The Clerk declared the Honorable Leon Leonard elected Speaker for the One Hundred and Seventy-first Session of the General Assembly. The Clerk requested Messrs. Cavinato, McCay and Vogel to act as a committee of three to escort the Speaker to the rostrum of the House, where he took the oath of office and was escorted to the Speaker's chair.

Mr. Leonard upon taking the chair addressed the members of the House as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly:

The November, 1946, election, in which there was such an impressive outpouring of voters on behalf of the Republican candidates in New Jersey and nationally, has imposed upon us a solemn mandate that we govern in accordance with the will of the people who selected us.

Pursuant to that referendum, we are met today to organize the One Hundred and Seventy-first Session of the New Jersey House of Assembly. Only one duty is before us: The transaction of the people's business with justice and fair-mindedness and with all reasonable dispatch consistent with the orderly processes of the Constitution and the securing of good government.

Speaking for myself, I would indeed be remiss in not thanking you for the trust you have imposed in me in selecting me as your Speaker, to preside over the destinies of this House during the coming year. I am not unmindful of the historic importance of the office of Speaker of the New Jersey House of Assembly, nor am I forgetful of the gravity of the task you have set before me.

With the full knowledge of the responsibilities of the high office with which you have invested me, I accept this charge. I will fulfill it to the very best of my ability, keeping always in mind the duty I owe to the people of my State, to my own constituents and having always before me the realization that the actions of this House will be judged, in large measure, by the good judgment, even-handed dealing and the fairness of its Speaker.

We of the majority party are fortunate in the fact that, for the past three years, the executive and legislative powers of government have been so wisely administered by the Republican Party and that so many constructive legislative and administrative measures have been established.

It can truly be said that during that period, in which many of us participated, that our party has been in a very effective sense the trustee of the commonwealth, administering the powers of government for the public good.

The members of the 1947 House of Assembly are charged with the duty of conserving the gains already made and of carrying such salutary measures to a new peak of effectiveness.

To this end, we await the inaugural message of our incoming Governor, the Honorable Alfred E. Driscoll. We feel certain that he will display a wise grasp of the problems of our government, at the same time recommending the means for the effective solution of such problems.

One of our first duties will be to insist upon the prudent conservation of the financial resources of our State. In carrying out this duty let me point out to you that the raising of taxes is not by any means a mandate to spend, but a command to spend carefully.

We have a duty to the people not to burden them with more taxes than are equitable and necessary and to insist that the State receive a dollar's worth of goods and services for every dollar expended.

In this respect, the whole question of a sound State tax policy is raised. Already a sound beginning has been made in this realm during the term of Governor Edge and it is expected by all the people that this work will be carried forward with all diligence.

But no sound tax measures can be secured for the State without some knowledge and some inquiry into the methods of Federal taxation. With the Federal government preempting almost all of the major sources of tax money, we have covered only one part of the problem in devising a wise frame for the imposition of taxes within the State.

It would seem to be a distinct advantage to us if there could be a review of the whole question of Federal tax procedures in industrial States such as New Jersey is, in order that this and other States so situated be allowed to retain within the State a fair share of the taxes it pays, instead of allowing them to be dissipated in other jurisdictions.

There is also the duty we all owe to the veterans who have borne the brunt of the battle in the recent war in order that our way of life be preserved. Already the State has enacted over fifty laws in the interest of veterans, covering every phase of the problems presented by them for solution.

One of the most outstanding of these has been the devoting of $41,000,000 to a veterans' housing program late last year after the lamentable failure of the Federal Government to do other than confuse this issue at a time when positive action was so desperately needed.

It is our hope and our intention to serve still further the true interests of the veterans.

Closely related to the veterans' housing problem and overlapping it to some degree, is the plight in which many of our cities find themselves. The question of long-term housing projects, sychronized to slum clearance measures, the pressing problems of municipal highway congestion and traffic relief, the question of salaries of school teachers and other municipal employees, sound municipal financing and protecting city dwellers and business enterprises from confiscatory real estate taxes, will all confront us as this session progresses.

We will likewise be called upon to exercise our best judgment as to measures to implement our existing social security program. One measure that will almost certainly come before us for decision is the further extension of workmen's compensation laws to include payment to workers incapacitated for employment by illness.

This question is now before the State Post-War Economic Welfare Commission, and I ask that you listen to their views with the utmost attention.

There is also the question of highway construction and financing, with its related problem of how far the State can and should go in the dedication of funds for specific purposes.

New Jersey has been famous nationally and internationally for its admirable system of trunk highways and feeder roads. Our methods of construction have served as models both here and abroad.

All of us know that highway construction, outside of the merest necessary maintenance, came to a virtual end during the war. At the same time, travel has risen to new heights.

I ask that you consider highway needs with the most serious thought, always bearing in mind the other necessary expenditures for State construction and for administrative purposes.

Construction measures in other fields will also be one of our pressing problems. I refer to the over-crowding in our three State mental hospitals and in our other State institutions. To these casualties of our modern mode of existence we owe a duty which we cannot ignore and still consider that we have served our people well.

One issue which also presses for some solution is the matter of safety in public buildings, so tragically emphasized during recent weeks in various sections of the country. It will be your province to decide during the coming weeks whether this calls for State administrative measures or for a revision of local ordinances.

There is, further, the question of industrial peace. I am unable to believe that our American ingenuity and sense of square dealing can fail to find some common and middle ground upon which both labor and industry can stand for a solution of their difficulties without the serious economic loss to both sides and the disruption of essential services to the public caused by frequent work stoppages.

These are but indications of the extent and nature of the work we will be called upon to do in this House.

There are others: Conservation of our natural resources, our beaches, our parks and woodlands, our hunting and fishing grounds, upon which depend so much of the health and wealth of our State; continuation of governmental reorganization, so ably started by the administration which is now coming to a close; dredging of our inland waterways; increasing our supplies of potable and industrial water; industrial and mineral research in order to attract still more industries to our industrially wealthy State; a modernized legislative procedure.

All of these resolve themselves into a formula, simple in statement but decidedly complex in the achievement: The protection of the rights and privileges of all our citizens.

If this House is alive to its duty, and I am certain that it is, we can attain all of our objectives. If we pursue proper ends with fidelity and with seriousness of purpose, this House will discharge its obligation to the people of this State and will merit their further approval.

We can do all of these things and still be able to adjourn at an early date with all the traditional liberties of our republican form of government safeguarded and furthered to the utmost.

I pledge myself to aid, with all my capabilities, in this program.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE

STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

January 14, 1947.

To the Members of the Legislature:

In conforming to Constitutional requirements which provide that the Chief Executive communicate to the Legislature at the convening of a regular session, it gives me great pleasure to transmit this message to your honorable body.

With the inauguration of a new Chief Executive but one week distant, I feel entirely relieved of the responsibility of advancing any comprehensive program of prospective or immediate legislation. Rather, at this time I desire to take advantage of the opportunity of expressing my deep-felt appreciation of the loyalty and unselfish support of the members of the Legislature for the programs I have advocated during the three years of my incumbency of this great office.

Even the requirements of maintaining political party lines have had little effect on recommended policies and legislation. In voicing my thanks I want it distinctly understood that I am including the minority with the majority, even though at times they felt it their duty to differ. Filibustering or obstructive tactics, however, were seldom introduced into the controversies, and as a result the business of the State, for which the administration must naturally assume responsibility, has been conducted in a prompt and efficient manner.

It is likewise a source of particular gratification when it is realized that during my term of office I have been called upon to make over 750 appointments, many of them of great importance, and that not one has failed of confirmation by the Senate charged with that responsibility.

I also want to express my sincere thanks to the State department heads and to my personal staff who, whether my appointees or otherwise, have demonstrated their loyalty and have been so constructive in their recommendations and service that they have made my tenure of office a genuine pleasure. Likewise to the army of State Civil Service employees, whose faithfulness and devotion to duty I have been able to reward to a considerable degree, but not as much as they deserve.

While expressing my commendation of the contributions made by my staff, department heads and cabinet officers, I desire at this time to refer directly to one who during the past three years has given me and the State of New Jersey a service that in my judgment could not have been surpassed by any other appointee. I refer to Attorney-General Walter D. Van Riper.

In the many hours and days spent in the consideration and attempted solution of the complex problems which faced this administration during war and during reconversion, I never failed to receive sound advice from the Attorney-General.

I have no hesitation in asserting that New Jersey has greatly benefited through his unselfish service.

Likewise it affords me much pleasure to thank the press, both within and outside of the State, which, with few exceptions, has been most co-operative and as a result contributed largely to the success of the ambitious program which was outlined at the start of this administration and which has been carried into effect.

That small segment which could never find anything constructive or to their liking have my condolences rather than condemnation.

At the completion of my term I feel I am justified in stating that through all this co-operation the structure of the State of New Jersey is today better able to provide the essential services for the people than it was three years ago.

STRIKES IN UTILITY PLANTS

Most important and timely has been the leadership New Jersey has taken in protecting its four million citizens from the privations and disasters of strikes in public utilities. Although work stoppages have threatened to leave the people without the essentials of life, our utility bargaining act, the first in the nation, has operated effectively to prevent public suffering.

This law, which I regard as one of the greatest accomplishments of my administration, proved a bulwark that saved our citizens from the violence and destruction visited upon neighboring cities, where conditions at times approximated the lawlessness and hardships of the Middle Ages.

The right of collective bargaining has in no way been impaired by the measure. On the contrary, it has been greatly strengthened and simplified by the authorization of fact-finding panels to hear and decide industrial disputes.

THE FUNDAMENTAL PURPOSE OF THIS ACT HAS BEEN TO ESTABLISH LEGALLY THE PRINCIPLE THAT WHILE NEGOTIATIONS ARE PENDING CONSUMERS MUST NOT BE DENIED THE NECESSITIES OF LIFE.

This law has been in operation since March 26, 1946. During this period several strikes in utility companies were threatened, and the workers in fact prepared to lay down their tools. In all the early tests, however, the employees agreed to work for the State, and when the State Government exercised its prerogatives under the act and seized and operated the utility plants there was no cessation of service while negotiations were pending.

However, with below-freezing weather; with no thought of the consequences to the public; and with studied intent to make arbitration meetings as difficult and inconvenient as possible, strikes occurred on Christmas Eve in two gas plants operated by the Public Service Corporation.

Although the unions affected had previously accepted arbitration under the utility law, nevertheless, they openly and flagrantly ignored their commitments, and for forty-eight hours, notwithstanding the State had assumed control, remained out on strike. It is true that the grievances in these two cases were settled through hearings held by the State Mediation Board's panel appointed for that purpose. The men returned to work, and no real hardship ensued to the public during the strike period. Nevertheless, the ominous threats of the union leaders, the crass disregard of their commitments under the law, and their willful blindness to public responsibility, are facts which must guide our future labor policies.

Other strikes followed, with the men refusing to work for either their employers or the State, but to date all have been adjusted through the operation of Chapter 38 without inconvenience to the citizenship.

The Act provides no penalties for failure to maintain service, even with the State in control. Nevertheless, organized labor strenuously opposed the measure, for reasons never clearly outlined, as its operation has actually assisted employees in their petitions for improved working conditions. The theory that labor should blindly oppose all suggested improvements in existing labor-management laws is not in the interest of either employer or employee.

The act was passed with the full knowledge of its weakness, but with the hope that the workmen would be loyal to their government, they being employed in an industry regulated by the State in the interest of all the people. This hope was realized during the early disturbances. However, in view of the apparent later determination to call one walkout after another, even when the strikers had formally accepted the fact-finding panels provided by law, it is absolutely essential that Chapter 38 be so amended that to defy the State, acting for all the people, will be subject to suitable penalties. It should be made clear by statute that if the State is compelled to employ substitute help to take the places of workers refusing to obey the State's order, such substitutes can in no way be placed in the category of strike-breakers. On the contrary, they will be patriotic volunteers who, in contrast to the strikers, recognize the hardships which might otherwise occur.

It must always be remembered that the rights of the workers while continuing service should in no way be impaired. The law provides for a full review of all grievances by panels on which the public, employee and employer have full representation. However, during these hearings, as well as in all other negotiations, it must continue to be the paramount duty of the State to assure these vital life necessities to the citizens whose existence depends upon an orderly government.

In all management-labor relations each side must assume equal responsibility if a proper understanding is to be reached.

While the State has been operating the plants and conducting fact-finding panels, officials have had the opportunity to observe that in endeavoring to establish and maintain this policy, necessary to assure industrial peace, management has not always been entirely blameless.

THE RECORD

Perhaps second in importance from the standpoint of efficiency has been the consolidation of over one hundred independent boards, commissions and bureaus, thus reducing by one-third these frequently overlapping responsibilities.

The welfare of our veterans has been a cornerstone of this administration. Instead of a dole, more than 9,800 veterans have been loaned upwards of $21,500,000 to set themselves up in various small businesses, ranging from gasoline stations to tree surgery. Other thousands have been lent funds to furnish newly-acquired homes, thereby saving high interest charges. Preference for veterans in employment opportunities has been provided.

When this record is compared to the colossal waste freely admitted through duplicating Federal control, our Veterans' Bureau has every reason to be proud and veterans to be appreciative.

When the Federal Government's housing program bogged down, New Jersey promptly filled the gap and much progress has been made. For months the Federal Government promised to finance housing requirements for veterans, and State revenues were used for other purposes.

Late in the year, however, the Federal program was at a standstill and I called a Special Session of the Legislature to enact a housing program which received approval of the voters in the General Election, through authorization of a $35,000,000 bond issue. One month to the day after the Legislature passed the program the first housing unit was made available in Trenton and now, two months later, there are forty-four units occupied. Hundreds more are under construction and the entire program would be greatly accelerated if municipal governing bodies would make prompt decisions as to available sites.

Our Civil Service employees have received well-deserved salary increases aggregating $7,000,000, with a regular schedule of annual increments so that they can count upon their future earning capacity.

We have increased the State's revenues from race-track privileges and from motor trucks.

Thousands of migrant workers coming into the State to harvest crops and process foods have been assured decent, sanitary living quarters.

Equality of citizenship opportunities has been established without regard to race, creed, color or national origin.

A start has been made on a program to regain New Jersey's once proud leadership in highway construction, through authorization of North-South Parkways and Freeways.

Thousands of police and firemen whose pension payments were in jeopardy now are assured full payment when they retire, and already $3,000,000 of State funds have been appropriated to this end.

Children of our school districts, rich or poor, have been assured equal opportunity and the educational system has been improved at all levels, including increased State funds available for teachers' salaries and the establishment of a true State University at Rutgers.

Corporations are moving into the State in a steady stream because the threat of tax lightning on their intangible assets has been removed by substitution of a more equitable tax.

The working man has been assured higher UCC benefits when inadvertently thrown out of a job, and the breadwinner injured at his task can convalesce secure in the assurance of substantially increased compensation benefits.

By the appointment of a new Chancellor and Chief Justice the prestige of New Jersey's judicial system has been restored and I am confident will continue to improve in the future.

Opportunity for fraud in elections has been minimized greatly by insistence upon installation of voting machines in the seven most populous counties in the State.

The wave of juvenile crime and delinquency following the war was recognized at its inception and legislation passed to treat this problem at its own age level. To assist this movement a diagnostic centre was authorized to screen out law-breakers in a progressive movement to rehabilitate them.

Recognizing our military responsibilities, the State has co-operated without stint with the Federal Government in the formation of a post-war National Guard that will be second to none in the country and already is well staffed with experienced combat officers.

I am content, friends and legislators, to let this record stand by itself.

FINANCIAL CONDITION

In these days of financial pressure I am particularly gratified to be able to present to my successor a very healthy fiscal picture.

The reorganization of the several financial offices into a single Department of Taxation and Finance went into effect July 1, 1944, six months after assuming office. Later the Legislature passed laws to place the then existing two major State Funds on a uniform fiscal year basis.

The following year's Budget Message contained my further recommendation for legislation to establish a single State Fund in order that the State could operate under one understandable budget. This long overdue and forward step in fiscal operations was enacted into law in 1945.

Fortified with this newly-created, solid fiscal structure, the State was equipped to husband its financial resources during the war years. Its surplus grew each year, nevertheless substantial amounts were appropriated for salary increases to the thousands of State employees who had been affected by the ever-rising cost of living.

Notwithstanding the pressure of war, increased State aid was provided to our counties and municipalities, and an entirely new program was initiated by the appropriation of $3,000,000 to combat beach erosion.

The sound fiscal policies carried out during war days made it possible to appropriate in the first post-war year over $33,000,000 for the expansion and improvement of our greatly congested State highways and almost $3,000,000 for needed additions to State hospitals and educational institutions.

Nor was the State debt permitted to climb during these three years. On the other hand, it was reduced. The reduction of the debt was further accelerated by liquidating before maturity dates over $12,000,000 in bonds—the unpaid portion of the $21,000,000 issued to finance earlier relief costs.

An analysis of the over-all bonded debt picture reveals that $87,720,000 was the gross amount owed when I took office in 1944, as compared with $57,310,000 as I relinquish the responsibility. If the assets of the Sinking Fund are applied, the net State debt will not exceed $37,000,000, exclusive, of course, of any bonds issued or to be issued as a result of the Veterans' Emergency Housing Bond program.

IT IS ALSO PARTICULARLY GRATIFYING TO FURTHER INFORM YOU, AND ALL THOSE INTERESTED IN FACTS, THAT THERE STILL REMAINS IN THE STATE TREASURY A CASH SURPLUS OF OVER $30,000,000.

All this has been accomplished without the imposition of State sales or income taxes or other levies.

INCREASED OFFICE SPACE

There is one item of unfinished business that was postponed mainly because of the veterans' housing emergency. The necessity for increased office facilities to properly house the widely-scattered departments of the State government is generally admitted.

Early in my administration I recommended the establishment by legislation of a Capitol Building Commission. This request was unanimously adopted by the Legislature and necessary advance appropriations were made.

The legislation provided for the acquisition of land for the purpose of building construction, as well as the employment of architects to prepare for such enlargement. Ample ground has now been secured by the State at an expense of approximately $300,000. Various plans have been submitted and generally approved.

These plans provide that the operation shall be undertaken in three stages. The first is to be a commodious office building on West State Street, adjoining the present Capitol Annex. In fact, an appropriation of $6,000,000 for the construction of this building was authorized in the current Appropriations Bill. However, with the close of the war and a recognized shortage of housing units for returning veterans, practically the entire appropriation was transferred, upon my recommendation, to the State's general fund so that it could be made available for this emergency purpose.

I strongly recommend that when the building situation is nearly normal no time be lost in carrying to fulfillment these much-needed improvements.

As I retire to private life after more than a half-century in public service, it is with a genuine feeling of relief, and I hope I may not be considered vain if I include pardonable satisfaction, as well. As I look back over these active years in various types and degrees of public responsibility, two outstanding attributes capture and hold my imagination—friendship and loyalty. Any man can and must succeed if he can command these two essentials to success. I have had them in full measure and I can only wish for Governor-elect Driscoll a duplication and continuance of the same friendships and loyalties.

With such assurance New Jersey will continue to go ever forward, to the modest but justifiable pride of her loyal and patriotic citizenship.

Respectfully submitted,

WALTER E. EDGE,
Governor.

Mr. Brescher offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That when the House adjourn it adjourn to meet Friday next, at eleven A. M., and when it then adjourn it be to meet Monday next, at two P. M.

Which, on motion, was adopted.

The following communication was received from the Governor:

STATE OF NEW JERSEY
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT

To the House of Assembly:

January 14, 1947.

Having been officially advised of the application of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company, through its President, Mr. Chester I. Barnard, for additional service tolls, and realizing that this increase in rates, if granted, would cost the citizens of this State approximately $11,000,000 annually, I have conferred with the members of the New Jersey Board of Public Utility Commissioners and they feel it necessary in the public interest that they be empowered to secure all available and pertinent information bearing upon this important matter.

The Commission likewise has consulted Governor-elect Driscoll as to the necessity of securing all available data, and he has authorized the following statement:

"I am very anxious to have the Board of Public Utility Commissioners take whatever steps may be necessary and be given competent assistance so that there may be a full and complete investigation and hearing of the application for increased rates of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company. The welfare of the public is of foremost interest and the State should and I am sure will insist upon its protection. The Utility Board in its capacity as a quasi-judicial body will, of course, decide the application on the merits after a fair and impartial hearing, where all parties, including the public, will be adequately represented."

I am therefore submitting to the Legislature a proposed act appropriating seventy-five thousand dollars ($75,000), available immediately to the Board of Public Utility Commissioners for the ascertainment of such facts.

Further, I recommend that, as time is limited under the law controlling public hearings, immediate consideration be given to this measure.

Respectfully submitted,

WALTER E. EDGE,
Governor.

The following communication was sent to the desk and read by the Clerk:

MARINE CORPS LEAGUE
ELIZABETH DETACHMENT

January 10, 1947.

Clerk of Assembly,
State House, Trenton, N. J.
DEAR SIR:

We, of the Elizabeth Detachment, Marine Corps League, have been denied the privilege of the use of the Elizabeth Armory. The reason given us in refusal by the Armory officials, is, the fact that we would create competition.

