HELL boreas roaring, and each blast replete,
 With swift driven snow from the sky;
 The loud foaming waves, on the ocean they meet,
 And seem their vast powers to try;
 But winter shall soon yield its rigid drear sway,
 And music again shall be heard from the spray.

THE late gliding rivers in fetters are bound,
 In whose streams the pike us'd to play;
 No gambols of lambkins, no nightingales sound,
 To soften the rigor of day.
 No ærial songsters invite us to rise,
 With music's soft notes from the spray,
 Their flight they have taken to more clement skies,
 Where still waft the zephyrs of May.

SEE now the clouds in dark assemblage rise,
 And dreary darkness overspread the skies,
 Thro' which the sun strives to transmit his beams,
 But sheds his silky light in stragg'ling streams,
 On yon tall oak! Behold its top laid bare!
 Its body rent, and scatter'd thro' the air.

A certain and radical cure for the Scurvy, which will not cost more than three pence per week.

It has proved the most effectual in this tormenting disorder, attended with irritation, continual blotches in the face, &c. after every other application has failed, and particularly those famous expensive drops, and other nostrums, whose reputation the writer hereof has found to be much superior to their merit. He therefore desires from the sole principle of humanity, that what he has experienced to be so great a benefit, may be universally known, for it came to his knowledge by a mere accident:

“Two ounces of cream of tartar, one ounce of sulphur, and one ounce of Ethiop's mineral, pound them fine and mix them in half a pound of treacle, taking half a spoonful an hour after breakfast, and the same quantity going to rest; if this should purge too much, take it only once in 24 hours every evening. Continue the practice, and the effect will soon demonstrate its utility.

Receipt to make a liquor which may be substituted in the place of beer.

Take rye or wheaten bran, and boil it in soft water; then strain it, and fill a barrel with it; afterwards diffuse a leaven, eight days old in it, and, if the weather is hot, fermentation will take place in less than twenty-four hours. As soon as the foam that arises through the bung hole begins to sink, stop it up carefully, and let the liquor rest for some days, that it may become clear. When the bran has been hindered from acquiring any bad taste, this liquor is pleasant enough, has a vinous and acidulous taste; it is, in short, the lemonade of the poor inhabitants of the country.

So easily is water made to acquire vinous properties, and to quench thirst, that we need not rob the cattle of their bran; a little honey or sugar, a few saccharine roots diluted in a good deal of water, will suffice.

New method of purifying corrupt water.

To a puncheon of foul water add half an ounce of allern previously dissolved in a pint of warm water, which will render the former in 48 hours as clear as the finest spring.

A woman whose ruling passion is not vanity, is superior to any man of equal faculties.

VII. Month July, begins on Sunday, hath 31 days.

BROWN o'er the wide extended fields,
 The heavy harvest waves;
 Its treasure to the reaper yields,
 And forms the ponderous sheaves,
 Now, grateful for the bounty given,
 Let's raise our thankful voice to heaven.

A Dialogue between an Irish Inn-keeper and an Englishman.

Englishman—Halloa, house! Inn-keeper—I don't know any one of that name. Eng. Are you the master of the inn? Inn. Yes, Sir, please your honor, when my wife's from home. Eng. Have you a bill of fare? Inn. Yes Sir, the fair of Mollingar and Ballin-slee are the next week. Eng. I see. How are your beds? Inn. Very well I thank you, Sir. Eng. Have you any mountain? Inn. Yes Sir, this country is full of mountains. Eng. I mean a kind of wine. Inn. Yes Sir, all kinds, from Irish wine (butter milk) to burgundy. Eng. Have you any porter? Inn. Yes Sir, Pat is an excellent porter, he'll go any where. Eng. No I mean porter to drink. Inn. Oh, Sir he'd drink the ocean, never fear him for that. Eng. Have you any fish? Inn. They call me an odd fish. Eng. I think so. I hope you are not a shark. Inn. No, sir, indeed I am not a lawyer. Eng. Have you any soals? Inn. For your boots or shoes, sir? Eng. Psha! have you any plaice? Inn. No, sir, but I was promised one if I would vote for Mr. B. Eng. Have you any wild fowl? Inn. They are tame enough now, for they have been killed these three days. Eng. I must see myself. Inn. And welcome, sir, I will fetch you the looking glass.

THE MIDSUMMER GUEST.

A MATRIMONIAL DIALOGUE.

Mrs Hyson. I wish you would take a trip with me to the Springs this summer—my dear. Mr Hyson. I had much rather not—my duck. Mrs H. And why not—my love? Mr H. Because I don't choose it—my sweet. Mrs H. Not choose it—my darling? Mr H. I can't afford it—my precious. Mrs H. Why not afford it—Mr Hyson? Mr H. Because it is much too expensive—Mrs Hyson. Mrs H. Expensive!—why there is neighbor Jenkins and his family propose spending two whole months there—man. Mr H. Neighbor Jenkins is a fool, and his wife no better than she should be—woman. Mrs H. I think however you need not abuse my friends—sir. Mr H. I shall not imitate the example of your friends—ma'am. Mrs H.—Then if you wont go, I will——that's Poz——
Husband. Mr H.—And if you do go, you wont have a penny from me——that's P z——wife.

