decision – wherein the ALJ observes that contrary to the expectations of some employees, increments are not automatic – and characterizes the passage as error. The Acting Commissioner finds the passage unnecessary to the adjudication of the issues in the instant controversy, and does not assume that petitioner expected increments without meritorious performance.

However, petitioner also argues in this exception that she should have been evaluated pursuant to her own definition of student achievement, notwithstanding that her supervisor had made his standards clear to her and the other staff. The record shows that she knew or had reason to know that student test results – the measure used by the State to assess school and district performance and perhaps the only objective way of measuring both student achievement and the efforts of teachers and administrators – would be the polestar against which staff performance would be considered.

Further, as referenced above, multiple comprehensive discussions took place between Munoz and petitioner concerning his assessment of her work and his expectations for firmer leadership and improvement in the proactive management of her staff. Munoz's testimony made it clear that in the position of Assistant Superintendent for Schools, as opposed to Assistant Superintendents for Human Resources, Community Outreach or Instructional Divisions, staff management was central to the mission of improving student achievement – as reflected in testing scores. It is consequently unremarkable that it would be the most important component of her performance evaluation.

[5] Petitioner argues in her fifth exception that she did participate in the process of withholding the increment of one principal. The record shows that this participation was not on her own initiative, but rather at the direction of Munoz. (1T156) Accordingly, the argument does not help petitioner.

In summary, the Acting Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner failed to show that Munoz's recommendation against an increment for her – and respondent's action in withholding the increment – was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Consequently, the action is upheld, and the petition is dismissed.[6]

IT IS SO ORDERED.[7]

[6] As the validity of the entire increment withholding is upheld, there is no need to address the argument in petitioner's eighth exception that no authority exists to award partial increment withholdings. That issue, in any event does not appear to have been set forth in petitioner's pleadings.

Record Closed: June 4, 2010 Decided: July 19, 2010

BEFORE LESLIE Z. CELENTANO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner Jennifer Barrett appeals the denial of a salary increment for the 2007–2008 school year. On September 25, 2007, petitioner appealed to the Department of Education, asserting that respondent's decision to withhold her salary increment was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. On October 27, 2007, respondent Board of Education of the City of Elizabeth (the District or Board) filed its answer, asserting that it had acted appropriately pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14. The matter was then transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where on November 7, 2007, it was filed as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. Hearings were held on September 11, 2008, January 12, 2009, June 23, 2009, October 1, 2009, and February 23, 2010. The record closed following receipt of the parties' posthearing briefs.

The issue in dispute is whether respondent's withholding of petitioner's increment was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Based upon the testimonial and documentary evidence presented and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and to assess their credibility, I FIND the following facts:

Petitioner has been employed by respondent since 1967, initially as an elementary school teacher. Respondent is an Abbott district, with a superintendent of schools and five assistant superintendents, including petitioner.

In 1996 petitioner was promoted to be a director, reporting to the assistant superintendent at the time. In July 2000 she was promoted to the position of assistant superintendent for schools and reported to Thomas Dunn, the superintendent at the time.

In 2005 Superintendent Dunn took a leave of absence and ultimately retired, and Pablo Munoz became the acting superintendent. Petitioner then reported to Munoz, who served as acting superintendent for one year and was appointed superintendent for schools on July 1, 2006.

On July 1, 2005, petitioner became assistant superintendent for instructional services, and on July 1, 2006, she became assistant superintendent for schools.

Petitioner holds an elementary teacher certificate, a principal/supervisor certificate, and a school administrator certificate.

Following his appointment as superintendent, Munoz was advised by the Board that it wanted to transform the direction and performance of the District, such that the focus of the schools would become one of teaching, learning and student achievement. Munoz thereafter presented a vision statement and mission statement to the Board, both of which were adopted. Student and academic achievement were to be the paramount focus of the District.

Petitioner's duties as an assistant superintendent under Munoz included coordinating instructional programs and curriculum, evaluating the operations of the schools and making recommendations to improve delivery of instruction to the students. She also was responsible to oversee the analysis of District data, and compile, prepare and coordinate State reports, as well as supervise and evaluate principals and make recommendations regarding appointments, transfers, promotion and discipline. Petitioner also was responsible for evaluating house directors, who were principals of the various houses in the high school. Munoz and petitioner had multiple discussions, both during cabinet meetings and individual conversations, regarding her performance, her evaluations and student achievement. Munoz felt that petitioner had not supervised the schools well enough and continually required direction from him. He wanted her in the schools all the time, to evaluate the principals, discuss student achievement data and be certain that principals were held accountable for student achievement.

On June 28, 2007, the Board resolved, at the recommendation of Munoz, to withhold petitioner's 2007–2008 salary increment of $8,000. The increments of two principals and two house directors were also withheld at Munoz's recommendation, notwithstanding their having received satisfactory evaluations from petitioner.

In a July 23, 2007, letter to petitioner, Munoz indicated that as they had discussed, the performance of the administrators is significant in assessing student progress, and since administrator performance was under petitioner's direct supervision she would be held accountable for student improvement. Thereafter, when the Board received the District test scores, which revealed that 52 percent of the students made "adequate yearly progress" for the 2006–2007 school year, the Board, upon Munoz's recommendation, restored 52 percent of petitioner's increment. Accordingly, Barrett received $4,160 of her 2007-2008 increment.

TESTIMONY

Jennifer Barrett

Jennifer Barrett has a bachelor's degree in elementary education from Kean University and a master's degree in administration and supervision from Kean University. She also holds thirty-two credits beyond her master's degree which can be applied to a doctorate. She was hired to teach in Elizabeth in 1967 and taught first and second grade and remedial reading to middle school students. She was then selected to develop and teach a gifted-and-talented program for kindergarten through fifth grade. She developed the program, and then was an instructor in the program.

In 1988 Barrett applied for a position as a consultant in the Division of Testing and Monitoring, and worked with principals and developed manuals for monitoring. She became interim director of the Division, and was ultimately named director of the Division. Barrett testified that the superintendent approached her in 1996 and asked her if she would start a new division, Best Practices Staff Development. She created the program and the training to be implemented in conjunction with that program. Her staff consisted of a secretary and two staff members from the District. The program grew to be a division and a model recognized by the State as an exemplary staff development model.

Barrett was appointed assistant superintendent in July 2000. She was also an adjunct professor at Fairleigh Dickinson University for two years. She holds three certifications: elementary education, principal/supervisor and school administrator. Barrett testified she also qualified to mentor administrators, and has mentored others in the District.

The title for her position has changed over the years from assistant superintendent for schools to assistant superintendent for instructional services and back to assistant superintendent for schools. In 2006 and 2007 her duties included overseeing the instructional programs, staff development for instructional staff, principals and their budgets, review and approval of field trips, evaluation of principals, attendance at all board meetings, and anything else the superintendent deemed necessary for her to do. The job description of assistant superintendent for schools (P-5) applied to her in the 2006–2007 school year.

Barrett testified that in 1999 she was a director and Donald Stewart was her supervisor, and in his performance evaluation of her that year (P-6) none of the items were designated as "needing improvement." After she was promoted to assistant superintendent her supervisor was Thomas Dunn, who evaluated her in 2002–2003 (P-7), and no items were designated as "needing improvement." Barrett agreed that she was evaluated each of the other years, but she does not have copies of those evaluations. After Dunn was no longer the superintendent, Mr. Munoz took over and evaluated her. When she was the assistant superintendent for instructional services and Munoz was the acting superintendent, he evaluated her (P-8) with the same listed criteria as previous evaluations and the same performance indicators. Nothing was mentioned in the 2005–2006 evaluation regarding student test scores, nor was there anything to indicate she was responsible for student test scores. Barrett stated that she was never told she was evaluated based upon student performance in State assessments.

Barrett testified that each instructional staff member completes a Professional Improvement Plan each year setting goals to enable that individual to grow professionally that year. She did a plan every year, and the superintendent always reviewed it with her and approved and signed it. Her Professional Improvement Plan for July 1, 2006, through June 30, 2007, (P-9) was prepared in the spring for the following year, and after preparing it she met with the superintendent, who approved and signed her plan. Barrett testified that there was no reference made to student test scores or student performance on State assessments. For the 2006–2007 year she was evaluated by Munoz (P-10), and each category was checked off as indicating that her performance had been satisfactory. The evaluation had the same content as the 2005–2006 evaluation and made no reference to her responsibility to improve scores. After the evaluation was complete, Munoz sent her a letter confirming the conversation at the time of the review of her performance. Munoz also prepared a memo (P-11), which, at the bottom, indicated areas of "self-reflection." Barrett testified that she understood she was to look at the professional development of the teachers to see if there could be more effective teaching in the classroom. She stated that student achievement is different from student test scores. Also in the memo, under General Comments, there was a reference to "status of test scores," and Barrett testified that was a reference to the Abbott district meeting certain criteria. She testified that some schools in the District needed improvement, and the discussion she had with Munoz was on how to develop principals. She testified that the State has benchmarks for districts to meet each year for adequate yearly progress, and that the State assessment results determine whether schools have made adequate yearly progress. The evaluation conference with Munoz was on February 23, 2007, and Barrett testified there was never any discussion regarding her responsibility for improving scores on assessments.

Regarding the Professional Improvement Plan prepared in the spring of 2007 for school year 2007–2008 (P-12), Barrett testified that she prepared it and it was reviewed and approved by the superintendent. Once again there was no reference to student test scores or student performance on State assessments. Barrett feels she achieved all of the goals in her 2006–2007 Plan.

Barrett's contract was renewed in May 2007 (P-13) and was signed by the superintendent, who made no reference to any responsibility for test scores. Barrett testified that her salary for 2007–2008 was $176,000, with a longevity bonus of $2,500, for a total of $178,500 per year. After the contract was sent to Human Resources she received a "Rice Letter" stating that the Board would be discussing her employment (P-14). There was no mention that her increment would be withheld. She attended the Board meeting, then received a copy of the Resolution (P-15) regarding withholding her increment. Barrett testified that she was "taken aback." Petitioner then received a letter (P-16) confirming that her increment was being withheld. She noted that the letter indicated that the District would reconsider the withholding when the District-wide test scores were received. Munoz gave no explanation for withholding the increment other than saying that he is held responsible for test scores and, therefore, so is she. Barrett said she was not aware of any other assistant superintendents having their increments withheld.

Test scores are received in June, July or August, depending on when the particular grade sat for the standardized tests, which are administered once a year. When the scores arrived no one mentioned to Barrett the possibility of restoring her increment. Thereafter, she received an employment contract (P-17), after her increment was withheld, which lowered her salary by the increment withheld ($8,000). Accordingly, her base salary was to be $168,000, plus a $2,500 longevity bonus, for a total of $170,500.

Barrett received a letter from Munoz (P-18) explaining why she was responsible for the test scores. The letter indicated that she supervises and evaluates principals, and that they are responsible for educational and testing levels of the pupils in their schools. The performance of the principals is under her direct supervision. Munoz indicated in the letter that he would discuss the matter further with her after the statistics were compiled.

Barrett explained that principals are evaluated by six standards, with sub-headings including resource management, teacher evaluations, family/community and social/emotional learning. There were five other assistant superintendents at the time, and now there are four.

On cross-examination, Barrett testified that in 2006–2007 Elizabeth had approximately 22,000 students in the District. She testified that Elizabeth is an Abbott District, and she believes it is the third largest district in the state, with twenty-eight schools in the 2006–2007 school year. The high school had 5,300 students in many buildings; it was considered to be one high school with seven "houses." Each house has a house director and an assistant house director, each of whom functions as a principal. There is one overall principal for the high school. In addition to the high school, there were previously nineteen elementary schools, five stand-alone middle schools, and three early childhood centers. The early childhood centers still exist, but there are no longer any stand-alone middle schools; all of the elementary schools are grades K through 8. There are now eight houses making up the high school. In 2008–2009 the school buildings changed somewhat. There were 2,000 instructional staff and 2,000 non-instructional staff. Those numbers remain largely constant.

Barrett believed that in the 2005–2006 school year, the first year that Munoz was superintendent, approximately nine schools made adequate yearly progress (AYP). During the 2006–2007 and 2007–2008 school years, fourteen schools made AYP. Thereafter, the State raised the standards, and many schools dropped throughout the state, as all districts had to comply. If the school did not make AYP the State would designate it as "in need of improvement." Barrett testified that a school is designated either as AYP or as needing improvement. The "No Child Left Behind" legislation states that the needs of all children will be met. Barrett indicated that by grade level there are benchmarks, or percentages, that have to be met, and that there are forty-one categories in language arts and math. If a school does not achieve the required percentages in all forty-one categories it is designated as "in need of improvement," and State and federal requirements have to be met.

Barrett testified that since Munoz became superintendent there have been multiple changes in titles and positions. When the four directors reported to her she had no responsibility for evaluating principals. However, once she became assistant superintendent for schools she was no longer responsible for the directors and the divisions, but all of the principals reported to her. At the high school the house directors reported to the principal of the high school, who then reported to her. Certified tenured principals were to be evaluated at least once a year, and non-tenured principals were to be evaluated at least three times a year. The principals evaluated the vice principals, the teachers and the support staff in their schools. After Barrett evaluated the principals she would conference with them, and review and discuss how they could correct lower ratings, as well as plans and strategies going forward. Copies of the evaluation would be sent to Human Resources, to the principal and to Munoz. Barrett also kept a copy. It was up to her to recommend withholding an increment for a principal, and she could also recommend non-renewal if a principal was not tenured.

Barrett testified that she developed a "cluster program" for all principals to meet in clusters to go over strategies and problems. The cluster group met with her once a week. In 2006–2007 most principals were tenured. If a principal was not performing, Barrett would work with that person to help him or her improve, or to discuss other options. Barrett opined that you need to give people time to work out a plan, perhaps six months or one year, and that change does not happen overnight. She testified that all but two of the principals were twelve-month principals.

Referencing the Resolution that contains a list of increment withholdings (P-15), Barrett testified that many of the individuals listed are principals, but none are listed as a result of her recommendation. Her responsibility to evaluate principals includes evaluating how they evaluate people under them. In 2006–2007 she did make recommendations for improvement on her evaluations of certain principals. She indicated that their performance was rated from 3 to 0, and, if the score was less than 3, needed corrections were discussed with the particular individual. Many received ratings of 2 or 1, but she recommended that all of those individuals be renewed. However, the superintendent decided not to renew one of the early childhood principals.

Barrett's job description (P-5) included, under performance responsibilities, "evaluate operations." Barrett stated that she would look for strategies that had been effective, staff development being applied correctly, and delivery of instruction the way the District wanted it to be. She kept up to date on when evaluations by principals were done and if they were properly done, and indicated that staff needed to be evaluated and deficiencies corrected during the year.

Regarding paragraph nine in her job description, "oversee analysis of data and reports," she stated that this item did not deal just with test scores. It included knowing where the test scores are, as well as the attendance data and information, and social and emotional information. She testified that some data is received from the State, some she maintains, and some is received from the superintendent for overall design to improve the educational level of students. She received daily staff attendance reports as well. Paragraph fourteen in her job description, regarding the evaluation of principals, required that evaluations be consistent with statute, code and collective-negotiation agreements.

Barrett testified that Munoz held "cabinet meetings" where he, the assistant superintendents, controller, business administrator, and assistant board secretary were all present. She was required to attend these meetings and discuss Munoz's vision for the District, including readings on effective instruction and leadership and information regarding what other districts were doing. They also discussed AYP, how to make schools better, and how to help principals be better instructional leaders, among other things. Tasks were frequently assigned at meetings, and Munoz gave her assignments to attend various State or county events.

Barrett's first evaluation in her new position as assistant superintendent for schools was on February 23, 2007 (P-10). It references the Keys to Excellence Strategic Plan, a three- to five-year plan developed by the leadership team, which included Barrett. Her responsibility under the plan had timelines and included academics, athletics and the arts. It was her responsibility to make sure that there were after-school programs in the arts, for remediation and athletic programs. She had no responsibility for construction or maintaining buildings. Under areas of future focus and making decisions, it was noted that Munoz wanted Barrett to continue working with the principals. Under the area of self-reflection, it was indicated that planning for professional-development days should include opportunities for training for teachers and staff and strategies and techniques to serve students. Under the area of general comments, Munoz commented that Barrett should continue to improve and create more proactive agendas with principals. Munoz had discussed with Barrett the evaluations she gave the principals, and he made it clear that he felt she was too "soft." She disagreed with his approach, describing herself as having a "different style" from Munoz; she said she believes in positive pressure. Regarding test scores, Barrett said she believes they should not be the basis for the entire evaluation. She feels that progress equals achievement, and although many schools are not meeting AYP, that does not mean the principals of those schools are bad. Munoz's comment regarding dealing with a strong collaborative management team and exuding a more commanding presence meant that Munoz wanted Barrett to take the lead more; however, she said that her style is not to always be the first to speak. Munoz also discussed with her the status of student achievement at each school, how each school was performing, and where each school needed to improve.

Barrett testified that after the District test scores were received, her 2007–2008 increment was reconsidered by the Board. Originally the $8,000 increment was withheld. The Board, however, ultimately agreed to give her 52 percent of the increment based upon the scores, made retroactive to the date she would have received the original $8,000 increment, which was July 1, 2007.

Michael F. DiPaola (testifying via telephone from Virginia)[1]

Michael F. DiPaola is a professor of education at the College of William and Mary in Virginia. He teaches graduate courses to individuals preparing to be school administrators. He has taught courses in educational administration and supervisional instruction, which includes evaluation of school personnel. He has taught a variety of courses that focus on school leaders.

DiPaola holds a doctorate in educational administration from Rutgers and a master's in educational administration from Paterson State. He also holds an environmental degree from Montclair State University. He has taught science and was an assistant principal for five years, and also spent six years as superintendent in Pitman, New Jersey. He is certified as a science teacher and school administrator. DiPaola has published a handbook dealing with superintendent evaluation and another book dealing with general supervision and evaluation of all personnel. He testified that he has written approximately six articles on evaluating school personnel and has given seminars to national and state organizations on evaluation of school personnel. DiPaola has also done consulting regarding school-personnel evaluations. He was admitted as an expert on evaluations of school personnel.

[1] No objection was received to the initial request that Dr. DiPaola be permitted to testify by telephone and, accordingly, the telephone testimony was permitted.

DiPaola prepared a report (P-19) based on his review of documents forwarded to him by counsel for petitioner, including the petition and everything listed on the first page of his report. When cross-referenced with the exhibit list it was confirmed that DiPaola's review included review of P-5 through P-12, P-16 and P-21. He also had in his possession during his review a copy of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.4, which was sent to him by petitioner's counsel.[2]

DiPaola testified that a superintendent generally has two roles: first, to make recommendations to the board of education on personnel matters; and, second, to supervise others, evaluate their performance, and offer feedback and develop an improvement plan if necessary. Generally this is the role superintendents have in New Jersey, except that the New Jersey Administrative Code requires an annual evaluation, which is not the case everywhere. If an assistant superintendent reports to the superintendent they do the same evaluation and assessment of the assistant superintendent. DiPaola believes that in the within matter, the policy and procedure required that petitioner's evaluation be based upon and linked to her job description, and if she received any unsatisfactory ratings she should be worked with to develop an improvement plan and given time to improve. However, in this instance all criteria were indicated as satisfactory and petitioner did not need improvement. Accordingly, there was no rectifying or remediation needed.

DiPaola testified that he did hundreds of evaluations while residing in New Jersey, and that the purpose of an evaluation is to provide feedback, to indicate unsatisfactory areas of performance if there are any, and to help the individual develop a professional growth plan. He was aware that performance reports in New Jersey are used to determine whether to grant increments or withhold them. If an individual fails to improve after unsatisfactory performance and has a Professional Improvement Plan and fails to improve, an increment could be withheld. DiPaola testified that if petitioner's evaluation (P-10) is a reflection of her performance, then it was not appropriate to withhold her increment. He testified that this document shows that petitioner was performing satisfactorily on every indicator. After reviewing the memo from the superintendent (P-11) which follows up on the performance report, his opinion remained unchanged, i.e., it was not appropriate to withhold petitioner's increment, as there are no references to any unsatisfactory performance.

DiPaola testified that the Professional Improvement Plan developed by the employee and supervisor should set forth goals and timelines, and give the employee an opportunity to remedy unsatisfactory performance, with some responsibility resting in the employer to assist the employee. Petitioner's Professional Improvement Plan shows two areas of concern, but it does not address specific unsatisfactory performance, and, accordingly, DiPaola testified that his opinion was unchanged.

On cross-examination, DiPaola testified that he is a full-time tenured professor at William and Mary and teaches in the graduate school of education, training individuals to train school leaders. The students' he teaches are all doctoral or master's candidates in education leadership and administration.

DiPaola has not done any work with New Jersey Abbott school districts, but knows about them from the Abbott v. Burke case, where the State took responsibility for some districts in New Jersey. He has never worked in an Abbott school district.

When DiPaola was the principal in Manahawkin he did evaluations, and he in turn was evaluated by the superintendent during those years. His evaluation was different from those he did as principal and set forth different performance indicators. When he was the superintendent in the Pitman School District there were two assistant superintendents whom he evaluated annually. He also observed and conferenced with the non-tenured assistant all year.

DiPaola testified that he has never met petitioner nor spoken to her, but was consulted by petitioner's attorney. DiPaola indicated that he has never testified as an expert in any education case and has never been involved in an increment-withholding case. He testified that when he was the superintendent in Pitman he withheld increments for two or three teachers based on unsatisfactory performance, but he did not withhold increments for any administrators. He never had his own increment withheld. When DiPaola was a high school principal he withheld the increment of at least one teacher based on unsatisfactory performance. He said that withholding increments is a way of taking some punitive action where it is warranted, where the shortcoming is not serious enough to bring tenure charges. DiPaola testified that he views withholding an increment as a punitive action and a last resort to help a person understand the seriousness of his or her unsatisfactory performance. He also testified that he is not aware of anything requiring an increment withholding to be based on an evaluation, and he only based his opinion on the documents he reviewed.

DiPaola has not spoken to anyone in the District, and he revealed that his fees to testify as an expert are being paid by the New Jersey Association of School Administrators. His report is based on his review of the documents he was provided with. He does not know who developed the Professional Improvement Plan (P-12). He agreed that petitioner's evaluation (P-10) says nothing about working with principals and nothing about withholding increments of principals, assistant principals or house directors, and that the performance report is very general and does not contain a lot of specifics. He agreed that many of the items in the job description (P-5) are not listed on the performance report. He agreed that Exhibit P-5 is petitioner's job description, yet the evaluation (P-10) does not reflect those details. The evaluation is very generic. DiPaola also agreed that the letter from Munoz (P-11) to follow up on the performance report has few items that overlap those in the performance report. The letter discusses petitioner's evaluation of principals and the status of test scores, yet neither one is mentioned in her job description. DiPaola had no information regarding how many students, schools, or staff there are in the District.

DiPaola testified that he assumes the Board looked at petitioner's job description and job performance in determining to withhold her increment, but stated candidly that he had no idea what the Board looked at. He also had no idea that the Board reviewed her performance after the standardized test scores came in and restored more than half of her increment; indeed, he had no idea until testifying that she received 52 percent of her increment.

DiPaola stated that he receives a New Jersey education magazine several times a year, but that other than that he does not receive any New Jersey information specifically, and he reiterated that all of his opinions are based upon the documents he reviewed.

On redirect examination, DiPaola stated that having been paid to offer his testimony did not influence his opinion. He also noted some overlapping words that appeared in both the letter from Munoz (P-11) and the evaluation (P-10), agreeing that approximately five or six items out of seventeen overlapped in some fashion.

Aida Garcia

Aida Garcia is the assistant superintendent for human resources (HR) at the District, where she first began working in 1987 as a bilingual first-grade teacher, a position she held until 1998. She then became a language teacher, and thereafter in 1999 was appointed a supervisor of early childhood. Two years later she became principal of the early childhood center, and in 2003 she became director HR. Following a reorganization of HR in 2005 she became the assistant superintendent for human resources, and has been in that position since. She has been employed by the District nearly twenty-three years as of the date of her testimony.

Garcia holds a bachelor's degree and two master's degrees and has teaching certificates in elementary education, English as a second language, and bilingual education, and certification as a supervisor, a principal and a school administrator.

She testified that petitioner is the assistant superintendent for schools and was her supervisor when she became the supervisor of early childhood. When Garcia became the HR director, petitioner was in charge of HR. Garcia was named acting assistant superintendent for human resources in July 2005 until she received the appointment in November 2005. Dunn was the superintendent until May 2005 and Munoz became the acting superintendent that same month.

