The Division of Release, operating out of Central Office, has offices in each state correctional facility. The primary duty of the Division of Release is to evaluate and assess each of New Jersey's adult incarcerated offenders and determine their eligibility and appropriateness for parole release. The Division of Release prepares each case for parole consideration by the members of the State Parole Board. The staff is responsible for gathering and summarizing professional reports concerning an inmate's criminal history, including the current offense, an inmate's social, physical, educational and psychological progress to date, and an objective social and psychological risk and needs assessment.

Revocation Unit

The Revocation Unit is responsible for conducting probable cause and final parole revocation hearings to determine if a parolee has violated the terms and conditions of his or her parole. The Revocation Unit hearing officers make formal recommendations to members of the State Parole Board concerning parole violations. These recommendations include whether or not a parolee's parole status shall be revoked and whether to return the offender to prison or if the terms and conditions of parole should be modified in some fashion.

This Division of Parole is one of New Jersey's largest police agencies with 363 sworn parole officers staffing 18 operational units statewide; of which (10) are District Parole Offices (DPO). The Electronic Monitoring Unit (EMU), the Office of Interstate Services (OIS), the Fugitive Unit, the Special Operations Unit, the Training Unit, the Investigative Management Office (IMO), and the Sex Offender Management Unit- South (SOMU) are located at the SPB Central Office Headquarters (COHQ) in Trenton. The Division of Parole is managed by a Director, 4 Captains (Supervising Parole Officers-SPO), 11 Lieutenants (District Parole Supervisors-DPS) and 36 Sergeants (Assistant District Parole Supervisors –ADPS). In addition to their supervision duties, a number of the parole officers serve as members of the FBI Joint Terrorism Task Force, the U.S. Marshals Service New York/New Jersey Regional Fugitive Task Force, and all officers partner with local and state investigations as needed. In FY 2011, the Division of Parole was assigned 4,272 parolees bringing the total to 15,685 parolees under supervision this year. These parolees included:

- Individuals released at the discretion of the State Parole Board Panel;
- Violent offenders released to a period of mandatory supervision under the No Early Release Act;
- Sex offenders sentenced to lifetime supervision under Megan's Law;
- Court ordered conditional discharge cases from Specialized Treatment Unit; and

The Juvenile Panel performs quarterly reviews for the juveniles incarcerated in secure and residential facilities managed by the New Jersey Juvenile Justice Commission. For each juvenile entering a secure or residential facility, the Juvenile Panel conducts an initial review, establishes a time goal, and informs the juvenile that the Juvenile Panel will monitor and assess the juvenile's overall progress and community suitability during routine follow-up review sessions. Based on these reviews, the panel may render one of the following decisions: continue confinement, defer release for review at a future date, refer the juvenile to the adult panel, have the juvenile serve MAX, or grant the juvenile a release to parole supervision or Post Incarceration supervision. The Juvenile Unit is also responsible for processing all revocation and rescission hearings for the juvenile offenders.

FY 2011 Programs and Initiatives

The SPB, over the past few years, has invested a considerable amount of man power hours and other resources to support and improve its reentry processes. A large amount of time has been directed at developing and maintaining community relationships. The SPB has formed strong and lasting partnerships with local government agencies, foundations, corporations, labor unions, non-profit organizations, faith-based entities, community groups and individual volunteers and mentors. During FY 2011, the SPB developed and implemented a number of new partnerships with both state and federal agencies and organizations to enhance New Jersey's offender reentry effort. These partnerships have proven effective in helping ex-offenders succeed during the transition from prison to the community.

Parolee Employment Placement Program

In early May the SPB and the Department of Labor and Workforce Development (NJLWD) partnered to identify resources to maximize the potential of parolees and support a successful transition to the work force. The partnership introduced the Parolee Employment Placement Program (PEPP) in an effort to reduce recidivism and improve the level of employment services to parolees. Based upon the recent successes with similar models utilized throughout the country, it is expected that this pilot project will both reduce recidivism and increase an offender's likelihood of obtaining and retaining employment. Through a competitive Notice of Grant Opportunity within the NJLWD, three organizations were awarded performance-based grants to implement the initiative. The organizations are: Blessed Ministries, serving the Northern Region, Shiloh Community Development Center serving the Central Region and Mid-Atlantic States Career and Education Center serving parolees returning to the Southern Region.