VIII. Month August, begins on Wednesday, hath 31 days.

THE swain now bid the lab'ring steer,
 Draw home the burthen of the year;
 His barn with hay and sheaves, with corn
 His crib he stows; ripe fruits adorn
 The orchard whole high branches bend
 To allure the taste and court the hand.

THE meads, so late y dress'd in green,
 Are now o'erspread with sad'ning gloom,
 No more the fragrant blossoms seen
 Array'd in nature's lovely bloom;
 On yon high mountain's shaggy brow,
 The pale leaves falling from the bough.

THE blasted grove, the naked plain,
 All nature's aspect, dark and drear,
 Proclaim thy soul depressing reign,
 To ev'ry eye and ev'ry ear:
 For oft, while winds of evening blow,
 Pale melancholy's sombre gloom,
 The timid soul to care will doom,
 And conjure up ideal woe.

On a LADY who squinted.
IF ancient poets Argus prize,
Who boasted of an hundred eyes,
Sure greater praise to her is due,
Who looks an hundred ways with two.

RECEIPT FOR A SCORNFUL BEAUTY.
LOVER.

DOCTOR, whose med'cines can erase,
The lurking seeds of each disease;
From fair Lucinda can your art
Purge too of cruelty her heart.

DOCTOR.

RECIPE: first of complaisance,
The genuine sort w'import from France,
One ounce; of correspondence four,
And lovers vows as many more.
Six drachms of friendship is enough,
Dissolv'd in well-seign'd tears quint. stiff.
To these you need not add above
Two, or at most three grains of love;
(A drug we seldom now prescribe)
With which assurance mix ad. lib.
In sweet good nature these infuse,
And when occasion offer use.

ON MUSICAL MIMICKRY.

THE singing of a cuckoo, and the cackling of a hen, have been often introduced into musical performances. Vivaldi, in his Seasons, or concerto so called, has introduced the barking of a dog. He has many other strange contrivances, attempting even to describe, as well as to imitate, the various changes of the elements.

If those composers, who take such pleasure in their musical imitations of the noises of animals, will shew their ingenuity in that manner, I would advise them rather to follow the more effectual method of introducing the creatures themselves; and by way of example shall give them the following story, as it is related by Mons. Bayle, in his Critical Dictionary, under the article of Lewis XI. "The abbot de Baigne, a man of great wit, had invented many things relating to musical instruments; and being in the service of the king, was once commanded by him, to procure harmonious sounds from the cries of hogs; imagining the thing altogether impossible. The abbot was not in the least perplexed at such a command, but asked the money to perform it, which was immediately delivered to him, and he effected the most surprising and remarkable thing that was ever heard. He got together a large number of hogs, all of different ages, and put them into a tent, or pavilion, covered with velvet, before which tent there was a wooden table, painted: and he had an organical instrument, with a certain number of stops, so contrived, that when he hit upon those stops, it answered to some spikes, which pricking the hogs that stood behind, in a due order, made them cry out in so harmonious a manner, that the king, and all his attendants, were highly delighted.

Extract from the Harleian Manuscripts. Number 6824.

Folio 190.

SATURDAY, June 24, 1724, I was at the funeral of the Rev. Mr. Foard, curate of Marybone. The Rev. Mr. Thomas Riddle, who was curate of St. Giles' in the Fields, and since lecturer, gave me the following account, that on one certain Sunday, he, Mr. Riddle, performed the following duties.

In the morning. Married six couple, then read the whole prayers, and preached; after that churched six women.

In the afternoon. Read prayers, and preached; christened thirty-two children, six at home, the others at the font; buried twenty-three corpses, and read the distinct service over them separately, and this done by 9 at night.

It was then mentioned by another clergyman, that he had a paper given him to pray for the accomplishment of a young woman's desires.

Folly considered as a Vegetable.

FOLLY is an ever-green that sprouts, buds, and bears fruit all the year round; it shoots up in any soil, and requires little or no cultivation: has been found to flourish in cities, and great towns as well as in the country: and sometimes it has happened, that its growth has been remarkably luxuriant within the verge of a court. It is frequently exotic, and transplanted from other climates, in which case it soon withers and decays, unless it is engrafted with the natural and wild produce of the country. It may be ranked in the vegetable kingdom among the fungi or mushrooms, since like them, it springs up on a sudden, like them is quickly propagated, and it quickly disappears, without ever being able to discover its seeds, or account for its preservation.

A diverting expedient made use of by CHARLES the Great, to cure his courtiers of Foppery.