Garcia testified that Dunn's style as superintendent was different from that of Munoz, in that Dunn was not as focused on teaching and learning. Munoz made it clear that teaching and learning had to be the primary focus in the District. There was some overlap with Dunn serving out a sabbatical, and Munoz serving as acting superintendent.

As assistant superintendent for human resources Garcia handles hiring, benefits, labor relations, wrongdoing, DYFS incidents, increment withholdings, non-renewals, evaluations, recommendations and transfer requests, as well as other duties. In 2006–2007 there were approximately thirty schools in the District, some with one principal and no vice principals, some with one of each, and some with a principal and multiple vice principals based on the school size. The high school consists of houses, each with a house director and one or more assistant directors. There is one principal overseeing all of the houses, and that is the principal of the high school. In the 2006–2007 school year there were over 5,000 students at the Elizabeth High School. The principal reported to the assistant superintendent for schools, which was petitioner at the time. Garcia testified there were three prekindergarten centers, some elementary schools, some middle schools and some K–8 schools. Petitioner's role was to manage those principals. Cabinet meetings were held weekly at 3:00 p.m., and lasted until approximately 6:00 or 7:00 p.m. Student achievement was always emphasized at these meetings, as Munoz felt this was the administrators' job. At each meeting he emphasized the importance of teaching and learning, and it was made clear that their responsibility was to achieve the 90 percent goal by 2011, which would be five years since he took over as superintendent. He wanted to become the best district in New Jersey and ensure that the District was passing the State-mandated test.

Garcia defined adequate yearly progress as performance goals that have to be met pursuant to federal guidelines known as the "No Child Left Behind" law, enacted in 2003. The goal is 100 percent AYP. Under Dunn's administration there was no structure to ensure that schools reached AYP and no such focus. Since 2005, however, the emphasis has been on AYP, and a school that was not meeting it would be restructured. Garcia did not remember any school in the District making AYP under Dunn, but she does remember in the 2006–2007 school year celebrating AYP for some schools. Less than half of the schools made AYP that year; however, the following year more met that goal. She testified that in the 2008–2009 school year the number of schools meeting AYP may have doubled from 2007–2008.

Garcia testified as to the standardized tests that are given to students. The High School Proficiency Assessment (HSPA) is given at the high-school level, and the New Jersey Assessment of Skills and Knowledge (NJ ASK) is administered at the grade-school level. The results of these tests determine AYP.

As to the process of increment withholding, Garcia testified that each year in August or September each administrator receives a timeline of evaluations for making recommendations for renewals or non-renewals of contracts and withholding of increments, which is based on performance, attendance, wrongdoing and the like. Each year everything is documented and submitted in March, and she receives the documentation as assistant superintendent for human resources, including the recommendations from the superintendent and other assistant superintendents. Backup documentation could include memos, evaluations and attendance records. Increment withholdings are based not just on a job description, but also on an individual's performance in his or her job. When Dunn was the superintendent there were few increment withholdings; however, now there are twenty, thirty or forty a year. Munoz has stressed the importance of properly evaluating others so that anyone not performing would be held accountable or the individual's supervisor would be held accountable. She did not recall receiving any recommendations from petitioner to withhold anyone's increment.

Garcia's office prepared the resolution indicating what increments were being withheld for the 2007–2008 school year (P-15). Increment withholdings are addressed in June of each year by the Board. Petitioner's name is listed, as are names of some principals and vice principals whose increments were withheld. These other increment withholdings were not based upon recommendations received from petitioner, but rather were made based upon decisions by the superintendent for performance or other reasons, where he felt the individual was not doing his or her job, whether it be his or her own job or not evaluating others properly. She knows of at least two principals who were denied their increments because they had not properly evaluated staff.

With regard to the job description for assistant superintendent for schools (P-5), Garcia testified that Item 17 references the discipline of certified employees. If an employee is tenured, the recommendation can only be that an increment be withheld or that tenure charges be brought. If it is a non-tenured employee, there could be an increment withholding or a non-renewal. If an employee who is not tenured had performance issues and no improvement was observed by the assistant superintendent for schools (petitioner), a recommendation would be made to not renew that employee. Garcia does not recall any non-renewal recommendations having been made by petitioner. The statutory deadline is May 15 of each year to notify individuals of non-renewal for certified individuals. She stated that the superintendent can also make recommendations for renewal or non-renewal.

Garcia also testified that a Professional Improvement Plan is done each year and shared with the superintendent. The following year the plan is reviewed to see if the goals have been accomplished. Conferences are held to discuss the PIP and reminders issues. The superintendent spoke to each assistant superintendent responsible for properly evaluating principals to make sure they were producing results the District wanted.

Garcia referred to an annual employment contract employees receive in May if they are certified (see P-13). She also described a "Rice Letter" (P-14), which is a form letter notifying an individual that matters concerning the individual's employment may be discussed by the board of education. The individual can ask for the discussion to be made public.

A letter was eventually sent to petitioner indicating that her increment was being withheld, but that the Board would reconsider that decision when it had received the test scores for the District (P-16). Garcia was aware that the Board eventually awarded petitioner 52 percent of her increment and entered into a resolution restoring the 52 percent. Correspondence was also sent to petitioner (R-3) confirming that 52 percent of the increment was being restored.

Pablo Munoz

Pablo Munoz is the superintendent in Elizabeth. He began working in the District in 1991 as a social studies teacher at Elizabeth High School. In 1996 he was promoted to supervisor of social studies, which involved evaluating and supervising the teaching staff in that department and responsibility for the program in the District. In 1999 he became director of curriculum and instruction of early childhood through high school, and in 2002 he was appointed assistant superintendent for schools. From May 2005 until June 2006 he was acting superintendent, then on July 1, 2006, he became the superintendent, with a five-year contract.

Munoz testified that he graduated from Elizabeth High School and has a bachelor's degree in psychology from Yale University. He also has a master's in education and attended the Superintendents' Academy for a ten-month training program to become a chief executive in urban school districts. He is certified as a social studies teacher, a supervisor, a principal, a school administrator, and a teacher of elementary education. In 2005 he was nominated for admission to the Superintendents' Academy program and interviewed, which he describes as a lengthy process that went on through November 2005. High-caliber individuals who show promise to lead urban school districts are recruited from various fields. Once the entering class was selected, the course began in February 2006 and was a ten-month intensive program that involved traveling around the country, listening to speakers, doing case studies, and group projects, all to prepare for leading an urban school district. The course involves practical, hands-on training, designed to help transform public schools, for example, to convert from a culture of entitlement to a performance-based culture. In November 2006 he graduated from the program, which had only twelve people enrolled. There were no other New Jersey superintendents in the group that graduated with him. Munoz testified that the academy influenced how he operates in the District, and that changing a culture anywhere is difficult because it involves changing the mindset of employees.

When he became acting superintendent on May 12, 2005, his duties varied under then-superintendent Dunn, who had divided up the District among the assistant superintendents. Some had schools within their jurisdiction, and others had different divisions they oversaw. Eventually there were just two assistant superintendents, Munoz and petitioner, and they had responsibility for all the schools and divisions, although he does not recall how they were divided up at the time. Munoz testified that Dunn "shifted things around a lot," and offered no real guidance for evaluation of principals. Munoz stated that during Dunn's tenure "there was an outward appearance that everything was alright, but inside the District was rotting." The student performance was not good, and there was no guidance from Dunn provided as to evaluations or increment withholding. Munoz stated that when he was appointed acting superintendent he was given direction by the Board that made it clear that the Board wanted him to significantly transform the public schools. The Board adopted a policy with a mission and vision to become one of the best schools in New Jersey. The Board made it clear to him that he needed to change the performance of the schools and that the focus should be on academic learning and achievement.

Munoz testified that one of the first things he did in June 2005 was to put together a reorganization plan effective July 1, 2005, which largely focused on the high school administration central office. He created job descriptions for the three assistant superintendents, one for HR, one for overseeing the schools, and one for instructional services. He changed petitioner's assignment at the time from assistant superintendent for schools to assistant superintendent for instructional services and he promoted two other employees in the District to assistant superintendent positions. In June 2006 more changes were made and petitioner's job title was changed to assistant superintendent for teaching and learning. Munoz testified that at the time, he was being mentored by the superintendent of the Boston schools, who had won a prize for the best urban school district in the United States. That district used the term "teaching and learning," and he adopted it. Petitioner was thereafter made assistant superintendent for schools and Steve Liddawi was assistant superintendent for teaching and learning. He felt that Liddawi could make that part stronger, as he had been an excellent principal. As assistant superintendent for schools, petitioner was to be in the schools 100 percent of the time to evaluate core learning and what was happening in the classroom. Munoz wanted this to show up in the evaluations of principals, and indicated that the evaluation tools have checklists and categories. School are rated largely on their outputs and whether adequate yearly progress is made or a school is deemed in need of improvement, all as measured by the progress of students in standardized testing. The data from all schools is aggregated and the District gets a label of AYP or in need of improvement. The job descriptions, strategic plan and three-year action plan were all designed to improve student performance with five priorities: 1) excellence everywhere; 2) boost performance; 3) safe schools; 4) modernize; and 5) change the culture.

The assistant superintendents also got verbal direction from him, in that he made it clear that he wanted them "in the schools as close to 100 percent of the time as possible." Their job was to make sure the kids were learning, the teachers were teaching and the buildings were functioning as they were supposed to. Munoz felt the assistant superintendents were his eyes in the schools and it was their job to make sure the elements of the plans were actualized.

The State assessments measure student learning in language arts/literacy, math and science (fourth to eighth grade). Science is not used for AYP, but it is used by the State, and if students are not proficient there are sanctions imposed.

In January 2007 the State hired an outside firm to conduct the New Jersey Quality Single Accountability Continuum (NJ QSAC), which went into effect for 2006. Usually a district does its self-assessment and turns the results in to the State; however, since Elizabeth was in need of improvement the State had the evaluation done and a curriculum audit conducted. Liddawi was in charge of making sure all the documents were gathered; however, he passed away in March or April 2007 and Olga Hugelmeyer was eventually appointed an assistant superintendent to replace him. In 2006–2007 Munoz had a superintendent's "cabinet," consisting mostly of those who reported directly to him and two executive team individuals who reported to the Board. In February 2007 another assistant superintendent was appointed (for family and community outreach), for a total of five.

The business operations were headed by the business administrator/board secretary (Harold Kennedy). The two people who reported to him were part of the cabinet also, so there was no confusion in communication. The cabinet had two areas of focus: 1) operations and management (day-to-day items); and 2) instruction or teaching and learning. At cabinet meetings they also discussed articles with a view to leadership development, which was a third focus of the cabinet. The meetings were for two or three hours on Monday afternoons, but remained flexible, and attendance by assistant superintendents was required. The contents of the discussions were affected by the time of year; however, excellence in academics and athletics and boosting performance were almost always discussed. Also discussed towards the end of the year were renewals and non-renewals for non-tenured staff, and who was performing and who was not. Issues at individual schools were also discussed.

In 2006–2007 Elizabeth High School was the largest high school in the state and one of the largest in the country. The school got off to a bad start that year after parents and students filed a lawsuit. There were 5,300 students in the high school in multiple buildings, four which were grouped together and three of which were elsewhere. Other "houses" were later added, but it was all considered to be one school. Each house had its own director and assistant director; however, the reporting to the State was as one school and the reporting to the college board was also as one single school. Middle and elementary schools had between 300 and 1,200 students and had principals and vice principals. Petitioner dealt with high school principal evaluations that year, and Munoz also asked for reviews of vice principals and instructional coaches (experts in their field who worked with veteran and novice teachers with regard to issues such as classroom management and teaching). The instructional coaches reported to the principal and vice principal and to the supervisors of language arts literacy and math.

Munoz testified that he inherited a district in need of improvement, and it stayed that way. The first year the District met AYP was 2008–2009 based upon 2007–2008 test results. AYP is always based on the prior year's scores. Regarding evaluation of principals and house directors, he directed in the cabinet meetings that backup be provided for scores given, and an evaluation tool is used that includes information regarding scores and references the possible withholding of an increment. An assistant superintendent had the ability to recommend action regarding principals and vice principals including tenure charges, withholding of increments and other sanctions.

Munoz testified that he developed the job description for assistant superintendent for schools (P-5), which was petitioner's job description for part of the 2006–2007 school year. As noted on the bottom of page 2, the job description was revised on February 15, 2007. Petitioner's responsibilities included evaluating the operations of schools and making recommendations to improve delivery of instruction to the students. Petitioner had latitude to make recommendations to improve anything at the schools, and her highest leverage was evaluation of principals to make sure they were doing their jobs well, because the principal is the person running the school. Petitioner's responsibilities also included overseeing the analysis of data and preparation of the State reports. Data collection was ongoing, and the primary data in the principal evaluations was student achievement. It was the responsibility of the assistant superintendent for human resources to prepare reports indicating who was current with their evaluations and who was not, and some principals did not keep up with the evaluation of individuals who reported to them. The assistant superintendent would then be told to write up any principal who was behind in that regard. Non-tenured staff were evaluated three times a year and tenured staff once a year. If a principal did not do the evaluations he or she was required to then there should have been a recommendation to withhold the principal's increment. If a vice principal did not do evaluations he or she was required to, then the principal should have recommended discipline of that vice principal, which could have been withholding an increment.

For the 2006–2007 school year the District was still in need of improvement. However for 2007–2008 the District met AYP. Munoz did not recall petitioner raising any issues regarding any principals in 2006–2007, but he did ask her questions about them. He believes that in 2006–2007 52 percent of the schools met AYP, and that some schools were ineligible for AYP, such as early childhood. Only the schools with grades in them that have the mandatory testing are eligible for AYP.

In evaluation conferences, Munoz spent time reviewing petitioner's evaluations and the quality of those evaluations, and he indicated that he was concerned about the evaluations she had done. Some principals were being given high marks, yet the District was in need of improvement. Some schools were very high performing (100 percent proficient), some were very low performing (for example, 15 percent proficient), and some were in the middle, yet most principals had good evaluations. Munoz made it very clear to petitioner that he was concerned about her evaluations. He put all of her data in a spreadsheet, and most of the people she evaluated had high scores.

Certificated staff, whether tenured or not, need to be acted upon before May 15 to determined whether they are going to be renewed, otherwise they are automatically renewed. Non-certificated staff needs to be addressed by June. Before June 30 recommendations need to be presented to the Board for increment withholding if there is to be one before the salary is awarded for the next year. The first thing addressed is the renewals or non-renewals of certificated tenured and non-tenured staff, then renewals of non-certificated staff, and then increment withholdings. Munoz testified that petitioner showed a lack of initiative in 2006–2007 in not recommending any non-renewals. In fact, he asked her for a non-renewal of a principal in one school, which she provided, and then the principal resigned. Munoz stated that he took other steps to evaluate petitioner's performance and built upon her performance report (P-10) using her job description, which is more specific, and "keys to excellence." He evaluated everyone who reported to him, and he used job descriptions and keys to excellence for everyone, except for two individuals who had not been there the entire year—Olga Hugelmeyer had been there one month and Jerome Dunn had been there approximately six months. Everyone else was evaluated exactly the same way as petitioner. The process he followed was to first review the individual's performance report, job description and strategic plan all together, and then look at the action plan for that individual. He looked at petitioner's, Kennedy's and Garcia's evaluations of others that they were responsible to evaluate, and spent a few hours on each, determining which areas were their strengths, which needed improvement and which needed future focus. He felt there was a thin line between needed improvement and future focus. Munoz made notes of things he wanted to discuss at the evaluation meeting with each, and stated that those meetings took between two and four hours. After the meeting his practice is to prepare a written report of the evaluation meeting.

Munoz's memo to petitioner (P-11) was intended as a follow-up to the February 23, 2007, conference. He felt that future focus for petitioner could be making decisions and accepting responsibility and being firm. Her major weaknesses included that she needed to be more firm with principals and draw a line between friendships and responsibility to the school and its students. She was not direct enough about the ineffectiveness of some principals, and that ineffectiveness affects student performance because teachers take the lead from leaders, and if the leadership has high expectations, good teachers will be hired and renewed. He felt that if you do not hire good teachers and decline to renew bad ones it leads to low performance of students and discipline problems because students are bored, as they are not given a high level of teaching. Bad principals perpetuate mediocrity. Munoz discussed the comment "no surprises" that he had written under areas of future focus. He explained that he had heard something from a Board member or community member that should have been brought to his attention by petitioner and was not, and his comment was to let her know that such occurrences could not continue. Generally, Munoz felt that petitioner was not supervising the schools well enough and that she needed too much direction from him. She needed to be more proactive and her evaluations of principals were too high in scoring when measured against student performance. These concerns were addressed in general comments and questions. Most of petitioner's comments on the principals' evaluations were favorable, and this was troubling for Munoz based on what he had seen in the schools. He felt that her evaluations were ineffective and the words she used were "too soft." The tests scores affirmed that the principals were not doing a great job. He discussed the status of test scores and how the evaluation forms mentioned withholding of increments, yet increments were not in fact withheld. He indicated that they discussed student achievement and he asked her to reflect on the plans for student achievement, feeling that she needed to stay on top of the vision, mission, core beliefs, theory of action and priorities. He and petitioner discussed the need to pay attention to all of these and to eliminate the achievement gap. He does not remember any response or rebuttal to the memo from petitioner and does not recall her disputing what was being asked of her. Munoz emphasized that he made it clear to petitioner that she was responsible for the performance of the schools, as was her predecessor in the assistant superintendent for schools position. Petitioner's performance did not change following the February 2007 evaluation; her approach stayed the same and her evaluations of principals stayed largely the same.

Petitioner's Professional Improvement Plan addressed moving forward in the next school year and how petitioner would improve her practices in areas of concern. Munoz stated that an individual is to reflect on his or her evaluation and then come back with the PIP, which he rejects if it is not complete, and signs once he is satisfied with the plan.

Petitioner's employment contract for July 2007 through June 2008 (P-13) is the standard contract used for all employees in the District, except for perhaps the business administrator. The recommendation he made to the Board to withhold her increment (P-14) is the standard Rice Letter that goes out to individuals being discussed at a board meeting. He sent it to petitioner pending receipt of student achievement scores to see if her increment should be withheld. He told petitioner in advance that he would be making that recommendation to the Board and indicated that the Board would revisit it when the test scores came in. If the Board did not take action to withhold the increment it would have been granted, and then they would not have been able to take it back. The test scores were expected in the fall of the following year, and once they were received he went to the Board and recommended that 52 percent of petitioner's increment be restored to her because 52 percent of the schools in the District made AYP, although the District did not make AYP. Munoz testified that the tests scores are the best indicators of school performance.

Munoz testified that Elizabeth is subject to complying with the "No Child Left Behind" Act. Not every school in the District made AYP over the 2002–2005 period. Munoz was not sure how many schools made AYP in the years 2002–2004, and believes that in 2005 eight or nine schools may have made it. AYP is tied to student achievement. The State uses an assessment system that has varied, but is largely language arts and math. The scores are generally calculated around grade spans, which he referred to as "bands": grades three to five, six to eight, and high school groups. In addition, the data for the student population is broken down into boys and girls bands, socio-economic level and race bands, and there are mostly forty-one variables in a band. The federal government originally gave the states the ability to set benchmarks, and New Jersey gradually increased it to 100 percent. Each benchmark is set for three years, and so if a proficiency benchmark number was 50 percent it stayed that way for three years.

Munoz testified that there are two ways to make AYP: 1. proficient, which means clear the benchmark, and 2. safe harbor, which means at least a 10 percent reduction in the number of students who did not achieve proficiency. The federal government gives the states the choice. Two consecutive years of data are required to have AYP status, and if AYP is not achieved two years in a row then a school is classified as "in need of improvement."

The forty-one variables include measuring how each particular population performs. For example, the special education group in a school needs to either make the benchmark or safe harbor; however, some groups are exempt if they have less than a certain number of members. In Elizabeth there are different populations in different schools and some subgroups do not exist in some schools. The State assessment is once a year for elementary and middle school and multiple times a year for high school students. The high school exam is also a graduation requirement, so students have multiple opportunities to pass the test, which is taken for the first time in the spring of a student's junior year. If the student does not pass, the student can take the test in the fall of senior year and again in the spring of senior year if needed. If a student still does not pass, the student can take a special review or an alternative assessment just for graduation.

Munoz testified that petitioner's job includes the requirement that she motivate her staff to get 95 percent of the children into school. Every student is expected to be at school, and the Board hires people, including Barrett and him, to fulfill the responsibilities of the District. He testified that there are a number of issues in an urban area, including poverty, which results in lower performance (students in affluent communities perform better). There are also limited language proficiencies where English is not spoken at home; however, there are special rules for those students. There are also social issues such as death, divorce, drugs, alcohol and dysfunction. Munoz testified that the special education students who are severely disabled take an alternative proficiency assessment and are exempt from the sit-down testing.

The Board resolved to restore 52 percent of petitioner's increment after the test scores were received (R-1), after 52 percent of schools achieved AYP based upon the prior year's scores. Petitioner's increment had been withheld based on her performance, and the test scores were used as a metric to restore some of it. Many other individuals had their increments withheld for performance as well. Petitioner was responsible for the schools, including the principals, vice principals and instructional staff. It was her job to use innovative and management techniques and/or discipline to motivate her staff. Munoz testified that he was not happy with her performance, including her evaluations of administrators, and that is why he withheld her increment. Once the test data came in, he used AYP as a metric to get her 52 percent of her increment back. He agreed that he did not use the "metric of AYP" to withhold any other assistant superintendent increments. However, other increments were withheld for various performance-based reasons. The resolution regarding individuals whose increments were withheld (P-15) includes six administrators and petitioner.

On redirect examination, Munoz testified that adequate yearly progress is a State requirement applied to all school districts, whether affluent, poor, Abbott, rural or urban.

Munoz testified that the salary guide (R-2) indicates salaries subject to annual review regarding "adjustments and/or improvements," which permits the Board to take a look at salaries for the upcoming year. Although the Elizabeth Education Association sets guidelines, with the superintendents they are direct contracts so the Board can address contract issues annually and adjust up or down.

Petitioner's job description at the time (P-5) sets forth in numbers 2, 9, 14 and 17 items related to review, evaluation, assessment, and recommendations to Munoz regarding principals and house directors and the like. He received no recommendations that petitioner initiated regarding any administrators. He directed her to look into

Ms. White, who eventually resigned, so he considered petitioner to be just following up on an issue he initially assigned to her. Ms. Leon was going to be shadowed. One of his concerns was the complete lack of recommendations from petitioner regarding principals, but he testified that the heart of the matter to him was that students were not getting educated to become proficient, and the leaders, including the principals and vice principals, were not being accurately evaluated if the kids were not learning. He stated that leaders need to get teachers to perform better, and that it was petitioner's job and obligation to get the principals, vice principals, house directors and assistant house directors to do their jobs. All of the administrators she supervised got good evaluations, but the kids were not learning; 52 percent is not good. It was petitioner's job to accurately evaluate people who were reporting to her directly. She gave high ratings, yet the narratives were soft and there were very limited references to the most important part of the evaluation, which is student performance. Student performance is the core of their job. Managing people who report to her, whether by written and formal or informal conversations is critical, and petitioner had an ineffectiveness there which was borne out by the student achievement numbers. Munoz opined that "the game has changed across the nation and across the world," and evaluations of administrators are at the heart of those changes.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

Salary increments are controlled by N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, which provides:

> Any board of education may withhold, for inefficiency or other good cause, the employment increment, or the adjustment increment, or both, of any member in any year by a recorded roll call majority vote of the full membership of the board of education. It shall be the duty of the board of education, within 10 days, to give written notice of such action, together with the reasons therefor, to the member concerned. The member may appeal from such action to the commissioner under rules prescribed by him. The commissioner shall consider such appeal and shall either affirm the action of the board of education or direct that the increment or increments be paid. The commissioner may designate an assistant commissioner of education to act for him in his place and with his powers on such appeals. It > shall not be mandatory upon the board of education to pay any such denied increment in any future year as an adjustment increment.

An increment is not a statutory right but "a reward for meritorious service to the school district." North Plainfield Educ. Ass'n v. North Plainfield Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J. 587, 593 (1984). The statute was intended to vest local school boards "with the ability to withhold increments" from those who had "not performed well during the previous year." Probst v. Haddonfield Bd. of Educ., 127 N.J. 518, 526 (1992). A local board's exercise of its discretionary powers "may not be upset unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). The issues to be determined are: (1) whether the underlying facts were as those who made the evaluation claimed, and (2) whether it was unreasonable for them to conclude as they did upon those facts, bearing in mind their expertise. Id. at 296–97.