All members and friends are desirous of knowing whether it is to the interest of officials to be concerned with the gains of any group or individuals, providing all requirements are complied with, necessary to rental, in this instance, the Elizabeth Armory.

We, as an organization of approximately two hundred veterans who have fought for and served our country, seek to serve as well in civilian status and are not interested in individual gainings or profits to be derived from the affair in question.

We desire to conduct, for two days, spaced one week apart, a series of amateur boxing matches which, incidentally, the A. A. U. has already sanctioned. Profits derived thereof to benefit the Sister Kenny Fund, who have authorized the use of their name in connection with the boxing matches, also to be used in the rehabilitation of our own veterans.

We, as veterans, strongly protest this refusal, while non-veterans are granted this same requested privilege.

It is our contention that in this instance a certain amount of discrimination has been unduly placed in the direction of our application for use of a public meeting place. Through telephonic efforts we immediately asked for a reconsideration, only to be flatly denied that privilege.

Several months of the year, on one night a week professional boxing matches are held at the aforementioned State Armory. Our interpretation is that this is what is meant by frictional business ventures and to we veterans this discrimination is of a well-known, but unfought, category. The relationship herewith implied is that private monetary returns hold priority over publicly beneficial affairs that aid the youth of our area and therefore combat one of our present major problems, namely juvenile delinquency, also aiding a just and righteous cause for the afflicted of our nation, the Sister Kenny Fund.

Enclosed are copies of letters received from Senator Pascoe, representing Union County, New Jersey, and Mr. William Ohland, of the New Jersey National Militia, Quartermaster Corps.

We ask your co-operation in any way you may aid our cause. Thanking you for your indulgence, we remain,

Sincerely,

(Signed) HAROLD Z. SHERMAN,

EDWARD J. LYONS, JR.,

Co-Chairmen of Boxing Tournament.

Q. M. G. O.
STATE HOUSE
Trenton, New Jersey

December 23, 1946.

Marine Corps League,
Elizabeth Detachment.

1. Application disapproved because of the fact that boxing exhibitions are conducted in the Elizabeth Armory each Tuesday evening, and it is the policy of this Department not to have two events of the similar nature during one week.

For the Quartermaster General:
WILLIAM E. OHLAND,
Commander (SC) NJNM,
Executive Officer.

January 4, 1947.

Marine Corps League,
Elizabeth Detachment,

Jr. Vice Commandant,

Resolved, That the House of Assembly recess until 3:00 P. M. for the purpose of attending the Inaugural Exercises of Governor Driscoll.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF ALFRED E. DRISCOLL

GOVERNOR OF NEW JERSEY

Members of the Legislature, Governor and Mrs. Edge, My Friends and Fellow Citizens:

I accept the office of the Governor of the State of New Jersey with a deep feeling of personal humility and an abiding desire, with your help, to serve my fellow citizens constructively during the next three years. From that day in September of 1777, when your predecessors met in Haddonfield and unanimously resolved that New Jersey was a "State" and no longer a "Colony," many illustrious men have contributed to the traditions that surround the office of Governor.

To Walter E. Edge, one of these illustrious men, a loyal citizen of New Jersey, this inauguration brings to a close his second wartime term as Governor. During these two terms, great accomplishments have been achieved and the structure of our State Government has been improved and strengthened. To him I extend, on behalf of all of our citizens, our best wishes for his happiness for many years to come.

To the members of the Legislature, I offer my sincere co-operation as we seek to accomplish our common task. It is our responsibility, together, to provide a government necessary to meet the needs of our time. The great problems of our day are not political. They are rather social and economic. We should seek their solution, therefore, not on a partisan basis but rather with a united determination to find the answers best suited to our day and our people.

We stand together—all of us—in a narrow corridor of history. Ahead, seen only dimly, is the one world we seek. Behind us is the world we once knew, broken and torn by the ravages of war. Around us, pressing on our consciousness, is the fear of things as they are and may be if we fail to achieve our purposes. The passageway from the divided world of yesterday to the one world of tomorrow is too confining to permit of future battles; for the first blow may well be the last, sealing for eternity our view of a happy future and our hope of ultimate salvation and escape from destructive wars.

In this world atmosphere, New Jersey, one of the important members of our Union of forty-eight sovereign States, must, and with your help, will play her part. The broader implications of our present position are clear. They stem from a conception of our republican form of government as a composite of group interests. While we operate through the mechanics of majority rule, we must not indulge in majority excesses. Our philosophy of government recognizes that today's majorities may be nothing more than a coalition of yesterday's minorities. Over and above any provincial view of party responsibility, we must be moved by a nation-wide recognition that effective government requires the effective expression of all the group interests which make up our society. Political exploitation of any one group has been repudiated. But this does not mean, as some would have us believe, that group interests have been repudiated. We would be well advised to recognize that an effective private enterprise system is not keyed to the welfare of any one group in our society, and in fact demands for its survival a strong government which can and will prevent any group from dominating the others. It is our mandate to restore balance; to reconcile divergent group interests; to avoid group domination; and to implement a better way of life for all our people.

Constitutional Revision

The process of carrying out these principles in terms of practical accomplishment in our State government requires that we re-examine and re-appraise our successes and failures of the past, and that we face frankly our problems and obstacles ahead. Those of us who have served in the Legislature for any length of time have become particularly conscious of the fact that government is a dynamic thing, that problems do not stay solved, that legislative defeats will not remain quiescent under the pressure of constantly changing conditions in our society. Perhaps one of the best examples of this dynamic character of government is the movement for constitutional revision which has pursued an uncertain course ever since the annual message of Governor Joel Parker in 1873, in which he advocated a constitutional convention. It was not until seventy years later that the people of this State finally had an opportunity to express themselves for or against the general principle of constitutional revision and when they did so, it was by a favorable plurality of 154,000—a greater plurality, with two exceptions, than has ever been recorded, for any Governor in the history of the State. Despite this clear-cut mandate for revision, when the people were asked the following year, to vote for or against the text of a revised constitution, they refused the document by an equally predominant majority.

Practical politicians, and students of government as well, found much material for thought in this peculiar turn of events. In retrospect, all would agree, however, that the people in 1944 did not vote in favor of our present constitution of 1844 as much as they voted against the document submitted to them as a whole to replace it. It is easy to speculate upon some of the other factors, such as the partisan political atmosphere, and the cross currents of group disaffection, but such a commentary would serve no useful purpose at this time. Our responsibility today is measured by only one test: if our present constitution of 1844 was unsuited to the conditions of State government in 1943, is it any the less unsuited to the conditions of State government four years later? To my mind, there is only one answer: the present constitution is hopelessly out of step with the requirements of our modern industrialized age. It handicaps rather than helps our efforts to achieve good government and sound fiscal policies. The popular mandate of November, 1946, was a mandate to all the States to assume their proper role in the Federal system, a role which requires an efficient frame of government as well as competent legislative and administrative officers. The deficiencies of our present constitution are so well known as to make it unnecessary for me to describe them at this time. Suffice it to say that each branch of our government needs strengthening. Other States have in recent years recognized a need not unlike our own and have adopted new constitutions. The mandate of 1946 re-enforces and re-affirms the mandate of 1943 and it remains only to implement those two mandates with appropriate legislation.

I urge accordingly that the Legislature proceed to provide for the calling of a constitutional convention, the work of which shall be submitted to the people at the general election next November. In preparation for this proposal, I have given considerable thought to the supposed obstacles to such a convention, and particularly to the position of our less populous counties. It has been assumed that a constitutional convention would mean the loss of the present basis of representation in the Legislature for such counties, and it was not until a procedure had been devised to assure the less populous counties against such loss that constitutional revision reached the stage of a popular referendum. There is not the slightest doubt that this same assurance may be given to the less populous counties in the process of revision through constitutional convention. This assurance, moreover, is in accord with my beliefs. I am convinced that political boundaries play a relatively minor part in a State Legislature; that group interests and party loyalties are in fact the principal factors through which legislation is evolved, and that there are decided advantages in a system which continues the time-tested principle of checks and balances in a legislative body.

My purpose has been to assure the less populous counties that a constitutional convention would not disturb the present basis of legislative representation—by a method which is beyond all legal or practical doubt. I have considered an instructed convention, that is, a convention which would be instructed by the Legislature as to the scope of the subject matter upon which it might work. While there is some authority in other States which would support such a plan, there is also authority to the effect that a constitutional convention is a body of equal dignity with the Legislature and that its scope and procedure can be limited only by the provisions of the State constitution under which it is established, or by the people. I am inclined toward the latter view. While it may be an open question in this State as to whether or not the Legislature may effectually instruct a constitutional convention, the very existence of a doubt as to the possibility is of course persuasive against dependence upon it. But there can be no doubt that the people themselves may instruct a constitutional convention, and that under the law of our present State constitution any attempt to violate such instructions would be a nullity.

The method of providing a convention instructed by the people would require, if we are to avoid separate elections, that the election at which delegates to the convention would be chosen, be likewise used to submit a preliminary question, such as "Do you favor the calling of a constitutional convention to revise the State constitution provided that no change shall be made in the present basis of legislative representation?" All voters would, at the same time, be directed to vote for delegates. The method has the advantage of popular sanction for the calling of a convention in the first instance, a sanction which, by the way, was not deemed to be a prerequisite to the calling of the convention of 1844.

I propose to you, therefore:

(1) A constitutional convention authorized by the people and restricted by them to protect our present system of representation;

(2) The convention to be composed of 60 members elected from our counties, with each county to have the same number of delegates as it has members in the House of Assembly;

(3) The convention to be directed to revise, alter and amend our present constitution, in whole or in part, and to submit its finished work, as a whole or in such parts as it might deem desirable, for approval or rejection by the people at the general election this November.

And let me add this thought: The convention will be successful in direct proportion to the widest possible participation of our citizens and the selection of the highest possible talent that our State so abundantly affords. May we, as we undertake this obligation, lay aside partisanship and select our best qualified citizens to represent us in the convention.

Labor Relations

Turning from our fundamental law to problems of legislation, I am sure we agree that one of the most important public questions facing our State and country today is that of industrial relations. Upon its solution must depend the permanency of the society in which we are living, and the survival of the democratic process which we so deeply cherish. No one man or group of men can settle this problem. It must be resolved through frank and open negotiations between the many groups affected by the terms of settlement, and must be considered in an atmosphere of patience, understanding and integrity without which no amount of law, regulation, or coercion will avail.

To many people the problem of labor relations means only the wave of strikes under which the nation and, to a lesser degree, our State has suffered. The inclination to take drastic measures may be strong. But we will be well advised to approach the problem of industrial conflict at home with the same caution and even diplomacy with which we approach the problem of averting wars on the international front. What we do for today is not for today alone; it may affect us for years to come and will stamp those who are responsible for the course we choose as either men of vision or as victims of their environment. For when we deal with labor relations, we deal with human emotions. We can neither prohibit labor unrest nor proscribe business failure by legislation.

The dramatic character of important strikes tends to center our attention on this aspect of labor disputes. But there are other and even more far-reaching problems of labor-management relations, such as management incompetence, absenteeism, excessive labor turnover, indiscriminate lay-offs, the lack of a secure yearly income, slow downs, "feather bedding" and generally low rates of productivity that are as costly to our economy as the ultimate weapon of organized labor—the strike. To solve the strike problem, if we could, while leaving these roots of industrial strife to remain, might only be to delude ourselves under the soothing over-confidence of a surface attack on a deeply rooted illness.

A fair perspective of the period through which we are passing, moreover, requires recognition that labor disputes are as much a part of the post-war period as retooling. The many drastic personal adjustments required by our transition to a peacetime economy, by the rising cost of living, by the dislocations of a Herculean war effort, must be expected to provoke labor unrest and disputes as well as a supreme test for management. We must at all costs avoid an hysterical approach to a most baffling social problem about which we really understand very little. A high quality of statesmenship is required.

Before proceeding to the discussion of remedies, it is essential that we establish principles, and I wish, at this time, to make myself clear in regard to fundamental considerations which I believe are essential to industrial peace, to full production and to full employment. I not only favor collective bargaining, but am convinced that it is ordinarily the most desirable method of regulating industrial relations. I believe that trade unions are essential to the ordering of large concentrations of economic power; but I am likewise aware that trade unions are themselves aggregations of great economic power. Some of them, indeed, have proved themselves to be more powerful than any concentration of capital with which the economic structure has been familiar.

Stripped of the lesser gradations of power, the crux of labor union power is the capacity to stop work. To deny this power completely is to deny labor its most effective bargaining power. To permit the strike weapon to be used indiscriminately is to deny all the people that security for which government stands. Collective bargaining may be an absolute right. The right to strike must be a qualified right. There is no place in democratic thinking for uncontrolled power of any kind. There can, for example, be no legitimate strike to compel a violation of law. There can be no legitimate strike which imperils the public health, the public safety and the general welfare of the community.

There is obviously much that could be done within the framework of these principles. Their application to the almost infinite variety of labor-management relationships is a task of years. It will require a continuing review and appraisal by the most constructive leaders of labor and management. To provide facilities for this purpose, I propose to develop a systematic series of labor-management conference groups consisting of responsible and enlightened leaders of labor and management. These groups will be entrusted with a continuing study of the social and economic problems of industrial relations, and will be requested to report from time to time to the Governor and through him to the Legislature.

For immediate consideration, the action we take on labor relations may quite clearly be considered in two parts, that relating to industrial relations generally, and that relating to industrial relations in public utility industries. To a considerable extent, the details of such remedies as we may adopt will of necessity have to remain subject to future adjustment in accordance with the findings and recommendations of the labor-management conference groups. That the choice of methods is broad is evident from the fact that over one hundred separate types of proposals have been introduced in the Congress on various labor issues. I am convinced, however, that there are some aspects of the problem which have received sufficient study, both within and outside our State, to permit a crystallization of our judgment as to a course of immediate action. Accordingly, I would urge you to consider the following:

(1) To adopt a State labor relations act which would provide for the establishment of a State labor relations agency, with a labor tribunal, incorporating the present facilities of our State Mediation Board, and which would define unfair labor practices on the part of either employees or employers, and provide for mediation and promote collective bargaining.

(2) To provide effective means for the interpretation and enforcement of collective bargaining contracts, and prohibit any use of economic force by employers or employees in connection with any dispute arising under such contracts. The provisions of this act would be administered by the labor tribunal.

(3) To protect the freedom of individual employees to join labor organizations of their own choosing by restricting back-door agreements as well as strikes and boycotts intended to coerce a change of union membership. In other words, we must seek and find a solution for so-called jurisdictional and wildcat strikes.

(4) To provide that where the closed shop is adopted by collective bargaining, unions must meet the requirement of an open door for membership.

These requirements of industrial peace should of course be implemented with suitable sanctions, applicable to both employers and employees. Under such a system, considered against the bitter lessons of recent strike experience, I am hopeful that no further interference by government in the general collective bargaining process will be required. In the case of public utilities, which would also be subject to the general labor program, we have already made a start on legislation designed to insure continuous operation of a limited number of utilities. This legislation should be strengthened along lines developed in the National Railway Labor Act, with such further safeguards and sanctions as experience has suggested.

As for the right to strike in public utility industries, we need qualify it in only two instances—it may not be lawfully exercised during the pendency of proceeding taken under the law, with a time limit of perhaps ninety days, nor may it be exercised at any time against the State. I would add that in the event of seizure by the State, a public utility must continue to operate under terms to be advised by the labor tribunal until the parties reach a voluntary collective bargaining agreement.

This program, which is clearly short of compulsory arbitration, would seem to do all that can be done to protect the public interest without invading freedom of contract or imposing involuntary servitude. We should seek to avoid compulsory arbitration of wage matters, since it would mean the end of collective bargaining, without which neither free enterprise nor free labor can long endure. From the viewpoint of a working federalism, moreover, I doubt whether any State can or should undertake to direct any substantial segment of its economy pursuant to a policy which has not been accepted by the Federal Government.

Social Security

At their source, problems of industrial peace are very closely related to problems of labor insecurity. The American working man has gained a constantly improved standard of living over the past fifty years, and the extended use of machinery as well as his own skill has constantly increased his productivity. It is only as a result of such increased productivity that our economy has been able to provide constantly rising wages without always increasing prices.

But this efficient organization of manpower and machines has left a large area of insecurity for the individual worker in our industrialized economy. Over the years, State and Federal governments have sought to relieve this insecurity —both as an aid to free enterprise as well as because of a recognition of increased social responsibility. We have already achieved a substantial measure of security against the hazards of dependent old age, occupational injury, unemployment and need. But the major hazard of disabling illness or non-occupational accident is still without general social recognition. When illness or accident strikes, moreover, it can become a family catastrophe where family income is insufficient to provide against the cost of illness as well as the continuing daily needs of dependents.

In New Jersey, we have made substantial progress toward providing against the hazard of wage loss caused by illness or non-occupational accidents. Two plans have been before the State—a so-called public fund plan and a privately operated, publicly supervised plan. There seems to be general agreement throughout the State that a plan of "cash sickness benefits" should be adopted. I am certainly in accord. The only difficulty has been in the selection as between the two proposed alternatives.

Following the recommendation of a private plan by our Commission on Post-War Economic Welfare, two events of importance occurred. The first was Federal legislation enabling the cash sickness benefit program to be integrated with our present unemployment compensation system, and the second was the development of a strongly supported opposition of organized labor to the privately operated plan. More recently, I have been advised that there is considerable question as to whether private insurance companies can make available to the thousands of smaller employers the kind of group insurance that would make the private plan workable. In the absence of insurance, the high hazard industries, which need the benefit of a spread risk more than others, would be left without protection.

The issue of the private plan versus the public plan has thus become much more complicated than when it was considered last year. In an effort to find some common ground upon which a fully satisfactory plan may be built, I have asked the Commission on Post-War Economic Welfare to consider the possible adaptation of the principle of the non-exclusive State fund plan which was enacted by California last year. We are all interested in developing the best possible plan for New Jersey, and it would be well for us to withhold our judgment until we have had an opportunity to examine the Commission's forthcoming report.

Education

These problems of economic and social security are basically related to the scope and quality of our educational preparation for citizenship. There is in a Republic no governmental function more important or more necessary than that of education. We are justly proud of our system of free public schools. We are, however, perhaps a little too ready to base our pride upon the fact that only two other States spend more for education per pupil than we do. Likewise we are perhaps a little too ready to establish as our goal in improved education the attainment of first place among the States in terms of educational expenditures. While we recognize that good schools cost money, we must remember that the true quality of education cannot be measured by school dollars alone. I believe, therefore, that an important element of any new State aid program for schools should be the further development of quality and standards of educational achievement.

It is nevertheless true, in my judgment, that our school program must be more adequately financed and that many of our public school teachers are underpaid. The development of a more comprehensive program of State aid for our local schools and municipalities should not be delayed. Our municipalities, however, are likewise obligated to seek and achieve economies so that more money when necessary may be made available for education at the local "home rule" level.

The need for greater equalization of educational opportunity for all the children of our State, wherever they live, must be constantly before us in our considerations of State aid for local schools. A corollary to this need is the additional need for greater equalization of financial burden for the support of schools. This year New Jersey will put into effect a new school aid formula which will result in some measure of greater equalization of both opportunity and burden. This will require close to $6,300,000 of additional State money to finance this program during the fiscal year which begins July 1st. It will require many economies before your State government will find it possible to include this amount in the next budget. The new school aid formula, I might add, while a step in the right direction is unhappily based upon the "rubber" yardsticks of amount spent for education and of assessed valuations of property taxable in each local district. So long as local educational costs and assessment practices vary as widely as they do now, no real equalization can be achieved by the use of these yardsticks. For this reason, I recommend that we look upon application of the new formula for the next fiscal year as a test of its worth and continue to study the matter of distributing equalized State aid for schools.

Our educational problems in New Jersey are not limited to free public schools. The unprecedented demands on our facilities for higher education represent an immediate but, perhaps, partly temporary need. We must provide adequate higher educational facilities for every New Jersey citizen who wishes and is qualified to continue his or her educational development. In 1945, Rutgers University was designated as the State University and a program for integrating the State University and the State Teachers Colleges is, at my request, now being considered. This program contemplates the maintenance of schools in various parts of the State with off-campus and extension centers where needed. The adoption of this program will increase the higher educational opportunities for qualified New Jersey youth and, at the same time, promote the fullest and most economical use of all existing educational facilities. It will, likewise, permit us to strengthen our teacher training program.

Public Health

Experience in our public schools has demonstrated time and again that our youth cannot enjoy educational opportunities without good health. A large part of our State residents, veterans included, learned during the war of the deficiencies of our present public health services. The urgency of our wartime needs and the presence of local emergency programs, did more to bring home to the people of New Jersey both the good points and the weak points in our public health facilities than did years of educational activities. We have come, moreover, to look upon the position of government in the area of public health as covering a much greater responsibility than the traditional functions of sanitation, vital statistics, the safety of sewer and water systems, and the control of communicable diseases. And, in fact, our governmental health organizations in New Jersey do go far beyond these older functions, particularly in the field of public health nursing, nutrition and industrial hygiene. Our difficulties today are in part structure and in part function.

