Women's Leadership Committee Inspires Students Through Positive Examples and Role Models

Trenton, NJ - Lt. Governor Kim Guadagno today addressed 7th and 8th grade girls from South Plainfield Middle School as part of a program organized by the South Plainfield Women's Leadership Committee. Lt. Governor Guadagno shared stories from her personal experiences and offered advice to the students on pursuing their own goals.

"I've been the first one to do a couple of my jobs - first woman Sheriff in Monmouth County, first Lt. Governor in New Jersey - and I have discovered the importance of writing your own playbook," said Lt. Governor Guadagno. "No matter what your gender is, you can forge your own path to success based on your best efforts. As tomorrow's leaders, your achievements will redefine what is possible."

The South Plainfield Women's Leadership Committee supports and encourages young women to take a leadership role at school and in their community. Each year, the group brings women leaders to the middle school to speak about leadership roles and discuss their career paths to inspire young girls to pursue their ambitions.