In a matter such as this, the petitioner has the burden of showing that the denial of the salary increment was arbitrary or capricious. Id. at 288. The decision to withhold an increment does not require a showing of shortcomings sufficient to justify dismissal under the Tenure Act. Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Educ., 1960–1961 S.L.D. 57, 62. The only question for the Commissioner is whether the district "had a reasonable basis for its factual conclusion." Kopera, supra, 60 N.J. Super. at 295. Indeed, it has been observed that a school district has no duty to > prove by a preponderance of credible evidence that the allegations against petitioner are true. To do so would convert an increment withholding action into a tenure case and accordingly shift the burden of proof to the board. Such is not the purpose of an appeal to the Commissioner under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:29-24.

Moreover, the decision to withhold an increment has been held to be "a matter of essential managerial prerogative which has been delegated by the legislature to the board." Ibid. (citing Bernards Twp. Bd. of Educ. v. Bernards Twp. Educ. Ass'n, 79 N.J. 311, 321 (1979)). An individual contesting a salary increment withholding has the burden of proof of demonstrating that the decision was unreasonable, arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives. Kopera, supra, 60 N.J. Super. at 297.

Courts have used varying language when trying to elaborate on the "arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable" standard. Despite the variations, the common element among all of the decisions is that board of education actions are given a strong presumption of validity. See Thomas v. Morris Twp. Bd. of Educ., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd, 46 N.J. 581 (1966) (school board decisions "entitled to a presumption of correctness"). A board of education has broad discretionary authority and its actions are entitled to a presumption of lawfulness and good faith. Quinlan v. North Bergen Bd. of Educ., 73 N.J. Super. 40, 46 (App. Div. 1962). Not only are board actions entitled to a "presumption of correctness," they have a presumption that those actions "will be upheld by the Commissioner of Education, absent a showing of bad faith, illegal motive or a lack of rational basis." Raimondi v. Westwood Reg'l Bd. of Educ., EDU 5904-04, Initial Decision (Sept. 26, 2005), adopted, Comm'r (Dec. 23, 2005), aff'd, State Bd. (June 7, 2006) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>.

In a proceeding such as this, the burden of proof by a preponderance of the competent and credible evidence is on the petitioner. In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962).

Munoz had numerous conversations with petitioner during the 2006–2007 school year about her performance wherein he conveyed to her that she was not supervising the schools well enough and continued to need too much direction from him. Petitioner was aware that Munoz felt her performance was deficient with respect to supervision and evaluation of principals and acknowledged having those conversations with him throughout the year. Indeed, she agreed that Munoz discussed with her whether she was "too soft" in those evaluations. While petitioner asserts she has a different "style" from Superintendent Munoz, she nevertheless failed to present even a scintilla of evidence that the action of the Board in withholding her increment was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

Assistant superintendent Aida Garcia testified credibly that Munoz's priorities were different than those of the former superintendent, and Munoz made it clear to all that teaching and learning had to be the primary focus in the District.[3] The notion that petitioner bore no responsibility for student achievement in the District and therefore had no accountability is patently ridiculous. The proclivity to assume that increments are automatic, and triggered in a vacuum without regard for the learning of children, is misplaced.

Based upon all of the facts adduced and the legal principles cited above, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not met her burden of establishing that respondent's action was arbitrary, capricious, unlawful, or induced by improper motive. To the contrary, respondent had a reasonable basis for its action.

Based upon all of the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the respondent appropriately withheld petitioner's salary increment for school year 2007–2008.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the petition filed by petitioner is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of [3] It is difficult to imagine that a primary focus of academic achievement and learning constituted a change in focus and priorities for the District.

Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." SYNOPSIS

Petitioners alleged, inter alia, that respondent's representatives violated school policy, their minor son's rights, and their parental rights when – after a teacher observed a disturbing drawing at M.T.'s school desk – M.T. was sent by school staff to be evaluated at a hospital against the petitioners' wishes. Petitioners sought: discipline for respondent's staff members who decided to send M.T. to the hospital; letters of apology to the parents and the child; payment of $12,000 in hospital expenses; and payment of punitive damages. Respondent Board argued that petitioners failed to state a cause of action upon which relief may be granted, that the Board's actions were based upon good cause, and were not arbitrary, capricious or retaliatory.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the matter is ripe for summary decision as the record shows that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact; as a matter of law, the Commissioner does not have jurisdiction over this matter as it does not arise under the school laws; petitioners allege a violation of the district's internal regulations, but do not point to any alleged violations of any statutory school laws or related regulations that would fall under the Commissioner's purview; petitioners seek disciplinary action against district personnel, when only a board of education may forward disciplinary charges to the Commissioner for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11; and the petitioners' request for reimbursement of costs and punitive damages is likewise not within the Commissioner's authority. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the matter should be dismissed as a matter of law.

Upon a thorough review of the record and the Initial Decision of the OAL, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that she has no jurisdiction to adjudicate the substantive arguments made by the petitioners in this matter. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioners. In their exceptions the petitioners maintain that since this was a serious incident that occurred in a public school that the Commissioner should automatically have jurisdiction over this matter. The petitioners also make other substantive arguments in their exceptions relating to the events that occurred at the school with M.T.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that the Commissioner does not have jurisdiction to adjudicate the substantive arguments made by the petitioners in this matter. Accordingly, the petition of appeal is dismissed.

Record Closed: August 20, 2010 Decided: September 13, 2010

BEFORE JESSE H. STRAUSS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners A.T. and M.T. on behalf of minor child M.T. have petitioned the Commissioner of Education, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1 et seq., for an order that the Board of Education of the Borough of Carlstadt (District or Carlstadt) (1) discipline certain staff who decided to send the child to the hospital; (2) give letters of apology to the parents and the child; (3) absorb $12,000 in hospital expenses; and (4) pay punitive damages. The claims arise out of a decision by District representatives to send the child to Bergen Regional Medical Center (BRMC), allegedly against the wishes of the parents, after a teacher observed disturbing drawings at his school desk.

On June 23, 2010, petitioners filed a petition with the Commissioner. The Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education transmitted the matter on July 7, 2010, to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, for determination as a contested case. In her transmittal, the Director indicated that the matter requires a threshold determination as to whether the requested relief is within the authority of the Commissioner to grant, and, if not, whether alternative reliefs are available and appropriate.

On July 22, 2010, I directed the parties to submit their positions in writing on the above threshold questions. I received their submissions by August 20, 2010.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The petition has attached to it an April 23, 2010, report by the Carlstadt Child Study Team, a written April 28, 2010, account by the child of the events of April 23, 2010, an April 23, 2010, report by the Carlstadt Police Department, and an April 28, 2010, memorandum from BRMC reflecting an admission date of April 23, 2010, for the child and a discharge date of April 28, 2010. From these documents and the petition, the facts appear to be as follows, and these facts are relied upon for the purpose of determining whether this matter should be subject to summary disposition.

On April 23, 2010, the child, age twelve, was referred to the Child Study Team for assessment when his teacher, Ms. Nagurka, found a drawing on his desk indicating suicidal ideation. In his interview by the Child Study Team, the child advised that he had drawn the picture in English class because he was concerned that a girl he liked did not like him. He had seen similar pictures on the Internet. He also stated that his self-deprecating comments on the picture represented what he believed others thought of him. He reported that he did not actually intend to kill himself now, but said that he has considered it for other situations. He said that he feels depressed and that there is no point in trying anymore. The Child Study Team recommended that further evaluation of the child was necessary, as the child "presents as at-risk for suicide." The report further indicates that the child's mother, M.T., was called and asked to come to the school right away, and she agreed. The report states, "When she arrived, Ms. Simon, Mrs. Kiely and Mrs. Crapis described the above and showed her the picture that [the child] had drawn. We told her that [the child] needs to be further evaluated at Bergen Regional Medical Center's Emergency Room. She became upset and supportive counseling was provided to her." M.T. informed Mrs. Crapis that she and her husband had no intention of taking the child to the emergency room because they did not have insurance. The police and an ambulance were called. Mrs. Kiely spoke with A.T., the child's father, explained charity care, and advised him that the ambulance had arrived and that he could meet M.T. and his son at the hospital. He protested putting the child in the ambulance. (See Carlstadt Child Study Team report attached to the petition.) Officer Sanzari of the Carlstadt Police Department reported that he contacted Elizabeth Morley of Family Crisis, who directed that the child needed an evaluation at BRMC regardless of the parents' decision. Sanzari followed the ambulance carrying the child to BRMC as a safety precaution. (See Officer Sanzari report attached to the petition.)

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.S.A. 52:14B-9 provides a party in a contested administrative case the opportunity for a hearing at which he or she may present evidence and argument on all issues involved. Such cases, however, may be subject to summary decision if the papers show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that a party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b).

The standard for granting summary judgment (decision) is found in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520 (1995). In Brill, the Court looked at the precedents established in Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. Ltd. v. Zenith Radio Corp.,

475 U.S. 574, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 (1986), Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986), and Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986), wherein the Supreme Court adopted a standard that "requires the motion judge to engage in an analytical process essentially the same as that necessary to rule on a motion for a directed verdict: 'whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law.'" Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 533 (quoting Liberty Lobby, Inc., supra, 477 U.S. at 251–52, 106 S. Ct. at 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 214). The Court stated that under the new standard,

> a determination whether there exists a "genuine issue" of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. The "judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial."
> [Id. at 540 (quoting Liberty Lobby, Inc., supra, 477 U.S. at 251–52, 106 S. Ct. at 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 212).]

The Brill standard contemplates that the analysis performed by the trial judge in determining whether to grant summary judgment should comprehend the evidentiary standard to be applied to the case or issue if it went to trial. "To send a case to trial, knowing that a rational jury can reach but one conclusion, is indeed 'worthless' and will 'serve no useful purpose.'" Id. at 541.

In addressing whether the Brill standard has been met in this case, further guidance is found in R. 4:46-2(c):

> . . . An issue of fact is genuine only if, considering the burden of persuasion at trial, the evidence submitted by the parties on the motion, together with all legitimate inferences therefrom favoring the non-moving party, would require submission of the issue to the trier of fact.

Petitioners do not materially dispute the above facts. They contend, however, that the District violated the rights of the parents and the child as set forth in Carlstadt School District Regulation R 5350, entitled "Pupil Suicide." (See regulation attached to petition). More particularly, they contend that: (1) Ms. Nagurka should have immediately contacted the school principal upon discovering the disturbing photo; (2) Crapis, Kiely and Simon interviewed the child without notifying his parents; (3) at the two-and-one-half-hour interview with the child, they violated his rights as a minor to have a parent to advocate on his behalf; (4) upon M.T.'s arrival at the school she was not allowed to see or speak with her son, but was informed that she was required to accompany her son in the ambulance; (5) District representatives refused M.T.'s request to take her son for an evaluation rather than have him transported by ambulance and refused to wait for A.T., instead calling the Division of Youth and Family Services and the police; and (6) despite the parents' recognition of the gravity of the situation and the need for their son to have a psychiatric intervention, the District disempowered them in violation of their rights as parents.

The Carlstadt regulation concerning pupil suicide requires that any indication of a potential suicide must be reported to the principal immediately. The principal shall immediately inform the Child Study Team, which shall investigate and evaluate. The principal will inform the pupil's parents of the suicidal signs and seek parental approval for an evaluation and notify the Division of Youth and Family Services if parental abuse or neglect is suspected. The regulation also provides that "in the event that the parent(s) or legal guardian(s) objects to the recommended evaluation or indicates an unwillingness to cooperate in the best interests of the pupil, the Child Study Team may contact the New Jersey Division of Youth and Family Services to request that agency's intervention on the pupil's behalf."

I CONCLUDE that, as a matter of law, the Commissioner does not have jurisdiction over this matter.

The Commissioner has fundamental and indispensable jurisdiction over all disputes and controversies arising under the school laws. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9; Bd. of Educ. of E. Brunswick, 48 N.J. 94 (1966). However, where the controversy does not arise under the school laws, it is outside the Commissioner's jurisdiction even though it may pertain to school personnel. E. Brunswick, supra, 48 N.J. at 102. Petitioners seek disciplinary action against District personnel. Although the school laws provide for disciplinary action against a school district's employees, only a board of education, rather than an individual citizen, may forward disciplinary charges to the Commissioner for a hearing. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, -16.

Although petitioners allege a violation of Carlstadt's internal regulation concerning pupil suicide, they do not point to any alleged violations of any statutory school laws or related regulations that would fall within the Commissioner's jurisdiction. In M.N. v. Board of Education of Dumont, EDU 11658-98, Final Decision (August 13, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, the Commissioner, in accordance with East Brunswick, supra, 48 N.J. 94, held that a request for a determination as to whether a school counselor is allowed to keep from parents a potentially dangerous situation and a minor's state of mind calls for an analysis of duties in relation to a body of law which is not within his jurisdiction, since it is the Commissioner's primary responsibility to make certain that the terms and policies of the school laws are being faithfully effectuated. He reiterated that where the controversy does not arise under school laws, it is outside the Commissioner's jurisdiction even though it may pertain to school personnel, and notwithstanding that the board of education in M.N. adopted a policy contemplating that it may be necessary for a counselor to set aside confidentiality considerations when it is in the best interest of a student. The Carlstadt suicide policy similarly does not constitute a school law over which the Commissioner has jurisdiction.

As to petitioners' claim for money damages against the District, the Commissioner has consistently denied that the Commissioner is clothed with the authority to grant prayers for relief for punitive damages and reimbursement for costs and/or legal fees. Winter v. Bd. of Educ. of North Bergen, 1975 S.L.D. 236, 240; see also Bd. of Educ. of Tenafly, 1974 S.L.D. 420, aff'd, State Bd. of Educ. (March 5, 1975). Instead, the award of money damages in education cases occurs only in a limited number of cases authorized by the education statutes such as lost earnings (of a school district's staff member) or restoring an increment improperly withheld. Spivak v.

Westwood Reg'l High Sch. Dist., 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 270. The payment of any other damages is not within the Commissioner's authority. Dunn v. Elizabeth Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 279; see also B.G. v. Bd. of Educ. of E. Orange, EDU 03036-08, Initial Decision (April 25, 2008), adopted, Comm'r (May 20, 2008) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>.

Since all of petitioners' prayers for relief are outside of the jurisdiction of the Commissioner, I CONCLUDE that this matter should be DISMISSED as a matter of law. Such dismissal does not preclude petitioners from seeking certain relief in an appropriate forum.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the petition is DISMISSED in its entirety with prejudice.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

Pro-se petitioner challenged the 2010 agreement between the respondent Boards to expand their pre-existing sending-receiving relationship pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8. Petitioner alleged that the actions of both school districts violated the law applicable to regionalization of school districts, since their agreement provides that all Elmer students be educated in Pittsgrove, rendering the Elmer district non-operating and creating a regional district without a referendum. Respondent Pittsgrove Board of Education filed a motion to dismiss the petition, and the Elmer Board of Education joined in the motion.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: N.J.S.A. 18A:8-43 to 8-51 was enacted in an effort to merge and consolidate small non-operating school districts for operational efficiency and cost cutting; Elmer and Pittsgrove decided to expand their sending-receiving relationship to include all students from Elmer after the effective date of the legislation; this action was not a regionalization under N.J.S.A. 18A:13-34, but rather an exercise of managements' prerogative permitted by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8; and there was no statute, regulation or applicable authority cited by petitioner prohibiting the two districts from broadening their sending-receiving agreement to include all students in Elmer. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the petition must be dismissed.

Upon independent review of the record and the Initial Decision of the OAL, the Acting Commissioner found that involuntary district mergers shall be effectuated by the Executive County Superintendent pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:8-44 et seq. As the Executive County Superintendent has taken no action, the petition against respondents cannot bring about the relief petitioner seeks. Accordingly, the Acting Commissioner dismissed the petition, and denied the petitioner's motions for emergent relief.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF ELMER AND BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PITTSGROVE, SALEM COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENTS.	:

Petitioner challenges the decision of respondent Elmer Board of Education to expand its sending-receiving relationship with respondent Pittsgrove Board of Education, alleging that the decision creates an unauthorized regionalization.

At the outset, the Acting Commissioner of Education (Acting Commissioner) is constrained to supplement the procedural history set forth in the Initial Decision. The record reveals that petitioner filed papers with the Commissioner of Education on or about May 11, 2010 and June 21, 2010. Respondent Elmer Board of Education filed its answer on June 14, 2010, and on June 21, 2010 respondent Pittsgrove Board of Education filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of answer to the petition.[1] The Bureau of Controversies and Disputes transmitted the pleadings to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on June 22, 2010 and the OAL's filing notation indicates that it received the pleadings on June 30, 2010.

[1] The Commissioner has reviewed all of the referenced pleadings.

As noted in the Initial Decision, petitioner did not respond to Pittsgrove's motion to dismiss but – taking into consideration petitioner's pro se status – the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) declined to issue a default decision. Further, the petitioner filed with the Commissioner three motions for interim relief on August 24, 2010, which motions were transmitted to the OAL on August 26, 2010 and were ultimately considered by the ALJ after disposition of the threshold issues raised in Pittsgrove's motion to dismiss – which the Elmer Board joined.

There appears to be no factual dispute about the present posture of this matter. Respondents entered into an agreement to expand a preexisting sending-receiving relationship, as they are permitted to do under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8. A consequence of the contemplated expansion was that – commencing at the beginning of the 2010-2011 school year – all Elmer primary and secondary school children would be educated in Pittsgrove-operated schools, including the one remaining school building in Elmer, which would be leased to Pittsgrove.[2]

Petitioner correctly points out that the practical result of respondents' agreement may be to render Elmer a non-operating district, pursuant to the definition in N.J.S.A. 18A:8-43.[3] However, she reasons that this signifies that regionalization pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:13-34 has occurred. This is a leap unsupported by the facts presented to the ALJ or the relevant law.

The recently enacted "Non-operating District" statute provides for executive county superintendents to eliminate non-operating districts and merge same with the districts which receive the non-operating district's students. N.J.S.A. 18A:8-44(a). There is no indication that the Salem County superintendent has made the determinations and taken the actions prescribed in N.J.S.A. 18A:8-44 to 8-49. Consequently, there is no relief which could be provided to petitioner by the respondents in this case. Further, none of the determinations or actions outlined in the regionalization statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:13-34, have been executed by respondents. Nor is there reason for the Acting Commissioner to order the initiation of such actions, since N.J.S.A. 18A:8-44 et seq. provides the means of effectuating involuntary district mergers.

[2] The lease proposal is currently under review by the Office of School Facilities of the Department of Education.

[3] The ALJ raises a question in the Initial Decision about the impact of the reference in N.J.S.A. 18A:8-43 to the date of June 30, 2009. Were the date not applied prospectively, it would defeat the legislative intent.

Petitioner's September 15 exceptions to the Initial Decision appear to reiterate her position that respondents have carried out a de facto regionalization, and to suggest that Pittsgrove's rental and operation of the Elmer school building is an ultra vires action. The Acting Commissioner rejects the latter proposition as petitioner has failed to meet her burden to offer authority for same, and rejects the balance of petitioner's exceptions for the reasons set forth above.[4]

Finally, having found that the ALJ's dismissal of the petition was warranted by the facts and relevant law, the Acting Commissioner upholds the ALJ's denial of petitioner's motions for emergent relief.[5]

The petition is dismissed and petitioner's motions for emergent relief are denied.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[6]

Record Closed: September 10, 2010 Decided: September 10, 2010

BEFORE W. TODD MILLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner challenges the 2010 decision of the Borough of Elmer Board of Education (Elmer or EBOE) and Township of Pittsgrove Board of Education (Pittsgrove or PBOE) to expand its send-receive agreement to include grades K-4. All students in Elmer will be educated in Pittsgrove upon implementation of this new agreement. Grades 5-12 were already attending the Pittsgrove district under preexisting agreements. Petitioner avers inter alia, that the 2010 agreement renders the EBOE as a non-operating district, resulting in a de facto regionalization of the district. Petitioner asserts that a referendum was required to implement this change.

Pittsgrove filed a motion to dismiss the petition and, for the reasons discussed below, that motion is GRANTED.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner requested a fair hearing and the matter was transmitted to the OAL on July 7, 2010, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. The Commissioner transmitted Pittsgrove BOE's June 21, 2010, motion to dismiss the petition with the file. The matter was assigned to me on August 13, 2010.

On August 18, 2010, a conference call was arranged by me because no opposition to the motion to dismiss was received by this office. During the call, petitioner explained that she had recently filed a motion for emergent relief, stay, and expedited hearing [with the Commissioner] on or about August 6, 2010.

Indeed petitioner had not filed any opposition to Pittsgrove's June 21, 2010, motion to dismiss. Pittsgrove's motion could have been decided by me on the papers as unopposed on August 18, 2010. But since petitioner was pro se, the better course of action was to arrange a conference call in order to invite a response by petitioner; albeit out of time.

At the conclusion of the conference call it was determined that Pittsgrove's motion to dismiss would be considered prior to any other motions because Pittsgrove raised threshold challenges to the relief sought by petitioner. Moreover, Pittsgrove's motion to dismiss was pending for two months. And finally, petitioner's competing motions were not transmitted with the file nor filed with the OAL at the time of the call.

Petitioner's opposition to the motion to dismiss her petition was due August 30, 2010, and replies were due September 13, 2010. Elmer BOE joined in Pittsgrove's motion to dismiss. Pittsgrove's letter dated August 18, 2010, confirmed the discussions from the conference call.

On August 26, 2010, the Commissioner forwarded petitioner's motions for emergent relief, stay, and expedited hearing to me to be addressed as necessary.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Elmer and Pittsgrove Boards of Education have a send-receive relationship that dates back to 1976. (Affidavit of Stephen Berkowitz, Superintendent annexed to EBOE Answer). In 1976, Elmer sent its students in grades 9-12 to Pittsgrove. In 2003, the send-receive relationship was amended to include students in grade 5 to 8. Finally, in 2010, the send-receive relationship was further amended to include students in K-4. Elmer pays Pittsgrove tuition per child for its students that attend Pittsgrove.

In 2010, the EBOE became a non-operating district as a result of sending its entire student body to Pittsgrove. N.J.S.A. 18A:8-43. The arrangement was consensual and developed exclusively between the respective boards. The County Superintendent and Department of Education were also informed of this decision. Pittsgrove distributed a flyer that noted "Pittsgrove and Elmer will be expanding their current grade 5-12 send-receive relationship to include grades K-4 next year." prior to the 2010-2011 budget. The flyer further stated that, while the details of the relationship are still in the planning stages, the result for both towns would be additional funds and shared expertise and resources.

On April 27, 2010, Pittsgrove circulated a letter written by the Pittsgrove and Elmer Superintendents. The letter advised that the "Elmer and Pittsgrove Boards of Education recently agreed to enter into a full send-receive relationship." and described the details of the arrangement.

Petitioner alleges that the actions of both districts violate the law applicable to regionalization of school districts. Citing, N.J.S.A. 18A:13-34. Petitioner contends that the impact of the decision to have all of Elmer's students educated in Pittsgrove was a de facto regionalization because it would render the Elmer district a non-operating district. N.J.S.A. 18A:8-43. And regionalization must be effectuated by a referendum rather than by a vote by the respective the boards of education. This, according to petitioner, creates a new district and therefore requires Commissioner and voter approval.

APPLICABLE LAW

School districts that have the necessary accommodations may receive, or may be required to receive, pupils from another district not having sufficient accommodations in exchange for tuition. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8; English v. Bd. of Educ., 301 F.3d 69, (3d Cir. 2002). Send-receive relationships are subject to the supervision of the commissioner. Bd. of Ed. Merchantville v. Bd. of Ed. Township of Pennsauken, 204 N.J. Super. 508, 499 (App. Div. 1985). Elmer and Pittsgrove entered into a send-receive relationship in 1976. It was amended in 2003 and again in 2010. The 2010 amendment left the EBOE with no students within its district. All of the students are now sent to Pittsgrove.

The legislature promulgated N.J.S.A. 18A:8-43 to 51, in an effort to merge and consolidate small non-operating school districts for operational efficiency and cost cutting. The law became effective June 30, 2009, and if read literally, is only applicable to those small non-operating districts at the time of its passage. ("Non-operating district" means a school district that is not operating schools on the effective date [June 30, 2009]). Under this new law any district that is "non-operating" on the effective date of the legislation will be eliminated.

The county superintendent is charged with enacting the law. N.J.S.A. 18A:8-44. The superintendent's duties include:

> The determination shall be based on the district that is able to accommodate the merger with the least disruption to its finances and educational operations. In making the determination the executive county superintendent shall examine, but need not be limited to, the following factors: current sending-receiving relationships; the quality and effectiveness of educational programming and district operations; proximity of school districts; transportation costs; school building capacity; and special education needs.