The reorganization of the State Health Department, both in its structure and in its powers and duties, so as to enable it to give a new and improved direction to our public health activities in New Jersey, is still of primary importance. Similarly, at the local level, the excessive number of overlapping health facilities in some areas as well as inadequately staffed health districts in other areas should be brought to a level of optimum efficiency, so that a full-time, fully qualified district health officer will be responsible for the public health work in every district in this State.

An effective organization of public health agencies at the State and local levels will be, however, only a beginning toward our health needs. From that point we will be in a position to develop new and needed public health functions, we will be able to bring about a closer integration of the work of the public health officer with publicly aided hospitals, health centers, State rehabilitation clinics and professional medical and nursing interests, as well as with the local school health facilities. A judgment as to the extent of our deficiencies in general and special hospital facilities will have to await the result of studies now in progress. We may well find overall that we are suffering not so much from a lack of adequate health facilities in total, but rather from a badly distributed and uncoordinated public health program.

Institutional Care

At the point where public health leaves off, our problems of institutional care begin. New Jersey has a well-developed system of institutional care for wards of the State, but the needs of this service, as others, have tended to grow beyond the State's understanding. As we have continually expanded our consciousness of social responsibility for the unfortunates among us, misery and suffering, that have gone unnoticed in the past, have come to command the attention of a further enlightened people. This is especially true of our concern for the chronic sick and the mentally ill. We now find ourselves greatly in need of more beds for the care of the more serious cases among the chronic sick as well as for broadened community provisions for the prevention of chronic sickness. Our situation with regard to the mentally ill is particularly acute.

The three State mental hospitals have proved inadequate to the load they have been called upon to bear. As an emergency policy necessitated by wartime conditions, every effort has been made to limit admissions only to those who were in clear need of institutional care, and who could not be cared for through other publicly supported facilities, such as veterans' hospitals and county institutions. Efforts have been redoubled at curing and preventing mental diseases, but the dangers of overcrowding, fire hazards and shortages of personnel are still matters of concern. I would hope that through a more efficient utilization of all publicly supported mental institutions, we might avoid the large expenditure that would be necessary for a fourth State mental hospital. This is a matter upon which I am having studies made and will communicate their findings to you at another time.

Crime and Delinquency

Some recent notorious cases of serious crimes committed by persons of immature years, some of whom are adolescents, have brought again to our consciousness the importance of a proper solution of the whole problem of juvenile delinquency. You authorized the appointment of a legislative committee to study the causes of juvenile delinquency in New Jersey. I commend to your attention the report and recommendations of this committee, headed by Senator Van Alstyne. Realizing, however, that the problem of juvenile delinquency cannot be fully solved by the Legislature or by the enactment of law, I have authorized the calling of a State-wide representative meeting in the interest of the youth of New Jersey, at which time plans can be completed for a broadened program of delinquency prevention.

Housing and Rent Control

The connection between crime and delinquency and inadequate housing is well established. For this reason, as well as to meet the urgent needs of veterans and non-veterans alike, the current shortage of decent homes continues to be one of our foremost problems. Our State veterans emergency program—and I stress the word emergency—is one of the most ambitious programs undertaken by any State. It involves a State commitment of $41,000,000, more than twice the amount allocated for New Jersey veterans by the Federal Government. The State program is barely four months old—much progress has been made—it will be pushed forward to completion with all the energy in the command of the administration. This will require, as in the case of so many other programs, co-operation and teamwork between the State Government and its municipal subdivisions.

Apart from the emergency program for veterans, we must be mindful of our government's interest in the development of homes, and the preservation of the home tradition and atmosphere. The home is a basic pillar in the structure of our Republic. We will, therefore, in concert with the Federal Government, seek to create by minimum regulations, by wise tax laws, adequate public improvements and other means, the kind of environment in which private enterprise can and will build homes. Until such time as private enterprise and our emergency programs have provided a reasonable balance between housing supply and demand, sensible and fair rent controls appear to be in the public interest and accordingly should be continued. These controls should obviously strive to recognize the requirements of the landlord as well as the tenant.

Nor can we fail to acknowledge the challenge to hearts and minds presented by the existence in this State as in others of substantial slum areas. It is not sufficient to erect new buildings in new areas while our slums continue to grow and fester. Here again I hope you will seek to develop that happy combination of private enterprise and governmental encouragement necessary to eliminate this menace to our society and, I might add, financial hazard for our municipalities. Legislation passed last year designed to encourage private enterprise to engage in slum clearance should be strengthened. Unnecessary and monopolistic building code provision should be repealed. Minimum uniform building and fire safety standards are badly needed. The State must be on the alert to insure a free and open competitive market for building materials. Antiquated craft union distinctions should be referred to the Labor-Management conference for study and should be eliminated as quickly as possible. Provision should be made immediately for the training of an adequate number of men for the building trades. In general, we should look primarily to private enterprise to solve our housing problem, aided by the elimination of restrictive and monopolistic conditions which contribute to excessive construction costs. To the extent that slum clearance should prove to be beyond the field of private enterprise, our State and municipal governments, in co-operation with the Federal Government, must prepare themselves to shoulder this burden.

Highways

In our industrial age it is hardly necessary to emphasize the importance of a properly planned highway system for the entire State. Today our large cities in their fight for survival are just as dependent on a State-wide highway system as are our ever-important rural communities. Without an even and speedy flow of commerce, New Jersey, the great industrial workshop with its important agricultural and recreational areas, would wither and die. Our arteries of commerce and pleasure must be protected and improved.

For some time, it has become increasingly apparent that the laws providing for the financing of municipal and county highways have born too heavily upon these important subdivisions of our State. Real estate is already bearing a heavy burden. It is obvious that unless there is some substantial change in our system, our counties and municipalities are faced with the unhappy dilemma of further increasing property taxes for highway purposes or refraining from the sorely needed modernization of many important intra- and inter-city highways. The latter choice will result in a further depreciation of land values, higher tax rates and a continuation of the vicious circle that New Jersey has experienced all too frequently. Out of a total of 27,900 miles of municipal, county and State highways and roads, approximately 1,600 miles are part of the State highway system. Last year our municipalities appropriated $16,000,000 for street repairs, maintenance and lighting. Our counties appropriated $7,000,000 in addition to State grants for highway purposes. These figures roughly indicate the magnitude of the real property burden for streets and highways.

Our cities, whether or not they are conscious of the fact, are engaged in a fight for their municipal lives. That some of these cities have handicapped themselves by shortsighted policies and a failure to use their assets to best advantage is beside the point. The State mindful of its obligations to its citizens should assist our large cities with their peculiar traffic problems. This statement applies with particular force to the capital city and many other municipalities that I could mention.

Accordingly, I recommend the following program:

1. A continuation of our State program for the construction of freeways and parkways as rapidly as is practically consistent with other equally important highway needs. In view of our manifold requirements, careful consideration should be given to the proper method of financing so-called luxury roads.

2. The State Highway Department should continue to develop and to put speedily into operation a program designed to carry State highways through or around our large cities. This program should include necessary access roads so that the cities will not find themselves in the position of being by-passed in the favor of interstate commerce.

3. Provision should be made for a new emphasis on the development of a secondary road program at the county level. This will probably require increased State aid to our counties. A modest start, finances permitting, should be made at once.

4. Our present program of State aid for highway purposes to our municipalities should be abandoned; and in lieu thereof there should be substituted a definitive program providing at the outset for the distribution by the State of between five and six million dollars to all of our municipalities, upon the basis of mileage and population; providing, however, that the aggregate contribution to the municipalities in any given county shall not be less than $200,000. The adoption of this proposal will correct the grave injustice that has heretofore been done to our large cities without in any manner penalizing our smaller communities. We will place this grant-in-aid on a business basis permitting our municipalities to budget anticipated revenue and to make proper appropriations.

5. Due recognition should be given to a need for roadside improvement and beautification. A carefully designed program to make our highways safer and more attractive should be adopted as quickly as possible.

AGRICULTURE

In any highway program, the need for improved farm-to-market roads must receive important recognition. During the next three years, I will from time to time discuss with you broad programs designed to benefit our agriculturists, including agricultural research, soil surveys, and co-operative marketing—not to be confused with tax-free co-operatives engaged in competition with private enterprise. In general, however, I recognize that the farmers' problem is in no small measure a financial or tax problem. The farmer will benefit in direct proportion to our ability to offer business methods to the business of government. In general, I believe the farmer wants protection from unnecessary governmental interference. This protection we should be prepared to give freely.

FEDERALISM AND INTERSTATE CO-OPERATION

To this point, I have sought to set before you the major problems of State government as they appear at this time, and to outline the philosophy of approach to those problems which in my judgment will provide a sound and constructive basis of solution in the interests of all the people in New Jersey. Two fundamental considerations remain to be emphasized. The first is our position as a State in the American system of federalism, and the second is our capacity to finance the various service needs which are pressing upon us.

The constantly expanding scope of Federal influence in State government is apparent when we consider how many of the major service requirements we have reviewed today, such as education, unemployment insurance, housing, public health, hospitals, highways, and airports, are directly affected by Federal policies of finance and administration. We may well expect, moreover, that the States as well as the Federal Government may find their entire administrative policy and philosophy in the next few years dominated by efforts to make good on the promise of full employment.

From the viewpoint of our State, we must certainly be prepared to assume our fair share of responsibility for programs vested with a national interest. But it is equally true that so long as the present Federal policy of treating the States as competitive centers of political power is continued, the States will be unable to give full support to national policies.

We are urgently in need of a new integration between the various State congressional delegations and their respective State administrations. I am hopeful that by formalizing such an integration we may find the means for an intermediate level for policy co-ordination by the Federal and State governments—a co-ordination which is now sorely lacking in our Federal system. As you know, I have taken the first steps toward achieving this result in New Jersey, and I hope to enlist the co-operation of other States through the facilities of the Governors Conference and other ways. The results of such an integration of national and State interests should go far toward eliminating duplication and conflict in the services of Federal and State governments and toward providing the means by which some of our State fiscal problems may be relieved.

The States can and will continue to offset the harmful tendency towards centralization through various devices of inter-state co-operation. New Jersey and New York were first among the States to create an inter-state port authority for the development and service of their common interests. The Port of New York Authority has more than demonstrated its worth over the twenty-five years since it was established, and it is now in a position to render a new service in preventing ruinous competition between the two States in the provision of airport facilities. I sincerely hope that we may continue to deal with regional problems as typified by airport facilities, on a regional basis. The people of the City of Newark deserve the gratitude of the State for going forward with a great air terminal at a time when other municipalities perhaps did not fully appreciate the importance of air transportation to the general welfare. But the time has come when the people of that city can no longer be expected to underwrite huge capital outlays of this kind, and we ought to give every encouragement to an agreement between the Port of New York Authority and the City of Newark to the end that unified regional control and operation of air transportation may become an accomplished fact.

The same purposes that motivated the inter-state development of the New York port area are equally applicable to the development of the Philadelphia-Camden port area. The States of New Jersey and Pennsylvania have long had a common interest in this area, particularly in the co-operative development of the Delaware River as a source of potable water and for recreational use by the great metropolitan areas of the two States, as well as in abating the pollution of the waters of the river which has hampered industrial and commercial development and presented great problems of public health. Much has been accomplished to these ends through the facilities of the interstate commission on the Delaware River basin and through other joint efforts of the two States.

The greater economic and other common interests of the two States in the Camden-Philadelphia metropolitan area now require the creation of an inter-state authority similar to the Port of New York Authority, with initial bi-state financial support. Such an authority, patterned along lines of the Delaware River Joint Commission, would permit the broad-scale development of the entire area to be served. I urge your interest and support in this project for the development and enrichment of the southern part of our State.

Finance

Perhaps no other administration in the history of our State has been called upon to meet financial problems as urgent as those that will confront us during the next three years. We are at present faced with extreme demands for both new and additional public expenditures; almost all of which are legitimate, many of them necessary, and some of them essential. They arise largely from deferred requirements of the war years; from new responsibilities that the post-war period has placed upon us; and from inflationary tendencies that have reduced the purchasing power of the dollar by almost one-half. On every side, these conditions are giving rise to requests for increased public money—more money for salaries, more money for current operating expenses, more money for repairs and maintenance and large sums for capital improvements. Under such circumstances, it is of the first importance that we establish a State government service policy; that we determine the ways and means by which such policy can be expressed; and that we thereupon take such steps as are necessary to make such policy effective.

A large factor that must enter into our service plans is the increasing tax pressures of our municipalities as they are reflected in the general property tax levies on real estate, improvements and tangible personal property. These problems, inherent in our New Jersey tax structure, have acquired the virtues of antiquity. Thirty-six years ago, one of my predecessors in this office, Woodrow Wilson, in his inaugural address, stated:

> "There is an uneasy feeling throughout the State, in which, I dare say, we all share, that there are glaring inequalities in our system—or, at any rate, in our practice—of taxation. The most general complaint is, that there is great inequality as between individuals and corporations. I do not see how anyone can determine whether there are or not, for we have absolutely no uniform system of assessment. It would seem that in every locality there is some local variety of practice, in the rate, the ratio of assessment value to market value, and that every assessor is a law unto himself. Our whole system of taxation, which is no system at all, needs overhauling from top to bottom."

This statement is as true today as it was in 1911 and emphasizes one of the problems that must receive our earnest consideration. Our lack of uniformity in assessments is itself partially responsible for the present plight of our municipalities. In 1946, for the first time, the average general property tax rate was in excess of $5.00 for each $100 valuation taxable. There is every indication that it will be still further increased in 1947. This is a heavy burden. Where there are full value assessments—principally in our larger municipalities—it amounts to a capital tax of more than five per cent, and the actual rate in some municipalities is six per cent and over.

It is common knowledge throughout the State that taxes such as these cannot go much higher, and still the need for additional funds for local services is acute. I have repeatedly said that the State should assist its municipalities in meeting this condition, and I intend to do everything within my power as Governor to do so; but in fulfilling this pledge—as well as in meeting the service requirements which I have outlined to you—there are fiscal restrictions to which we are committed.

I have heretofore made it plain to the voters of the State that I would support no proposals looking toward a State income tax, or a State consumers sales tax. I also made it plain that such additional revenues as were needed to meet the pressing service needs of the State and its municipalities should come from intelligent and effective economies; tax adjustments that would assure full coverage and equality of treatment; and replacement revenues that would be substitutes for outmoded tax bases that are no longer effective. I also emphasized that we would take advantage of any leeway that might come to us through a reduction in Federal taxes, and that we would likewise recognize and adjust any competitive tax practices that placed us at a disadvantage with comparable industrial States.

A comprehensive survey of the financial position of the State demonstrates the continuing need for prudent management, and the most painstaking economies. We will be called upon to substitute quality for quantity. It is only by the adoption of this approach to the business of government that we will be able to pay reasonable salaries while keeping total payrolls within realistic limits. If we concede, as I do, that real estate taxes are too high we must be equally prepared to admit that the cost of municipal, county and State government has in many instances passed reasonable limits. We will not find the complete answer to this situation in the proposal that the State impose new taxes for local distribution. Much more than this is required! We must re-examine our entire program of municipal and county grants-in-aid. I will ask the Commission on State Tax Policy to study this subject. Beyond this observation, it should be noted that in too many instances local government as well as county and State Government has been guilty of waste. Too few communities have availed themselves of the opportunity to save through the medium of voluntary intermunicipal co-operation and merger of services. We cannot in all fairness complain about the duplication of service at the Federal-State level in the absence of a willingness to put our domestic household in order.

With these purposes as well as these commitments in mind, I am preparing a program for the consideration of the Legislature based upon the following proposals:

(1) To support our highway program with every appropriate resource—this will require the use of all present highway revenues for highway purposes; the maximum use of Federal highway aid; and a re-examination of motor vehicle license fees on trucks.

(2) To meet the most urgent State needs of a capital nature, particularly for hospitals, sanatoriums, and specialized institutions—this may require a bond issue, which, in my judgment, is a perfectly proper way of financing certain long-term capital improvements.

(3) To take advantage of any leeway that may come to us through reduction in Federal taxes—particularly reductions in the Federal alcoholic beverage tax and removal of the Federal gasoline tax.

(4) To commence at once a continuous provision for a management analysis of every State departmental operation, and to encourage the conduct of such audits in every county, municipality and school district of the State.

(5) To bring financial aid to local services without further burdening the property tax base—this means adjustments in our present tax structure. I have asked the Commission on State Tax Policy to study the following proposals and to report its findings to the Governor and to the Legislature early in the 1947 session:

(a) A redistribution of the first-class railroad property tax, so that each municipality containing this type of property will receive all of the proceeds allocable to it on the basis of the value of the property within each municipality.

(b) The repeal of the present property tax on tangible personalty and the substitution thereof of a suitable replacement tax, the proceeds to be used to increase State aid for schools.

(c) An overlay of an additional low rate on the replacement base to be allowed each municipality upon the vote of its governing body, the proceeds to be returned to the municipality in which the collections are made.

CONCLUSION

This review of the service and fiscal policies to which I would enlist your co-operative support in no way overlooks the problems and needs of our veterans. We are at a stage in our development, however, in which we can render the broadest and most lasting service to those who have served in the Armed Forces by attending first to the problems of government and finance which they share with all the other citizens of our State. We will, of course, continue to develop and expand our special programs of veterans benefits to aid in the speedy and satisfactory civilian readjustment of all returned service men and women. The program I have outlined is admittedly large and will test our every resource and ingenuity for its successful accomplishment.

If I were to be asked our watch-word for the next three years, it will be found in a single word—work. If asked to amplify, I would add the words "intelligent" and "productive." Intelligent productive work, for all of us—those on the farm, in the shops, in our industries and offices, and particularly for those of us in government, there is imposed the duty to ourselves and our posterity to work intelligently and productively.

A social system, a philosophy of life or of a government, that fails to produce in the interest of all the people, will not long endure in an age where wholesale destruction may explode out of the skies while mankind is too slowly testing old values and seeking new guides.

With the help of the Divine Providence may we work together intelligently and productively; may our work be for the betterment of our citizens, our State, our nation and our world. What we do here in our New Jersey laboratory, like the ripple from the stone dropped carelessly or with good intent into the pool of public life, may reach far beyond the narrow horizons of our State.

Respectfully submitted,

ALFRED E. DRISCOLL,
Governor.

The Speaker announced that in connection with New Jersey's celebration of two great anniversaries, Mrs. Mina Greenbaum, Assemblywoman from Essex County, would deliver an address on the life of Thomas Edison, and Mr. Hugh L. Mehorter, Assemblyman from Gloucester County, would deliver an address on the life of Abraham Lincoln.

Assemblywoman Greenbaum spoke as follows:

The name of Thomas Alva Edison is a household word throughout the world, and tomorrow we observe the centennial of the birth of this great inventor. As we look back through the years, we find a room in the cellar of a house in Port Huron, Michigan, filled with test-tubes and jars.

A ten-year-old boy had just such a laboratory and spent many hours working over his experiments. This youthful scientist was Thomas Alva Edison, whose inventive genius was to revolutionize the world.

Thomas Edison was a very unusual child, always observing and investigating—never being satisfied with statements unless he could actually prove them by experiments.

A story is told of how young Edison's father found him in the barn sitting on a nest-full of goose eggs, patiently undertaking to hatch them

Edison's formal schooling lasted but a very short time. His teacher did not understand the boy's mind, and pronounced him "addled," and then Edison became the student of his mother, who understood him. She took him out of school and taught him at home.

At the age of nine, young Edison became interested in chemical experiments, so enthusiastically that his mother permitted him to set up a laboratory in the cellar, and all of his pocket money went to buy chemicals.

At the age of twelve, young Edison received employment in the operation of a concession to sell newspapers and magazines on the Grand Trunk Railroad, running between Port Huron and Detroit, and most of the proceeds of this business was used in the furtherance of satisfying his curiosity. It is an amusing tale of a boy, full of energy and industry—always working—always interested. So it was, that besides running his newspaper and magazine business on the train, he started two other stores in which he sold newspapers and periodicals, and, in addition thereto, sold vegetables, hiring other boys to assist him in his enterprises; and then, so that he would not waste any time on his daily rides back and forth on the train, he used a smoking compartment of the baggage car as a laboratory.

Soon the laboratory on wheels also became a printing office, for young Edison bought a second-hand printing press and some type and printed a newspaper which he called the "Weekly Herald." Later, he added to his activities by becoming absorbed in electricity. He and another boy set up a telegraph line between their homes. It was a home-made affair. Their insulators were bottles hung on nails driven into trees, and rags insulated the magnet wire. But his experiments progressed from day to day, until his industries in the baggage car came to an abrupt ending. The train lurched, a stick of phosphorus fell on the floor and exploded, a blaze started and the train conductor, in a rage, ordered Edison and his laboratory and his printing press off the train at the next station, which was Smith's Creek, Michigan. It has been said that Edison's deafness was caused at this time, when the conductor boxed his ears severely, but this Edison denied. His version was that one day, while carrying a heavy load of papers, he was running to catch a train. He put one foot on the step and was unable to lift himself up and the trainman reached over and pulled him up by the ears.

