On behalf of the New Jersey Association of Mental Health and Addiction Agencies, Inc., I would like to thank Chairwoman Huttle, Vice-Chairwoman Tucker and the members of the committee for the opportunity to testify in support of Assembly Resolution 75 which memorializes the United States Senate to ratify the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. I would also like to thank the sponsors of this legislation, Chairwoman Huttle and Senator Vitale for recognizing the importance of this issue.

The Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD) is an international disability treaty that requires the nations/states that ratify it to promote, protect and ensure certain rights for people with disabilities, including equality and nondiscrimination; equal recognition before the law for women and children; access to justice, and personal mobility. Some 137 nations/states, including almost every member of the European Union, have ratified the treaty, which has been in force since 2008. The United States has not.

There is great irony in the U.S. response. The treaty is based on American constitutional values and reflects the spirit and principles of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), a staple of protection of the rights and inclusion of people with disabilities in mainstream society in the U.S. And yet, our nation is not supporting those same rights globally by adopting the CRPD.

One billion people around the world are living with disabilities today, including 58 million Americans – 5.5 million of whom are U.S. veterans. Estimates suggest that four out of 10 American travelers – or their travel companions – are people with disabilities who are facing constant barriers and discrimination while living, working and traveling abroad.

NJAMHAA

By not ratifying the CRPD, the U.S. creates a leadership vacuum that will force other countries to provide what likely will be less effective approaches to accessibility. Americans abroad could face technologies and infrastructures that are incompatible with U.S. standards. And U.S. companies will lose a significant market for accessible products.

Leadership by the U.S. in fighting discrimination against people with disabilities – which often results in infanticide and forces exclusion – by exporting the elements synonymous with the ADA model to other countries could make an enormous difference.

In some places in the world, men, women and children are housed in institutions without benefit of family life, social interaction or community resources. Some are not even given the dignity of a name. Their rights and their dignity need protecting. They live with stigma, which is not just a word but a quantifiable barrier that fosters stereotypes founded on erroneous beliefs and incorrect perceptions — a barrier that negatively affects every aspect of their lives, from seeking and receiving treatment to attaining employment and housing and even engaging in simple daily socialization.

Reducing stigma has been a long-standing organizational priority for the New Jersey Association of Mental Health and Addiction Agencies. NJAMHAA represents 180 non-profit community based organizations, both hospital based and free standing, that serve 500,000 adults and children with mental health, substance use and behavioral and emotional disorders. Collectively, our member organizations employ 98,000 members of the New Jersey workforce.

NJAMHAA joins the more than 700 organizations representing advocates for people with disabilities, veterans' groups and businesses who support the U.S. ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. The CRPD can help obliterate stigma by providing equality, independence, respect and reasonable accommodation for those with disabilities.

U.S. adoption of the treaty requires no new legislation nor would it impact the budget. It is a non-enforceable treaty that seeks participating nations to adopt legislative, administrative and policy measures in alignment with the convention; avoid practices contrary to the convention; eliminate discrimination; seek universally designed goods, services and equipment; promote research for affordable assistive technology, and raise awareness and the need for professional training.

It is important to note that the treaty also creates the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. This is a policy forum for addressing issues that affect people with disabilities. Every two years, the committee will submit a report to the United Nations General Assembly reflecting information from participating nations on their efforts to meet the obligations of the convention. It is through this forum that, as a participating nation, the U.S. would have the means to export the benefits of the ADA, helping to set the global standard of disability rights.

NJAMHAA encourages our government to make an unambiguous commitment to equality for people with disabilities, mental health and substance use disorders, and to send a desperately needed, consistent message by ratifying the CRPD treaty. This sentiment is captured in AR-75.

NJAMHAA is grateful for the compassion and understanding of the issue the sponsors of this bill have shown. We are happy to support AR-75 and encourage the other members of this committee to support it as well. Thank you for the opportunity to be heard.