DISCUSSION

Here, Elmer and Pittsgrove had a preexisting send-receive agreement dating back to 1976. That agreement was lawful pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8. Elmer and Pittsgrove decided to expand the existing send-receive relationship to include all students from Elmer, after the effective date (June 30, 2009) of the aforementioned legislation (N.J.S.A. 18A:8-43 et seq.). That action transformed the EBOE into a non-operating district as defined under N.J.S.A. 18A:8-43. Query whether the legislation was intended to eliminate only those small non-operating districts that existed prior to the passage of the law or was it intended to operate prospectively? Stated differently, could a district establish itself as a non-operating district after the passage of the legislation? It appears the statutory language was only directed to school districts that were "not operating schools on the effective date [June 30, 2009] of [N.J.S.A. 18A-43 et seq.]."

I CONCLUDE that Elmer and Pittsgrove BOEs were lawfully permitted to expand their send-receive relationship in 2010 to include grades K-4, resulting in Elmer now sending all of its students to Pittsgrove. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8. This event was not a regionalization under N.J.S.A. 18A:13-34. It was an exercise of managements' prerogative permitted in law. Therefore a referendum was not required. While I agree that Elmer is now a non-operating district because Pittsgrove receives all of Elmer's students, that action still does not equate to regionalization or de facto regionalization. The BOEs were lawfully permitted to proceed under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8 (the send-receive statute) rather than the regionalization statute N.J.S.A. 18A:13-34.

It remains unclear whether the Elmer BOE will even be eliminated after 2010 because of the vague language in the statute. The present action post-dates the effective date of the statute. Moreover a send-receive relationship only requires a five year commitment. N.J.S.A 18A:38-13.1. Therefore the respective BOEs might return to their former send-receive relationship, in whole or in part, at some time in the future.

Even if N.J.S.A. 18A:8-43 et seq. applies to Elmer and Pittsgrove, it would not invalidate their decision to expand their send-receive relationship for all students. There was no statute, regulation, or applicable authority cited by petitioner prohibiting Elmer and Pittsgrove from broadening their send-receive agreement to include all students in Elmer. On the contrary, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8 expressly permits such action.

The statute eliminating non-operating boards effective June 30, 2009, is silent on the topic of whether the receiving district will function as regional boards or as send-receive boards for other operational needs. The interworking of board membership, tuition calculations, tax assessments, lease arrangements, liquidation if necessary, as well as other necessary functions, either are not contested and/or are not properly before me at this time. These determinations are the next step in the process and must first be resolved by the local boards, county superintendent, or the Commissioner.

I further CONCLUDE that based upon my determinations set forth above, all other relief sought by petitioner is either moot or not ripe. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the petition must be DISMISSED. This includes petitioner's motion for expedited hearing, stay and emergent relief.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, Pittsgrove's motion to dismiss the action filed by petitioner is GRANTED. It is ORDERED that the action filed by petitioner is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY AND STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Dr. Wende L. Greenberg, (Dr. Greenberg) seeks indemnification of attorney's fees pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 for defense of criminal charges of which she was acquitted. The Law Offices of Alan L. Zegas (Zegas Firm) seeks fees and costs incurred in defending Dr. Greenberg. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on November 6, 2009, for a hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15. The hearing was scheduled for March 15 and March 16, 2010. The matter was converted to a telephone status conference on March 15, 2010, and the parties agreed to file motions and cross-motions for summary decisions. Petitioner filed a motion for summary decision on May 28, 2010. Respondent opposed the motion and filed a response and cross-motion for summary decision on June 3, 2010. Replies were received by June 17, 2010.

The issue presented is whether petitioners are entitled to reimbursement of legal fees and expenses pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

I have considered the pleadings and several exhibits submitted by the parties and FIND the following uncontroverted FACTS:

1. Petitioner Dr. Wende L. Greenberg is a tenured teacher at Ridgewood High School in the employ of the respondent.

2. The New Jersey Education Association (NJEA) and the Ridgewood Education Association (REA) are labor organizations representing the interests of various public school employees of the Ridgewood School District, including Dr. Greenberg.

3. Respondent Ridgewood School District Board of Education is a body corporate and politic having statutory responsibilities for the management and administration of the Ridgewood School District.

4. On July 24, 2007, a Complaint/Summons was issued to Dr. Greenberg in the Ridgewood Municipal Court, charging her under N.J.S.A. 2C:30-3(a) with fourth-degree theft of a cell phone belonging to Christopher Metzger, an employee at Ridgewood High School. The charge was later downgraded to a disorderly person's offense.

5. The alleged theft took place at Ridgewood High School on July 5, 2007, at a time when Dr. Greenberg was there on school business to collect student papers from her classroom.

6. According to the police report, the cell phone was taken from a table in the hallway outside of the Little Theater in Ridgewood High School on the afternoon of July 5, 2007, and was returned by a student, A.V.-Z., who Metzger claimed had found the phone outside the Little Theater doors.

7. Dr. Greenberg initially retained the law firm of Friedrich & Friedrich located in Ridgewood, New Jersey to represent her. She paid the sum of $2,849.55 to that firm for legal services.

8. Dr. Greenberg subsequently retained legal counsel through the NJEA's and REA's Legal Services Program. Under this program, the NJEA assigns the defense of school-related offenses to outside counsel at no cost to Dr. Greenberg.

9. The NJEA and REA through their Legal Services Program assigned Dr. Greenberg's defense to the Law Offices of Alan L. Zegas.

10. On August 22, 2008, the Honorable Richard J. Donohue, J.S.C., of the Superior Court of New Jersey, Law Division, Bergen County, granted Dr. Greenberg's motion to dismiss the charge on de minimis grounds pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:2-11.

11. In defending the charge against Dr. Greenberg, the Zegas Firm provided legal services that, at the firm's standard rates, would have been billed at $68,413.96.

12. However, the Zegas Firm charged the NJEA reduced rates. Therefore, the total amount actually paid to the Zegas Firm by the NJEA in this matter was $20,796.46.

13. By letter dated September 15, 2008, to Merlino, attorney for the Ridgewood Board, the Zegas Firm requested reimbursement of the legal fees incurred on behalf of Dr. Greenberg in defending against the charge.

14. Merlino, by letter dated September 18, 2008, first advised that the Board was refusing to pay. The Ridgewood Board subsequently referred the matter to an insurance carrier for an investigation that was never completed.

15. During the next eight months, the Zegas Firm and the NJEA repeatedly attempted, without success, to negotiate an amicable settlement of the dispute with the Ridgewood Board.

16. By letter to Merlino dated February 9, 2009, the Zegas Firm advised the Ridgewood Board that, as attempts to reach a good faith settlement had failed, petitioners had no choice but to pursue a remedy with the Commissioner of Education.

17. Dr. Greenberg subsequently filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education, which was received on June 10, 2009, seeking indemnification for the attorney's fees expended in defense of the charge against her which was subsequently dismissed.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

The rules governing motions for Summary Decision in an OAL matter are embodied in N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. These provisions mirror the language of R. 4:46-2 of the New Jersey Court Rules. See also Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 142 N.J. 520 (1995). Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), the motion for summary decision may be granted "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." The opposing party must submit responding affidavits showing that there is indeed a genuine issue of material fact, which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding, and that the moving party is not entitled to summary decision as a matter of law. Failure to do so, entitles the moving party to summary judgment. Brill, supra, 142 N.J. 520. Moreover, even if the non-moving party comes forward with some evidence, the courts must grant summary judgment if the evidence is "so one sided that [the moving party] must prevail as a matter of law." Id. at 536. If the non-moving party's evidence is merely colorable, or is not significantly probative, summary judgment should not be denied. See Bowles v. City of Camden, 993 F. Supp. 255, 261 (D.N.J. 1998). The New Jersey Supreme Court's standard for summary judgment is thus designed to "liberalize the standards so as to permit summary judgment in a larger number of cases" due to the perception that we live in "a time of great increase in litigation and one in which many meritless cases are filed." Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 539.

Petitioners aver that attorney fees were incurred in the defense of the criminal charge against Dr. Greenberg that arose out of the course of her employment and subsequently dismissed, thereby entitling the Zegas Firm to be reimbursed for costs and fees incurred on Dr. Greenberg's behalf.

Indemnity of officers and employees in certain criminal and quasi-criminal actions is governed by N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1. The statute provides, in relevant part, that:

> should any criminal or quasi-criminal action be instituted against any such person for any such act or omission and should such proceeding be dismissed or result in a final disposition in favor of such person, the board of education shall reimburse him for the cost of defending such proceeding, including reasonable counsel fees and expenses of the original hearing or trial and all appeals.
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1.]

N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 was interpreted by the New Jersey Supreme Court in Bower v. Board of Education of the City of East Orange (Bower I), 149 N.J. 419 (1997). The Bower court adopted a two-part standard, which dictates that board of education employees are entitled to indemnification of counsel fees and expenses incurred in the defense of criminal charges if they meet the following two requirements:

> 1. any act or omission on which the criminal charges are based must "arise out of and in the course of performance of the duties" of the position held by the employee, and
> 2. the charges must either be dismissed or result in a final disposition favorable to the employee.
> [Id. at 423.]

In Bower I, a teacher was charged with the sexual assault of three kindergarten students in a school bathroom during school hours. Id. at 419. Although the indictment was dismissed, the board of education that employed the teacher refused to indemnify him for his legal fees which resulted from defending the charges. After hearing the teacher's appeal, the State Board of Education remanded the case to an administrative law judge to determine whether the teacher had established "a nexus between the alleged conduct forming the basis of the charges and the performance of his duties in the district so as to support a finding that the criminal actions against him involved alleged acts or omissions arising out of and in the course of the performance of his duties" and a favorable disposition of the criminal charges. Id. at 421. The State Board sought to impose, as an additional requirement for indemnification that "specific testimony be presented by the claimant that rebuts the charges or explains their specific relationship to the claimant's performance of his assigned duties." Id. at 432. The Supreme Court rejected this contention and reasoned that the statute "requires mere proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the act on which the charges are predicated arose out of and in the course of performance of the duties of employment." Id. at 434. The Court illustrated that the State Board's supplemental requirement that specific testimony be presented by the claimant "is absent from the statute and has not been imposed by an administrative regulation adopted to supplement or clarify the statutory requirement for indemnification." Id. at 420-22.

Here, as was the case in Bower I, Dr. Greenberg has been charged with a crime committed during school hours on school premises. Dr. Greenberg is charged with the theft of a cellular telephone that was left unattended on a table in the main corridor of the hallway in which her classroom is located. The risk of a teacher being charged with the theft of an item left unattended in the school, which she would otherwise be expected to collect and report as lost, is of such a nature that the risk would be contemplated by a reasonable person when becoming a teacher. Similarly, the fact that Dr. Greenberg was on school grounds, during school hours, to collect student papers from her classroom directly lends itself to the conclusion that this risk is at least incidental, if not directly related to Dr. Greenberg's employment as a teacher.

I therefore CONCLUDE that the criminal charge against Dr. Greenberg arose out of and in the course of the performance of her position as a teacher in the Ridgewood School District.

The first requirement for reimbursement of attorney's fees for the purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 is that the charge arises out of the course of the teacher's employment. The Appellate Division in Bower, whose decision was subsequently affirmed by the New Jersey Supreme Court, explained that:

> the criminal charges, in order to arise "out of" the employment, must be of such nature the risk of which might have been contemplated by a reasonable person when entering the employment, as incidental to it. A risk is incidental to the employment when it belongs to or is connected with what a teacher has to do in fulfilling his contract of service.
> [Bower v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of E. Orange (Bower II), 287 N.J. Super. 15 (App. Div. 1996), aff'd, 149 N.J. 419 (1997).]

The Bower II court makes clear that Dr. Greenberg need not prove that her presence at the school was directly related to her employment in order to satisfy the requirement. The charge against her is at least incidental to her employment such that a reasonable teacher would expect to risk being charged with theft for performing the function of attempting to return a lost item. The charge against Dr. Greenberg arose out of her employment in the Ridgewood School District, thus satisfying the first requirement of the two-part test.

The second requirement for reimbursement of attorney's fees for the purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 is that the charge must either be dismissed or result in a final disposition favorable to that employee. The Appellate Division in Bower II articulated that dismissal of the indictment "constituted a favorable disposition." Bower II, supra, 287 N.J. Super. at 20. However, it is important to note that N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 exists in the disjunctive, requiring either dismissal of the charge or a final disposition favorable to the employee, and does not require both to exist in the conjunctive in order to satisfy the statute.

N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 does not require dismissal and a favorable disposition; it requires one or the other. The word "or" must be given meaning in a proper construction of the statute. As our Supreme Court has previously explained in determining the meaning of a statute, "'construction that will render any part of the statute inoperative, superfluous or meaningless, is to be avoided.'" Abbotts Dairies v. Armstrong, 14 N.J. 319, 328 (1954) (quoting Hoffman v. Hock, 8 N.J. 397, 406 (1952)). To construe "or," as it appears in the statute, to mean "and," would render the word "or" meaningless an inoperative. Therefore, all that is required of Dr. Greenberg is that she demonstrates the mere dismissal of the charge.

Notwithstanding the aforementioned, the Appellate Division in Bower II determined that in the context of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1, dismissal does indeed constitute a favorable disposition. Bower II, supra, 287 N.J. Super. at 20. Therefore, indemnification seems appropriate not only because the charge was dismissed, but also because the charge was disposed of in a final disposition favorable to Dr. Greenberg. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that both standards of the disjunctive test have been satisfied: the charge was dismissed, and the result was a final disposition favorable to the employee.

Respondent claims that petitioner Zegas lacks standing to recover attorney's fees because the firm does not represent Dr. Greenberg in the fee-recovery matter. Rather, the Zegas Firm was retained by the NJEA at no cost to Greenberg.

N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 provides for the indemnity of officers and employees of boards of education for the expenses incurred by that employee in defending against charges which are dismissed or result in a favorable disposition. In relevant part, the statute states that "the board of education shall reimburse [her] for the cost of defending such proceeding, including reasonable counsel fees and expenses of the original hearing or trial and all appeals." N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1. In light of the fact that petitioner Zegas Firm, and not Dr. Greenberg, brought this suit for payment under the statute, the within matter must be summarily dismissed as the statute only provides for the reimbursement of fees expended by the employee [herself]. The facts and circumstances of this case do not seem to fall within the purview of the statute.

The language of the statute appears to contemplate reimbursing only those costs actually borne by the employee. This conclusion is echoed by a case that seems to be dispositive to the issue before the court, Meisenbacher v. Board of Education of the City of Newark, 1 N.J.A.R. 162 (1980). In Meisenbacher, the attorney-at-law petitioner sought reimbursement from the respondent board of education for legal fees in relation to the representation of Ray James, a teacher and employee of the defendant. Analogous to the case at bar, the respondent in Meisenbacher refused payment because the "petitioner lacked standing under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6, in that only Ray James, the teacher, and not his attorney, may seek payment." Meisenbacher, supra, 1 N.J.A.R. at 163.

In examining N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6, which the court stated "must be read in conjunction with the remainder of the statute" the court held that it is clear that "the statute intends to repay officers and employees for legal expenses incurred in defending a civil action." Meisenbacher, supra, 1 N.J.A.R. at 164-165 (emphasis added). The court subsequently held that "the statute does not intend that a board of education shall directly pay counsel fees to an attorney." Id. at 165 (emphasis added). The court further articulated that if "the statute intended that attorneys, themselves, could apply to a board of education for payment of legal fees for services rendered, it would have said so." Ibid. Therefore, the court found that the petitioner law firm had no standing under the statute to bring suit for reimbursement of attorney's fees, and that "only Ray James, the teacher-employee, has such standing." Ibid.

In the within matter, the Zegas Firm, and not the teacher-employee Dr. Greenberg instituted this action for payment of legal fees under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1. The Zegas firm is the only petitioner in this matter seeking to recover fees as evidenced by the fact that in his Answers to Interrogatories. Zegas writes that "this office does not represent Dr. Greenberg in this matter."[1] In their petition of appeal, the Zegas Firm states that in defending the charge which underlies this matter, Dr. Greenberg paid the law firm of Friedrich & Friedrich a sum of $2,849.55.[2] This is the only reference to Dr. Greenberg's expenditure of any of her own funds in defending the underlying complaint. Thereafter, Dr. Greenberg subsequently retained legal counsel through the NJEA's Legal Services Program who assigned her to the Zegas firm. The firm provided legal services and incurred expenses valued at $68,413.96 based on the firm's standard rates. However, the Zegas Firm charged the NJEA reduced rates, so the total amount actually paid to the firm by the NJEA in this matter was $20,796.46. It has been admitted by the petitioner that Dr. Greenberg only expended the sum of $2,849.55 to her initial law firm of Friedrich & Friedrich, and has yet to incur any out-of-pocket expenses as a result of the work of the Zegas Firm.

For the aforementioned reasons, I CONCLUDE that the Zegas Firm does not have standing to request fees under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1. Analogous to the decision by the Meisenbacher court, only the employee of the board of education, and not the law firm who represented the employee, has standing to receive reimbursement for costs incurred in defending an action. Similarly, as a result of the fact that Dr. Greenberg has yet to incur any costs subsequent to those expended on the Friedrich firm, I further CONCLUDE that she is not entitled to reimbursement.

Based on the briefs, exhibits and certifications submitted, the undisputed facts illustrate that the petitioners are not entitled to indemnification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1, notwithstanding the fact that the attorney's fees incurred in defense of the criminal charge brought against Dr. Greenberg (1) arose out of and in the course of performance of the duties of her employment, and (2) that charge was indeed subsequently dismissed and resulted in a final determination favorable to her. See Bower I, supra, 149 N.J. 419. The petitioners do not have standing within the plain meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 to recover attorney's fees that have already been paid to the firm by the NJEA.

Petitioner – a long-time non-tenured security guard in respondent's district, who was non-renewed for the 2009-2010 school year – challenged the State-appointed monitor's rejection of the decision of the Pleasantville Board of Education to rehire petitioner following a Donaldson hearing. Petitioner alleged that the State-appointed monitor (Monitor) acted unlawfully in rejecting the Board's decision to rehire him, and seeks reinstatement to his position as of the beginning of the 2009-2010 school year and compensation for lost salary and emoluments.

The ALJ found that: the School District Fiscal Accountability Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-54 et seq., authorizes the Commissioner to appoint a state monitor whose scope of powers is delineated in Section (b) of the statute; the Monitor's actions are bound by the education laws; this case involves the non-renewal of a non-tenured staff member – ie: day-to-day operations involving personnel matters – and arises out of alleged inappropriate conduct that is wholly unrelated to the fiscal oversight duties of the Monitor; and neither the Monitor's contract or statute empowered him to overturn Rankin's reinstatement by the Board that was exercised at a Donaldson hearing, the right to which is granted under education law. The ALJ reversed the action of the Monitor in overruling the Board of Education, and ordered that petitioner be reinstated to his position effective August 11, 2009 and reimbursed for back pay, less mitigation.

Upon comprehensive review of the entire record in this matter, the Commissioner concluded that the Monitor did not exceed his statutory authority when he overturned the Board's decision to reinstate the petitioner, finding that the Monitor's decision was related to the fiscal management of school funds because it was based in part on concern that the Board would expose itself to potential legal liability if it knowingly reinstated a non-tenured employee who had evidenced inappropriate behavior in the past. Accordingly, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision of the OAL and affirmed the decision of the Monitor not to renew petitioner's employment.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF PLEASANTVILLE, ATLANTIC COUNTY and JAMES RIEHMAN, STATE-APPOINTED MONITOR OR SUCH OTHER MONITOR CURRENTLY ASSIGNED TO THE PLEASANTVILLE SCHOOL DISTRICT,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
	:	DECISION
RESPONDENTS.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by James Riehman, State-Appointed Monitor ("Monitor"), and the respective replies thereto filed by the petitioner and the Pleasantville Board of Education (Board).

The Monitor submitted exceptions to support his contention that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously concluded that the Monitor did not have the authority to overturn the Board's decision to reinstate the petitioner, a non-tenured security guard, after his Donaldson hearing. The Monitor initially takes exception to several factual findings made by the ALJ, arguing that the ALJ generally failed to make findings of fact that encompassed the totality of the evidence presented during the hearing. The Monitor specifically contends that the ALJ erred in finding that: the petitioner has a good relationship with the remaining students; the ALJ's factual analysis of the Monitor's rationale for overturning the Board's vote fails to reflect the testimony; and the ALJ failed to consider the testimony of assistant principal Hyman-Medley. In his exceptions, the Monitor states that he acted within his authority to override the Board based upon his concern that petitioner has engaged in inappropriate conduct and that his continued employment was not in the interest of the district or the students.

In addition to the factual exceptions, the Monitor also takes exceptions to the legal conclusions reached by the ALJ. The Monitor argues that: the ALJ erred in finding that the Monitor acted outside the scope of his contract; the failure of the Monitor to be involved in the Superintendent's decision not to renew petitioner's employment contract is irrelevant to whether the Monitor exceeded his powers; the ALJ erred in finding that the Monitor does not have the authority to make personnel decisions after a non-renewed employee exercises his rights to a Donaldson hearing before the Board; the ALJ incorrectly found that the Monitor did not consider any fiscal factors in overturning the Board's decision; the Judge improperly substituted his judgment for that of the Monitor; and the ALJ's legal conclusion misinterprets the governing law and frustrates the purpose of the School District Fiscal Accountability Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-54 et seq. ("Fiscal Accountability Act"). In his exceptions, the Monitor generally maintains that – given the petitioner's non-tenured status – he had broad authority to overturn the Board's decision because the Fiscal Accountability Act explicitly grants the Monitor authority over staffing matters, including the ability to hire, promote and terminate employees. Finally, the Monitor argues that the adoption of the Initial Decision would significant weaken the role of the state monitor.

The Board and the petitioner both submitted reply exceptions that contained similar arguments in response to the Monitor's exceptions. In their replies, the Board and the petitioner urged the adoption of the Initial Decision, and cite testimony from the hearing transcripts to support the factual findings made by the ALJ. The Board and the petitioner further maintain that the statutory power given to the Monitor under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55 relating to the ability to make staffing and personnel decisions is subject to the education laws and regulations. The Board and the petitioner also emphasize that the Monitor acted beyond the scope of his authority because his decision to overturn the Board was not fiscally motivated. Finally, the Board and the petitioner argue that it was not the intent of the legislature to grant the Monitor the unfettered power to make decisions on issues that do not involve fiscal duties or responsibilities.

Upon a comprehensive review of the entire record in this matter, which included the transcripts of the two hearing dates conducted at the OAL on May 11 and June 11, 2010, the Commissioner finds that the Monitor did not exceed his statutory authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55 when he overturned the Board's decision to reinstate the petitioner. Pursuant to the Fiscal Accountability Act, the Commissioner is authorized to appoint a state monitor to oversee the fiscal management and expenditures of school district funds when an independent audit reveals the existence of certain financial shortfalls that are delineated in the Act. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(a) and (b). Additionally, there is no doubt that the state monitors have the power to make personnel decisions for non-tenured staff members, when those decisions are necessary to solve the district's fiscal or audit deficiencies. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55. Further, in order to achieve fiscal stability, state monitors have the authority to override a vote of the board of education. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(5).

In this case, the petitioner's employment was initially not renewed based on the fact that he made inappropriate comments toward female students. The Monitor testified that one of the reasons why he overrode the Board's decision to reinstate the petitioner was related to potential liability for the Board in connection with the reinstatement of the petitioner.

(1T114:17-115:4, 1T116:2-13). The Monitor was concerned that there would be similar issues with the students in the future, and that the Board would then be at risk for legal liability for reinstating petitioner knowing that there was evidence of inapprop riate behavior in the past. (Id.). Certainly, the exposure to potential legal liability for a school district that is plagued with financial shortcomings is a valid fiscal rationale for making a personnel decision regarding a non-tenured staff member. Therefore, the Commissioner finds that the Monitor's decision was related to the fiscal management of school funds, and thus falls within the statutory authority of a state monitor.

It is important to recognize that the Commissioner's decision in this case does not afford the state monitors more power than is statutorily provided by the Fiscal Accountability Act. State monitors do not have unfettered power to make decisions for the district that are not grounded in fiscal accountability; rather, the state monitors must continue to have fiscal or financial concerns or motivations in order to appropriately overturn a Board's decision.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is rejected; and the Monitor's decision not to renew the petitioner's employment is hereby affirmed.