As a newsboy, young Edison had rescued the child of the station agent at Mount Clemens, Michigan, from being killed by a freight car, and the father of the child offered to teach young Edison the elements of telegraphy, so it was that he became a telegraph operator with his first job in Port Huron.

While living in Boston in 1868, at the age of 21 years, Edison made his first patented invention, a vote recorder—the purpose of which was to speed up voting by Congress. Edison was told that this instrument was not wanted, and he resolved thereafter to invent only those things for which there was a demand, and while working in Boston, over a stock ticker, he decided to give up telegraph operating and devote his time to inventing, and then sailed for New York.

Edison arrived in New York penniless and hungry. He borrowed some money from a telegraph operator friend and received permission to stay over night in the battery room of a company which employed his operator friend. This company controlled a telegraph system of transmitting gold quotations, and the operation of the system appealed to Edison, who examined it very carefully. While sitting in the company's office the third day after his arrival in New York the transmitter suddenly stopped and the boys from the broker's office came rushing to report the trouble. In the midst of the excitement, young Edison announced that one of the contact spring had broken and repaired the damage in about two hours and the system was working in perfect order. Two days later the owner of this company asked young Edison to become manager of the plant, at a salary of $300.00 per month, and the next step was a partnership in the firm known as Pope, Edison and Company. This business was later absorbed by the Western Union.

After disposing of his interest in the latter company, Edison moved to Newark, New Jersey, where he opened a shop for the manufacture of stock tickers and their parts.

Edison kept right on with his inventing and at one time was working on forty-five inventions. By this time the Patent Office in Washington was fully aware of Thomas Alva Edison, for between 1870 and 1876, 122 patented inventions were recorded in his name. Many of these were connected with the development and expansion of telegraphy.

While in Newark, Mr. Edison married Miss Mary G. Stillwell, and in 1876 Edison moved to Menlo Park, New Jersey, where the world-famous laboratory came into being.

Credit for the original telephone invention goes to Alexander Graham Bell, but it remained for Edison to invent the carbon transmitter, which made the telephone practical. Bell's system used one instrument, both as receiver and transmitter. With Edison's improvement the length of the line was greatly extended.

As a result of his work on the telegraph and telephone, Mr. Edison conceived the idea of a machine that would record and reproduce the human voice and other sounds, and as a result of more experiments and effort Edison did invent such a machine, and when his job was finished Edison started turning the handle of this machine and recited into the cylinder the rhyme "Mary had a little lamb." The onlookers were greatly amused, but when Edison adjusted the reproducer and unmistakably there came back to them Edison's voice repeating those well-known words—all were amazed, as was Edison himself, for he admitted later that he was skeptical of experiments that worked the first time they were tried.

In 1879, Edison produced the incandescent lamp. His work on this invention is one of the most thrilling stories in our history. The task was stupendous, requiring a terrific amount of energy and patience, which qualities Edison had in abundance. It was his idea to produce a filament as a burner for his lamp that could be maintained at white heat for a long period without melting, and after a considerable amount of work the lamp was perfected. His laboratory notes on this subject alone filled more than 200 notebooks, containing over 40,000 pages.

By the end of 1880, Edison was ready to put his electrical system into commercial use. The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of New York was incorporated. Edison himself established several manufacturing shops. All the details of installing the distributing system and the central station in New York received Mr. Edison's personal attention, and on September 4, 1882, the current was turned on. The plant supplied about 400 lamps and was a success, and the great electric-light, heat and power industry was born.

Mr. Edison worked ceaselessly and untiringly and put in 18 to 19 hours of work a day, and enjoyed it. His theory was "that people spent too much time sleeping!"

Mr. Edison's first wife died in 1884, and in 1886 he was married to Miss Minna Miller.

The following year he moved his laboratory to West Orange, New Jersey, and made his home at Llewellyn Park.

In 1874 Mr. Edison invented the automatic telegraph, which involved the use of perforated ribbon in preparing and sending messages, and developed an automatic system that printed the message in Roman type instead of dots and dashes, and also invented the quadruplex telegraph whereby two and four messages could be sent over the wire at the same time.

Once Mr. Edison was asked "what he considered the secret of his achievement," and he replied: "Hard work, based on hard thinking." This was true of all of his undertakings, but none required harder work and harder thinking than his creation of the storage battery on which he and his associates spent five strenuous years. They numbered their experiments to 50,000 before the Edison storage battery was achieved.

This must give you some idea of the patience and fortitude which this great man possessed.

Death came to Mr. Edison on October 18, 1931, in his 85th year. The name and accomplishments of Thomas Alva Edison will stand forever as a monument to the cause of free men, and truly exemplifies the opportunities which America gives to all her sons. His untiring efforts and unmatched resourcefulness have made this a better world in which to live, a land where any man regardless of race or creed could travel down the road of success, just as far as his own capabilities could carry him, and to quote former President Hoover: "It is given to few men of any age, nation or calling, to become the benefactor of all humanity. That distinction came abundantly to Thomas Alva Edison."

Mr. Mehorter spoke as follows:

Mr. Speaker, Ladies and Gentlemen of the House:

Two days hence, the Nation will commemorate the birthday of one of it's truly great men—Abraham Lincoln. It is fitting in these days of discontent and unrest that we, in the Assembly of the State of New Jersey, give pause and reflect on the fundamental Americanism of that great leader —the type of Americanism so sorely needed today to bring tranquility not only to us, the citizens of the United States, but to the people and nations of the world as well.

Abraham Lincoln was an American, emphatically of the people. We all know of his humble background, his poverty, his self-education, his humor, his integrity, his unsuccessful political experiences and finally of his Almighty God ordained election to the Presidency of the United States, but —I wonder if we all know and, if we do, if we all appreciate the one great dominating characteristic possessed by this great man—his intense insistence for noble attainment by the individual under the provisions of the Constitution of the United States of America. It was that Divinely inspired insistence of Abraham Lincoln that not only preserved the Union, ladies and gentlemen, but also charted its clear course for all eternity.

At the time of the Nation's greatest crisis while tortured by the thought of sending his countrymen to war and to death—this man, almost alone in his agony, was called upon to make the decision of accepting war or permitting the Nation to perish. He made the choice and—the American Union, liberty and government by the people did not perish, because of his insistence in adhering to and preserving the Constitution of the United States of America!

Intolerant only of base things, the speeches and writings of Abraham Lincoln are of urgent interest to all who love America and are startling in their application to present-day conditions. His scorn for the purveyors of racial and religious hatreds, his flaming wrath for those seeking to undermine and destroy our form of government and claiming refuge from their dastardly deeds under the provisions of the Constitution they had mocked and vilified!

How applicable today would be all of his pronouncements against the forces of evil, within and without our Country, that are working unceasingly to confound and destroy the government of the people, by the people and for the people!

How appropriate today would be the import of a famous speech made in January, 1861, and I quote from it:

> "How gladly—how proudly would the people of any nation in Europe accept on such terms as we enjoy it—the boon of electing a chief magistrate every four years by free, equal and universal suffrage! How thankfully would they cast aside all their own systems of government and accept this republic of ours—with all of its shortcomings and all of its disappointments—and maintain it with their arms and cherish it in their hearts! Is it not the very boon for which they supplicate God without ceasing and even wage war, with intermissions only resulting from exhaustion!"

Thank God! Ladies and gentlemen of the Assembly, this Nation had its Abraham Lincoln and, as we pause in reverent memory, let us resolve that his courage, his honesty and his faithfulness in preserving the Union, which is the beacon light for all freedom-loving people of the world today, will forever inspire all of us in our duties of citizenship.

Let us resolve that we will not tolerate any subversive group within our Country—be it Communist, Nazi, or Fascist—that dares to sabotage our institutions and our freedoms.

Let us be tolerant and fair in our relations with the nations of the world, but let us be firm and strong in preserving the dignity and freedom of the individual and of our Nation; and

God grant us the privilege, in these times of great peril and stress, of following the example of Abraham Lincoln by emulating his honesty, courage and his charity. Let us resolve, as he expressed it, "To simply be Americans."

The following communication was sent to the desk:

Budget Message of Alfred E. Driscoll, Governor of New Jersey, transmitting to the One Hundred and Seventy-first Session of the Legislature recommendations for State expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948.

GOVERNOR'S BUDGET MESSAGE

To the Legislature:

Three short weeks ago I became the Governor of this State. While my predecessor graciously and co-operatively made it possible for me to confer with the fiscal officers and chief executives of the State departments prior to my taking office, there is no substitute for authority, and much of the work on this Budget necessarily had to await the changing of the guard on January 21st.

At the outset it is incumbent upon me to stress the fact that a budget is not a blueprint for the spending of State revenues. Properly understood, it constitutes a challenge to save money and to spend less than the amount recommended for appropriation.

This Message, therefore, marks not the end but rather the beginning of our fight for economy, and our determination, through the development of an improved tax program along the lines briefly outlined in my Inaugural Address, to insure the financial security of the State.

In the development of this Budget we have been faced with the same inflationary trends that have troubled industry, management, labor and all levels of government during the past year. This Budget reflects these trends. It likewise reflects, within the limits presently permitted by our none too secure financial position, my desire to assist our local school districts, municipalities and counties, with their pressing and important financial problems. The requests of the various State departments for appropriations, and this Budget to a much lesser degree, reflect the effect of five years of deferred capital improvements.

It was certainly not my intention to recommend the largest dollar Budget in State history. And yet, after long and detailed study, I am compelled to do just that, if the services furnished the public by the State are to continue unimpaired under present-day inflationary circumstances and if we are to make a fair start on our program of increased assistance to our political subdivisions.

The recommendations in this Message are frankly designed to meet the situation presently confronting a State with limited income, handicapped by an inadequate Constitution and inadequate tax laws.

The Budget requests confronting me when I took office totaled $203,985,791. Many were for activities regarded as essential to the public welfare. All were characterized as important by the various agencies submitting them. Nonetheless, it was my purpose to reduce the unprecedented total of these requests to an amount that could be met in full from next year's anticipated revenues. The goal could not be achieved within the time limit fixed for the submission of this Message. This subject will be discussed briefly hereafter, and in greater detail in a special Message following the report of the Commission on State Tax Policy covering the subjects referred to it for study, as outlined in my Inaugural Message.

The appropriations recommended in this Message for State operating expenses, including debt reduction and capital improvements, and for grants-in-aid to our counties and municipalities, total $155,802,317, and constitute a reduction from Budget requests of $48,183,474. Resources available to support the recommended appropriations equal $168,438,562. The following table sets forth the revenues anticipated and the appropriations recommended:

	Total	General Purposes	Highway Purposes
Transfer from Post-War Fund	$38,338,441	$18,938,441	$19,400 000
1947-48 Revenue Estimates	122,679,121	63,008,435	59,670,686
Sale of Highway Bonds	7,421,000	... .	7,421,000
Total Available Revenues	$168,438,562	$81,946,876	$86,491 686
Budget Recommendations	155,802,317	80,443,368	75,358,949
Balances Anticipated, June 30, 1948	$12,636,245	$1,503,508	$11,132.737

It should be carefully noted that after draining the Post-War Reserve Fund and using all of the anticipated revenues for the next fiscal year, only $12,636,245 from presently available sources remains unrecommended for appropriation. Of this amount a bare $1,500,000 may be used for general purposes. This balance would not be as high if the Chancellor had not generously agreed to transfer, by enabling legislation, $750,000 from Chancery funds that have been dormant for twenty years or more. Also included in the balance is the sum of $100,000, representing an anticipated transfer from the unspent funds in the Interconnecting Revolving Fund of the Division of Water Policy and Supply.

The enabling bills to carry out these two projects follow the narrative section of this Message. The remaining $11,132,737 must be reserved for highway purposes if the State is to remain free from a possible $9,000,000 penalty under Federal law.

Even a cursory analysis of the figures set out in the above table reveals that though general revenues for the next fiscal year are expected to reach $63,008,435 from presently available sources, an additional $17,434,933 taken from post-war reserves will be required to pay for our general State activities.

This is by no means a novel situation, nor one of recent development. General revenues have for many years fallen far short of supporting their related activities.

During the eight-year period from July 1, 1940, through June 30, 1948, revenues from all sources (exclusive of highway users revenues), will equal $518,028,189, as compared with expenditures for general State purposes of $595,660,617. Expenditures equalled 115% of these revenues.

This is an unhealthy situation. It must be corrected this year. The State must, prior to the 1948-49 Budget, if we are to avoid deficit spending (and I am unalterably opposed to such spending), adopt one of the following courses, or perhaps a modification of all three: (1) Reduce substantially its expenditures, (2) reduce its grants-in-aid, or (3) supplement its present income.

It is unnecessary for me to stress the fact that states in close proximity to New Jersey are facing the same financial problems now pressing upon your administration, despite the fact that many of them impose substantially higher taxes than we do in the same field. It is notable, too, that these sister states levy many taxes not imposed by this State or any of its subdivisions.

The total recommendations in this Message fall into four major categories:

For general State purposes	$42,465,387
For grants-in-aid (non-highway) to counties and municipalities	37,977,981
For State highway purposes and the activities of agencies supported from highway users revenues (Motor Vehicle Department, State Police, etc) (includes $7,435,686.00 Federal funds)	57,674,124
For grants-in-aid for county and municipal road purposes (includes $340,000 highway lighting)	17,684,825
Total	$155,802,317

The Budget for the present fiscal year amounts to $131,012,760. However, as the result of supplemental appropriations, this was increased to $139,061,416. Deducting the latter amount from the $155,802,317 recommended in this Budget, the increase over the current fiscal year is $16,740,901. This increase is more than accounted for by the additional State grants-in-aid for educational and county and municipal road purposes They are:

Increased teachers' pension requirements (required by Chapter 145, P. L 1946)	$800,000
Increased aid to local school districts	9,574,282
Increased road aid to counties and municipalities	7,459,825
Total	$17,834,107

Education

The over-all recommendations for education in this Budget total $35,667,196

State Aid

Substantially all the amounts in this Message representing increased State aid to local school districts result from the equalization aid program (Pascoe Bill) which will begin July 1, 1947 The recommendations for educational aid to school districts are.

Funds to finance the equalization aid program	$13,211,789
State School Tax deficiency in year 1946	2,499,822
Veterans' education in secondary schools	325,460
Total	$16,037,071

In addition, $9,126,167 is recommended for appropriation to the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund to supplement the more than $100,000,000 that the State has paid in previous years in order to protect the future pensions of our local teachers. The Fund now totals more than $137,000,000. Without in any way retreating from my determination that this Fund shall at all times remain sufficient to protect our teachers, studies have again been instituted to determine the extent to which the Fund must be increased to accomplish our objective. New Jersey's contribution to the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund exceeds that of all comparable states. This contribution should be recognized as a form of grant-in-aid for education.

Our educational system is hard pressed to meet the great demands upon it. I am fully cognizant of the local problems and had earnestly hoped that the State revenues available for general purposes for the next fiscal year would be sufficient to warrant my recommending even greater financial aid during this period of stress. Until such time as the State is able to grant more assistance, the operation of the equalization plan should carefully be observed to determine the real worth of its provisions and benefits.

State Educational Facilities

Of the $35,667,196 recommended for education in this Message, $10,503,958 represents appropriations for educational programs at the State level. This latter amount includes $2,125,000 for a new laboratory-science building at the Agricultural Experiment Station, State University, and capital improvements at the State Teachers Colleges and the Newark College of Engineering.

Highways

It is only when we come to the highway program that we find the degree of freedom of action required to demonstrate that the by-products of a sound program are frequently as important as the primary objective.

Our highway program has deliberately been designed to accomplish three things:

1. County and Municipal Road Aid

My Inaugural Message proposed a new pattern of county and municipal road aid. Legislative approval of the appropriations recommended herein will make this program a reality.

A total of $17,344,825 in State road aid is recommended in this Message. Of this sum, $14,874,825 represents aid for the next fiscal year. The remaining $2,470,000 is supplemental aid for the current year. Enactment of the bills now pending in the Legislature would effectuate this program of increased road aid.

Of the total recommended for the fiscal year 1947-48, $9,155,000 would be made available for county road aid. This is $2,420,000 greater than has ever before been allocated by the State for this purpose.

Road aid to large and small municipalities totals $5,719,825, a sum greater by $2,569,825 than that previously provided from the State Treasury. This municipal aid is to be distributed on a population and mileage formula. Since the pending legislation sets no restriction upon population, it will be possible to make an equitable distribution to all municipalities, regardless of size. Our large cities, who never before have shared in the State road program, will for the first time receive the benefits of State aid.

This expanded program of county and municipal road aid will, of course, help our governmental subdivisions meet their pressing need for highway construction, reconstruction, maintenance and lighting. More important, it will give them greater freedom of action with respect to their own fiscal affairs because State aid will have lightened the heavy burden of financing their local highway programs. Our counties and municipalities will therefore be in a better position to provide the funds so sorely needed to meet the many obligations that press upon them in these trying days. Not the least of these obligations is that of providing adequate teachers' salaries.

Ready examples among the larger beneficiary municipalities are Newark, which will receive $300,550; Jersey City, $206,350; Paterson, $105,600; Camden, $89,650; and Trenton, $88,496.

2. State Highway Program

There is recommended in this Budget the sum of $35,421,000 for State highway construction purposes. The purpose of this program is to meet the immediate traffic needs of our larger cities, including Camden, Trenton, Elizabeth, New Brunswick and Newark, and the important Passaic-Bergen-Hudson metropolitan area. The substantial highway funds allocated for construction in each of these areas will relieve their municipalities of the financial burden of providing highways that should be State highways. This will enable these cities to absorb the great volume of traffic converging upon them from the great State highway network already constructed or planned in the surrounding suburban and rural areas.

The metropolitan highway program will insure the speedy flow of commercial and pleasure vehicles through presently congested areas. Important by-products of this program will be the preservation of ratables and present tax bases, as well as the improvement of affected areas that in some instances may be characterized as substandard, if not slums.

It is a fact that traffic delays and congestion have prevented cities from acquiring new ratables. These ratables would, in a measure, provide necessary revenues to meet important municipal activities, not the least among them being the educational program. There has been a loss of ratables in many cities because of the movement of industry to areas where modern transportation facilities are more readily available. The education program burden will be lessened perceptibly if we help our larger cities acquire new ratables through improved highway facilities.

3. Freeways, Parkways and Bridges

Adequate provision has been made in the amount recommended for highway construction to continue the freeway and parkway program initiated in the current fiscal year.

The recent collapse of the Manasquan River bridge connecting Monmouth and Ocean counties, due to the action of water parasites, resulted in an immediate survey of other highway bridge structures. It was found that a number of bridges along our east coast were in a dangerous state of disrepair. The continued welfare of our resort communities demands that these structures be repaired or rebuilt without delay.

If the cost of these emergency bridge projects were financed from current highway revenues, no balances would remain to meet other emergency projects that may develop. Accordingly, at the request of the State Highway Commissioner, the issuing officials authorized the sale of $7,400,000 of unsold highway bonds to meet this unforeseen outlay.

Extent of the State Aid Program

New Jersey's program of State aid to counties and municipalities is not limited to the fields of education and roads. Substantial amounts are provided for numerous activities on the local governmental level. On page xvii of this Message there will be found a table comparing funds expended for various categories of State aid during 1945-46, and the recommended appropriations for like purposes in the coming fiscal year.

This statement shows that a total of $82,642,806 will be provided for counties and municipalities during 1947-48 from State sources Of this amount, budgeted items total $55,662,806, and unbudgeted items, representing special revenues collected by the State for the exclusive use of local subdivisions, amount to $26,980,000.

The budgeted items financed from general State revenues total $37,977,981. This is 47.2% of the $80,443,368 recommended for appropriation in this Budget for all general State purposes.

The total recommendations for the construction of State highways and bridges is $35,421,000, and those for State road aid amount to $17,684,825. These two items total $53,105,825. Thus, 33.3% of the total derived from highway users revenues and allocated for new construction and reconstruction, is returned to our counties and municipalities for road purposes

Institutions and Agencies

The total appropriations recommended in this Message for the support of our Department of Institutions and Agencies, including assistance programs for the blind, the aged, and dependent children, total $26,837,281. The high cost of food, clothing, heat, light and power, together with the improved salary and revised work-hour schedule of the institutional program, account for much of this cost. Only $550,000 of the recommended appropriation represents the estimated cost of capital improvements—$300,000 for fireproofing and $250,000 for the additional cost of the first unit of the new Diagnostic Center authorized in the current fiscal year.

CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS

During this period of high costs and scarce materials new construction, including highway and institutional, must be carefully studied to insure the maximum return from our investment. In many instances construction should be planned now and held in abeyance pending a closer balance between supply and demand when better prices may be expected. A careful check on all capital improvements, including purchases incidental thereto, must and will be maintained.

This cautious approach to the problem of capital improvements does not apply to the State's veterans' emergency housing program for which $6,000,000 was appropriated last year, supported by a $35,000,000 bond issue approved by the citizens last November. This Budget includes an item of $200,000 to cover interest charges on housing bonds that have been or may hereafter be sold this year.