CHARLES, upon all public occasions, was accustomed to appear with the utmost magnificence and splendor; at others times, he was modest in his dress, and a declared enemy to luxury, against which, he made many sumptuary laws; but finding them not so effectual as he intended, he took the following method, "sharper than any law," of enforcing them. Having observed the nobility about him, dressed, one winter, in very fine silk robes, lined with fur of great price, he carried them with him to hunt, one rainy morning, through woods and other places, and when they came in, permitted nobody to change their cloths, saying, they would dry better by the fire, which shrivelled all the furs, and spoiled them entirely. The next morning he directed they should appear in the dress they wore the day before when the court was pretty full—"What a tattered company have I about me! said he; while my sheep-skin cloak which turns this way or that, as the weather fits, is not the worse for yesterday's wear. For shame, continued he; learn to drels like men; and let the world judge of your rank from you merit, not from your dress. Leave silks and finery to women, or to those days of pomp and ceremony, when robes are worn for show and not for use."

STAINS, occasioned by fruit, are readily removed from the clothes, by wetting them and placing them near lighted brimstone; a few matches will answer the purpose. The sulphurous gas extracts the mark.

A few handfuls of sea salt mixed with about one cwt. of lime to be used in white-wash, will make it adhere to the wall and destroy insects.

For taking a Film off a Horse's Eye.

BLACK-PEPPER, finely ground, and sifted through a piece of gauze; add thereto fine ground Salt, of each as much as will lay on the point of a case knife, mixing them well together; then take as much Dough as will thinly cover an ounce ball, make it flat, place the Pepper and Salt thereon, and roll them up, making the same about the size of an ounce ball; then put it as low down as possible in the off ear, fastening the ear so as to prevent its falling out. The above takes off the worst of Films, and no way injures the horse.

The following is stated to be an infallible cure for a whooping cough:—

DISSOLVE a scruple of salt of tartar in a gill of water; and ten grains of cochineal, finely powdered; sweeten this with fine sugar, give to an infant the fourth part of a table spoonful four times a day; to a child of two or three years old half a spoonful; and from four years and upward, a spoonful may be taken. The relief is immediate and the cure is general within five or six days.

CURE FOR A CANCER.

“WHILE I was at Smyrna there was a girl afflicted with a cancer in her lip, and the gum was affected. The European physicians consulted on the measures to be taken, and agreed that they saw no other method than to cut it out; and the girl had already submitted herself to that decision.—By an accident of that nature which man can not account for, an old American came to them just in time to prevent the application of the knife.—“Do nothing,” said the American, “I will cure her;” and when he had pledged himself strongly, the physicians consented.

He procured a copper vessel, newly tinned in the inside, an essential circumstance, and having poured a certain quantity of olive oil into it, he made it boil, over a small fire, sufficiently to keep it agitated, and so for three times in twenty-four hours. With this the oil resolved itself to the consistency of an ointment, and by constantly rubbing the parts affected, he cured her in fourteen days.—Nothing else was done.

An eminent divine, says a London paper, presents us with the following receipt, which he says, is more valuable than gold, and which he assures us has given wonderful relief to numberless persons who were sadly afflicted with pains in their bowels, could, and asthmatic disorders, and even to many who were bordering to a consumption. Take a handful of fever few, rosemary tops and linseed, bruise the seed, and boil all together in three pints of water till half reduced, strain it off and add as much citron, and Narbonne honey, as the stomach will bear, take two table spoonfuls night and morning. If a child one spoonful is sufficient; if a long standing asthmatic complaint, with difficulty in breathing, take the honey on toasted bread every morning with new or warm milk, or tea made of rosemary, or sage; it will cure them if persevered in.

I TOLD YOU SO.

WHAT a wise man is this I! He foresees all evils and tells them, and how they will happen. He warns every one of every misfortune that ever falls upon him—after the mischief is all done, he struts and says with a boasting superiority, I told you so, though perhaps he never said a word about it, until the thing happened.

It is warm weather—a man buys a quarter of veal or mutton—he deliberates whether he had better hang it up in the buttery or in the cellar—he does not know whether the heat above stairs, or the damp air below is most injurious to fresh meat—finally he puts it in the buttery—his wife knows nothing of this, but the next day the meat is spoiled; the husband says, “My dear the meat is spoiled.” “Where was it put?” say the good woman. “In the buttery.” “Aye I told you so,” says the wife.

“My dear,” says the wife, one very pleasant day not a cloud to be soon; “I shall visit Mrs. such a one to day; will you come and drink tea and wait on me home?” The husband pouts a little; but the woman makes her visit; in the afternoon a shower comes over, and the earth is covered with water; in the evening the woman comes in, dripping with water; her husband meets her at the door, exulting, “Aye, I told you so, but you are always gossiping about.

A young man is going to take a ride; it is fine weather, and he thinks it useless to take a great coat; a shower comes upon him suddenly and he gets wet; he comes home at evening and is met at the door with this consoling address, I told you so.

IMPROVEMENTS.

A cheap method of using candles has been invented by Mr. Ezekiel Walker, of London, which consists in using candles of ten to the pound, which are to be set in a candle stick, so placed as to form an angle of 30 degrees with the perpendicular. The advantages are, that candles so placed—first, requires no snuffing; second, they give light of an uniform tenacity, without the least smoke; and third, the steadiness of the light is supposed to be a great advantage to the eyes. Two small candles are better than one large one.