Record Closed: July 23, 2010 Decided: August 3, 2010

BEFORE W. TODD MILLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Denzel Rankins (Rankins or petitioner), a non-tenured security officer with the Pleasantville Board of Education (District or Board), was non-renewed for the 2009-2010 school. Rankins had been employed with the District for over ten years. Rankins requested a Donaldson hearing and prevailed upon the Board to reinstate him. The monitor overturned the Board's decision to reinstate Rankins for reasons unrelated to correction of fiscal or financial deficiencies. For the reasons set forth below, I CONCLUDE that the monitor exceeded his authority as outlined in the statute establishing the monitor's powers and further established in education law.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner requested a fair hearing and the matter was received by the OAL on November 12, 2009, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. The matter was heard on May 11, 2010. The hearing proceeded on that date and the record closed on July 23, 2010, after receipt of post-hearing briefs.

JOINT STIPULATION OF FACTS

1. The Pleasantville Board of Education is a body corporate and politic of the State of New Jersey empowered by law to administer the Pleasantville School District.

2. James Riehman held the position of State Monitor for the Pleasantville School District from July 1, 2009, through September 30, 2009. He currently holds that position, having assigned to it from March 23, 2010, through March 30, 2011. James Riehman was/is assigned by the Commissioner of Education to that position under the School District Financial Accountability Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-54, et seq.

3. Petitioner was a security officer employed by the Board during the 2008-2009 school year. He had been a security officer employed by the Board of approximately 10 years. Prior to that, he was employed in other positions for the Board.

4. In or about January/February 2009, allegations of abuse were made against petitioner by two students in connection with two separate incidents. Petitioner was suspended with pay while the allegations were pending. It was alleged that petitioner made inappropriate comments of a sexual nature to the students. Petitioner denied the allegations.

5. The Institutional Abuse Investigation Unit from the Department of Children and Families was contacted and conducted an investigation of the matter. (JT-1;JT-2)

6. After investigating the matter, the Institutional Abuse Investigation Unit, on March 12, 2009, issued communications to petitioner and the Superintendent of Schools. Those communications are attached hereto and speak for themselves (JT1 and 2). It is agreed that those communications be deemed confidential and are submitted herewith with the understanding that they are to be placed under seal and thereby closed to the public pursuant to N.J.S.A. 9:6-8.10a and N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.1.

7. The Board conducted its own investigation. The letter dated June 2, 2009, addressed to petitioner, a copy of which is annexed hereto, speaks for itself (JT3).

8. The petitioner responded by letter dated June 2009. The letter is annexed and speaks for itself (JT4).

9. On or about July 14, 2009, petitioner with counsel appeared before the Board in closed session. State-Appointed Monitor James Riehman was present during that meeting. The Board meeting minutes for that date are annexed (JT5).

10. On or about July 28, 2009, the Board voted with regard to petitioner's reinstatement. State-Appointed Monitor James Riehman was present during that meeting. The Board meeting minutes for that date are annexed (JT6).

11. On August 11, 2009, the Pleasantville Board of Education again met and, at that time, took a formal vote with regard to reinstating petitioner. The motion was brought by Board member McClellan and seconded by Board member Sanchez. The vote was six in favor of rehiring him and three against rehiring him. The motion carried. State-Appointed Monitor James Riehman was present during that meeting. The Board meeting minutes for that date are annexed (JT7).

12. On August 25, 2009, the Pleasantville Board of Education met at which time State-Appointed Monitor James Riehman was present. Mr. Riehman stated that he was officially overriding the Pleasantville Board of Education's decision to reinstate petitioner. The Board meeting minutes for that date are annexed (JT8).

SUMMARY OF OTHER TESTIMONY AND STATEMENTS

Monitor James Riehman

James Riehman held the position of State Monitor for the Pleasantville School District from July 1, 2009, through September 30, 2009. On August 25, 2009, Riehman voted to overturn the Board's decision to reinstate Rankins. The foundation for Riehman's decision to override the Board was explained as follows:

> Q. And what did he do in terms of repeated harassment of this middle school female student?
>
> A. To my knowledge, he referred to various body parts or he indicated sexual innuendo. I don't have the specific language, so I can't answer that. I wasn't a witness to that.
>
> Q. Well, when you say, "body parts," I mean, we're adults here. What body parts?

A. I don't – okay. Let's put it this way. I got information second hand basically from the Donaldson hearing. If you have the minutes of the Donaldson hearing, then that's really where it came from.

Q. Well, I'm asking you what information you got from the Donaldson hearing. What do you recall about the information that you got? What did Mr. Rankins do?

A. He essentially sexually harassed this individual student or students.

THE COURT: He's asking for specificity.

THE WITNESS: I don't have specificity. I don't have the notes. I don't have the information, so I can't do that.

* * *

Q. Okay. And the basis for what you're reporting to the Commissioner of Education is that he repeatedly harassed a middle school female student, correct?

A. Right.

Q. That was all the information that you had.

A. That's all the information I can testify to. The other witnesses may testify otherwise.

1T58-60

Riehman reported to the Commissioner's office once per week as required. In an August 24, 2008, e-mail to Joan Saylor, Assistant Commissioner of Education Riehman indicates, "This employee should have been charged with sexual harassment or sexual misconduct. He repeatedly harassed a middle school female student." (P-11). This comment formed the basis of Riehman's decision to overturn the Board's decision made during the Donaldson hearing.

Security Officer Quana Barnes

Quana Barnes is a security officer at the Pleasantville High School. On January 14, 2009, she was at the front desk. Barnes overheard comments between Rankins and A.V. During her testimony it became apparent that Barnes heard only portions of the conversation. While she was seated at the front desk, she observed and heard Rankins come up from behind A.V. and say "Are you scared of a real man?" and "You want a boy, you're scared of a real challenge". Barnes was not aware that just prior to those comments A.V. was showing Rankins pictures of her boyfriend. A.V. is a twelfth grader and her boyfriend was an eleventh grader. In the context of the conversation, Rankins was referring to A.V. dating a younger man.

Barnes also was not aware of A.V.'s statement wherein A.V. indicated that she and Rankins were acting in a playful manner and she was not offended by the conversation (R-4b).

Barnes provided the school administration with a statement of what she believed was harassment of a student. Her statement provides:

> While at the front desk on Jan. 14 at around 1:10 pm, I witness Officer Rankins approach [A.V.] from behind, saying to her you scared of a real man you want a boy, you scared of a real challenge yea you don't want a man. As I looked up I asked her to be sure of what I heard what did he say after confirming she stated that he has been saying things to her and what should she do I told her that she needed to speak with her administrator as so she did. The next day I went and spoke to Miss Medley about the situation also.

Barnes performed no investigation, made no inquiry of the student or the declarant. Barnes assumed that Rankins was "making a pass" at the student when she heard him make statement such as you're "scared of a real man you want a boy, you scared of a real challenge, yea you don't want a man." As she explained during the hearing she may have misunderstood the context of the conversation.

Q. Again, why not talk to Mr. Rankins? I'm just curious of he's a co-worker and you have a good relationship with him, why not talk to him?

A. Because I was shocked that he would say something like that. Honestly, I was shocked.

Q. Even if it was in a joking sense?

A. Everything in a joke is not always good –

Q. I understand.

A. -- when dealing with children, so I was shocked.

Q. And you didn't know he'd seen a picture of her boyfriend?

A. No.

Q. That precipitated that? Did you know he was talking about her boyfriend?

A. I just know that he said it was scared of a real man. "You scared of a challenge." So, no, I didn't know she was – no.

Q. He was – but you didn't know he was referring to a 12th grader dating an 11th grader when he said that?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Does that make a difference to you?

A. It would make a heck of a difference, but that's not how it approached. That's not how it came to me. That's not how –

2T77-78

Statement of A.V.

A.V. did not testify at any of the hearings involved. She did provide two written statements that state:

> He asked to see my phone and said who's that and I said that's my boo and said what grade is he in and I said he a baby he's only in the 11th and then he said oh he a baby so you aint ready for no man you can't handle a challenge. I said watch your mouth that's still my boo and he was like yea yea I know you scared of a challenge.

>
> When Mr. Rankins approached me and made certain comments I took it in a playful manner. All of us students joke around with the security guards so when this incident happen I didn't get in a offensive mood because I didn't think nothing of it. Ms. Barnes who was standing close by influenced me to tell Mrs. Medley because she said if I don't tell she would tell.

Another student, T.J., accused Rankins of inappropriate statements in December 2008.

Statement of T.J.

> I, [ ], have experienced many problems with Mr. Rankins. He has been giving me nasty comments and looks lately, well forever but now its just getting seriously bad. Not so long ago, he came towards me when I was waiting outside the café, and said "what happened to you..in 8th grade prom picture you had a better body then you do now. Another example if I was walking in the hall he would stare at me until I said anything. Also yesterday 12/11/08 I was in Mrs. Delaney classroom during first period and he came in by the door while Mrs. Delaney was holding it for someone. I felt him staring at me and I was right. I looked up and seen him eyeing me. I tried to ignore it but he wouldn't stop so I asked him "what are you looking at. He didn't say nothing but smile and wink at me. So this time I yelled it at him. He answered "I wasn't looking at you. I was looking at Ms. Aalyah [ ]. I was like [unreadable]. Said what you mad because she looks better and have a better body. I started to [unreadable] him really feel so uncomfortable around him.

> He makes me scared to walk through the halls by myself thinking he's going to pop out of nowhere.
> (R-6B).

Denzel Rankins

Rankins admitted making the statement to A.V. that "he's just a baby" after looking at a cell phone picture of her boyfriend. On cross-examination, Rankins denies making any other statement to A.V. that would be considered inappropriate. 1T 215-217.

With regard to T.J., Rankins testified he barely ever saw this student. T.J. was in eleventh or twelfth grade. Rankins recalled a prior occasion when his cell phone was either stolen or misplaced on a bus ride home. The next day Rankins' cell phone was thrown out the window of the bus from where T.J. was sitting, while Rankins exited the bus. 1T161. He was not sure who actually took his cell phone or who threw it out the bus window. On December 9, 2008, Rankins was in the high school hallway and T.J. said "go suck some dick." 1T164. Rankins told T.J,. she had a very nasty mouth. Id. Rankins denied any further contact with T.J.

The T.J. matter was resolved on December 22, 2008, with a written warning. (R-6a). Rankins and Stephen Townsend had a meeting. Townsend concluded Rankins made inappropriate statements. Townsend did not testify.

Character Witnesses

Derrick Carrington, Athletic Director, Irvin Doris, Security Officer, and Jean Hovey, union representative all testified as to Rankins' good character. They all recalled specific instances where petitioner helped students as well as other staff members. Rankins is known to go the extra-yard for students in need. He has been seen chastising males student grabbing the buttocks of female students in the hallway, giving students lunch money out of his own pocket, cleaning up after food fights, breaking up fights and coaxing students to cool off before fighting.

FINDING OF FACTS

1. Rankins made some form of inappropriate statements to either T.J. or A.V.

2. Rankins was a non-turned staff member who was non-renewed for the 2009-2010 school year because of his inappropriate contact with T.J. and A.V.

3. Rankins was employed with the District for over ten years, has a good employment record, is well liked by other teaching staff members, and has a good relationship with the remaining students.

4. Rankins explained the nature, extent and context of his conduct to the Board at his Donaldson hearing.

5. On August 11, 2009, the Board exercised its statutory authority under education law at a Donaldson hearing and reinstated Rankins.

6. On August 25, 2009, the monitor overturned the Board's decision to reinstate Rankins for reasons that were not connected to solving the district's fiscal or audit deficiencies. The monitor did not want Rankins reinstated for reasons exclusively related to Rankins' alleged conduct.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

The School District Fiscal Accountability Act authorizes the Commissioner of Education to appoint a state monitor when an independent audit concludes that two of the following circumstances have occurred:

1. The district ends the fiscal year with a deficit balance.

2. The district receives a qualified opinion by its independent auditor.

3. The district receives an adverse, disclaimer, or qualified opinion by its independent auditor.

4. Findings by its independent auditor identified as material weaknesses in internal controls.

5. The district fails to develop and implement a plan acceptable to the commissioner or his designee to address a potential or actual deficit balance.

6. The district fails to implement a plan making the appropriate corrections as delineated in the prior year's audit.

7. The district is required to return federal funds that were not disburse in accordance with a grant.

8. The district submits the annual audit after the submission date.

N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(a).

Section (b) of the statute delineates the scope of the monitor's powers. It provides:

> The State monitor shall:
>
> (1) oversee the fiscal management and expenditures of school district funds, including, but not limited to, budget reallocations and reductions, approvals of purchase orders, budget transfers, and payment of bills and claims;
>
> (2) oversee the operation and fiscal management of school district facilities, including the development and > implementation of recommendations for redistricting and restructuring of schools;

>
> (3) ensure development and implementation of an acceptable plan to address the circumstances set forth in subsection a. of this section which resulted in the appointment of the State monitor. The plan shall include measurable benchmarks and specific activities to address the deficiencies of the school district;
>
> (4) oversee all district staffing, including the ability to hire, promote, and terminate employees;
>
> (5) have authority to override a chief school administrator's action and a vote by the board of education on any of the matters set forth in this subsection, except that all actions of the State monitor shall be subject to the education, labor, and employment laws and regulations, including the "New Jersey Employer-Employee Relations Act," P.L.1941, c.100 (C.34:13A-1 et seq.), and collective bargaining agreements entered into by the school district;
>
> (6) attend all meetings of the board of education, including closed sessions; and
>
> (7) meet with the board of education on at least a quarterly basis to discuss with the members of the board the past actions of the board which led to the appointment of the State monitor and to provide board members with education and training that address the deficiencies identified in board actions.

Riehman's contract contains a provision related to termination of non-tenured staff members. Paragraph 6 states:

> 6. Oversee all district staffing with the ability to hire, promote and terminate the employment of employees. This includes recommendation and oversight of any sick-leave buyout or other retirement incentive program presented to the board, and any reduction-in-force of tenured personnel or issuance of termination notices for non-tenured teaching staff in response to the school redistricting and restructuring plan;

Id.

The issue here is whether the monitor exceeded his authority by overruling a Board decision made at a Donaldson hearing. Donaldson v. Board of Educ. of North Wildwood, 65 N.J. 236, 240-41 (1974). The monitor's actions are bound or limited by education laws. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(5). A Donaldson hearing arises when a non-tenured staff member is non-renewed for the following contract year. The staff member's right to a Donaldson hearing is codified at N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1. This statute states in part:

> An officer or employee whose employment contract is not renewed shall have the right to a written statement of reasons for nonrenewal pursuant to section 2 of P.L.1975, c.132 (C.18A:27-3.2) and to an informal appearance before the board. The purpose of the appearance shall be to permit the staff member to convince the members of the board to offer reemployment.

Rankins was employed by the District as a security officer for about ten years. He held other titles before he became a security officer. The superintendent determined to non-renew Rankins for the 2009-2010 school year, due to alleged conduct violations. On June 2, 2009, Superintendent Alston confirmed that it was Rankins' alleged conduct that formed the basis of his decision to non-renew him. (JT-3). Thus, the monitor was not involved in the initial decision to let Rankins go. The decision was exclusively a Board matter at this juncture.

On June __, 2009 Rankins responded to Superintendent Alston. Rankins disputed the Superintendent's conclusions. (JT-4). Indeed Rankins requested a [Donaldson] hearing before the Board to address matters that were entirely unrelated to fiscal or audit matters. School law permits Rankins to make a presentation before the Board, "to convince the members of the board to offer reemployment." Id.

On August 11, 2009, Rankins appeared before the Board for his Donaldson hearing. Riehman and Alston were present. After a presentation, the Board voted to reinstate Rankins (6 in favor and 3 against). Rankins exercised his rights under education law and the Board performed it statutory duty. N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1.

Riehman was adamantly against Rankins being rehired, as indicated in his email to Joan Saylor, supra. Riehman believed Rankins repeatedly harassment or sexual harassment a middle school student. (P-11). But Riehman's grasp of the facts were vague and limited. 1T58-58. Riehman did not interview any of the students. He had no firsthand information. He incorrectly concluded one of the students was in middle school. Middle school students are substantially younger. The student(s) were in high school. Riehman had no details to support the allegation of repeated harassment. Indeed, none of the victims testified at the Donaldson hearing or at any other hearing. And the initial statement of security officer Quana Barnes was predicated upon a misunderstanding, as came out during her testimony in this proceeding. Barnes only heard a small part of the conversation between Rankins and A.V. And Barnes made mistaken conclusions about their conversation. 2T78. Consequently Riehman's understanding of events may have been unduly influenced by Barnes' written statements. Once these statements were challenged as part of an adversarial proceeding, the nature and context changed significantly.

Cross-examination is a vital tool in extracting the untold story. Neither A.V. nor T.J was subject to any examination. Their statements were entirely hearsay. And Rankins denies the allegations contained therein. This does not mean Rankins' statements were appropriate or proper. But they were not as pervasive, were not made to middle school children, and had a different context once more facts were closely examined.

More importantly, none of Riehman's reasons relate to fiscal, audit, or similar matters contained in his contract or found in the monitor statute. For example, Riehman's reasons were not related to redistricting or restructuring non-tenured staff, reduction in force, sick-leave, retirement incentives or other fiscal related areas.

There is no clear line between the powers granted to the monitor or those retained by the Board when a monitor has been appointed. Obviously the monitor holds greater authority in matters that are fiscal in nature. Indeed it was a poor audit that trigged the appointment of the monitor. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(a) and (b). And the criteria to invoke the monitor's statute and the criteria embodied within the powers granted to the monitor are almost universally geared towards correcting the (fiscal) problems identified in the annual audit of the district. In other words, the scope of the monitor's power is directly linked to the audit. And his chief responsibility is to correct the deficiencies identified in the audit.

This is an isolated case involving the non-renewal of a non-tenured staff member which does not fall within the audit. This case concerns day-to-day operations involving personnel matters. A non-renewal arising out of alleged improper behavior is not a fiscal matter envisioned under the monitor powers as proscribed in his contract or statute. Here Rankins was being non-renewed for alleged inappropriate conduct on the job. The monitor's contractual power to impact a non-tenured staff member's contractual employment is limited to redistricting or restructuring plan, reductions in force, and other similar actions that address the overall financial integrity of the district. (See, monitor's contract P-1, ¶ 6). I CONCLUDE that neither the monitor's contract or statute empowered him to overturn Rankins' reinstatement by the Board that was exercised at a Donaldson hearing.

Finally a non-tenured staff member has a statutory right under education law to appear before the Board in an attempt to regain his position, when non-renewed. N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1. The monitor's powers are expressly subject to education law. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(5). It follows then that the monitor's powers are restrained by education law that are outside fiscal matters. Therefore, when Rankins appeared before the Board at his Donaldson hearing, Rankins was properly exercising his educational rights, granted by statute, which cannot be disturbed by the monitor. Once the Board reinstated Rankins, the Monitor had no authority to overturn the Board's determination. Otherwise the monitor's actions contravene the very statute authorizing his appointment that expressly limits his authority, when education law is involved.

N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(5). And the monitor's contract expressly limits his authority in regard to non-tenured staff members. (P-1, ¶ 6). I CONCLUDE that Rankins and the Board properly exercised their rights and responsibilities under education law, and as such, the monitor lacks authority to overturn such action.

The monitor is not totally powerless notwithstanding the Donaldson process codified under education law. A Donaldson hearing is not a basis to circumvent the powers of the monitor when the monitor initiates and pursues fiscal action. If the monitor restructured or RIF'd non-tenured staff for fiscal reasons, a Donaldson hearing would not be a means for a staff member's reinstatement, regardless of the Board's decision at a Donaldson hearing. Pleasantville Board of Educ. and the Pleasantville Educ. Ass'n v. State Dep't of Educ., et al. No. A-2123-08T3 (App. Div. August 25, 2009) (where the court held that a RIF imposed by the monitor could not be rejected by the Board).

The circumstances here are legally and factually distinguishable from Pleasantville Board of Educ. and the Pleasantville Educ. Ass'n v. State Dep't of Educ., supra. Rankins' case was not initiated by the monitor. The monitor was not acting under his contract or statute. Rankins was essentially being fired by the superintendent. It was ordinary school board business from outset. The monitor merely intervened in the process for non-fiscal reasons. The monitor's understanding of the events, by his own admission, was vague and unclear. 1T57-60. Security officer Barnes, the primary witness and reporter of the A.V. incident, admittedly misunderstood parts of the A.V. event. 2T78.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, I ORDER that the action of the monitor overruling the Board of Education is REVERSED and that petitioner Rankins shall be reinstated to his position as a security officer, effective August 11, 2009. Petitioner shall be entitled to back pay from August 11, 2009, to the date of his reinstatement. The amount of back pay shall be reduced and mitigated to the extent of any income earned or that could have been earned by petitioner during this period. Proof of income shall be submitted by or on behalf of petitioner to the Board of Education within thirty (30) days of issuance of this decision. The parties shall make a good faith effort to resolve any dispute as to the amount of back pay. However, under no circumstances should the petitioner's reinstatement be delayed pending resolution of any potential back pay.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF ENRICA MERCORELLI, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF LINDEN, UNION COUNTY.	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

Tenure charges were brought against respondent Mercorelli, a tenured health teacher, in the wake of her decision to instruct her class about the demeaning effect of certain language used by students in the district's schools. In the course of instruction, she specifically articulated the offending words, disconcerting several students and their parents.

The Acting Commissioner agrees with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that respondent's behavior was a breach of professionalism which, however, does not warrant termination and loss of tenure. Similarly, the Acting Commissioner concurs with the penalty which the ALJ recommended be imposed upon respondent. Accordingly, respondent will forfeit 120 calendar days of pay pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, forego an increment for the 2010-2011 school year and successfully complete pedagogical coursework – before the end of 2011 – that addresses classroom demeanor and the proper boundaries between school instruction and parental guidance. Such coursework shall be subject to reasonable review and approval by the petitioning Board of Education.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[1]

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF ENRICA MERCORELLI, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF LINDEN, UNION COUNTY.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning Board filed tenure charges of conduct unbecoming, insubordination and other just cause against respondent Enrica Mercorelli – a tenured health teacher – alleging that her conduct in the presence of students on November 19, 2009 failed to comport with the reasonable expectations of behavior for a tenured employee. The charges stem from a spontaneous lecture delivered by respondent to her middle school health class which aimed to teach students that the use of inappropriate and obscene words was demeaning to the user as well as the recipient, and that the use of such words was disrespectful to both parties. In the course of this lesson, respondent allegedly used words that were unacceptable for a teacher to say in a classroom, in the presence of students. The petitioning Board sought revocation of respondent's tenure and termination of her employment.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: on November 19, 2009, respondent – in the context of an unplanned lecture prompted by the rudeness of some of her students – recited a list of words that have no place in the classroom; respondent had no proper basis to advocate against the use of four-letter words, anatomical words, and slang references to same by actually stating each word or phrase to her students; though her goal may have been worthwhile, respondent's behavior clearly went beyond the boundaries of her professional responsibilities and constitutes unbecoming conduct. The ALJ concluded that, while her conduct was certainly unprofessional, it did not rise to a level that would justify terminating her tenure and career. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that respondent forfeit 120 days of pay and one year's salary increment, and that she complete coursework in pedagogy that addresses the boundaries between a teacher's instructional jurisdiction and issues properly in the province of parental guidance and control, as well as professional classroom demeanor.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 41-3/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF ENRICA MERCORELLI, BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF LINDEN, UNION COUNTY.

Record Closed: August 9, 2010 Decided: September 13, 2010

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

Enrica Mercorelli is a tenured teacher employed by the Linden Board of Education. The Board filed tenure charges against her with the Commissioner of the Department of Education, alleging that her conduct in the presence of students on November 19, 2009, failed to comport with the reasonable expectations that adhere to the status of tenured employee and that as a result, her tenure should be removed. The Board certified the charges on January 19, 2010, but the charges were not forwarded to the Commissioner until March 5, 2010. Mercorelli filed an Answer to the charges on March 8 and on March 18, 2010, the Commissioner transmitted the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing. On June 2, 2010, the parties and their counsel appeared before this judge in Newark and advised that they intended to reach a stipulation on the facts of the matter and submit the same to me, supplementing the stipulation with briefs. The Stipulation of Facts was received on July 8, 2010. The briefs were received on July 29 and 30; reply briefs were received on August 9, 2010, on which date the record closed.

PRELIMINARY COMMENTS AND FINDINGS

The essential issue of this case is whether Ms. Mercorelli's acknowledged use of a particular set of words in her sixth grade classroom on November 19, 2009, was so inappropriate in nature and context as to rise to the level of a violation of professional standards and expectations, such as to amount to misconduct, incompetence and/or insubordination, as charged by the Board, and whether, if the actions do rise to such level, the proper outcome is the removal of tenure, as urged by the Board, or some lesser disciplinary sanction, as Mercorelli believes to be the more appropriate outcome. While in their briefs the parties dispute the meaning of some of the actions that occurred, in the end these disputes do not affect the conclusion that, given the stipulated facts, there is no doubt whatsoever that Ms. Mercorelli acted in a manner inconsistent with her professional responsibilities and engaged in professional misconduct. However, unless any act of professional misconduct be deemed as necessarily establishing incompetence, I do not find her action to be indicative of that level of abysmal professional standing. Finally, I find no evidence of insubordination, as there is no evidence of her refusal to obey any command, directive or request, other than the more generalized demands of her status as a professional educator. In view of these findings, after listing the Stipulations, this decision will address the sanctions issue, including the parties' contentions as to the impact of the circumstances in which the misconduct occurred.