Likewise, we cannot afford to delay the fireproofing program for our institutions, and provision has been made for the continuance of this program in the present Budget.

Our State welfare institutions are overcrowded Plans are now being developed for the better utilization of these facilities and the possible acquisition of certain county institutions. Even when this program has been completed many of the wards of the State will remain housed in buildings that are so inadequate as to make it costly and difficult to care for them according to modern standards Our prisons likewise leave much to be desired and are far below the standards required of a modern State.

The need for capital improvements at our institutions and State educational centers, including the State Teachers Colleges and the State University, is recognized as essential. Careful consideration should be given to a long-range program for institutional improvement. A program for the modernization of our institutions in keeping with present-day requirements may cost an initial $15,000,000. An additional $5,000,000 may be required for educational facilities at the State level. It is impossible to pay for these capital improvements out of current revenues without the imposition of substantial new taxes. This is not desirable.

Accordingly, I recommend that the Legislature study these capital requirements and that a referendum be submitted to our citizens for a bond issue to cover the cost of such capital improvements as may be determined to be necessary. Much as I would like to see these improvements paid for out of current income, sound business precedent supports spreading the cost of such a program over an extended but reasonable period.

The obligation of a State to its children, its wards, the mentally sick, physically handicapped and chronically ill can neither be avoided nor forgotten.

Total requests for capital improvements, apart from highway construction, amounted to $17,961,250. The sums recommended in this Budget total $2,675,000. The cost of these improvements may be reduced materially by a careful integration of the activities of the State University and the State Teachers Colleges.

State Payroll and New Employees

The State payroll has reached the staggering total of $37,247,767. This represents an increase of $2,540,629 to meet increments and salary adjustments previously promised and committed by the State

The departments requested salaries for new employees totaling $1,483,766. These requests were reduced to $282,346. As I stated in my Inaugural Message, we must strive to reduce the total payroll; we must substitute quality for quantity. Increased salaries require increased production. The only substantial group of new employees provided for in the present Budget is for our institutions where the need is obvious if our approximately 65,000 wards are to be adequately protected and cared for.

Revenues

It has been emphasized that over a period of many years general revenues have proved inadequate to meet current expenses properly chargeable against them. The administration is presently engaged in a broad frontal attack on this problem. It has requested the Commission on State Tax Policy to study certain specific proposals designed to increase revenues available for our municipalities, apart from real estate taxes, through a reapportionment of the railroad tax, and by the substitution of a tax in lieu of the present tangible personal property tax. The latter tax is expensive to collect, peculiarly subject to tax lightning, frequently inequitably applied, and is in almost every instance "rigged" to meet the requirements of our antiquated constitutional provision.

In addition, the administration is engaged in a careful study of various special State services presently rendered to special groups and for which a proper service fee should be charged to cover a small portion of the expense involved, following in part the practice established in our courts.

Included in the present Budget is a very modest appropriation for the Department of Aviation. We may expect increased requests for the services of this department, as well as for construction of access roads to airports and State assistance for aviation activities. At the present time aircraft operators are entitled to a refund for gas taxes paid. Such refunds totaled $230,713 in the calendar year 1946. Serious consideration should be given to the removal of this exemption and to the appropriation of this money for the operation of the Department of Aviation and for such other aviation purposes as may be required, including aid to municipalities who had the foresight to pioneer in the development of airports paid for largely from real estate taxes

I anticipate that in the course of these adjustments additional revenues for State purposes will be made available

I have requested the Commission on the Reorganization of State Administrative Agencies to again study the subject of racing, with particular reference to the division of the "take" between the State and the racing associations. We want our tracks to be financially successful within reasonable limits. On the other hand, we recognize that they operate by virtue of a State franchise and should make payments to the State on an "ability to pay basis," after proper provision has been made for the reduction of indebtedness and a reasonable return upon investment. Some increase in payments to the State may be anticipated under this plan, as the tracks successively become better established.

In addition, your administration has sought to develop a renewed appreciation of our Federal system and has asked Congress to withdraw the Federal Government from certain fields of taxation that belong primarily to the states. I refer, among other taxes thus imposed, to the Federal tax on alcoholic beverages. Although the New Jersey tax has remained constant, the Federal tax on distilled spirits has increased over 700%. The last increase of $3.00 a proof gallon was imposed by Congress with the definite understanding that it would be removed six months after the termination of hostilities (Act of February 25, 1944—the Revenue Act of 1943). By virtue of the President's proclamation on December 31, 1946, the $3.00 increase on distilled spirits should terminate on June 30, 1947.

Accordingly, I recommend that the New Jersey tax on distilled spirits be increased fifty cents a gallon, bringing New Jersey in line with the present tax in New York, and Congress be asked to keep its commitment of February 25, 1944, by at least a corresponding reduction, with further reductions next year to bring the Federal tax within reasonable limits—otherwise to take the responsibility for any over-all increase in the tax.

The Twenty-first Amendment to the Federal Constitution vested in the states the authority, as well as the responsibility, to determine whether or not the sale of alcoholic beverages should or should not be permitted, and if so, under what terms. It is only by virtue of action taken by the states and the responsibilities assumed by them that the Federal Government (aside from imports and certain other activities) is in a position to collect revenue from this source.

Conclusion

In this Message we have been forced to face the facts. The peculiar vulnerability of our position has been emphasized. The need for improvement in our fiscal structure, economy in our operation, and a more realistic working relationship between the various levels of our government has been recognized.

We must live within available funds, even though this may prevent appropriations for activities that are wholly desirable. In our concentration upon the immediate requirements of the State we must not overlook the need for long-range planning. We have not hesitated to recommend the use of credit where the use of that credit for long-term projects permits us to keep present taxes within reasonable limits and to make available for grants-in-aid funds that otherwise would be consumed in capital improvements. It is the abuse of credit—not its reasonable use—that is to be feared and avoided.

In this Budget we have likewise recognized that under the present system of unnecessary and costly Federal controls any use of highway revenues for purposes other than highways and related activities would result in the Federal Government penalizing New Jersey $9,000,000 despite the fact that New Jersey pays to Washington in Federal taxes far in excess of one billion dollars annually.

I have appreciated the co-operation received from the heads of the various State departments and regret that it was not possible for me in many instances to recommend the full appropriation requested for their particular agencies. I am confident, however, that they will loyally support us as we seek to develop a satisfactory program designed to meet the needs of the next fiscal year and the requirements of the years ahead.

Respectfully submitted,

ALFRED E. DRISCOLL,
Governor.

Mr. Tumulty asked permission to read a poem in honor of St. Patrick.

The chair granted permission.

It was moved that the poem be spread upon the minutes.

Which motion was adopted.

"St. Patrick"

Tell me a story, a little boy said,
As gently his daddy tucked him in bed.
They tell me tomorrow is St. Patrick's day.
Are all the wonderful things true of him
I hear people say?
Yes, said dad, he was a boy like you,
Born in the year of 372.

He was stolen by pirates at the age of "16,"
But what happened before or in between
Is sort of a mystery nobody knows;
I'm sure that's how the story goes.
Born in Scotland, a bright little lad,
His mother was Italian, British his dad.
He learned to live in the Irish way
And worked as a slave from day to day
On the mountain of Sleanish,
County of Antrive.
Always a good boy—keeping alive
The fact that some bright sunny day
He would be like the good folks
And so as they say.
One day he escaped and wandered around
Till he reached a land of holy ground,
Where men had given their life and soul
To preach the gospel of the Christians' goal.
He was faithful and earnest
And gave all his might
To learn how to preach
Christianity light.
"Go preach the gospel," said Pope Celestine,
"Whatever happens let naught come between
The fact that God has directed you,
He established a field and a work to do."
So he went back to Ireland,
The land of the green,
A more beautiful place has never been seen.
When preaching you'd always see in his hat-band
The shamrock, the symbol of the Irishman's land,
The legend of driving the snakes all away
Is told and believed by some till this day.
The Druids' magicians with all their great power
Were stunned by his works each day and each hour.
His smile was one no artist could paint—
No wonder Ireland made him their Saint.
As the world has gone on and Christianity is sought
It comes from the lessons St. Patrick taught;
No matter your faith, your race, or creed,
It's the guidance from God we always need.
We must be true to our fellow man
And do a good deed each day that we can.
And be we Catholic, Protestant or Jew

There is plenty of humane work to do.
Never faltering or never cease
In asking the Divine for eternal peace.
So my son, that's the story told;
It will go on and on and never grow old.
"Thank you dad," the little boy said,
"Turn out the light, tuck me in bed;
When I'll be a man and learn to paint
My model will be "Ireland's Patron Saint."

RESOLUTION OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, N. J.

WHEREAS, Senate Bill No. 141 was introduced in the State Senate on March 17, 1947, and, before an opportunity was provided for the public to examine or analyze its provisions, because it had not yet been printed and made available to the public, the bill was passed by the State Senate; and

WHEREAS, This bill is a piece of mandatory legislation which compels the State administration and all counties and municipalities to retire on pension all persons in the public employment who are eligible for such retirement, and thereby will subject government on all levels within the State to very heavy additional and unnecessary expense; and

WHEREAS, The bill, if enacted, would force into unemployment and prohibit the re-employment in public service, at an adequate income, hundreds of thousands of efficient, capable persons still in their prime of life; and

WHEREAS, By its mandatory features the bill is a serious infringement of the principle of home rule, a violation of the basic principle of civil service and the merit system in public employment; now, therefore,

Be It Resolved by the Board of Commissioners of the City of Newark that we are unalterably opposed to the adoption of this measure, and urgently call upon the Senate of New Jersey to reconsider its approval of this measure; that we request the members of the General Assembly of New Jersey to oppose its passage; and that we call upon the Governor of New Jersey, the Hon. Alfred E. Driscoll, to veto the measure if it should be adopted by the Legislature; and it is further

Resolved, That we condemn the process of "Legislative Lightning" by which bills of this type are adopted quickly, without opportunity for a hearing on the part of persons or organizations who may be opposed thereto, and respectfully request the members of the Legislature to preserve the democratic form of government by giving full effect to the right of petition guaranteed by the Constitution, by means of withholding action on proposed legislation until the public shall have had the opportunity to examine and express itself concerning the same; and it is further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded forthwith to the Governor, the members of the Senate, and the members of the General Assembly.

VINCENT J. MURPHY,
JOHN B. KEENAN,
JOHN A. BRADY,

ASSOCIATED BUILDING CONTRACTORS
OF CAMDEN AND VICINITY

TRENTON, NEW JERSEY,

March 28, 1947.

Mr. Philip C. Wadsworth,
Clerk of House of Assembly,
State House,
Trenton, New Jersey.

DEAR SIR:

I have been instructed by Mr. John D. Lawrence, President of the Associated Building Contractors of Camden and South Jersey, to inform you that in the fourth annual joint meeting of his association and the West Jersey Society of Architects in Camden on March 11, 1947, the following resolution was passed:

"Be It Resolved, That the Associated Building Contractors of Camden and South Jersey in the fourth annual joint meeting with the West Jersey Society of Architects, held at Camden, New Jersey, on March 11, 1947, urges every legislative and administrative action necessary to bring about an improved and more economical administration of our New Jersey Unemployment Compensation law.

We believe that indiscriminate payment of benefits to those who willfully become and remain voluntarily unemployed is conducive not only to a breakdown in the constructive basis and original good purposes of the Unemployment Compensation law, but equally destructive of the true social and economic welfare of our State.

Be It Further Resolved, That the officers of the associations be directed to forward the foregoing resolutions to the Governor of New Jersey, to members of the New Jersey Senate and House of Assembly, and to any other person who, in their judgment, shall be concerned."

The subject matter is of tremendous importance in regard to the industrial welfare of the State of New Jersey.

I thank you in behalf of the Associated Building Contractors of Camden and South Jersey for the valued attention I know this resolution will receive.

Appreciatively yours,

HARRY P. TAYLOR,
Service Secretary.

Report of the Legislative Commission to Investigate the Causes of Juvenile Delinquency:

To: The Honorable Alfred E. Driscoll, Governor, and to the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey:

The Legislative Commission to Investigate the Causes of Juvenile Delinquency takes pleasure in submitting its report.

The primary purpose of the Commission is amply described in the Commission's name. The many indications that juvenile delinquency is becoming a public problem of increasing magnitude make it timely for an inquiry to be made into the factors which lie behind the restlessness and misconduct of our children.

The Commission, itself, has interpreted its mandate as including something more than merely once again to catalog the causes of juvenile delinquency. It assumes that what the Legislature really wanted was material suggestive of the way knowledge of the causes of delinquency can be translated into action to prevent and control juvenile delinquency.

The Commission's report, therefore, falls into two parts. The first part is an analysis of informed opinion as to the causes of juvenile delinquency. The second part deals with suggestions for the intensification of endeavors to prevent delinquency and to deal with it more effectively when it occurs.

THE COMMISSION'S PROCEDURE

The Commission has undertaken a many sided study of both phases of its assignment. Early in its deliberations, the Commission was reminded that a decade ago, the New Jersey Legislature provided for one of the most extensive studies of the causes of juvenile delinquency that has been made in any state, when in 1936, it created the New Jersey Juvenile Delinquency Commission. The Commission received appropriations of $70,000 from the Legislature. Generous grants of work relief funds from the Federal Government brought the total expenditures to more than $150,000. The Commission had able membership and professional research direction.

Its Progress Reports, and its comprehensive report, Justice and the Child in New Jersey, have been accepted throughout the country as exhaustive and authoritative studies of the causes of juvenile delinquency.

The present Commission, therefore, has not felt it necessary to duplicate the research studies of the earlier Commission. Indeed, without large appropriations for research staff, it could not be expected to do so. It has, however, had access to the extensive unpublished materials of its predecessor as well as to its printed reports, and the research director of the Juvenile Delinquency Commission of 1936 has served, without renumeration, as Secretary of this Commission. In addition, the Department of Institutions and Agencies, the State Police Department, the Department of Education, and other State agencies dealing with youth problems also have provided source material useful to the Commission.

Supplementing the findings of research conducted in the State of New Jersey, the Commission has utilized materials gathered over a wide range of time and space.[1] One basic study on the causes of delinquency is The Young Delinquent, published in 1925, by the eminent British student of delinquency problems, Dr. Cyril Burt. Studies at Harvard by the Gluecks and at the University of Chicago by Clifford Shaw and associates have also been considered basic materials. Individual research by Dr. James S. Plant and by Dr. William C. Kvaraceus, formerly of Passaic, represent private studies of national significance derived from New Jersey experience.

Expert opinion on the causes of juvenile delinquency has been summarized in two major studies, the Report on the

[1] Special mention should be made of Juvenile Delinquency A Critical Annotated Bibliography, by P S De Q Cabot (H W Wilson Co, N Y 1946) This bibliography provides information on virtually every American contribution to delinquency research published in books or professional magazines from 1914 through 1944

Causes of Crime compiled for the National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement (the Wickersham Commission) in 1930, and the report entitled The Etiology of Crime and Delinquency prepared by a special committee of the Social Science Research Council during the war. All these projects and reports have been utilized by this Commission.

The Commission has also sought to find out to what extent the conclusions of previous studies of the causes of juvenile delinquency, for the most part made prior to Pearl Harbor, remain valid in the post-war era. It has also endeavored to equate the relative force of various factors believed to contribute to juvenile delinquency in the New Jersey community of 1946-47.

In this phase of its work, the Commission has sought to ascertain the opinions of leaders in education, welfare, law enforcement, recreation, and civic affairs, as to the causes of delinquency. Individual consultations took place from time to time. A public hearing held on December 3, 1946, by the Commission, gave an opportunity to representatives of varied organizations and other interested persons concerned with youth problems, to present their views on the causes of delinquency and how these causes might be overcome.

While the Commission was conducting its deliberations in New Jersey, the Attorney-General of the United States sponsored a National Conference for the Prevention and Control of Juvenile Delinquency. This Conference, held in November, 1946, brought together recognized authorities on youth problems from all parts of the nation. The Commission's Secretary and several consultants to the Commission took part in this Conference. Its findings and recommendations have been made available to this Commission. An analysis of this material has constituted a basic part of the Commission's studies.

Thus, the Commission has been able to cover the subject assigned to it by the Legislature in a comprehensive manner without the necessity of engaging in costly new research studies.

II. The Extent of Delinquency Problems in New Jersey

The Commission has conducted an inquiry into the extent of juvenile delinquency in New Jersey, utilizing statistical studies originating in the Department of Education, the Department of Institutions and Agencies, the Department of State Police, and various Federal agencies rather than to undertake original studies which might duplicate existing material. While primarily dealing with juvenile delinquency as defined by law, the inquiry also surveyed the general crime situation in the State.

The overall impression gained by the Commission is that experience has verified the prediction made by the late Commissioner William J. Ellis, of the Department of Institutions and Agencies, to the effect that juvenile delinquency would increase markedly during the war but would recede somewhat after the cessation of hostilities. Adult crime, however, would diminish during the war but would increase during the post-war transition period, particularly among individuals in the young adult class.

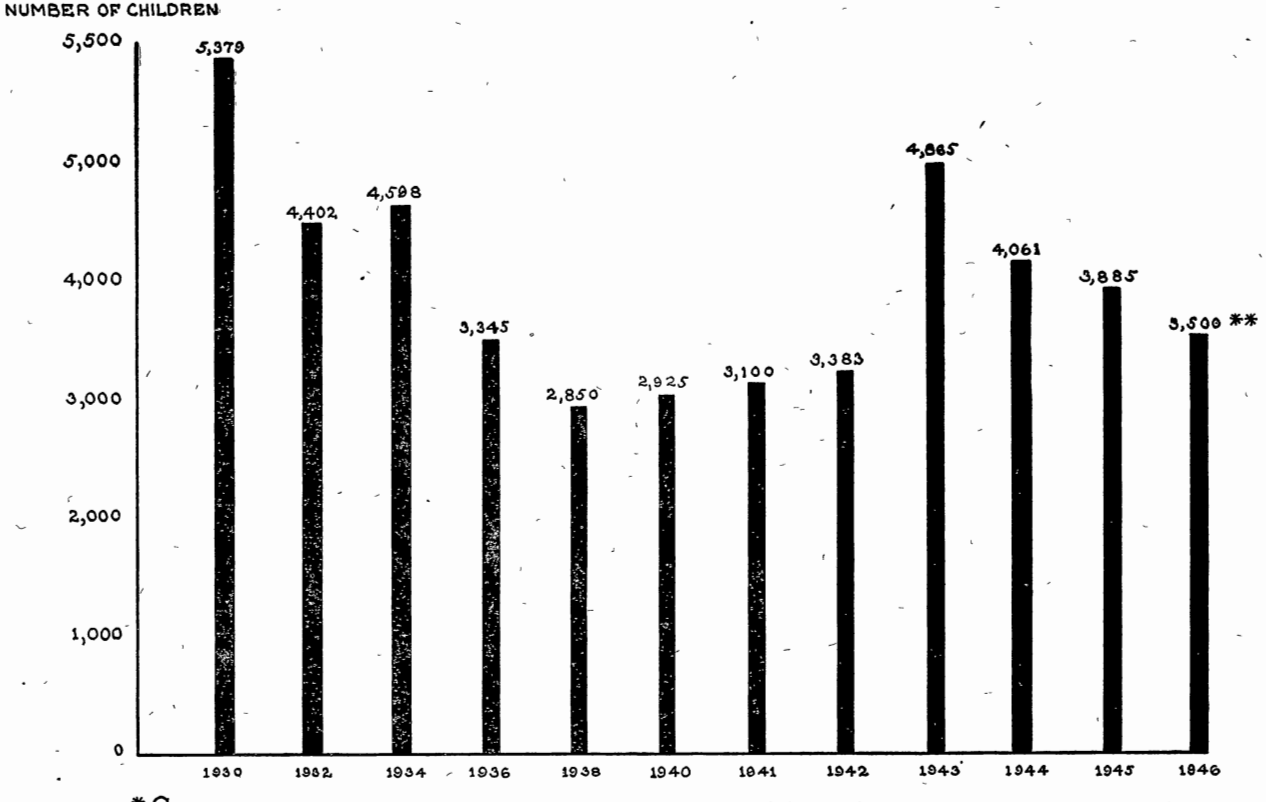

Children in Juvenile Court

Beginning in 1930, the number of children annually referred to juvenile court decreased steadily until a low point was reached in 1938.

From 1939 through 1943, the wartime rise which Mr. Ellis anticipated was in evidence. Since 1943 the trend in juvenile cases, hearable under the basic 1929 Juvenile Court Act, has once again started to decrease.

CHILDREN IN NEW JERSEY JUVENILE COURTS*
1930 - 1946

* CHILDREN UNDER AGE OF 16 YEARS AT TIME OF REFERRAL TO COURT

 PRELIMINARY ESTIMATE

Two factors combine to make the decrease from 1930 to 1938 appear more marked than it probably was in reality. The child population aged 7-15 decreased markedly during this period. During this period, also, community agencies were set up to prevent unnecessary referrals of children to juvenile courts. The increase since 1938 is caused, at least in part, by community fear of mounting delinquency rates which led to the referral to juvenile courts of some children who would not have been dealt with in this manner during the late 1930's. The statistics measure the use made of juvenile courts rather than the total volume of delinquency.