Parolee Volunteer Initiative

In FY 2011, SPB Chairman James Plousis created the Parolee Volunteer Initiative (PVI) in an effort to provide parolees an opportunity to give back to the community in which they resided while at the same time improving their skills in order to obtain gainful employment. Returning parolees are able to volunteer at non-profit service organizations serving the communities in which they reside. Upon confirmation of volunteer activities, parolees are presented with certificates detailing the volunteer activities and location(s), which serves to document their record of volunteer service and may assist them to obtain gainful employment.

Veteran Offender Reentry Initiative

In recognition of the growing segment of the inmate/parolee population that have served in the U.S. Military Services prior to their entry into the criminal justice system, Chairman Plousis, very proudly launched the Veterans Offender Reentry Initiative (VORI), as an innovative practice in offender reentry. Acknowledging that veterans who serve our country are often eligible for services and entitlements once they are discharged, the SPB partnered with the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs, the local Veteran Services Offices, and the American Legion of NJ, in order to develop the most effective means for assisting veteran offenders to apply for services from their local federally funded programs; thereby reducing the cost that the state would otherwise absorb. The SPB organized and facilitated a number of community meetings, followed by training sessions throughout the state. These efforts brought both civilian and law enforcement staff from partnering agencies and organizations together to implement the initiative. The intent of the training was to ensure that veteran offenders will be referred to and provided services through the federally funded programs and no longer consumes services funded by the tax payers of New Jersey.

To ensure the success of the initiative, the SPB created a pilot project in Ocean County in partnership with the local American Legion. The project was designed to encourage members from the local American Legion to act as mentors to the veteran offenders under parole supervision.

The SPB has also hosted two regional law enforcement conferences, presented the Veteran Offender Reentry Initiative at two national conferences and published related articles in several periodicals/journals.

NJSPB Student Internship Program

In FY 2011, the SPB renewed its relationships with colleges and universities throughout the State by introducing the newly revised Student Internship Program (SIP). The SIP is designed to offer skills building through practical “on-the-job” experience. Internships with the SPB allow students to apply academic theory into workplace practice, have an outcome-based experience that prepares them for jobs in the criminal justice system and related fields as well as offers them a platform for networking and building professional relationships. The interns are supervised by experienced staff and observe or assist in daily operation activities.

The SPB benefits from the interns as they add to the workforce, assist in the completion of work tasks, and thereby increase the agency's productivity. The students bring new technology and ideas from the classroom; provide staff the opportunity to train potential employees; add diversity in the agency's workforce; are cost-effective; and provide the agency with the opportunity to assist them in developing a “tool box” of skills that will benefit them in the future if they seek careers in the criminal justice system.

The internship program has proven to be a valuable resource for both the students and the agency. A description of the SIP can be found on the NJSPB Website located <http://www.state.nj.us/parole/recruitment.html> along with the application packet, that can be downloaded and scanned to the SIP Coordinator. In FY 2011, over 40 students from the state colleges and universities applied for internships and more than 30 underwent criminal background investigations, fingerprinting and the review process. The SPB approved 25 student interns and made assignments to the district offices, secure institutions, community programs, and central office.

Looking Forward

Looking forward to FY 2012, the SPB remains committed to promoting public safety and improving the quality of programs and services that help foster change and aid in the rehabilitation of offenders. The SPB seeks to implement evidence-based and emerging practices and strategies to advance sex offender management by supporting leadership training, organizational changes, strategic planning, and collaboration with partnering agencies that offer key programming and service in the community.

The SPB will seek to identify effective programs and strategies to address the special needs populations including: veteran offenders, female offenders, offenders with co-existing disorders, and juvenile offenders. To ensure that sufficient resources are available to support effective programming and meet the needs of even the most difficult individuals and manage high risk parolees, the agency will focus on developing a more effective grant writing team to improve its ability to respond to grant solicitations and competitively compete for federal funding.