The Stipulation of Fact, which is adopted as a set of FINDINGS OF FACT, reads as follows:

> 1. The Linden Board of Education (hereinafter referred to as the "Board") is a public employer within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 34: 13A-I, et seq.
>
> 2. Enrica Mercorelli (hereinafter referred to as "Respondent") is employed by the Board as a tenured teaching staff member.

3. For the 2009/2010 school year, Respondent was assigned to work at McManus Middle School as a health teacher for grades six, seven and eight.

4. November 19, 2009 was the first day of the second marking period.

5. On November, 19. 2009, during Respondent's eleventh period Health class, Respondent began class by explaining classroom procedures. A student asked whether they would have homework, to which another student responded effectively saying "shut up, what are you stupid?" or "shut up and we will find out."

6. In response to the student's comment, Respondent began lecturing the entire class about self-respect.

7. Prior to instructing her students on the "words" that should never be used by people who had self-respect, Respondent asked the students whether or not they had cell phones.

8. When the students responded by a show of hands, Respondent instructed the students to turn off their phones and place the cell phones on their desks.

9. Respondent also advised the students that, as a teacher, she was not permitted to curse, so she removed her identification badge prior to delivering her explicit lecture on words that she did not want to hear in the class room.

10. Only after Respondent ensured that all of the cellular telephones were turned off and she had removed her badge did she begin to deliver her lecture on "self-respect".

11. During the afternoon of November 19. 2009, the parent of L.A., one of the students in Respondent's eleventh period Health Class, reported that her child had revealed to her the contents of Respondent's lesson that day and that she was troubled by such comments.

12. After receiving the report from L.A.'s mother, Principal John S. Kolibas questioned L.A. regarding what had happened during Respondent's class.

13. L.A. reported that Respondent had set forth an explicit and vulgar list of words that she believed self-respecting individual do not use, such as "God damn, asshole and other words relating to sex such as tits and balls".

14. Following L.A.'s report, a second student J.J. was questioned about the events that transpired during the eleventh period Health Class on November 19, 2009.

15. J.J. corroborated L,A.'s report of Respondent's lecture, adding that Respondent specifically used the words "shit", "hell", "damn", 'titties" and "dick".

16. Both L.A. and J.J. indicated that they were extremely uncomfortable about what had transpired in class.

17. Based upon the statements of L.A. and J.J., Respondent, in the presence of her union representative, Respondent was questioned by Mr. Kolibas regarding the events occurring in her eleventh period class on November 19, 2009.

18. Respondent confirmed that in response to a student saying "shut up," she lectured the class on words that should never be said by the students if they respected themselves.

19. On November 20, 2009, Respondent provided Mr. Kolibas with a written statement, memorializing what had transpired in her class on the previous day. See Exhibit A.

20. In her statement, when asked to write down the words that she used, Respondent reported that she had said the following words: "fuck, suck, tits, ass, balls, dick, cunt, shit, pussy, dam (sic), asshole. God-dam (sic), fuck you," to the 12 and 13 year old students of her eleventh period class that same day. See Exhibit A.

21. As a result of her conduct. Respondent was immediately suspended, with pay, pending a further investigation. See Exhibit B.

22. Respondent subsequently sent an electronic mail message to Mi. Kolibas and Jennifer Smith, the School's Vice Principal, apologizing for her "lapse in discretion". See Exhibit C.

23. Based upon the facts set forth in Paragraphs 7 through 10, Respondent was questioned for the second time on November 23, 2009, in the presence of her Union Representative.

24. Respondent admitted that the allegations as set forth in Paragraphs 7 through 10 were true and explained that she had her students turn off their cell phones because, admittedly, she did not want her words recorded and played out of context at a later date.

25. Respondent provided Mr. Kolibas with a second written statement confirming that she had her students turn off their cell phones because she was "worried" that her lesson on "improper disrespectful words would be recorded". See Exhibit D.

26. in an effort to explain her conduct, Respondent's attorney, Michael T. Barrett, Esq., forwarded counsel for the Board a letter, attempting to explain Respondent's lecture, explaining:

> ...Having taught for many years. having walked the halls in schools in Linden and elsewhere, having hears these words used by students multiple times on a daily basis, having found many of these words scratched onto books discarded in the classroom and written surreptitiously on class work hanging in the classroom, Ms. Mercorelli determined that the subject area was an appropriate topic for instruction. This Period 11 is to cover, as part of the curriculum, character education, basic anatomy and. physiology including units on puberty and disease. Concerned upon what she continually heard, saw and read, she wanted to make certain, the class understood her expectations on self-respect, respect for others and general decorum as the semester continued.
> This is the context in which the lesson was taught .....

See Exhibit E.

27. Respondent's lesson plan reflects that she did not have an. anatomy lesson planned for the day. Although she planned to instruct her students on the rules of the classroom and respect, she planned to do so through the distribution of a contract entitled "respect and responsibility contract". See Exhibit F.

28. Between December 15 and December 16, 2009, written statements were obtained from every student in Respondent's eleventh period class. Those statements are contained in the Sworn Statement of Evidence. More particularly, true and accurate copies of the Statements provided by A.Z., I.G., and I.R. are attached hereto as Exhibits G, H, and I, respectively.

29, The students' statements confirmed Respondent's admissions that she used obscene and vulgar words as part of her "lesson" to her eleventh period Health class on November 19, 2009.

30. The students' statements established that Respondent used the following words on November 19, 2009: "bullshit", "ass", "asshole", "balls", "ballsack", "bitch", "dick", "fuck", "fuck you", "pussy", "shit', "vagina", "penis" and "tits".

31. A student described Respondent and her lesson as shocking.

32. In addition, two parents forwarded letters of complaint to the school's administration, voicing their outrage over Respondent's behavior and how such misconduct shocked and embarrassed their children. See Exhibits J and K.

APPLICABLE STANDARDS

Tenured teachers may not be dismissed or reduced in compensation except for ". . . , unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." N.J.A.C. 18A:6-10. The Board of Education bears the burden of persuasion in the prosecution of tenure charges certified to the Commissioner, and must establish the grounds for action against the employee's tenure status by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Matter of Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982).

"Unbecoming conduct" is an elastic phrase, which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 NJ. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)). And because a teacher is both a role model and is entrusted with the care and education of minors, the public is entitled to expect that they will fulfill their roles with a high degree of responsibility.

In Saunders v. New Jersey Dep't of Educ., 91 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 12, 14, Administrative Law Judge Mumtaz Bari-Brown wrote:

> The educator imparts on her students not only academic knowledge, but also the development of social and moral values that are expected from parents, law enforcement officials, and the general public. Thus, teachers must be held to a higher standard of conduct than others who do not in their profession have direct contact with molding habits and nurturing young minds. Suffice it to say, children mimic what they see and they learn by example. Clearly, teachers play a direct role in influencing the opinions of their pupils and, indeed, teachers are role models. Teachers often impart the goals set by their students and the direction they take in achieving those goals.

Unfitness to remain as a teacher may be demonstrated by a single incident if it is sufficiently flagrant, although in less serious matters progressive disciplinary measures may be more appropriate. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967).

DISCUSSION

Based upon this Stipulation and the statements received from students that were also presented as exhibits, I FIND that on November 19, 2009, at the start of the 11th period Health class, something prompted Ms. Mercorelli to explain to her students certain rules of her classroom. One of the students reports that there was a reference to a student saying "shut up" to someone, although in that statement it is unclear whether the student actually heard this remark or whether the student is merely reporting what Mercorelli said happened. Nevertheless, Mercorelli reported in her November 20, 2009, statement that a student had made such a comment, and it seems most probable that the action or event that prompted the discussion about rules and conduct did begin after she heard such a statement. Whether this involved a "commotion", as characterized by Mercorelli's brief, or not, is largely immaterial. It is sufficient to conclude that the most likely scenario is that something happened that prompted Mercorelli to act, and that she did not simply decide to discuss these words in a vacuum, nor as a pre-planned "lesson" for the day. That said, it is then abundantly clear that Mercorelli proceeded to recite a rather comprehensive list of words that clearly have no place whatsoever in a classroom. And while she was a health teacher, it is not claimed by her that these words were utilized as a part of a discussion of health as such. Instead, she intended that the message to students be that the use of such words and phrases was demeaning to the user as well as the recipient, and that their use was therefore disrespectful to both parties. Presented in the proper manner, with a generic suggestion as to nature of the words and phrases, but without the specificity here employed, such a message about the corrosive impact of language could surely be a message worth delivering to all students, and it may be fair to say that in this day and age, if indeed not in earlier times, the reality is that the use of some of these words, if not indeed all, is not unknown to at least a portion of the student population of middle school children in most, if not all, school districts. One cannot be too unrealistic when dealing with such matters. But be that as it may, I FIND that there is no question that Ms. Mercorelli had no charge, or any proper basis whatsoever, to carry the message of respect to the students with such particularized, vivid and direct force. The words related to the students, even if known by many of them, are not words that any teacher should say in a classroom in the presence of any students, under any circumstances. And it must be noted that even to the extent that it might be entirely professional to tell a student not to tell someone to "shut up," there is a world of difference between addressing this sort of disrespectful language and conduct and expanding the "lesson" (to view it from Mercorelli's stated viewpoint) to advocating against the use of four-letter words, anatomical words and slang references to such by actually stating each word or phrase to the students. In doing so, I CONCLUDE that this teacher clearly "crossed the limits," and went beyond the boundaries of her professional responsibilities, forgetting exactly what it is that she is supposed to represent to her students. And in so doing she acted in an unprofessional manner that properly is deemed misconduct. Indeed, while her counsel argues strenuously against her loss of tenure, it does not appear that he, or she, seriously disputes the impropriety of her actions. While they attempt to place it in a context and demonstrate that this was not a case of her attempting to use language to insult or coerce a student, or to demean a student for a characteristic such as race, religion, or other insidious reason, they do not suggest that even with the intent of teaching a lesson, her manner of doing so was proper and professional.

In arguing both for a finding of guilt and for removal of tenure as the appropriate sanction, the Board appears to argue that Ms. Mercorelli has not accepted the impropriety of her action. It states that while she first acknowledged the "lapse of judgment" (which this event surely involved), she later "recanted her apology" and tried to defend her use of the offending language. But I do not see this as a proper understanding of her position. In her November 20, 2009, statement, she referred to the student saying "shut up" and her use of that instance "as a teachable moment" to address respect for one's self. In her e-mail of that day, she apologized for her "lapse of discretion" and promised that she would never allow such a thing to happen again and would "exercise more prudence so as to not put myself, the school or the administration in any kind of jeopardy in the future." In her November 23, note, she added the detail about the cell phones that will be discussed shortly, and then, in her attorney's letter of December 4, 2009, Mr. Barrett proffered that the use of the words had to be understood in a context and that it was in the context of hearing the student say "shut up" and her having heard inappropriate language in the hallways over many years that she determined the subject area [use of language] was an appropriate topic for instruction in a class that had as a part of its curriculum "character education" and in which she wanted the students to understand "her expectations on self-respect, respect for others and general decorum . . . ." While the Board may see Mr. Barrett's expanded comments on the context that led to Mercorelli's actions on November 19 as some sort of attempt to deny any wrongdoing, I FIND that Mercorelli's consistent position has been that, prompted by the comment she heard, she found it proper to address her students on the use of certain words the use of which was disrespectful and demeaning. Unfortunately, while her goal may have been laudable, for the use of these words by students is surely to be discouraged, Ms. Mercorelli, as she and her counsel understand, utilized a flawed and troubling approach to try to teach a lesson to her students. Her attempts to explain why she acted and to offer that she thought that she was addressing a legitimate concern cannot reasonably be understood as a denial of the impropriety of the method utilized to achieve that end.

The Board is also concerned that the evidence be understood to demonstrate the calculated manner in which this teacher went about speaking to her students about something that, as the Board views the situation, she obviously knew ahead of time was not a fit subject for discussion. That she first decided to talk about these words and then directed that all cell phones be placed on the desks in a shut off mode is seen as betraying any attempt to minimize either the seriousness of the offense or to dispel any notion that she acted in a spontaneous manner. Surely, she did make a conscious decision that she should talk to her students about these words. And to that extent, there is no doubt as to the deliberate nature of her misconduct. It did not involve a spontaneous outburst, and she does not seek to portray it as such. As for the cell phones, she explains that she did not want her comments recorded. The Board suggests that this action betrayed a consciousness of guilt, a knowledge that what she was about to do was wrong, so much so that she wanted to make sure there was no recording evidencing what she was about to say. I understand that the Board may see it this way, but in a world in which it is common knowledge that practically anything can be recorded or photographed and almost instantaneously be posted on the Internet, YouTube and the like, for all the world to see, in whatever context or lack of context the poster chooses, it is understandable that Ms. Mercorelli, who in this regard is nowhere accused of or said to have told the students that the discussion was a secret or that they should not mention it to their parents, may have simply wanted to avoid having what she felt was an appropriate talk (even though her belief was incorrect) used in an inappropriate, and exceedingly public, fashion. Indeed, the very problem of Internet posting of in-school activity, whether the activity be wholly proper or not, was a significant element in the recent case of In the Matter of Desly Getty, Board of Education of the City of Asbury Park, Monmouth County, Initial Decision, (June 4, 2009), adopted, Comm'r. (July 17, 2009) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, where a student used a cell phone to visually record students dancing in a classroom while the teacher sat right behind them, inappropriately talking on a cell phone. The student then posted an edited version of the video on YouTube, to the great embarrassment of both the Board and teacher. The impropriety of Ms. Getty's conduct that day, while existing regardless of the posting, was certainly made a cause célèbre by its electronic exposure, and it may not be too much to say that the intensity of the Board of Education's reaction to the misconduct and its insistence that removal of this long-time teacher was the only proper outcome was affected by the embarrassingly public nature that this in-classroom incident assumed due to the posting.[1] Here, even if what Mercorelli was about to do had been a legitimate lesson on improper language (which it was not), it is certainly the case that a recording of such could have been utilized in a wholly improper manner. Additionally, the removal of her badge and her comment that as a teacher she was not permitted to curse was merely a "dramatic" element of the "lesson," and is not any indication of an understanding of the impropriety of the "lesson." Instead, it can be seen as an affirmation of the idea that such language is not a proper element of the schoolhouse, the very concept that Mercorelli's unfortunate "lesson" was supposed to teach.

In summary, I CONCLUDE that Ms. Mercorelli's conduct on November 19 was unprofessional and a violation of the high standards expected of teachers. She is certainly guilty of misconduct. What is the appropriate sanction for such an impropriety?

In the recent case of Tenure Hearing of Kimberly Geurds, East Windsor Regional School District, EDU 08965-08, Initial Decision, (April 9 , 2010), adopted, Comm'r. (August 27, 2010) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> a fifth grade teacher reacted to the use of vulgar terms used by students and to student complaints about "messy" bathroom conditions by both recalling certain demonstrations of "proper" bathroom "technique" given to some of the students in her class who were in her kindergarten class some years earlier and by repeating a form of that demonstration and by attempting to clarify both the meaning, and the demeaning nature, of certain specific bodily and/or sexually oriented words and phrases, terms which she stated in class. Like Ms. Mercorelli, her conduct was found to have crossed the bounds of propriety and of professional limits, but to have been motivated by a "misguided" attempt at a "teachable moment," with no hint of any lurid or prurient intent. Id. at 7.

[1] The Board sought removal of tenure, but the Commissioner adopted this judge's determination that Getty's misconduct and insubordination should be sanctioned by the imposition of a reprimand and forfeiture of 120 days pay.

The Commissioner agreed with this judge that Geurds had acted improperly and that her actions constituted misconduct, but he also agreed that the proper sanction was not removal, but instead a forfeiture of 120 days of pay and one year's increment, adding that Geurds be required to complete coursework, before the end of 2011, in "pedagogy that addresses: . . . the boundaries between a teacher's instructional jurisdiction and issues properly in the province of parental guidance and control, and . . . professional classroom demeanor."[2] That coursework was to be subject to reasonable review and approval by the District, which could, if it believed that Geurds failed to comply with the terms of the sanction, apply to the Commissioner for relief. Given the very similar elements between Ms. Mercorelli's case and that of Ms. Geurd's, I see no reason not to impose upon Mercorelli the same sanctions as the Commissioner did upon Geurds. In Geurds, I found that the teacher was in no sense "a lost cause" and that is also true of Mercorelli. Each made the mistake of crossing boundaries, but did so motivated by a misguided sense of the proper means of addressing certainly inappropriate student behavior, behavior, which was at least of a sensitive nature not properly addressed in the classroom setting by a classroom teacher. Given the context in which these violations of proper professional conduct occurred, and keeping in mind the principles of In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 420-22 (App. Div. 1967) and its progeny, it can be said that, as with Geurds, there is every reason to believe that Ms. Mercorelli can continue to be an effective educator and that this experience will assure that she never again repeat the mistakes that have led to this unfortunate proceeding. There is no warrant for a result that involves the loss of tenure and the significant career damage that such an outcome would entail.

It is hereby ORDERED that Ms. Mercorelli shall forfeit 120 days pay and one year's increment, and that she shall successfully complete coursework, before the end of 2011, in pedagogy that addresses the boundaries between a teacher's instructional jurisdiction and issues properly in the province of parental guidance and control, and. professional classroom demeanor. The coursework shall be subject to reasonable

[2] A third requirement regarding the differences in social and psychological needs of children of different age and grade levels appears to have been imposed to address Ms. Geurd's expressed concerns about the transition from her former work as a kindergarten teacher to that of a fifth grade teacher. Such is not directly an issue in the current matter.

review and approval by the Board of Education, which may apply to the Commissioner if respondent fails to comply with the articulated terms.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

The petitioner, Archway Programs (Archway) is a non-profit corporation which operates a private school for the handicapped (PSH) authorized to educate handicapped public school students pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:46-14(g), and receives tuition from sending districts commensurate with its actual cost per pupil as determined by a certified audit. Pursuant to governing regulations, certain specified items may not be included in the computation of a tuition rate chargeable to the sending districts. The controversy herein involves five audits conducted by the respondent Department on Archway's accounts for the school years from 1994-1995 through 1998-1999, in which the Department disallowed approximately $9 million in non-allowable costs and expenses and ordered these tuition overcharges returned to the sending districts. Archway appealed this conclusion. In September 2008, the ALJ issued an Initial Decision recommending resolution of legal issues concerning methodologies and allowable costs in connection with the five contested audits, and further recommended that the Commissioner compute and present final mathematical calculations as to disallowances based upon these resolutions. In a final decision dated December 5, 2008, the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's recommendations regarding resolution of legal issues, but rejected the proposal regarding computation and presentation of final mathematical calculations. The Commissioner remanded the matter to the OAL for such further proceedings as were necessary to allow the ALJ to conclude these consolidated cases by making the requisite calculations and recommended determination of monies due and owing.

On remand, the ALJ found that it was appropriate to initially resolve only the audit for the 1994-1995 school year – and to reserve recommendation on the remaining years – as resolution of this particular audit will have a carryover effect on the remaining later audits, and ordered that DOE prepare a new audit of the 1994-1995 school year. Based on that audit, and the fact that Archway indicated no objections to the mathematical calculations contained therein, the ALJ determined that the revised DOE audit dated June 25, 2010 (Exhibit B) includes the amount that petitioner is obligated to return to the sending districts, and ordered Archway to reimburse these districts the amount of their overpayments for the 1994-1995 school year.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Partial Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision as to the 1994-1995 school year, and ordered Archway to return – within 60 days of this decision – a total of $2,315,855.51 to the districts which sent students to its PSH during the 1994-1995 school year. The matter was returned to the OAL for further action deemed necessary by the ALJ in order to make the requisite calculations and recommended determination of monies due and owing for the remaining audit years.

ARCHWAY PROGRAMS, INC.	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION,	:	PARTIAL DECISION ON REMAND
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Archway Programs, Inc. (hereinafter "Archway") filed exceptions in accordance with the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. The New Jersey Department of Education (hereinafter "Department") sought and received an extension of time within which to submit reply exceptions, which were filed in accordance with the extended timeline. Both submissions were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching her determination herein.

By way of background, the essence of the underlying controversy in this matter is as follows: The petitioner in this matter – Archway – is a non-profit corporation which provides educational and human service programs for individuals with special needs. This matter, however, is solely concerned with its programs at its private school for the handicapped (PSH), which is authorized – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:46-14(g) – to educate handicapped public school students. Archway is allowed to charge the public school districts in which the handicapped students reside (sending districts) tuition commensurate with its actual cost per pupil pursuant to a certified audit. There are, however, certain specified items which – pursuant to the governing regulations – may not be included in the computation of a tuition rate chargeable to the sending districts (codified during the time period at issue here at N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4) As a consequence of audits conducted by the Department on Archway's accounts for the 1994-95, 1995-96, 1996-97, 1997-98, and 1998-99 school years, the Department concluded that approximately $9 million included in Archway's calculated tuition rate represented non-allowable costs and expenses and ordered that these tuition overcharges be returned to the sending districts. Archway is appealing this conclusion.

On September 2, 2008, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) issued an Initial Decision recommending resolution of a myriad of legal issues concerning methodologies and allowable costs vis-à-vis particular account schedules in connection with the five contested audits. Such decision further recommended that the Commissioner, in her final decision, should compute and present the final mathematical calculations as to all disallowances subsequent to her resolution of the numerous disputed issues in this matter. By decision dated December 5, 2008,[1] the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's recommended determinations with respect to the various disputed issues relating to non-allowable costs, but rejected her recommendation that the Commissioner's final decision in this matter was the appropriate vehicle for the necessary recalculations, along with presentation of the specific amounts of money that Archway was required to return to its sending districts. Rather, the Commissioner found that the equitable resolution of this matter and the interests of the parties and the sending districts would be optimally furthered by the Commissioner's ability to review calculations recommended by the ALJ subsequent to the parties' ability to be heard at the OAL and on exception with respect to application of the Commissioner's substantive findings made in this decision.[2] Therefore, the Commissioner remanded this matter to [1] Archway Programs, Inc. v. New Jersey State Department of Education and Board of Education of the Township of Pemberton, Burlington County v. Archway Programs, Inc. and Archway Programs, Inc. v. Board of Education of the Township of Ewing, Mercer County, Commissioner's Decision No. 470-08.

[2] The Commissioner also found that – given the nature of the petitions of appeal in this matter – such computations by the OAL were compelled by a provision of the Administrative Procedure Act (N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c)).

the OAL for such further proceedings as were necessary to conclude these consolidated cases by making the requisite calculations and recommended determination of monies due and owing.

On remand, the ALJ determined it was appropriate to initially resolve only the audit for the 1994-95 school year – and to reserve recommendation on the remaining years – as resolution of this particular audit will have a carryover effect on the remaining later audits. Consequently, this partial decision on remand solely resolves the amount of money due and owing its sending districts by Archway as a consequence of the Department's 1994-95 audit.

Archway's exceptions here state that "within the context of [the ALJ's] interlocutory rulings since remand," it concedes "that the actual dollar calculations in the [Partial Initial Decision] before the Commissioner are correct." However, it argues, it is the correctness of these interlocutory decisions which Archway disputes. Specifically, Archway contests the ALJ's interlocutory determination 1) to allow the Department to submit new evidence to the record; 2) her refusal to allow such new evidence to come in by hearing rather than by written submissions; and 3) her rejection of Archway's interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1. (Archway's Exceptions at 3) With respect to its first and second objections here, Archway argues that the Commissioner's December 5, 2008 remand to the OAL directed that the ALJ calculate the amounts due by Archway. On remand, the ALJ directed the Department to submit a recalculation of the five audits to determine the exact amounts Archway had to return to the sending districts. By so doing, it argues, the ALJ impermissibly allowed the Department to do her job by reopening the record to present new evidence through revised calculations. It further contends that only the Commissioner has the authority to reopen the record, and points out that the Commissioner's remand decision did not so direct. Moreover, accepting arguendo, that new evidence could be submitted to the record, Archway maintains that it should have been allowed to contest such evidence by way of a hearing.