The figures, therefore, probably exaggerate the fluctuation in delinquency as a community problem, although they probably accurately indicate the general trend of a depression decrease, an early wartime increase, followed by a regression toward pre-war norms.

A More Scientific Analysis of Delinquency Rates

A more scientific approach to the analysis of trends in delinquency in New Jersey is to consider several different indices to delinquent behavior.

The Department of Institutions and Agencies and the Department of Education have, for a number of years, cooperated in analyzing data on five indices to juvenile restlessness and misconduct. They have correlated information about the number of children dealt with by juvenile courts and children committed to State institutions for juvenile delinquents with data on the extent of truancy, tardiness, and expulsions and suspensions from school.

These are progressively more severe aspects of delinquency. Tardiness is an incipient form of misconduct likely to result in delinquency, if unchecked. Truancy is the most usual first symptom of overt delinquency. Suspension and expulsion from school occur only when drastic disciplinary action, usually following persistent and serious misbehavior in school, is deemed necessary. Juvenile court referrals represent children whose misconduct is believed to be sufficiently serious to warrant official intervention, while commitments to the State homes may be said to depict the "hard core" of critically serious delinquency.

In order to allow for changes in the child population, the two departments first compute "rates" in a manner similar to the calculation of birth and death rates. The juvenile court and institution commitment rates are based on the total child population aged 7-15 years, and the educational data on public school enrollment and possible days attendance. The "rate" data are then converted to an index basis, utilizing the average rate for the period 1930-1939 as equalling 100.

The chart on the following page traces trends since 1930 in tardiness, truancy, suspensions and expulsions from school, juvenile court referrals, and commitments to juvenile institutions, as computed on the basis described in the preceding paragraph.

The five indices agree in pointing to the fact of a depression decrease and wartime increases in behavior problems among children. They vary as to the probable extent of the indicated increase. If, however, due allowance is made for the effects of the changes made during 1940 in the compulsory education and child labor laws (age raised from 14 to 16), all five indices are relatively in close agreement as to the character of the wartime trend. They are in agreement also in indicating a post-war lessening of juvenile problems.

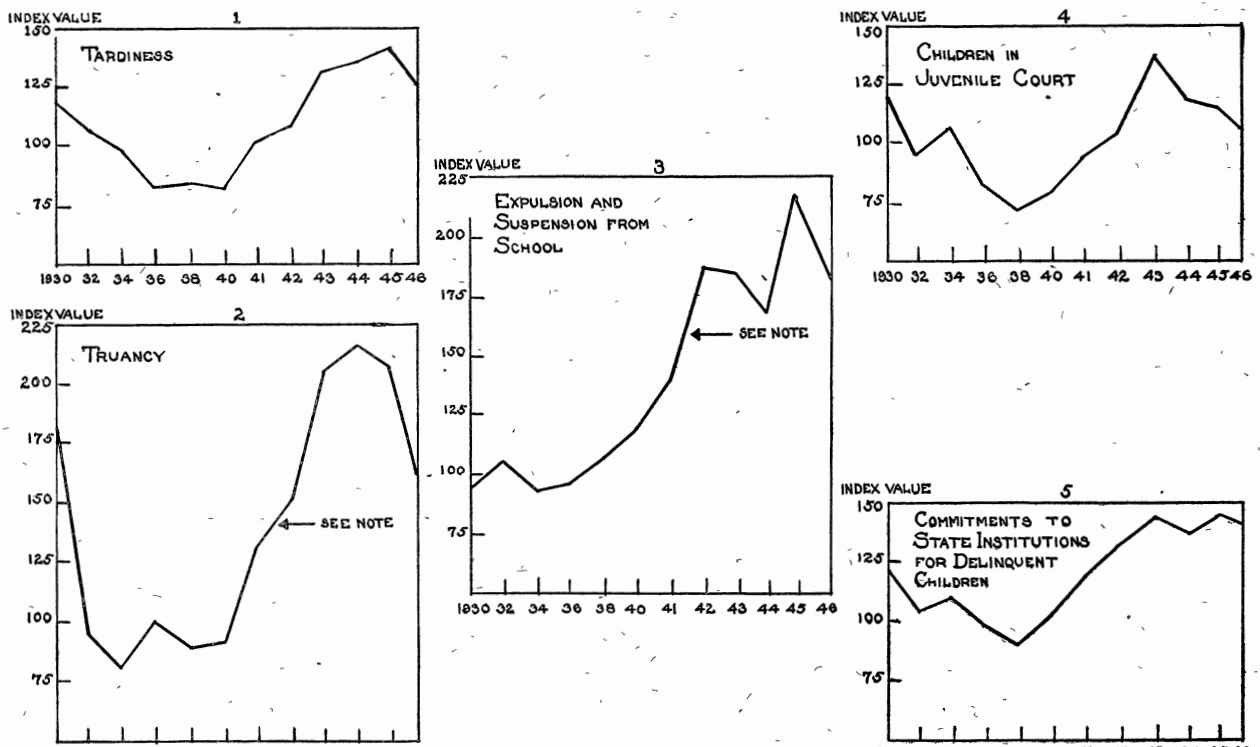

It is interesting to observe, however, that the two trends which are the most similar are those for the two extremes: tardiness, which deals with pre-delinquent misconduct, and State home commitments, the "hard core" of serious delinquency.

The New Jersey data have also been compared with statistics of juvenile court activities compiled by the United States Children's Bureau and data compiled by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on the characteristics of arrested juveniles whose fingerprints are filed in Washington. Recent trends in New Jersey juvenile court cases appear to fall between the two sets of data for the United States generally.

The wide difference between the trends indicated in the two Federal series led the Statistics Panel of the recent National Conference for the Prevention and Control of Juvenile Delinquency to recommend the establishment of a Federal interagency committee to work for the improvement of statistical procedures relating to crime and delinquency. Detailed analysis will show, however, that the two Federal series are in close agreement as to trends from 1942 through 1945.

Police Data on Juvenile Delinquency Are Missing

The available New Jersey materials provide an overall picture of trends in the volume of juvenile misconduct which is probably as accurate and complete a statistical presentation as is available in any State.

One important component, however, is lacking in the New Jersey statistical data. There is no centrally compiled statistical record of the relatively large number of children apprehended by local police whose cases are not officially referred to juvenile courts for adjudication. This same comment applies to Federal statistics on juvenile arrests. The Federal Bureau of Investigation's compilation of data concerning juvenile arrests used in this report is based upon the small proportion of juveniles under the age of 18 years who are fingerprinted. In most jurisdictions, juveniles are rarely fingerprinted as criminals. Therefore, these figures are of doubtful validity as an index to trends in juvenile delinquency.

The Commission hopes that statistics covering at least a representative sample of New Jersey municipalities may be obtained from local police departments for the year 1946, and that these data may be incorporated in the annual compilation of juvenile delinquency statistics for that year.

The Commission further urges that the Department of Institutions and Agencies attempt to complete its compilation of 1946 data while the Legislature is still in session, so as to provide a "back drop" which may be useful to the Legislature in its consideration of this Commission's recommendations, which appear later in this report.

The General Crime Situation

In addition to its specialized study of juvenile delinquency statistics, the Commission has examined statistics on the general crime situation, based on the following classes of data:

1. Fingerprints of arrested persons filed by local police departments with the Bureau of Identification of the Department of State Police.

2. Crimes known to the police (homicide, aggravated assault, robbery, burglary, larceny, and auto theft) reported by local police departments to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.
3. Convictions on serious charges in courts of general criminal jurisdiction.
4. Commitments to State prisons and reformatories.

The results of this inquiry from 1934 through 1946, are summarized in the following table. Data prior to 1934 are not available on a comparable basis for all these items. Hence the table starts with that year rather than 1930.

* State fiscal year data, 12 months ending June 30 of indicated year

All indices agree in pointing to (1) a decline in adult crime during the 1930's and during the war; (2) a tendency for crime to rise in the immediate pre-war years, and (3) a tendency for crime to revert to pre-war levels since the termination of hostilities. Despite the agitation in the press, the general crime situation today does not appear to be of greater proportions than in the years immediately before the war and is well under the level prevailing in the early 1930's.

THE CURRENT SITUATION SUMMARIZED

In general, the Commission is pleased to report that its studies yield findings which run counter to the public impression that delinquency and crime are today at an unprecedentedly high level.

With respect to juvenile delinquency, current rates are higher than they were in the late 1930's. However, there are indications of a decrease in delinquency problems requiring official handling since the peak year of 1943.

With respect to the general crime situation, crime rates today are higher than they were during the war but are lower than they were just before the war. They appear, however, to be moving upward to the pre-war high level.

The crime and delinquency situation in New Jersey today, therefore, may be said to be serious but not critical. It has been worse, but it could also be much better.

The rapid succession of widely publicized teen-age murders, hold-ups, and robberies, would seem to suggest, however, that the types of misconduct now occurring may be more dangerous both to society and to the individuals against whom they are charged than were the offenses of children and young adults of a few years ago. It is hoped that the annual statistical review of juvenile delinquency problems compiled by the Department of Institutions and Agencies will provide illumination on this question.

THE THREAT OF INCREASED DELINQUENCY TO COME

That New Jersey has a juvenile delinquency problem of serious proportions today is undeniable. There are, however, portents of increased problems to come.

Legislative and other governmental bodies should give consideration to the significance of the wartime rise in the birthrate, in influencing the probable future volume of delinquency especially during the 1950's.

During the 1930's, approximately 55,000 to 57,000 children were born in New Jersey each year. These are the children who constitute the child population in the delinquency age span at the present time.

During the 1940's, an average of more than 75,000 children have been born each year and, in 1946, the number of births in the State rose to an all-time high of more than 92,000. At present delinquency rates, therefore, there would be one and a half times as many juvenile delinquents in the 1950's as there are at present.

These children, moreover, are growing up at a time when the inadequacy of housing, the readjustment of marital relationships, and other factors in a transition from war to peace are so prevalent as to make it almost inevitable that many of these children will not receive adequate guidance at home, at school, or in their community relationships. Therefore, delinquency rates in the 1950's are likely to be higher than now, unless safeguards against delinquency are strengthened.

This threat of increased delinquency to come, as well as the current relatively high level of delinquency, lend urgency to the Commission's recommendation for an overall intensification of community services for the prevention and control of juvenile delinquency.

III. The Causes of Juvenile Delinquency

Virtually all authorities agree that there is no one cause of delinquency. In individual cases of delinquency, it is usually necessary to study the child at great length to arrive at an understanding of the causes of delinquency.

The prior New Jersey Juvenile Delinquency Commission, after its exhaustive studies, concluded that "Delinquency has many causes. Delinquency is usually the result of pressure from several adverse influences."[1] The Wickersham Commission expressed the same thought in saying that, "All careful studies of delinquents and criminals have emphasized the fact that there are no unit causes of crime."[2] The first modern expression of this point of view, however, appears to have been voiced by the British psychologist, Cyril, now Sir Cyril Burt, who said in 1925, "Crime is assignable to no single universal source, nor yet to two or three, it springs from a wide variety and usually from a multiplicity of alternative converging influences."[3]

To those who hold that the point of view expressed in the foregoing paragraph is merely an admission that no one has yet succeeded in finding out what causes delinquency, the pamphlet, Delinquency CAN Be Prevented, published in 1946, by the Department of Institutions and Agencies, contains an illuminating answer:

> "Delinquency has many causes. It is not a disease itself but is, like fever in physical illness, a symptom of emotional and personality difficulties which may stem from many different causes."[4]

The many causes of delinquency can be traced, not merely in the life of the individual child, but in his relationship in the family, in the school, and in the community at large. Indeed, most studies of the causes of juvenile delinquency classify causal factors into the following four basic categories:

1. Causes rooted in family life.
2. Causes rooted in school life.
3. Causes rooted in community contacts.
4. Causes rooted in personal life.

EQUATING THE FACTORS

One approach to the analysis of the causes of delinquency is to attempt to weigh the relative influence of the home, the school, and the community on the development of personal character.

For the child under seven years of age, the home has virtually sole jurisdiction over the child. In these years of infancy, the child has only slight contacts with the school although he has probably begun to share experiences with other children in kindergarten and in the first grade. He has even less opportunity to feel directly any impact from the community outside the home and the school, though community forces strongly affect both home and school.

From seven through 12, the normal child divides his time and interests between home and school. He has some limited contacts with community influences during this stage of development.

The average child from 12 to 16 divides his waking hours about equally between home, school, and community. His attitudes towards the community at large, however, will largely be controlled by the quality of preparation he has received, first from the home and later from the home and school together.

THE HOME AND DELINQUENCY

It is, therefore, the conclusion of this Commission, which is shared by other observers of delinquency problems, that the home is the social institution which most strongly influences the development of character.

There are very few homes that do not want their children to become good citizens. Even the most unprepossessing families are deeply distressed when their children become delinquent.

Much of the deficiency in parental guidance, therefore, is unintentional. This is why the Commission does not advocate, as a general rule, visiting the sins of the children upon the parents in terms of punishing parents for their children's misdeeds. Occasionally this may be necessary, but as a general rule, parents want as well as need help.

Essentially, however, parents contribute to delinquency of children through failure to understand their children. This sometimes results in indulgence, and sometimes in strictness of discipline. Chiefly there is lack of "contact" between parents and children, so that parental efforts at guidance are ineffectual. Many times parents are ill prepared to exercise their responsibilities in the communities where they live either by choice or through economic necessity.

Much has been written by conservative theorists advocating corporal punishment as a deterrent to delinquency. It is often assumed that delinquent children are spoiled youngsters who have never experienced corporal punishment. This is an outmoded assumption at variance with the facts. In actual experience, corporal punishment, indiscriminately applied, has not only been the only disciplinary method used by parents but has also constituted one of the major reasons why children have become delinquent.

Children from homes in which parents quarrel or from homes in which children are abused or neglected, are likely to find outlets in misconduct. Homes in which parents are emotionally unstable, homes lacking economic security, homes where both parents work or where there is unemployment, and homes lacking cultural stimuli for law compliance furnish conditions where delinquency is a very real hazard. Pleasure seeking parents, not only those who drink to excess or who frequent night clubs and taverns, but also those who overdo pastimes, innocent in themselves, can and do contribute to delinquency by their failure to provide guidance and supervision for their children. Crowded living arrangements in dismal quarters often drive children away from their homes into delinquency.

Obviously, the type of home which is least adequate in giving a child the security and guidance which is his due, is the lawless home. Occasionally such parents do not only represent lawlessness but actually encourage children to participate directly by acting as receivers of stolen goods or by demanding that the children supply certain daily or weekly sums of "ready cash." Fortunately, there are few families in this category.

Delinquency often arises in homes in which there are serious cultural conflicts between adults and children, between the ethical concepts taught in the home, church, and school, and those perceived by the children in the neighborhoods. Often this situation is thought of as a "culture conflict" involving immigrant parents whose loyalties are to the customs of their native villages or countries, as against their children who feel contempt for them or, at best, fail to receive suitable adult guidance in evaluating American ways. Similar conflicts exist where rural families, white as well as Negro, migrate to congested cities, and where city families find it hard to adapt themselves to rural conditions. Technological changes sometimes disrupt the economic basis of family life, though the family may not move. In families suddenly poor or newly rich, great strains are placed on family ties because of unequal ability to adapt adequately to the new conditions.

Parental discrimination is frequently a factor in inducing delinquency. Neglect or coddling by parents, jealousies of other children or other factors which adults are likely to have difficulty in understanding, create emotional crises in children which may lead to delinquency.

Another source of difficulty in family life is over-protectiveness on the part of the parents. The family takes the child's part on every occasion. This tends to create a sense of self-importance in him. Children whose mothers work are often exposed to delinquency when such employment prevents normal parental or substitute supervision and guidance.

Emotional conflicts caused by the death of one or both parents or by divorce are often a factor in delinquency. This is often complicated by the remarriage of the parent. While the legends of the harsh stepmother or stepfather are seldom translated into real life situations, there are occasions where trouble of this type does occur. There are also situations where the resistance of the child to the new family structure calls for greater insight and patience than the parent or step-parent is qualified to provide.

The Commission does not have information on which to determine how much poverty itself, with its concomitants of bickering, congestion, poor food and bad housing, is a cause of delinquency. The overwhelming majority of children who come into contact with the police and with juvenile courts or other child adjustment agencies in New Jersey are members of low income families. No records exist, however, which indicate how much delinquency there is among children of higher social strata which is adjusted or merely concealed by family action. In Passaic, where this question was studied with considerable care, it was found that there were fewer absences, and less truancy and tardiness among children whose families had incomes classified as "comfortable" than in low income neighborhoods, thus suggesting that the concealed delinquency of economically privileged children does not entirely offset the tendency for delinquency to be most prevalent in low income families.[5] It seems to defy analysis, however, to discover whether poverty and delinquency are mutually causative or to what extent both are end products of other difficulties within or without the control of the individuals affected.

The interests of society, therefore, call for measures to strengthen the efforts of parents to guide their children through the conflicts and uncertainties of childhood and adolescence.

THE CHILD IN SCHOOL

It is also very significant that almost all delinquent boys and girls have had trouble in school. The school is not always at fault in such situations. Many of those youngsters were difficult boys and girls to handle, often handicapped by low mentality, by malnutrition, by poor physical condition and unattractive personal appearance, and distraught by emotional disturbances.

Yet it is significant to point out that many of these children believe that unfortunate relations with teachers and other students limited their interest in school. Almost every one has had teachers who tried to help him or her, but the majority of teachers seemed, to the delinquents at least, only too anxious to keep them quiet and to concentrate teaching efforts on more responsive material. Nor was there any evidence of concerted effort, in most instances, to get at the problems of the individual child and apply teaching techniques which would stimulate him in particular, or to place him in a curriculum adapted to his needs and interests.

In many cases, the jeers of other children, sarcastic comments from the teacher and other situations causing personal humiliation have been important factors in influencing the decision of a child in a high risk situation to play truant or to indulge in other forms of delinquent behavior instead of going on with school.

Children are required by law to remain in school during many years of their lives. Therefore, the teacher is responsible in a large degree for the quality of tomorrow's citizens. Every attempt on the part of educational theorists to define the aims and purposes of education indicates a lively realization that the basic reason, if not the only reason, for the existence of schools lies in the preparation of young people for a wholesome life. Everything, good or bad, that happens to a boy or girl must be looked upon as part of his general education. The problem of the school is to find, through its trained personnel, a way of integrating these experiences in such a way that the child can be seen as a total human being. No one is more aware of the need for this broader education than the school officials themselves.

In this connection, however, it may be significant to refer to the records of the State Department of Education which were cited earlier in this report and which show a sharp rise in expulsions and truancy following the enactment of legislation raising the age of compulsory school attendance to 16 years. Few people would argue that children generally have not benefited by this legislation. The National Commission on Children and Youth has recently recommended that this be further raised to cover all children between 16 and 18 years of age, with allowance for legal employment of those 16 years of age and over. But it is also true that for some children, the compulsion to remain in school and to be forced to experience a teaching program primarily directed toward younger, more academically minded children has had a harmful effect.

The members of this Commission, however, look upon the school as being a resource for continuing education and wholesome recreation. It is effective in deterring individuals from becoming delinquent in direct ratio to the accessibility and attractiveness of the school program, not only between nine in the morning and three in the afternoon but all through the afternoon and evening.

The unavailability of the school outside of class hours has often forced children to look for outlets elsewhere to such an extent as to constitute one of the causes of delinquency. The Commission, therefore, strongly advocates increased use of school buildings as social centers. This movement has been growing in strength during recent years but there are still too many communities in New Jersey where little has been done in this direction.

That there are problems involved in thus expanding the utilization of school facilities cannot be denied. But these problems are viewed as challenges to be overcome, not as insuperable barriers.

THE CHILD AND THE COMMUNITY

Every child lives much of his life exposed to the influences of the community. The delinquent child is characteristically one who is early exposed to community hazards without the balancing safeguards which a good home and school environment should provide. Even though his family relationships may be harmonious and well-balanced, and the child physically and mentally normal, there is still the chance that his playmates will not be children with similar backgrounds. The different groups which the child meets have different conduct norms, different standards of behavior. Often the standards not only differ but are in direct conflict. It is then a question of which set of criteria will appear most logical and impelling to the child. Obviously, the answer is, "The one which produces the most satisfactory immediate results."

Whole areas, rural as well as urban, are often unfavorable to the development of upright character in children. Dr. Clifford Shaw has shown how certain areas of Chicago and other cities have for generations gone on producing delinquents who grew up to be criminals even though the resident nationality groups have continued to change during these years. Year in and year out, certain rural as well as urban areas in New Jersey show high delinquency rates. The moral climate of these areas inevitably makes delinquent behavior a normal conduct pattern. It is a social inheritance or behavior pattern that is transmitted from generation to generation. In these areas, "gangs" are often self-perpetuating organizations. Older boys are graduated from them, younger boys join them almost as soon as they can toddle. These gangs differ from the fluid, temporary groups of youngsters who play together and who may, on occasion, commit acts of malicious mischief. Almost every boy belongs to the latter type of group at some time during his life.