(Id. at 2) Finally, Archway charges that in her May 6, 2010 Order rejecting Archway's interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d), the ALJ merely reviewed the arguments of the parties and then – with no analysis – simply concluded that Archway failed to show its interpretation of this regulation was correct. (Id. at 3-4)

In reply, the Department proffers that Archway's exceptions are meritless and fail to recognize the purpose of the Commissioner's December 5, 2008 remand. In that remand decision, the Department points out, the Commissioner returned the matter to the OAL for "further proceedings as are necessary to allow the ALJ to conclude these consolidated cases by making the requisite calculations and recommended determination of monies due and owing. Commissioner's Decision (December 5, 2008) at 21." Archway's argument now that the record could not be opened for new calculations but, rather, had to utilize the calculations of its expert below "directly contradicts the Commissioner's finding that 'the ALJ properly rejected utilizing the calculations submitted by Archway's expert. Id. at 17" (Department's Reply Exceptions at 2) Most importantly, however, it argues that adopting Archway's advocated position that the remand proceedings should solely utilize the calculations already in the initial record would lead to unfair results. The calculations advanced during the initial hearing do not reflect the findings and conclusions of the Commissioner in her December 5, 2008 decision and, therefore, there is no question that these must be recalculated. (Ibid.) Furthermore, the Department contends, Archway's charge that the ALJ has abrogated her responsibility to make recommended mathematical calculations or to resolve legal disputes in the instant matter is wholly disingenuous. At no time, it advances, has the ALJ delegated such authority to either party. Rather, it maintains, she has provided each party with an opportunity to present its arguments at each stage of the recalculation process. Finally, in this connection, the Department contends there is no requirement that the recalculations had to be based on live testimony. Such a process, the Department avers, is merely Archways preference and would only serve to prolong final resolution of this matter. (Id. at 2-3)

As to the ALJ's May 6, 2010 Order finding the Department's interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d) to be correct, despite Archway's assertion to the contrary, the Department argues, such order clearly stated the basis for the ALJ's determination in this regard. Specifically, "the ALJ explained that the 'rule of deference [to the agency] is followed unless it is shown that the agency's interpretation is plainly unreasonable. (ALJ's May 6, 2010 Order at 7). In support of her conclusion, the ALJ found that Archway 'failed to show that a reasonable interpretation of N.J.A.C 6:20-4.1(d)2 included the latitude to create different methods of the calculations of the schedules in issue.' Ibid." (Id. at 3)

The Commissioner has conducted an independent review of the full record here, including the two interim orders of the ALJ – that of March 17, 2009 and that of May 6, 2010 – which form the sole basis of the exceptions advanced in this matter. Upon such review, the Commissioner finds Archway's exception arguments with respect to these interlocutory orders without merit. Initially, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's March 17, 2009 Order denying Archway's motion to preclude the re-opening of the record, which motion was subsequently `renewed and again denied by the ALJ's May 6, 2010 Order, along with Archway's request for a hearing. In light of the Commissioner's determination in her December 8, 2008 decision with respect to allowable and disallowable charges – which rejected portions of the Department's audits as well as portions of the changes advanced by Archway's expert – there was an inherent recognition that, consequently, the calculations in the record at that time would need to be re-worked.[3] As such, whether or not reopening of the record was specifically directed by the

[3] Additionally, the body of the Commissioner's decision stated "the Commissioner finds and concludes that the ultimate equitable resolution of this matter and the interests of the parties and the sending districts are optimally furthered by the Commissioner's decision, it was obvious that such reopening would be required. As to the ALJ's denial of Archway's request for a hearing, it is noted that the record reflects that early-on in the remand proceedings the ALJ reserved the right to decide if, in her judgment, a hearing was necessary. Upon her determination that there were no factual disputes and that she could make a determination based upon the parties' legal arguments in their briefs, the Commissioner concludes that her denial of Archway's request was entirely appropriate. Finally, for the reasons presented on pages 5-8 of her May 6, 2010 Order, the Commissioner determines that the ALJ's rejection of Archway's interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d) was correct. The Commissioner, therefore, adopts the ALJ's two interlocutory orders and attaches and incorporates them into this decision.

Accordingly, the recommended Partial Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision as to the 1994-95 school year audit. Archway is hereby directed – within 60-days of this decision – to return a total of $2,315,855.51 to the districts which sent students to its PSH during the 1994-95 school year as detailed in Exhibit B. This matter is being returned to the OAL for further action deemed necessary by the ALJ in order to make the requisite calculations and recommended determination of monies due and owing for the remaining audit years.

v.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION,
Respondent.

Steven D. Weinstein, Esq., for petitioner (Blank Rome, attorneys)

Joyce D. Atkins, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Anne Milgram, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ t/a:

On December 4, 2008, the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) remanded to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) that portion of the consolidated case (OAL Dkt. Nos. 6956-00, 8646-00, 4834-01, 4607-03, 4608-03 and 427-06), which deals with the audits by the New Jersey State Department of Education (DOE) of the records of Archway Programs, Inc. (Archway) for its private school for the handicapped (PSH) for the 1994-95, 1995-96, 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1998-99 school years.

In the decision/remand, the Commissioner adopted the conclusions in my initial decision as to the various schedules contained in the five audits, but rejected my recommendation that the Commissioner calculate the final amounts that Archway must return to the sending school districts for the five school years.

I had a conference with the parties on January 7, 2009 regarding the remand. During the conference, I established a schedule whereby the DOE was to submit a recalculation of the five audits to determine the exact amounts that Archway had to return to the sending school districts. Archway would have the opportunity to review these recalculations and submit its own recalculations. Based on the filings by the parties, I would then decide if a hearing was necessary or that I could make a determination as to the amounts that Archway had to return to the sending school districts based on the written submissions. At that time, Steven D. Weinstein, Esq., on behalf of Archway, argued that to allow the DOE to submit the recalculations was to reopen the record in the consolidated case and he moved to preclude the reopening of the record. Deputy Attorney General Sookie Bae, on behalf of the DOE, opposed the motion. I requested that the parties submit briefs as to the motion. I received Archway's brief on January 25, 2009; the DOE's response on February 9, 2009 and Archway's reply on February 18, 2009.

In his brief, Weinstein noted that during the hearing in the consolidated case, the DOE admitted that its calculations as to certain schedules in all five audits were incorrect. The DOE did not submit revised amounts for these schedules and a revision as to the amounts the DOE claimed that Archway had to return to the sending school districts.

Weinstein argued that to now allow the DOE to submit revised calculations would be in violation of the governing law. He argued that only the Commissioner has the authority to reopen the record and cited In re Trantino, 89 N.J. 347, 364 (1982); Skulski v. Nolan, 68 N.J. 179, 195 (1975); N.J.A.C. 1:18-5(b); Lefelt, 37 New Jersey Practice, Administrative Law and Practice §6.32 (2d ed. 2008). He argued that the Commissioner's decision to remand this matter to OAL did not authorize the reopening of the record in the consolidated matter and that the Commissioner only directed the administrative law judge to calculate Archway's liability.

Weinstein argued that to allow DOE to submit the revised calculations would be unfair to Archway since it would have to have its expert review these calculations and, depending on the results, prepare a rebuttal report. He noted that there might even be a need for a hearing as to the calculations. I recognized the additional costs to Archway; however, the recalculations are necessary since the recommendations in my initial decision, which were adopted by the Commissioner, rejected parts of the DOE's initial audits as well as parts of the changes suggested by Archway's expert during the hearing.

In her brief, Deputy Attorney General Joyce D. Atkins argued that Archway's interpretation of the Commissioner's decision as to the remand is narrow, without legal support, as well as illogical. She noted that the Commissioner concluded:

> Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein and above, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter, with the exception of its conclusion that the Commissioner should calculate – without benefit of OAL recommendations after the parties have been heard – all schedules based on the determinations herein and establish a recommended final amount that Archway is obligated to return to its sending districts. Consequently, this matter is remanded to the OAL for such further proceedings as are necessary to allow the ALJ to conclude these consolidated cases by making the requisite calculations and recommended determination of monies due and owing. [Comm'r. Decision p. 21]

She argued that even though the Commissioner did not specifically authorize the reopening of the record in the consolidated case, a reasonable interpretation of the language used by the Commissioner, specifically "for such further proceedings as are necessary to allow the ALJ to conclude these consolidated cases by making the requisite calculation . . .", allows the ALJ to request the DOE to recalculate the amount Archway has to reimburse the sending school districts based on the findings in my initial decision which were adopted by the Commissioner. Archway would thereafter have the opportunity to review these calculations and if it had any objections, to submit its own calculations.

Atkins argued that Archway's attempt to foreclose the submission of recalculations by the DOE is intended to force the ALJ to accept the calculation of Archway's expert even though the Commissioner agreed with my rejection of these calculations. Comm'r. Decision at p. 17.

Atkins argued that the Commissioner did not place any limitation on how the calculations are to be presented to me and that it is a reasonable interpretation of the Commissioner's decision that I ask for the recalculations by both DOE and Archway, and that such an interpretation is consistent with procedural due process.

Having reviewed the arguments of the parties, I agree with DOE's argument that I allow recalculations by both the DOE and Archway. I do not disagree with Archway's argument that DOE's reliance on the decision in the case of In the Matter of William J. Kallen, 92 N.J. 14 (1992) is misplaced since in that case the final agency decision required the administrative law judge to reopen the hearing.

The Commissioner adopted the recommendations in my initial decision as to what were allowable expenses to be included in the five audits. I rejected some of the arguments of both parties in arriving at my recommendations as to the allowable costs. I recognized that in her final decision the Commissioner could have modified my findings and that any such modification would have a carryover effect on other schedules and as to the schedules in subsequent school years, and I recommend that there be one recalculation of the amounts to be repaid by Archway to the sending school districts as part of the final decision by the Commissioner.

The Commissioner remanded this matter so that I would do the recalculations for two reasons. The first is her position that I have the responsibility to decide the entire case which includes the recalculation of the monetary consequences pursuant to

N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c). This regulation requires that an initial decision be "in such form that it may be adopted as the decision in the case."

The second reason given by the Commissioner is that the concepts of fundamental fairness require that I give the parties an opportunity to be heard on the recalculations before rendering an initial decision. Comm'r. Decision at p. 17-8.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the Commissioner's remand allows me to accept and consider recalculations by both DOE and Archway. I ORDER that the motion of Archway to preclude the opening of the record be DENIED.

This order may be reviewed by COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, either upon interlocutory review pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10 or at the end of the contested case, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6.

ARCHWAY PROGRAMS, INC.,
Petitioner,
v.
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION,
Respondent.

Steven D. Weinstein, Esq., for petitioner (Blank Rome, attorneys)

Joyce D. Atkins, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Paula T. Dow, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ t/a:

On December 5, 2008, the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) remanded to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) that portion of the consolidated case (OAL Dkt. Nos. 6956-00, 8646-00, 4834-01, 4607-03, 4608-03 and 427-06), which deals with the audits by the New Jersey State Department of Education (DOE) of the records of Archway Programs, Inc. (Archway) for its private school for the handicapped (PSH) for the 1994-95, 1995-96, 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1998-99 school years (audits in issue).

Archway is a non-profit human services organization that provides various educational, social, psychological and residential services for developmentally disabled and mentally and physically challenged adults and children. It has both PSH programs and non-PSH programs. The PSH programs provide special education services to public school children, ages 3 to 21, with special needs. The number of school districts and the number of students sent to Archway varies from year to year. Archway's PSH programs are subject to state audits.

Archway's PSH programs are operated at two locations, a campus in Atco, Camden County and another campus in Washington Township, Gloucester County.

It was agreed at the hearing in the consolidated case that the former regulations that determined tuition rates for PSHs, that were in effect during the years covered by the audits in issue, were applicable in the consolidated case. These regulations were previously codified at N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1 et seq. and were introduced into evidence at the consolidated case as J-1 and R-8. These regulations are also applicable in this matter.

In the final decision as to the consolidated case, the Commissioner adopted the conclusions in my September 2, 2008 initial decision as to the various schedules contained in the five audits in issue, but rejected my recommendation that the Commissioner calculate the final amounts that Archway must return to the sending school districts for the five school years. The Commissioner required that there be a procedure in the OAL to compute the revised audits for the five school years consistent with my initial decision and the Commissioner's final decision.

The remanded matter was transmitted to the OAL on December 5, 2008 for disposition pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15. I was assigned to the case,

I had a conference with the parties on January 7, 2009 regarding the remand. During the conference, I established a schedule whereby the DOE was to submit a recalculation of the 5 audits to determine the exact amounts that Archway had to return to the sending school districts. Archway would have the opportunity to review these recalculations and submit its objections, if any. Based on the filings by the parties, I would then decide if a hearing was necessary or that I could make a determination as to the amounts that Archway had to return to the sending school districts based on the written submissions.

At that time, Steven D. Weinstein, Esq., on behalf of Archway, argued that to allow the DOE to submit the recalculations was to reopen the record in the consolidated case and he moved to preclude the reopening of the record. Deputy Attorney General Sookie Bae, who at that time represented the DOE, opposed the motion. I requested that the parties submit briefs as to the motion. I received Archway's brief on January 25, 2009; the DOE's response on February 9, 2009 and Archway's reply on February 18, 2009. After reviewing the arguments of the parties, I issued an order on March 17, 2009, in which I decided that the Commissioner's remand allows me to accept and consider recalculations of the five audits by both DOE and Archway, and I denied Archway's motion. Archway thereafter in its November 19, 2009 brief renewed this motion. For the same reasons stated in my March 17, 2009 order, I again deny Archway's motion.

I received the DOE's revised audits on January 23, 2009. Archway filed a response dated April 23, 2009 and listed 21 objections to the DOE's revised audits (Attachment 1). I had a telephone conference with the parties on May 7, 2009, and I gave the DOE the opportunity to file a response as to the objections, which I received on June 24, 2009. Also, I gave Archway the opportunity to file a reply, which it did on August 7, 2009.

I held a settlement conference with the parties on October 6, 2009, and we were able to resolve 10 of the objections raised by Archway (Attachment 2). After Archway had further time to review the unresolved objections, I had a telephone conference with the parties on October 23, 2009. At that conference we were able to resolve seven of the remaining objections. The objections still in issue were 6, 7, 8 and 19 as set forth in Attachment 1. Thereafter, the parties were able to resolve objections 6 and 8.

By letter dated September 1, 2009, I told the parties that I wanted them to submit briefs as to Archway's objections applicable only to the 1994-95 school year audit and that initially I wanted only to resolve this audit. It is not disputed that the resolution of the 1994-95 school year audit will have a carryover effect on the later audits.

As a result of the negotiations of the parties, there is only one unresolved objection regarding the 1994-95 school year audit – namely objection 7 as set forth in Attachment 1. The other unresolved objection refers to a later school years.

Objection 7 concerns Schedules D (Petting Zoo/Janitorial/Pool), E (Pupil Transportation), F (Construction Labor Costs); G (Landscaping/Maintenance/Security) and H (Depreciation). The parties agreed that the applicable regulation as to these schedules is N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d) (J-1, R-8), which provides:

> (d) Whenever a facility used by an approved private school for the handicapped is also used for unrelated activities and/or enterprises by related or unrelated parties, all costs, direct or indirect, associated with such facilities and operations shall be charged accordingly to the associated activities and/or enterprises which they benefit. Indirect cost pools may be established as appropriate for allocation between common or joint purposes at the end of the fiscal year. Indirect costs shall be distributed in accordance with an equitable allocation plan approved by the Commissioner or as follows:
> 1. For joint activities and enterprises which have a common purpose of educating pupils, the indirect costs shall be allocated consistent with the methods contained in (c) above.
> 2. For joint activities and enterprises which do not have a common purpose of educating pupils, indirect costs for the approved private school for the handicapped shall be based on the ratio of the revenues for the approved private school to the total of all revenues for all purposes.

Pursuant to this regulation, the costs in the 5 schedules in issue are to be allocated to the PSH and non-PSH programs using the revenue allocation method. At the hearing in the consolidated case, DOE stipulated that its auditor had used a wrong allocation method in his calculations as to Schedules D, E, F, G and H, and that Archway had correctly argued that the revenue allocation method should have been used (October 18, 2006 transcript, pp.45-52, 60-63, 96-98; November 3, 2006 transcript, pp. 18, 34, 36-7, 56, 59-61; November 13, 2006 transcript pp. 21-8, 34-47). It is DOE's position that this stipulation was only that the revenue allocation method in N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d) should be used and does not include the mathematical calculations done by Archway's consultant. Archway did not disagree with DOE.

Although both parties agree that the revenue allocation method is applicable to Schedules D, E, F, G and H, there is a disagreement between the parties as to the mathematical calculations for all the schedules using the revenue allocation method.

In his November 19, 2009 brief, Weinstein argued that this issue should be resolved after a hearing and not on briefs. As previously stated, I reserved the right to decide if a hearing was necessary in this matter. After reviewing the briefs of the parties as to objection 7, I FIND that there are no factual disputes and that I can make a determination based on the legal arguments in the briefs. Therefore, I deny Archway's request for a hearing as contained in its November 19, 2009 brief.

Archway argued that in DOE's recalculation of the 1994-95 audit, DOE incorrectly used a global revenue allocation percentage of 39.73%, for all schedules based on the total revenue of Archway for that school year, including both its PSH and non-PSH programs. Weinstein stated that DOE relied solely on the provisions in N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d)(2) and did not take into consideration the introductory language in N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d) which states that both direct and indirect costs associated with PSHs "shall be charged accordingly to the associated activities and/or enterprises which they benefit."

Archway argued that the use of the global revenue allocation percentage was improper and resulted in overstatements of disallowed costs in Schedules D, E, F, G, and that Archway's application of the regulation results in the following:

Schedule D – a $107,769 reduction in disallowed expenses
Schedule E – a $2,045 reduction in disallowed expenses

Schedule F – a $45,032 reduction in disallowed expenses
Schedule G – a $7,205 reduction in disallowed expenses
Schedule H – a $201,525 reduction in disallowed expenses

Archway stated that the changes as to these schedules will also have an impact on other schedules in the 1994-95 audit, namely fringe benefits, organization overheard and working capital.

In her briefs of November 20, 2009 and December 9, 2009, Deputy Attorney General Joyce Atkins, who now represents DOE, argued that since Archway did not have an equitable allocation plan approved by the Commissioner, DEP correctly applied N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d)2 to establish an equation for calculating the revenue allocation (called a global revenue allocation percentage in Archway's briefs) as follows:

$$RAP^{1} = \frac{\text{Total Revenue Of The PSH}}{\text{Total Of All Revenues For All Purposes}} \times 100$$

Atkins argued that applying this equation the DOE determined that the RAP for all the schedules in issue is 39.73% based on:

$$RAP = \frac{$6,935,765}{$17,456,988} \times 100 = 39.73\%$$

Atkins argued that the use of this percentage is based on the clear and plain language of the regulation. She argued that it has been established that when both statutes and regulations are clear on their face, the plain language must be strictly followed. Bd. of Educ. of the Vocational Sch. of the County of Passaic v. Bd. of Educ. of the Manchester Regional High Sch. Dist., OAL No. EDU 5964-04, I.D. (May 17, 2007), aff'd Comm'r., F.D. (June 27, 2005).

Atkins argued that Archway improperly used the regulation to created different RAPs for the various schedules and that its calculations are self-serving and not consistent with the clear and plain meaning of the regulation. Atkins argued that if

[1] RAP is the revenue allocation percentage.

Archway did not believe that the method provided in the regulation accurately represented the costs for its PSH, it should have developed an equitable allocation plan for the Commissioner's approval.

In its briefs of November 19, 2009 and December 11, 2009, Archway makes an argument that using a global revenue allocation percentage does not reflect the differences as to usage for the PSH program for the schedules in issue. I am incorporating herein Archway's argument in its November 19, 2009 brief (Attachment 3).

In his letter dated April 30, 2010, Weinstein sent me a copy of the Appellate Division's decision in Catholic Family and Community Services (Friendship Corner I and Friendship Corner II) v. State-Operated School District of the City of Peterson, et al, Dkt. No. A-0438-08T1, decided March 31, 2010, approved for publication March 31, 2010. In this case, the Appellate Division reversed the Commissioner's decision on the basis that the Commissioner had ignored DOE's own budget guidelines and used a combination of prior guidelines and other unarticulated policies of DOE. The Appellate Division held that the Commissioner's action was arbitrary and capricious. Weinstein argued that DOE's position in this case is also arbitrary and capricious since DOE relied entirely on the language in N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d)2 without taking into consideration the first sentence of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d).

Having reviewed the arguments of the parties I CONCLUDE that Archway has failed to show that a reasonable interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d)2 includes the latitude to create different methods for the calculations of the schedules in issue.

It has been well established that courts will give deference to the agency's interpretation of the statutes and regulations it is charged with implementing. Dept. of Env. Protection v. Stavola, 103 N.J. 425 (1986); In re Election Law Enforcement Comm. Advisory Opinion No. 01-2008, 201 N.J. 254 (2010). This rule of deference is followed unless it is shown that the agency's interpretation is plainly unreasonable. Reilly v. AAA Mid-Atlantic Ins. Co. of N.J., 194 N.J. 474, 485 (2008). In this matter, I CONCLUDE that Archway has not shown that DOE's interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d) is unreasonable.

Therefore, I CONCLDUE that DOE's calculation methodology should be used for Schedules D, E, F, G and H. I ORDER that DOE prepare a new audit for the 1994-95 school year using this order and the settlements as to the other objections in Attachment 1 which relate to this audit .

The revised audit is to be submitted to me and to Archway. Archway will have 30 days from receipt to submit a response as to the mathematical calculations only. Once this is resolved, I will issue a partial initial decision as to the 1994-95 audit.