Urban delinquency areas are chiefly found in the deteriorated residential districts which most often exist just beyond the limits of downtown shopping and entertainment centers, sometimes in noisy, smoke-tarnished neighborhoods near railroads and industrial establishments.

The influence of the movies and radio has been widely debated. Some authorities claim that certain types of movies and radio programs teach the routines of crime, that "glamour girl" movies and programs lead to discontent and to sex offenses. Others defend them as providing wholesome, inexpensive recreation for young people who otherwise might get into trouble.

Dr. Kvaraceus' study of delinquency in Passaic reveals another significant relationship between movies and delinquency. Despite their low income status, delinquent children were found to attend movies twice as often as non-delinquent children.[6] Thus, excessive attendance at movies, and pre-occupation with crime programs on the radio, can constitute a warning that the child is trying to find satisfactions to compensate for the want of them at home, at school, or in the activities in the community which normally claim the attention of children.[7]

Many children appear to have started their delinquencies by stealing to get movie money. Still another theory is that movies, themselves, may not be ipso facto bad for children, but moving picture theatres often are. This theory points to the laxity in the enforcement of laws pertaining to the admission of children unaccompanied by adults and to the opportunities for misconduct on the part of unsupervised children, excited by what they have seen on the screen.

Many of the comments applied above to the movies and radio apply also to comic books and to other reading matter readily available to children.

Many students of juvenile delinquency have blamed cheap magazines and lurid news reporting for such misconduct. Many pulp magazines glorify crime. They contain pictures and stories which can be construed salaciously and obscenely no matter how high the publishers' eyebrows may be arched at the suggestion that their papers are not strictly moral and within the law. Though the text may or may not be dangerous, some of the magazines contain advertisements for mail order houses selling guns and other criminal accessories.

[6] Juvenile Delinquency and the School, p 110

[7] A recent widely publicized juvenile murder involving New Jersey children demonstrates this situation

It seems not only possible but justifiable to complain that legitimate publications have contributed to crime, particularly when a clever writer builds up a series of spectacular news stories out of very commonplace crimes.

Prevailing standards of business morality are sometimes seen as causes of juvenile delinquency. Almost every one wants to be a shrewd trader, a good bargainer. But it is very easy to step over the line from shrewdness to dishonesty. Stories of how someone got more than dollar value at the grocery store, or took a ride on the bus without paying fare, or outsmarted the ration board, are part of American folklore. People who should know better boast about their acumen in getting something for nothing through petty deceit. Obviously, the child who sees this type of petty fraud is not going to be very reluctant to engage in petty theft.

Some observers also see a cause of juvenile delinquency in stores where small merchandise is attractively displayed on low counters, from which children can easily steal. It is an amusing game, children sometimes think, to snatch trinkets and beat the manager to the door. Similarly, unguarded orchards, gardens, push carts, and sidewalk stands are called causes of delinquency. Children raid them (petty larceny) and upset them (malicious mischief).

Vacant buildings, residences or factories contribute heavily to delinquency. Too often these places are left unguarded. Boys like to break into and explore this type of property. Sometimes they have "dens" in them and use them as recreational centers. In one case, a semi-public recreational building, closed because of lack of funds, was broken into by the boys whom it was built to serve.

More dangerous, however, is the temptation to steal plumbing, machinery parts and other portable objects of value from vacant property and to sell them for junk.

Strictness in licensing and supervision of junk dealers may curtail this. Unprincipled junk dealers ask no questions about how the boys get the stuff, and in some instances the raids are found to have been planned by adults.

Bootblacks, newsboys, pinboys, and boys in other similar occupations are likely to know where bookmakers, number drops, disorderly houses and other illicit trades are carried on. Hence, such juvenile occupations must be recognized as involving high risks though they may not explicitly be causes of delinquency.

The effects of political and other outside interferences with legal processes must also be mentioned. Citizens must realize that pressure on their official representatives to "fix a ticket" or secure an unwarranted relaxation of justice creates a dangerously distorted picture. If a child thinks that, through influence, he can get away with delinquent acts, he may be on the road to a criminal career.

Occasionally, episodes of vandalism and stealing can be attributed to the lack of anything else exciting to do in the community. This type of delinquency, exasperating though it may be to the authorities, can often be prevented by providing outlets for the adventure spirit common to all youth. Other types of delinquency are more complex. Hence, recreation alone is no panacea for juvenile delinquency.

The Personality of the Child

With exceptions so rare as to comprise first page news, no child is compelled to be delinquent. While children are not born with a sense of right and wrong, they early develop character traits. The character of the child is moulded and shaped by contacts at home, at school, and in the community, but this very statement implies that there is something inherent in the personality of the child to be moulded.

A wide variety of "personal" factors may be classed as "causes of delinquency." Delinquency may be one way of expressing deepseated resentments and frustrations. The child who does not easily fit into the activities enjoyed by other children may commit delinquent acts to gain status or to compensate for his exclusion from these activities. He may withdraw from the activities around him and build up an imaginary environment of his own which he may later try to turn into reality by delinquency. Psychiatrists find this condition among children who run away from home, or who seek to emulate Robin Hood, Jesse James, or other glamorized criminals.

Subnormality or dull mentality may be a factor, particularly since children of such mental levels are less well equipped than other children to resist suggestions looking toward delinquency. Such children are particularly likely to become restless and dissatisfied if enrolled in a school system which proceeds rapidly and places great stress on high marks.

Minor, often unsuspected physical impairments, often have a similar effect. A boy unable to play a normally adequate game of baseball because of constitutionally weak wrist muscles, and who is left out of neighborhood games on that account, may be on the road to delinquency. A child who does not learn to read or to do arithmetic because of minor hearing or visual impairment is likely to feel inadequate, and to compensate by delinquent conduct.

This report would be incomplete without mentioning one of the most frequent characteristics of the individual delinquent. This is the absence of any real appreciation of ethical values based upon sound religious principles. The lack of religious sensitivity may perhaps be a cause of delinquency or it may merely be another manifestation of the inadequacy of character training, in the home, the school, and the community, which underlies delinquent behavior. The Commission is certain, however, that effective religious guidance is one of the surest safeguards against delinquency.

This Commission believes that many of the causes of delinquency are known and that aggressive action can and should be taken to lessen their impact upon the children of New Jersey.

While it is not possible to determine which individuals are likely to become delinquent, it is possible to eliminate many causes of delinquency by intelligent law enforcement that will weed out harmful influences in the community, by equipping the schools with a sufficient number of qualified teachers and supplementing their services by clinical and other services for exceptional children, and by strengthening community resources for parental guidance.

Much of the success of campaigns in the public health field can be attributed to vigorous efforts to eradicate sources of infection, to isolate "carriers" of infection, and to identify individuals who are susceptible to infection, or in the early, controllable stage of a disease. The Commission believes that delinquency can be controlled by analogous programs.

IV. New Jersey and Delinquency Control

In its effort to arrive at an understanding of the causes of juvenile delinquency and of ways and means to improve the efforts being made to prevent and control delinquency, this Commission has inevitably had to observe work already being done in this State.

New Jersey has long committed itself to a policy which seeks to treat fundamental causes and underlying conditions rather than being content to treat surface manifestations. Compared with most other States, New Jersey legislation and practice is considered to be progressive as well as efficient.

In our municipalities we find the schools and welfare, recreational, and law enforcement agencies desirous of carrying on programs which will effectively safeguard the welfare of children and of the community.

New Jersey's Juvenile Court Law, especially since its amendment in 1946, approximates the pattern recommended by authorities throughout the country. This Commission would not recommend any change in the jurisdiction and functions of the juvenile and domestic relations court at this time. Our State programs for delinquent and other behavior problem children also have nation-wide recognition.

The recent establishment of the Division of Community Services for Delinquency Prevention, administratively centered in the Department of Institutions and Agencies, but guided by an advisory committee including representatives of all types of governmental and voluntary youth service interests, is a progressive step.

Nevertheless, the Commission sees no reason to be satisfied with things as they are. Many improvements seem to be within relatively easy reach.

GOVERNOR'S CONFERENCE ON YOUTH

As an important phase of the effort to move ahead, the Commission heartily endorses the plan for a Governor's Conference on Youth, as contained in the inaugural address of Governor Alfred E. Driscoll.

The recent National Conference for the Prevention and Control of Juvenile Delinquency brought together distinguished citizens from all parts of the country who discussed delinquency problems from many angles. The Summaries of Recommendations for Action emanating from this Conference provide challenging evidence of the variety of measures that can readily be taken to bring about improvements in community services for the prevention and control of delinquency.

The Commission believes that the pending Governor's Conference on Youth, bringing together educational, welfare, law enforcement, recreation, and civic leaders from all parts of the State, can greatly aid in stimulating of advances in the delinquency control programs in New Jersey and help to resolve divergent attitudes which are presently hampering the full utilization of proved modern techniques for dealing with delinquency.

The Commission pledges itself to full co-operation with the participants in the Governor's Conference on Youth.

NEED FOR MUNICIPAL YOUTH GUIDANCE COMMISSIONS

The chief defect in New Jersey's delinquency control program is the absence of machinery for the co-ordination of local efforts to combat delinquency.

The Commission has been very favorably impressed by the work done by co-ordinating agencies such as the special service bureaus in Jersey City and Passaic, the Parent-Child Assistance Committee of Plainfield, and by youth welfare councils in several other localities. These programs, even without any formal legislative sanction, appear to have contributed greatly to the prevention and control of juvenile delinquency in the communities they serve. The Commission also recalls the effectiveness of co-operation between official and voluntary community agencies, linked together through civilian defense councils.

The Commission, therefore, believes that there should be legislation authorizing the establishment in each municipality of a municipal youth guidance commission which would co-ordinate community activities looking toward the prevention and control of juvenile delinquency.

Such a commission would consist of from seven to nine members appointed by the head of the municipal governing body, including one representative each of the governing body, the school system, and the municipal police, and not less than four nor more than six members-at-large representing welfare, recreational and civic organizations. The commission would have the power to enlist the aid of individual consultants and advisory committees.

The commission would primarily be charged with responsibility in three fields. It would:

A. Assist in co-ordinating and integrating community plans and services, governmental and voluntary, affecting the welfare of all children and youth in the community.

B. Assist in co-ordinating and integrating community plans and services, governmental and voluntary, for protecting children who are especially exposed to conditions conducive to delinquency.

C. Assist in co-ordinating and integrating community plans for the control of harmful influences in the community.

A fourth function which might be undertaken by local commissions would be to:

D. Sponsor an adjustment committee which would act as a referral and consultation center to aid in the adjustment of children with incipient behavior problems and to co-operate with the juvenile and domestic relations court in "screening" cases for consideration by the court, and in implementing the recommendations of the court as to the treatment of the child and his family. The adjustment committee should include representatives of the police department, the school system, the county juvenile and domestic relations court, and of public and private family welfare agencies in the community. It should employ or have available, through clearly defined agreements with other agencies, the services of competent, professionally qualified personnel in the field of child welfare.

A municipal youth guidance commission which elects to set up an adjustment committee would also be empowered to petition the juvenile and domestic relations court in its county to hold juvenile hearings in a suitable location within the limits of the petitioning municipality, or to appoint a referee to hear and recommend disposition of all cases, or of specific classes of cases, arising within or affecting children residing within the limits of the petitioning municipality.

Such a petition would be accompanied by a detailed statement embodying a plan that would assure to children whose cases are to be adjudicated, diagnostic and treatment services equal to those available to the children directly under the supervision of the judge. Upon receipt of such a petition the judge would either arrange to hold local hearings or proceed to appoint a suitable person as referee.

Provision should be incorporated into any such legislation to make sure that the adjustment committee does not become, in effect, a local juvenile court. The plan is intended to make for closer co-operation between the community and the court. It gives the court representation in community work to prevent delinquency and facilitates contact between community agencies and the court when formal adjudication is indicated.

A PLAN

FOR THE CONTROL AND TREATMENT OF JUVENILE DELINQUENCY THROUGH THE ESTABLISHMENT OF MUNICIPAL YOUTH GUIDANCE COMMISSIONS

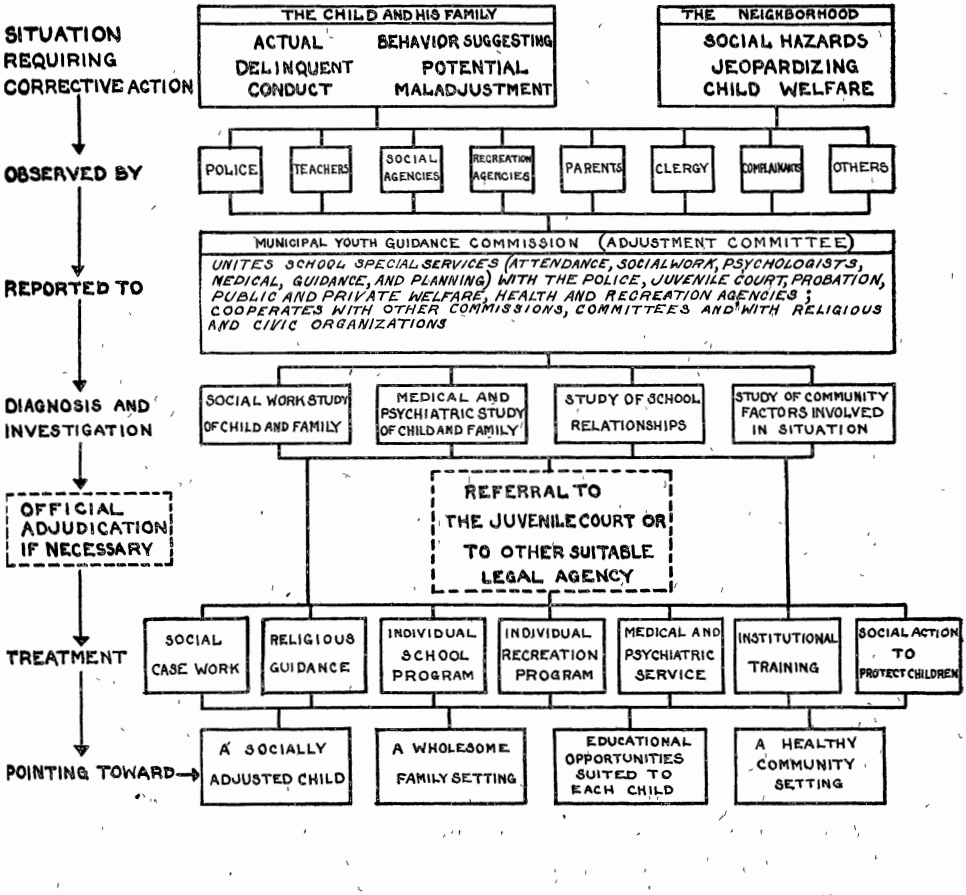

STRUCTURE AND FUNCTIONS OF COMMISSION

MUNICIPAL YOUTH GUIDANCE COMMISSION

7-9 MEMBERS INCLUDING REPRESENTATIVES OF POLICE, SCHOOLS, WELFARE AGENCIES, ETC., PLUS CONSULTANTS AND ADVISORY COMMITTEES AS NEEDED
ASSIST IN COORDINATING AND INTEGRATING COMMUNITY PLANS AND SERVICES FOR

STRENGTHENING OF RESOURCES NEEDED BY ALL CHILDREN	PROTECTION OF GROUPS OF CHILDREN ESPECIALLY VULNERABLE TO DELINQUENCY	CONTROL OF HARMFUL INFLUENCES IN THE COMMUNITY	SERVICES FOR THE DELINQUENT CHILD AND THE CHILD WITH BEHAVIOR PROBLEMS

THE WAY THE PLAN WILL OPERATE

It should be possible for two or more contiguous municipalities to establish joint municipal youth guidance commissions. This should be encouraged in:

A. Sparsely populated areas.
B. Areas where there are regional high schools, or where a high school in one school district serves an extensive outlying constituency of "sending districts."
C. Areas where voluntary welfare services operate on an inter municipal basis.

In order to facilitate the operation of municipal youth guidance commissions, there should be made available to some State agency data and information regarding the operation of such commissions. It should be the duty of this State agency to receive and collate reports from, and to establish minimum standards for, local services and basic records in local youth guidance commissions.

THE SCHOOLS AND JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

The Commission is greatly impressed by the contribution to delinquency prevention which can be made by extending the use of school facilities to service of students and out-of-school youth during the period when regularly scheduled classes are not in session.

The use of schools for this purpose is in many respects closely allied to adult education programs. It would include opportunities for youth to use gymnasiums and swimming pools, playing fields, shops, meeting rooms and other facilities of the schools for recreation and informal education and for special studies in lieu of home work.

Such programs are in operation in some school districts. They do, however, involve expenditures beyond those regularly budgeted for light, heat and janitorial service. They are likely to increase wear and tear on building and equipment. In some instances, they may involve increased costs of staff supervision.

They are, however, of such fundamental importance in the prevention of delinquency, especially for the protection of children lacking proper home supervision during out-of-school hours, that this Commission urges the enactment of legislation, supported by appropriation of State funds, to enable the State Department of Education to subsidize local programs for the extended use of school facilities on a grant-in-aid basis according to a formula deemed equitable by the State Department of Education.

Legislation providing for the operation of such a plan of grants-in-aid is being sponsored by this Commission. It provides that local boards of education, in consultation with municipal youth guidance commissions, may submit a "Plan for the Extended Use of School Facilities in Youth Service" to the State Department of Education. On approval of the plan by the State Commissioner of Education, the State will allot State aid to the local school district to help meet the additional costs involved over and above the basic school budget.

The Commission favors legislation suggested by the State Department of Education which will facilitate the development of guidance and other adjunct professional educational services under the office of the county superintendent of schools. This would make available to schools in less populated sections of the State, the specialized services which have proved their value in urban school systems.

The Commission further hopes that lightening of the financial strain on local school districts, resulting from the revised system of apportioning State grants-in-aid for general education, will stimulate improvement in guidance, clinical, and other special services in communities sufficiently large to warrant full time employment of such specialists within the local school system. No added legislation is needed to accomplish this objective.

In the studies conducted by the Commission, the need to train youth for responsible family life was repeatedly emphasized. The inclusion of such training in the curricula of secondary schools is permissible now. In individual communities, interesting experiments along these lines are in progress. As yet, educational authorities are not wholly satisfied that the methods for teaching this somewhat abstract field of knowledge are adequate, and no definitive plan can yet be recommended. The Commission urges wider experimentation along these lines.

The Commission strongly urges the inclusion of courses in responsible parenthood in adult education programs. Experiments in California, Michigan, and Ohio, where attendance at such courses has been required of parents whose children have been before juvenile courts, have been brought to the attention of the Commission. Reports are conflicting as to the value of these "compulsory" training courses for parents. It is already possible for juvenile court judges to include such a provision among the conditions under which a child is released on probation. The Commission suggests that experimentation with such a program might well be carried on in this State.[1]

Welfare and Related Services for Children

The Commission has observed with interest the child welfare services being rendered in several counties by specially trained workers assigned to the local County Welfare Boards. This program was originally financed on a demonstration basis, using federal funds exclusively. It is now operated co-operatively through county funds, supplemented by federal grants-in-aid allocated within the State by the Child Welfare Division of the State Board of Children's Guardians.

The Commission urges the rapid extension of this program to additional counties, many of which are forced to send a disproportionate number of children to State institutions as delinquents or commit them as dependent children to the guardianship of the State Board of Children's Guardians, because of the lack of competent, local child welfare services.

[1] In Union County, steps are being taken by the Union County Youth Welfare Council to set up such a project in co operation with the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court and various state agencies concerned with delinquency prevention, family counseling, and adult education

In this connection, the Commission endorses the proposal that the State Board of Children's Guardians be renamed the State Board of Child Welfare. Legislation along these lines is being introduced independently of this Commission.

The Commission is also gratified by the removal of the Children's Unit of the Marlboro State Hospital from that adult institution to the beautiful Brisbane property at Allaire. The relaxation of the provision which limits the utilization of the unit to children certified as insane, so as to permit diagnosis and treatment of all children with emotional problems requiring psychiatric services, is a further commendable step.

APPREHENSION, TRANSPORTATION, AND DETENTION OF JUVENILES

One of the most complex problems in the handling of juvenile delinquents has to do with the apprehension, transportation, and detention of children in trouble with the law.

The Commission wishes to express its belief that the police have broader powers, under the Juvenile Court Act, to apprehend juveniles than they have to apprehend adult offenders. There is nothing in the New Jersey Juvenile Court Law, or in any other law, which restricts the power of the police to arrest where children are involved. On the contrary, police have the power to take into custody children whose conduct may, in the officer's judgment, only appear to jeopardize their health or moral welfare.