This order may be reviewed by COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION either upon interlocutory review pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10 or at the end of the contested case, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
1	All years	Missing Information	Exhibit 1 as referred to by the Department of Education ("DOE") in the narrative to their recalculation report is missing from the DOE's production of documents for all five years. The DOE purports that Exhibit 1 summarizes their calculation of the revised disallowed amounts for each year in accordance with the OAL decision. See DOE 1 and DOE 9 for reference to this schedule.	The DOE's failure to include all schedules, especially summary schedules, within their revised report severely restricts the ability to review their recalculation for accuracy and for adherence to the OAL's decision and casts doubt on the integrity of their report.
2	1995	Missing Information	Schedule T - Working Capital Adjustment is missing from the production. This schedule should appear after DOE 56, however, DOE 57 is the cover page for the next year (1996).	Same as above.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
3	1998	Out of sequence	Schedule C from 1998 has been provided out of sequence. This schedule was located within the DOE's calculation of the revised disallowed amounts for 1999.	Due to the size and complexity of this report, the act of providing the report "out of sequence" causes inefficiencies and makes it unnecessarily burdensome to review as additional time must be spent searching for, what are believed at the time to be, missing documents and then rearranging the production in an organized manner. Again, the sloppy production of this report (i.e. missing schedules and "out-of-sequence" schedules) casts doubt on its integrity.
4	1998/1999	Out of sequence	Schedule D, Schedule E, and Schedule F between the years 1998 and 1999 have been provided out of sequence.	Same as above.
5	1998/1999	Out of sequence	Schedule K between the years 1998 and 1999 has been provided out of sequence.	Same as above.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
6	1997	Mathematical Error	Schedule A - Teacher's Salaries (DOE 81) does not add up correctly - the total overstates the disallowed amount by $39,694. The DOE calculated the disallowed amount to be $430,994 while the correct amount should have been $391,300. As a result of this math error, the DOE also overstated the related disallowed fringe benefits and disallowed overhead and working capital amounts.	$39,694 +	The error overstates the disallowed salary amount by $39,694 as well as the related disallowed fringe benefit, disallowed overhead, and working capital amounts in this year. It also impacts the working capital amounts in subsequent years.
7	1995	Improper application of the revenue method used	Per DOE regulations, these costs should be allocated only to those programs (PSH and non-PSH) who receive the benefit of those costs based on the revenue percentages of those participating programs. The DOE used a global revenue allocation percentage based upon the total revenues of PSH and the total revenues of Archway of approximately 39.75%. This error occurred on Schedules D, E, F, G, and H which calculate the disallowed amount of maintenance, transportation, and depreciation expenses.	$428,250 +	This error overstates the disallowed amount by $428,250 as well as overstates the related disallowed fringe benefits, disallowed overhead, and working capital amounts in this year. It also impacts the calculation of the working capital amounts in subsequent years.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
8	1995	Unknown reclassification	The DOE has reclassified expenses from Schedule C1 (DOE 26) to other schedules without providing a reason for such change including transferring $225 to Schedule D1, $1,170 to Schedule D2, and $2,337 to Schedule G. These transfers reduce the disallowed amount on this schedule and increased the disallowed amount on the other referenced schedules. None of these changes were directed by the OAL decision and it appears that the DOE has changed the results of their original audit without instruction by the court.	These changes impact the disallowed amounts on this schedule and the other referenced schedules, as well as, the disallowed overhead and working capital amounts. It also impacts the calculation of the working capital amount in subsequent years.
9	1995	Unknown reclassification	The DOE has reclassified expenses to Schedule D (DOE 28) from other schedules without providing a reason for such change including transferring $7,774 from Schedule G. None of these changes were directed by the OAL decision and it appears that the DOE has changed the results of their original audit without instruction by the court.	Same as above.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
10	1995	Unknown reclassification	The DOE has reclassified expenses from Schedule O2 (DOE 44) to other schedules without providing a reason for such change including transferring $2,150 to Schedule R3. None of these changes were directed by the OAL decision and it appears that the DOE has changed the results of their original audit without instruction by the court.	Same as above.
11	1995	Inconsistent internal reference	Due to the reclassified expenses disclosed earlier, the total amount of Schedule R2 - Meals and Schedule (DOE 52) and R3 - Contributions (DOE 54) changed, however, these adjusted amounts were not updated within the calculation of Organizational Overhead on Schedule R (DOE 48). However, this error caused no impact on the calculation of the disallowed amounts as the transferred costs were above the maximum allocation amount.	The failure to update the schedule did not have any impact on the recalculation of the disallowed amount but casts doubt on the integrity of the DOE's report.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
12	1996	Incorrect number used for calculation	In determining the non-allowable fringe benefit amount on Schedule I (DOE 68), the DOE incorrectly deducted the wrong amount of "Salary Separately Allocated" of $286,632 rather that the correct amount of $316,478 as found on Schedule J1 (DOE 72). We can not determine if the DOE unintentionally applied the wrong number in their calculation or intentionally disregarded the OAL Decision with regard to maximum salaries.	This error decreased the disallowed overhead amount and the working capital amount. It also impacts the working capital calculation in subsequent years.
13	1999	Incorrect number used for calculation	In determining the non-allowable fringe benefit amount on Schedule I (DOE 132), the DOE incorrectly deducted the wrong amount of "Salary Separately Allocated" of $441,663 rather that the correct amount of $596,234 as found on Schedule J1 (DOE 136). We can not determine if the DOE unintentionally applied the wrong number in their calculation or intentionally disregarded the OAL Decision with regard to maximum salaries.	Same as above.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
14	1997	Failure to update amount	The DOE failed to update on Schedule J (DOE 92) the adjusted amount of Direct Costs from DOE 93 and therefore failed to use an updated Allocation Percentage in determining allowable organizational overhead.	This error results in an overstatement of the disallowed overhead amount and the working capital amount. It also impacts the working capital calculation in subsequent years.
15	1998	Incorrect number used for overhead allocation percentage calculation	In recalculating the Allocation Percentage on Schedule J (DOE 115), the DOE updated the direct costs of Atco, Challenge, Camden, and Gloucester without providing the details to support these changes, therefore, we can not determine the appropriateness of the allocation percentage used to calculate organizational overhead.	Without any details to support these changes, we can not determine the accuracy of the recalculation or the DOE's adherence to the OAL decision.
16	1999	Incorrect number used for overhead allocation percentage calculation	In recalculating the Allocation Percentage on Schedule J (DOE 134), the DOE updated the direct costs of Challenge and Camden without providing the details to support these changes, therefore we can not determine the appropriateness of the allocation percentages used to calculate organizational overhead.	Same as above.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
17	1998	Incorrect number used for working capital calculation	The DOE improperly lists the Working Capital balance to be increased by $15,373 on Schedule L, however, this number should be a reduction of $15,373. See DOE 120 for details. As we do not have the yearly summary from the DOE (presumably Exhibit 1), we can not determine the impact or how or if this error was resolved.	As the summary schedule (Exhibit 1) was not provided, we can not determine how this error was used in their calculation and the accuracy of the DOE's recalculation.
18	1999	Incorrect number used for working capital calculation	The DOE improperly lists the Working Capital balance to be a reduction of $75,575 on Schedule L, however, this number should be a increased by $75,575. See DOE 140 for details. As we do not have the yearly summary from the DOE (presumably Exhibit 1), we can not determine the impact or how or if this error was resolved.	Same as above.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
19	1999	Incorrect number used for calculation	Inconsistent with other years, the DOE calculated a fringe benefit rate on Schedule F (DOE 109) based on the total salaries of Archway and not on the PSH related salaries. The rate the DOE used was lower thus reducing the amount of allowable fringe benefits.	$44,139 +	This error overstated the disallowed fringe benefit amounts by $44,139 as well as overstated the related overhead and working capital amounts in this year. As this error occurred during 1999, the last audit, it did not impact the working capital calculation in subsequent years.
20	1995	Correction of original report	The DOE included the disallowed tuition waiver amount they calculated (DOE 55) but did not include (apparently an error) in their original report. As such, the DOE has increased the disallowed amount of tuition waivers by $43,384 in their recalculation. As a result, the DOE's recalculated report exceeds the amount of tuition waivers affirmed by the OAL by $43,384.	$43,384	This error overstates the tuition waiver amount affirmed by the OAL decision by $43,384 in this year.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
21	1997, 1999	Inconsistent treatment of disallowed expense	The DOE inconsistently included disallowed tuition waivers during the years 1997, 1998, and 1999. During the recalculation, they have attempted to treat this area using a consistent method for disallowed costs, however they have increased the amount of disallowed tuition waiver amounts in 1997 and 1999. However, they have not adjusted 1998 and therefore it is inconsistent with the other years. In addition, they have changed Schedule L to reflect new information which was not on their original calculation which they have described in a footnote for the years 1997, 1998, 1999. The result of DOE's inconsistencies and new changes resulted in an additional $15,605 in disallowed cost more that was affirmed by the OAL judge. This error and error #20 has resulted in $58,989 of disallowed costs in excess of that affirmed by the OAL judge.	$15,605	This error results in an overstatement of the disallowed tuition costs in excess of the amounts affirmed by the OAL Decision by $15,605 for these years.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
17	1998	Incorrect number used for working capital calculation - DOE corrected error	The DOE improperly lists the Working Capital balance to be increased by $15,373 on Schedule L, however, this number should be a reduction of $15,373. See DOE 120 for details. As we do not have the yearly summary from the DOE (presumably Exhibit 1), we can not determine the impact or how or if this error was resolved.	As the summary schedule (Exhibit 1) was not provided, we can not determine how this error was used in their calculation and the accuracy of the DOE's recalculation. The cumulative impact from prior years through 1998 reduces the amount Archway owes to the sending districts by approximately $4,850.
18	1999	Incorrect number used for working capital calculation - DOE corrected error	The DOE improperly lists the Working Capital balance to be a reduction of $75,575 on Schedule L, however, this number should be a increased by $75,575. See DOE 140 for details. As we do not have the yearly summary from the DOE (presumably Exhibit 1), we can not determine the impact or how or if this error was resolved.	As the summary schedule (Exhibit 1) was not provided, we can not determine how this error was used in their calculation and the accuracy of the DOE's recalculation. The cumulative impact from prior years through 1999 increased the amount Archway owes to the sending districts by approximately $19.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
19	1999	Incorrect number used for calculation - Still in dispute	Inconsistent with other years, the DOE calculated a fringe benefit rate on Schedule F (DOE 109) based on the total salaries of Archway and not on the PSH related salaries. The rate the DOE used was lower thus reducing the amount of allowable fringe benefits.	$44,139 +	This error overstated the disallowed fringe benefit amounts by $44,139 as well as overstated the related overhead and working capital amounts in this year. As this error occurred during 1999, the last audit, it did not impact the working capital calculation in subsequent years. DOE could have used the salaries allowed by ALJ ($51,812 - as discussed on page 81 of the ALJ decision) to recalculate at least in part the fringe benefits allowable. This would change working capital and overhead for 1999.

20	1995	Correction of original report - DOE revised	The DOE included the disallowed tuition waiver amount they calculated (DOE 55) but did not include (apparently an error) in their original report. As such, the DOE has increased the disallowed amount of tuition waivers by $43,384 in their recalculation. As a result, the DOE's recalculated report exceeds the amount of tuition waivers affirmed by the OAL by $43,384.	$43,384	This error overstates the tuition waiver amount affirmed by the OAL decision by $43,384 in this year. The new report was revised to show $0 in tuition waivers.

Summary of Errors by the Department of Education ("DOE")

No.	Year	Type	Description	Impact of Error on OAL Decision
21	1997, 1999	Inconsistent treatment of disallowed expense	The DOE inconsistently included disallowed tuition waivers during the years 1997, 1998, and 1999. During the recalculation, they have attempted to treat this area using a consistent method for disallowed costs, however they have increased the amount of disallowed tuition waiver amounts in 1997 and 1999. However, they have not adjusted 1998 and therefore it is inconsistent with the other years. In addition, they have changed Schedule L to reflect new information which was not on their original calculation which they have described in a footnote for the years 1997, 1998, 1999. The result of DOE's inconsistencies and new changes resulted in an additional $15,605 in disallowed cost more that was affirmed by the OAL judge. This error and error #20 has resulted in $58,989 of disallowed costs in excess of that affirmed by the OAL judge.	$15,605	This error results in an overstatement of the disallowed tuition costs in excess of the amounts affirmed by the OAL Decision by $15,605 for these years.

BLANK ROME LLP
COUNSELORS AT LAW

APPLICATION OF NJAC 6:20-4.1(d)

Subject to the aforementioned objections and the request for live testimony, Archway now submits the information on the disputed 94-95 items as directed. Since the initial DOE Recalculation, we have all been working from the "Summary of Errors" chart Archway submitted (later updated to reflect the DOE's Revised Recalculation and Archway's response (submitted as Exhibit C to Archway's August 5, 2009 filing), herewith attached as Exhibit A to this letter. We agreed in our telephone call of October 23rd, that of the 21 error categories on Ex. A, only items 6,7,8, and 19 remained in dispute. Of those items, following our call, I confirmed with Mr. Kleckner that Item 8 was resolved, leaving numbers 6,7 and 19 in dispute. Further, number 6 refers to the 96-97 year and number 19 refers to the 98-99 year.

Thus, the focus of this submission will be on error number 7 which covers the application of NJAC 6:20-4.1(d)(2) to Schedules D, E, F, G and H of the 94-95 Audit. In addition, it was understood that the outcome on these schedules would also impact the Organizational Overhead and Working Capital amounts for 94-94 before a final determination can be made for 94-95.

Schedules D (Petting Zoo/Janitorial/Pool); E (Pupil Transportation); F (Construction Labor Costs); G (Landscaping/Maintenance/Security) and H (Depreciation) are all related to the allocation made pursuant to NJAC 6:20-4.1(d)(2). All involve indirect costs. This is the specific regulation to which DOE stipulated it used the wrong methodology in its original audit. Since that time, it continues to fail in its application of this regulation by insisting a global allocation method is appropriate – a position which ignores the actual words or the context of the Regulation.

Subchapter 4 of N.J.A.C. 6:20 provides for the tuition calculation of a PSH. Attached as Exhibit B is NJAC 6:20-4.1 as it then existed. The basic goal of the tuition calculation is to determine "actual cost per pupil," N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(a). N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(b) covers those costs which are "direct costs." The costs in issue here are all indirect costs. Subsections (c) and (d) address "indirect costs." Subsection (c) – not applicable here – addresses indirect costs "incurred for a common or joint purpose."

Subsection (d) comes into play:

> Whenever a facility used by a [PSH] is also used for unrelated activity and/or enterprises by related or unrelated parties, all costs, direct or indirect, associated with such facilities and operations shall be charged according to the associated activities or enterprises which they benefit.

(Emphasis added).

For indirect costs that fall within §4.1(d), two sub-categories exist:

> (1) those activities/enterprises which have a common purpose of educating pupils are directed to the 4.1(c) allocation methods. THIS CATEGORY IS NOT APPLICABLE TO THE CURRENT DISPUTE.
>
> (2) joint activities/enterprises which do not have a common purpose of educating pupils for which the ratio of revenues for the PSH to the total of all revenues for all purposes applies.

In applying §4.1(d)(2), DOE ignored the introductory paragraph of §4.1(d):

> a facility used for unrelated activities is directed to charge the costs to the activity which is benefited.

Subsection (d) applies to specific joint activities without a common purpose of educating pupils. Expenses falling within this category are by definition indirect expenses which creates the necessity for an allocation. The clear intent is to split these costs between the PSH and non-PSH uses relating to that facility or operation.

The application of (d) requires two things: (1) an understanding of Archway's multiple programs (PSH and non-PSH) and overlapping use of facilities; and (2) a revenue analysis that allows the apportionment as appropriate to each category of expense involved.

Attached as Exhibit C hereto is the revenue allocation for 94-95 broken down by both PSH and non-PSH activities and by location, adjusted to account for expenses already disallowed and not in dispute. These numbers will be used in the allocation formulas to follow.

Schedule D

Schedule D (Exhibit D) covers the Petting Zoo, janitorial and pool expenses. DOE's original ratio was 44.1%, now admitted to be wrong. Archway's Hearing ratio was 97.07%. Reflecting the ALJ's hearing decisions, Archway's adjusted ratio for this category is now 96.92%. Incredibly, DOE comes to 39.73%, over 4% points less than what it already stipulated was wrong.. The difference results from DOE's refusal to recognize the expenses being allocated.

The Petting Zoo and Pool are located at Archway's Atco campus and are available for use by the Atco PSH, the Challenge Program PSH (located exclusively at Atco) and the Summer Camp located at Atco. The Washington Township PSH does not use the Petting Zoo or the Pool; thus, the revenues associated with the Washington Township PSH are not part of the Schedule D ratio calculation. The Summer Camp, a non-PSH facility/activity (which does "not have a common purpose educating pupils") does use these facilities and brings its expenses within subsection (d)(2).[1]

As reflected on Ex. D, Archway calculated the revenue ratio by comparing the revenue for PSH-Atco and PSH-Challenge to the total revenue (including summer camp) of the activities participating in the expense category. The total adjusted revenue relevant to this specific use was $6,041,876 (PSH-Atco, PSH-Challenge and Summer Camp). Comparing the non-PSH revenue (Summer Camp - $186,349) to the total produces a PSH Revenue Ratio of 96.92%.

The DOE, however, calculated the ratio by including in the calculation all Archway Program revenue, including the PSH at Washington Township, all Camden City programs, all public school based after care programs, all other non-PSH social service programs at other remote locations – none of which participate in any way with the Atco campus pool or petting zoo. Thus, the DOE's calculation increased the total revenue denominator to over $19 million versus the applicable total revenue for the users of this specific cost center of about $6 million, resulting in a ratio of 39.73%. In so doing, the Department ignored the direction in the first sentence of §4.1(d) that when a facility is used by a PSH and is also used for unrelated activities "all costs . . . associated with such facilities and operations shall be charged accordingly to the associated activities and/or enterprises which they benefit." (emphasis added). The only users of the petting zoo and pool are located at Atco. Only those specific revenues are pertinent to establishing the PSH to non-PSH revenue ratio which is then applied to total expenses related to those facilities.

The bottom portion of Ex. D shows the impact of the ratio calculation. The two rectangular boxed numbers reflect DOE's and Archway's (KFAG – Phil Kleckner, Archway's expert) computations. DOE, applying its revenue ratio of 39.73%, disallowed $105,807 whereas Archway, applying its revenue ratio of 96.92% disallowed $5530. Archway's calculation reflects that the overwhelming users of the pool and petting zoo were PSH activities and is consistent with §4.1(d).

[1] This information for all schedules discussed herein is in the Hearing Record.

Schedule E

Schedule E (Exhibit E) (Pupil Transportation Costs) is a good contrast that reflects the proper handling of the indirect costs under §4.1(d)(2). The "facilities" covered in this expense category are all bus and transportation costs. This activity is more system-wide than the narrower use of the Atco Petting Zoo and Pool. It is appropriate in determining the (d)(2) ratio allocation to include (1) on the PSH side all PSH activities including Washington Township and (2) on the non-PSH side all transportation costs for all other Archway programs where busing is involved. Total revenue sources relevant to Pupil Transportation amount to $17,948,689; the PSH portion of that total is $7,427,466 resulting in a 41.38% ratio, much lower than the Schedule D ratio (96.92%). This is due to the fact that in the Pupil Transportation category the non-PSH programs are a much larger component.

Schedule F

Schedule F (Exhibit F)(Construction Labor Costs) is much like the Schedule D analysis. Again, DOE used its global revenue ratio (39.73%) without analyzing the "pot" of facilities and operations covered by the category of expense involved. Washington Township is a rented facility and all the construction labor costs occurred only at Atco (encompassing the Atco PSH, the Challenge PSH and the summer camp). Thus, Archway's revenue ratio for this category of expense is 96.92% – the same as with Schedule D. The DOE disallowed an additional $45,032. See Ex. A, p. 1,5.

Schedule G

Schedule G (Exhibit G) covers landscaping, maintenance, and security expenses. Since these activities are spread over all the activities, the analysis is similar to Schedule E and the Revenue Ratio is 41.38%.

Schedule H

Finally, Schedule H (Exhibit H) on depreciation requires a similar focus. As indicated, the Washington Township PSH and all other non-PSH programs are in rented facilities, to which, by definition, depreciation does not apply. Thus, Archway again calculates the revenue ratio at 96.92% versus the DOE's global 39.73% resulting in a $201,525 difference between the two.

Impact on other schedules

The differences reflected in the §4.1(d)(2) analysis are not limited to just these schedules. Because these analyses result in less disallowed costs than the DOE calculation, they also impact the percentage applied to organizational overhead ($29,737 difference), and working capital ($59,490 difference) for 94-95.

SUMMARY

For just 1994-95, the DOE calculations overstate disallowed costs by $491,701. See, Ex. I. The point of departure that results in almost $500,000 in differences for 94-95 is DOE's failure to apply its own regulation as written. Essentially, DOE focuses only on the final phrase of NJAC 6:20-4.1(d)(2) (". . . for which the ratio of revenues for the PSH to the total of all revenues for all purposes applies.") to the exclusion of rest of the words in the regulation. More disappointing, DOE ignores the entire concept embodied in the regulation, whose purpose is to determine a PSH's tuition costs by establishing "actual cost per pupil." NJAC 6:20-4.1(a). First comes "direct costs," Id. at §4.1(b). Next is the identification of "indirect costs incurred for a common or joint purpose" of education, Id. at §4.1(c). Finally, the category at issue here is costs relating to facilities used by both PSH and non-PSH facilities without a common purpose of educating pupils. The regulation logically requires that "all costs, direct or indirect, associated with such facilities and operations shall be charged according to the associated activities or enterprises which they benefit." Id. at §4.1(d) (introductory paragraph).

Query why the regulation would have multiple sub parts to deal with various categories of indirect and direct costs if a simple, one size fits all revenue ratio was to be applied. The intent – finding the actual cost per pupil – is best determined in the instance of multi-program enterprises sharing facilities and services by separately identifying the specific uses applicable to each cost center and applying a revenue ratio relevant to those uses. Using a global ratio based on total PSH revenue to total revenue of all programs does not even come close to determining "actual cost per (PSH) pupil" because it ignores that with some activities and cost centers the PSH may be the primary user and in others the PSH may be a minor beneficiary of the activity.

In summary, the correct application of the Regulation results in the following:

Schedule D – a $107,769 reduction in disallowed expenses
Schedule E – a $2,045 reduction in disallowed expenses
Schedule F – a $45,032 reduction in disallowed expenses
Schedule G – a $7,205 reduction in disallowed expenses
Schedule H – a $201,525 reduction in disallowed expenses

The differences from the DOE Revised Calculation are reflected in the Summary Chart, Ex. I, which also reflects the impacts of the above changes on Fringe Benefits, Organizational Overhead, and Working Capital for 1994-95, totaling $491,791 less disallowances and reducing the disallowances for 1994-95 to a total of $1,824,155.

Record Closed as to this partial initial decision on August 25, 2010

Decided: September 15, 2010

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ t/a:

On December 5, 2008, the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) remanded to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) that portion of the consolidated case (OAL Dkt. Nos. 6956-00, 8646-00, 4834-01, 4607-03, 4608-03 and 427-06), which deals with the audits by the New Jersey State Department of Education (DOE) of the records of Archway Programs, Inc. (Archway) for its private school for the handicapped (PSH) for the 1994-95, 1995-96, 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1998-99 school years (audits in issue).

Archway is a non-profit human services organization that provides various educational, social, psychological and residential services for developmentally disabled and mentally and physically challenged adults and children. It has both PSH programs and non-PSH programs. The PSH programs provide special education services to public school children, ages 3 to 21, with special needs. The number of school districts and the number of students sent to Archway varies from year to year. Archway's PSH programs are subject to state audits.

Archway's PSH programs are operated at two locations, a campus in Atco, Camden County and another campus in Washington Township, Gloucester County.

It was agreed at the hearing in the consolidated case that the former regulations that determined tuition rates for PSHs that were in effect during the years covered by the audits in issue were applicable in the consolidated case. These regulations were previously codified at N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1 et seq. and were introduced into evidence at the consolidated case as J-1 and R-8. These regulations are also applicable in this matter.

In the final decision as to the consolidated case, the Commissioner adopted the conclusions in my September 2, 2008 initial decision as to the various schedules contained in the five audits in issue, but rejected my recommendation that the Commissioner calculate the final amounts that Archway must return to the sending school districts for the five school years. The Commissioner required that there be a procedure in the OAL to compute the revised audits for the five school years consistent with my initial decision and the Commissioner's final decision.

The remanded matter was transmitted to the OAL on December 5, 2008 for disposition pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15. I was assigned to the case.

I had a conference with the parties on January 7, 2009 regarding the remand. During the conference, I established a schedule whereby the DOE was to submit a recalculation of the 5 audits to determine the exact amounts that Archway had to return to the sending school districts. Archway would have the opportunity to review these recalculations and submit its objections, if any. Based on the filings by the parties, I would then decide if a hearing was necessary or that I could make a determination as to the amounts that Archway had to return to the sending school districts based on the written submissions.

I received the DOE's revised audits on January 23, 2009. Archway filed a response dated April 23, 2009 and listed 21 objections to the DOE's revised audits (Exhibit A, objections contained in Attachment 1) Exhibit A is attached and fully incorporated in this initial decision. I had a telephone conference with the parties on May 7, 2009, and I gave the DOE the opportunity to file a response as to these objections, which I received on June 24, 2009. Also, I gave Archway the opportunity to file a reply, which it did on August 7, 2009.

I held settlement conferences with the parties, and we were able to resolve 19 of the objections raised by Archway. The unresolved objections are number 7, which applies to the 1994-95 school year audit, and number 19, which only refers to the 1998-99 school year audit.

Objection 7 concerns Schedules D (Petting Zoo/Janitorial/Pool), E (Pupil Transportation), F (Construction Labor costs), G (Landscaping/Maintenance/Security) and H (Depreciation). The parties agreed that the applicable regulation as to these schedules is N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(d).

By letter dated September 1, 2009, I told the parties that I wanted them to submit briefs as to Archway's objections applicable only to the 1994-95 school year audit and that initially I wanted only to resolve this audit. It is not disputed that the resolution of the 1994-95 school year audit will have a carryover effect on the later audits.

After receipt of the briefs from the parties, I issued an Order on May 6, 2010 (Exhibit A), in which I concluded that DOE's calculation methodology should be used for Schedules D, E, F, G and H. I ordered that DOE prepare a new audit of the 1994-95 school year using this order and the settlements as to the other objections raised by Archway which relate to this audit. Further, I stated that this revised audit is to be submitted to me and to Archway. Archway would then have the opportunity to review the audit and the opportunity to submit a response as to the mathematical calculations only. Once this is resolved, I indicated I would issue a partial initial decision as to the 1994-95 audit.

I received a revised audit from DOE on June 25, 2010 (Exhibit B). Exhibit B is attached and fully incorporated herein. By letter dated August 24, 2010, Archway indicated no objections to the mathematical calculations in this audit which are consistent with my prior rulings and the decision of the Commissioner (Exhibit C). Exhibit C is attached and fully incorporated herein.

Therefore, I accept the audit for the 1994-95 school year as submitted by DOE on June 25, 2010 (Exhibit B), which includes the amount that Archway is obligated to return to the districts who sent students to Archway's PSH during the 1994-95 school year. I ORDER that Archway reimburse these sending districts the amount of their overpayments for the 1994-95 school year within sixty (60) days after the final decision in this matter.

I hereby FILE this partial initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended partial decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make final decisions in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this partial decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended partial decision shall become a final partial decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended partial decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.