The Commission does find, however, that the language of the Juvenile Court Act would seem to inhibit the use of ordinary radio patrol cars in the transportation to their homes, or to the approved place of detention, of children in police custody. Juvenile court judges and others are in agreement that this provision was intended to apply to the old-fashioned "black maria" type of police vehicle and that, provided children are not transported simultaneously with adults under arrest, no harm is done in using the modern "prowl" car. The Commission, therefore, is presenting clarifying legislation.

With respect to juvenile detention, the Commission finds an anomalous situation. Since the turn of the century, the detention of minors (persons under 21 years of age) in jails or lockups has been forbidden unless the physical layout of the jail or lockup made impossible contact with adults, aged 21 years and over. The 1929 Juvenile Court Act restates this provision with respect to children under 16, and has been so construed as to prohibit the presence of children under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court (now children under the age of 18 years) in jails, lockups, and police stations.

The Commission believes that some clarification is indicated. It recommends that the provision of the "Standard Juvenile Court Act" approved by the National Probation Association be followed:

A. That the detention of children under age 16 in jails or lockups be prohibited.

B. That adolescent offenders, aged 16 years or more, may be detained in genuinely segregated sections of a jail or lockup approved by the State agency responsible for local jail and lockup inspection.

C. That detention facilities for such children as cannot be released in the custody of their parents be provided:

1. Through the operation by counties of detention institutions, authority for which is contained in existing legislation.

2. By formal standing agreement on the part of counties maintaining such facilities to receive children on a boarding basis from adjacent counties not having such facilities. This also is possible under existing laws.

3. By formal agreement with a child welfare service to accept custody of such children and to care for them in receiving homes pending adjudication of their cases or pending release in the custody of their parents or guardians.

D. That a record of all admissions of children to jails or lockups, under whatever circumstances, be kept and a copy filed with the State Board of Child Welfare.

E. That whenever practicable children should not be kept in official custody while their cases are pending court action but should be released to the custody of their parents or guardians, as is now the declared intent of the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court Act.

STATE LEADERSHIP IN PROBATION

One of the most important services in the prevention and control of juvenile delinquency is probation. At its best, probation service provides machinery through which judges can find out facts about the personality and background of offenders of value in the imposition of the type of sentence most likely to promote correction and reform. Also, at its best, probation service can guide and direct offenders for whom institutional treatment is not indicated in their adjustment to a satisfactory level of social and civic responsibility. In relation to juveniles, the qualified probation officer can be counselor and mentor to both the children in his charge and to their families.

In New Jersey, probation service operates on a county basis, with no State supervisory or standard setting authority to prevent wide variations in the character of service rendered under the general name of probation.

Probation service is an adjunct service to the courts, and judicial control over probation has been jealously guarded. This Commission believes that this relationship should be preserved. However, the inequalities in probation service throughout the State are so great as to call for some measure of standardization.

This Commission, therefore, proposes the enactment of legislation authorizing the Chief Justice of the State to appoint a State Probation Commission to consist of seven members, including one judge serving in the Court of Common Pleas, one judge serving in the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court by direct appointment to that position, one chief probation officer, one criminal district or municipal court judge. The Commissioner of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, and the Superintendent of the Department of State Police and one "at large" member. This Commission should be given authority to set minimum standards for probation service and to oversee the administration of probation to the degree necessary to assure that the appropriate standards are being observed in practice.

Offenses Against Children

The Commission has also received from several sources the comment that legislation dealing with the prosecution of adults charged with violation of the Child Welfare Act is cumbersome and ineffective.

The Commission, therefore, urges that the agencies involved in dealing with these situations suggest legislation which will simplify the adjudication of such cases when indictment and trial by jury is waived by the defendant; supplemented by legislation which will enable juvenile and domestic relations courts to assign custody of neglected children in cases where guardianship is inadequate but where prosecution under the Child Welfare Act appears to be inexpedient.

Reporting of Social Hazards

It is the belief of this Commission that many children can be protected from adverse influences if there is a systematic procedure for the eradication of conditions demonstrated to be harmful to children.

The Commission, therefore, proposes the enactment of legislation requiring judges of courts of general criminal jurisdiction and judges of the juvenile and domestic relations court to report to the appropriate municipal governing body and municipal youth guidance commission whenever conditions in a community are disclosed which have contributed to the delinquency of a minor person or child appearing before the court, on forms to be provided by the State Probation Commission.

Co-ordination of Institutional and Community Programs

The Commission was greatly concerned over the absence of any systematic means for co-ordinating the training and treatment of delinquent children in institutions, with community action to improve the quality of family life in the homes from which delinquents came, or to improve and convert neighborhood conditions which have contributed to the delinquency of children.

The Commission urges that, in communities where municipal youth guidance commissions may be created, co-operative efforts be made on a planned basis so that families of institutionalized delinquents may receive guidance, counsel, and training while the children are away from home.

In this way, the training received by the child in the institution will not be jeopardized by his return to the same unfavorable family setting in which he becomes delinquent. Neither will there be the same necessity permanently to separate children from their parents because the family home is not considered a suitable environment for the child.

No legislation is necessary to implement this proposal. It will, however, be facilitated through the municipal youth guidance commission programs.

The Recommendations Complete a Pattern

The recommendations submitted in the foregoing pages, constitute a definite pattern for the advancement of services for the prevention and control of juvenile delinquency.

At the State level, they call for a bringing together of interested individuals from all walks of life to unify efforts to control delinquency throughout the State. They embody suggestions as to how the resources of the State as a whole can more effectively strengthen the efforts of local schools, welfare facilities, law enforcement, and correctional facilities to control delinquency.

At the community level, they provide an instrument, in the municipal youth guidance commission, to unify county and local programs of youth welfare and to assure alert citizen leadership in the common concerns of governmental and voluntary youth services. They indicate how co-operation among judicial, police, educational, welfare, and recreation services can be systematically organized.

Suggestions for the improvement of school, recreation, and law enforcement services for the protection of children especially exposed to harmful influences are included, as are measures through which the early discovery and diagnosis of potential delinquents can be facilitated.

The Commission also believes that closer co-operation between local, county, and State programs for youth guidance, protection, and correction can be achieved through the implementation of the Commission's recommendations.

Assistance to good parents in becoming better parents, and to train youth to assume the responsibilities of family life, can be promoted under the Commission plan.

The Commission, therefore, commends its program to the consideration of the people of the State and to their elected representatives in the Senate and House of Assembly.

* * *

In conclusion, the Commission wishes to express grateful acknowledgment of the many services rendered to it by its Secretary, Mr. Douglas H. MacNeil, Director of the Division of Community Services for Delinquency Prevention of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies. Mr. MacNeil served the Commission in this capacity without remuneration. The fact that he had also served as Director of Investigations for the previous Juvenile Delinquency Commission gave continuity to the work of these two agencies. His intimate and detailed knowledge of what has been done and what is being done to combat delinquency in New Jersey and elsewhere has greatly facilitated the work of the Commission.

The Commission also desires to accord special recognition to the assistance it received from Mr. Sanford Bates, Commissioner of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, whose records and facilities for the study of delinquency problems were always available to the Commission.

The Commission further desires to express its thanks to Colonel Charles H. Schoeffel, Superintendent of the Department of State Police, to Mr. John Bosshart, Commissioner of the State Department of Education, and to many other officials and citizens who provided assistance and suggestions to the Commission.

Respectfully submitted,

STATEMENT FOR THE COMMITTEE ON INSTITUTIONS AND AGENCIES TO SUBMIT TO THE ASSEMBLY

In pursuance of our duty as members of the Assembly Committee on Institutions and Agencies and accompanied by the Honorable Sanford Bates, Commissioner of Institutions and Agencies, and members of the headquarters staff, we visited several of the institutions under the supervision of that department.

We wished that these visits could have been participated in by every member of the State Legislature and we believe they would have been informed and instructed as to some of the pressing problems of the department as were the members of our committee.

At the outset we wish to record it as our considered opinion that all of these institutions, and especially those which we visited, are suffering from lack of adequate financial support by the State, especially in the way of insufficient personnel, inadequate food appropriations, and lack of appropriations for new buildings and repairs and renovations of existing structures. We bespeak the continued interest of Governor Driscoll and the Department of Administration and Finance, as well as the members of the Legislature, in the prompt and thorough solution of this problem of support of our charitable, health and correctional institutions.

STATE SCHOOL FOR BOYS, JAMESBURG

On Friday, March 14, in company with Commissioner Bates, and Lieutenant Colonel F. Lovell Boxby, Deputy Commissioner in Charge of Correction, we made our first visit to the State Home for Boys on the ample site provided a few miles from Jamesburg in Middlesex County.

There were 467 boys at this school, a small number of whom had been sent by the courts for study and observation, but by far the largest proportion had been committed there by Juvenile Courts. They ranged in age from 8 to 18; the committal age limit being 16, but some of the boys having been held there over that age or had been returned for parole violation.

We arrived in time to witness the noon meal and were impressed by the sustaining and appetizing quality of the food and the eager way in which the boys devoured the meal. We noticed that tablecloths were provided and that the boys sat in groups of six, eight or ten, sorted out according to ages, but we noted no discrimination with reference to color or on any other basis.

The superintendent introduced the members of the Assembly to the boys and we briefly addressed them. We found there was a considerable portion of these youngsters who were members of Boy Scout troops and were engaging in other activities similar in nature to those of normal boys outside. We noted in particular the respectful and well disciplined attitude which they showed in the dining room and their hearty response to questions by the superintendent.

We visited the kitchens, storehouses, dining rooms, the employees' recreation building where lunch was served. We also went on a visit to the Immaculate Hospital and found only four boys out of the whole population resident in that part of the institution. We had an opportunity to talk with the doctor and the nurses, who seemed to be thoroughly competent with their jobs. The absolute cleanliness of the hospital and the attitude of the boys led us to the conclusion that the medical needs of the institution were well cared for.

We visited the school, the vocational shops, talked with the instructors and school teachers and noted particularly the absorption of many of the boys in their tasks.

We went into the typical dormitories and saw the quarters in which the boys live. The plan at this institution is to divide the boys into large families and have living with them in each cottage a man and his wife and an assistant cottage master. The boys have separate dressing rooms, bathrooms, recreation rooms and a living room upstairs, all well kept and with a distinctly home-like atmosphere. The man and his wife in charge of the cottage live in an apartment on the second floor. We were favorably impressed with the character and obvious interestedness of the school teachers, and we felt that the time of the boys was well organized between work, study and play.

The superintendent of the institution, Mr. Frederick A. Fitch, has been at the head of this institution for about ten years, and seems to have a deep and friendly understanding into the problems of the boys and there seemed likewise to be exhibited towards him a sense of appreciation and loyalty.

We were greatly disturbed at the condition of some of the buildings, due to age and deterioration. Particularly we noticed the administration building in which a considerable number of the staff was housed on the second and third floors. This building had the date 1867 on the front and has not even been reconstructed since, except for the rather flimsy brick walls it is entirely of wood and has already begun to sag in a number of places. We believe that the board of managers of this institution were justified in restricting the use of this building for sleeping purposes, and we cannot refrain from urging the appropriation of sufficient money at an early date to replace this antiquated administration building. We understood that this building has been condemned by the Board of Fire Underwriters and that it is to be included in the first list of projects for which funds are to be provided.

MARLBORO STATE HOSPITAL

Following our visit to Jamesburg on March 14, we visited the newest of the three State hospitals at Marlboro, in Monmouth County.

The resident population on the day of our visit was 2,736, with 260 on parole. In addition there was reported to be 31 children who had recently been moved from this institution to the new Child Treatment Center at Allaire.

The superintendent is Dr. J. Berkeley Gordon, who has been in that position since the opening of the institution in 1931. The buildings are handsomely constructed in the Old English fashion and a definite plan of grouping the buildings has lent considerable attractiveness to the appearance of the institution. It is located in the midst of the fertile potato growing area of Monmouth County and maintains a successful farm in connection with the institution.

We visited the various types of groups of patients within the administration building; we saw some of the quieter types of the insane and felt pleased at their reactions to their surroundings and the generally clean aspect of the wards and their freedom from odor of any kind.

From there we moved to one of the more crowded buildings for senile patients, and the scenes which we saw were not such as to make anyone proud of the support which New Jersey is giving to this needy group of people. The Department of Institutions and Agencies a year ago was authorized to utilize its balances to the extent of expending $300,000.00 for a new building for senile patients, the type of patient which is growing in number in recent years at this institution. The lowest bid was $527,282.50, and, therefore, this much needed project has had to be deferred.

We were concerned, also, of the existing shortage in female attendants; due to a concerted drive, the number of male attendants has been increased until this institution is almost up to its quota, but there is still a great need for workers in the female wards.

The distressing sights which we saw in this part of the institution confirm our belief that the State of New Jersey owes a deep debt of gratitude to those men and women who serve in these difficult institutions, and a quick and ready response should be made to the needs of the staff for adequate salaries and decent living conditions.

We were then taken over into the worst group of patients (the female disturbed buildings) and saw many of these unfortunate persons who had to be constantly segregated, and we again realized the great need for larger staffs in order that these places and persons may be given sufficient attention to insure their cleanliness and the cleanliness of the building in which they are residing.

We noted the great need for exercise space for this disturbed group and that a small amount for this purpose had been included in the budget. But there are a great many construction items that have been deferred at this institution that are sorely needed.

We made our way, with some difficulty, to the roof of the men's senile wards where makeshift apartments had been constructed for members of the staff. These rooms are small, located up under the roof where it is cold in winter and hot in summer, and again we are convinced that one of the great needs of this institution was to provide adequate, dignified quarters for the employees.

Due to the efforts of the central office, veterans' housing had been procured through the Emergency Veterans Housing Committee in Washington, and some small suites for staff members were being occupied, and some single-room apartments for staff were nearing completion.

At this institution we met with members of the board of managers, holding their monthly meeting and inspection of the institution, and we were reminded of the unique safeguard which New Jersey places around all its institutions by having at each one of them a board of seven citizens, unpaid, chosen from respected and responsible people in the neighborhood, to serve as a board of managers for the institution.

Some of the outstanding needs of this institution are better staff housing, immediate expansion of the quarters for senile patients, in addition to the tubercular building, and a recreation building for both staff and patients.

REFORMATORY FOR WOMEN, CLINTON

On March 28, the members of the Assembly Committee on Institutions and Agencies, accompanied by Assemblywoman Doremus, of the Appropriations Committee, visited the Women's Reformatory at Clinton.

This is the only women's prison and there are kept there all indeterminate sentences administered by the courts, as well as all State Prison sentences which have heretofore been made to the prison but immediately transferred to the reformatory.

It is an entirely open institution on a rolling tract of land in Hunterdon County, on the cottage plan. There are no fences, no male guards, and no evidence of restraint whatever. The women live in these cottages and have ample hospital and employment facilities. There were 407 women inmates at the time of our visit, and 58 babies.

The committee visited the hospital, the nursery, several of the dormitory buildings, the small segregation unit, the laundry, the administration building, the sewing rooms, and one cottage known as Stowe Cottage, which was the first one built and is now badly overcrowded.

The committee was greatly impressed with the ability of the staff to handle such a large number of women of all types with as little evidence of force and restraint as was apparent. The superintendent of the institution, Edna Mahan, and the excellent staff of women with which she has surrounded herself, made an excellent impression on the members of the committee. There were only eight so-called isolation cells and two close-custody rooms located in the hospital for violent cases. These two latter rooms were not occupied and gave no evidence of having been recently used. The eight separate rooms adjoining one of the dormitories were visited—the doors of all but one of them were open—and it was noted that even these women, placed here for temporary isolation, were permitted to eat in a common dining room adjoining their little isolation wing.

The problem of caring for babies born in the institution, or brought at a tender age, as well as transferred from the State Home for Girls and the Totowa North Jersey Training School, is a considerable one. Apparently the babies are given the best of physical and medical care, and while the mothers are at work they are placed in a nursery and the mothers, so far as possible, are encouraged to accept responsibility for them.

The laundry, while a busy place and none too large, presented as good conditions, or better, than the average commercial laundry. Although some of the committee had had complaints about conditions at the laundry, we were unable to verify them.

The conditions in the sewing room were almost ideal, and the number of women working there on a seven and one-half hour day seemed to be industrious. The shop was well lighted, well ventilated and under good management. Another complaint that the committee had heard was that there was pressure kept upon the inmates to finish a certain amount of work within a given time, but no evidence of this was apparent to the committee.

We were given a chance to visit every part of the institution and to talk with and observe the inmates without interference.

Our visit to Stowe Cottage was the most unsatisfactory experience, due to the obvious overcrowding in that institution. Doubledeck beds had to be used and parts of the institution intended for day-rooms and corridors were also being pressed into service. Here and in one or two of the other cottages evidence of overcrowding was observed.

The needs of this institution are: two new dormitories; a separately constructed hospital. The present hospital is used not only for care of the sick and surgical cases but as a maternity home and a classification center for new admissions. The institution badly needs some new barns, and is also short, to some extent, in staff employees. There is no business manager and there is no psychiatrist. It is hoped that both of these positions will be filled at an early date.

On leaving this remarkable institution, possibly one of the finest in the country, the committee were profuse in their praise of the staff and those who are responsible for its obviously humanitarian policies. We are pleased to have been informed that while it is common for women released on parole from this institution to be taken back for further treatment, that the number of new crimes committed by inmates released from this institution are almost nonexistent, there having been only seven cases returned.

NEW JERSEY REFORMATORY, ANNANDALE

On the way from Clinton to the boys' institution at Annandale, we drove up through the tuberculosis hospital at Glen Gardner and made a quick tour of the grounds. Although we did not stop at any of the buildings, we were very favorably impressed with the beautiful location and the neat appearance of all the buildings and grounds.

At Annandale Farm the State is taking care of about 570 young male offenders between 16 and 26 years of age. This institution, which was opened in 1929 is one of the most up-to-date reformatories in the country. Like Clinton, it has no walls or fences and depends entirely upon its program and morale to keep down the number of runaways.

We made a general tour of the grounds which gave us a fine impression of the farming activities which employ and train a large number of boys in the various forms of agriculture. We were particularly interested in the dairy, which supplies milk to the tuberculosis hospital as well as to the Annandale boys.

Our visit to the shops was particularly interesting. We found a number of boys who were being trained in the printing trade, busily at work on turning out forms and letterheads for various State departments. At the cannery, where the surplus food from the farm is canned for the use of other State institutions during the season, the boys were making baskets as a winter occupation. Other boys were making shirts, pajamas, and other clothing, some were repairing shoes, ten or twelve were reconditioning furniture, and the committee was impressed with the efforts being made to teach useful trades as well as to instill a better standard of conduct.

We visited several of the cottages and found them to be in excellent condition but here, as at Clinton, the signs of overcrowding were evident. The superintendent told us that their normal capacity is 450, and on the day of our visit there were almost 600 boys who had to be accommodated in day-rooms and in the corridors of the cottages. We also found here the same need for additional staff that we found at Clinton.

A well equipped assembly hall and gymnasium is one of the most important assets of the institution. A year-round program of competitive athletics provide one of the most useful forms of character building with boys of the Annandale age group, and the committee was impressed by the fact that the superintendent and staff regard the recreation program as something much more constructive than mere entertainment. An effort is made to get every boy into some form of competitive athletics to teach good sportsmanship and obedience to the rules of the game.

Our tour of Annandale Farm ended at the central kitchen and dining room where the good impression we had already formed was further strengthened.

In the bakery we found boys baking bread and pastry for Annandale and for the Clinton institution, while other boys in the kitchen and in the dining rooms were learning the art of cooking and serving food with a very refreshing enthusiasm.

We hope soon after the Legislature adjourns to visit Greystone Park mental hospital and the North Jersey Training School at Totowa, and possibly other of the State institutions. However, our experience has been sufficient at this time to permit us to say that those in charge of the institutions are doing a splendid piece of work for which the citizens of New Jersey should be grateful.

The committee also feels that it should call forceful attention to the manner in which the best conduct of these institutions is being impeded through lack of funds, both for construction, for housekeeping expenses and for personnel. We repeat that we wish that every member of the Legislature could see for himself, or herself, what this institutional investment of New Jersey is and how important it is in connection with the future welfare of many of our fellow citizens, especially those of tender years. We believe if such could be the case we would not have to urge upon the members of this body a greater concern for the needs of these institutions and their determination to see that they are provided with sufficient funds to carry on their important activities.

Respectfully submitted,

Subject to the insurance laws of this State, such a contract of insurance may be between the insurer and the employer; or may be between the insurer and two or more employers, acting for the purpose through a nominee, designee or trustee; or may be between the insurer and the union or association with which the employer has an agreement with respect thereto. Each such private plan shall be submitted in detail to the commission and shall be approved by it if:

"(a) all of the employees of the employer are entitled to be covered under the provisions of such plan with respect to any disability commencing after the effective date of such plan, except as otherwise provided in this section; and

"(d) no greater amount is required to be paid by employees toward the cost of benefits than that prescribed by this act as the amount of employee contribution to the State disability benefits fund; and

"(e) coverage is continued under the plan while an employee remains a covered individual as defined in section 3

of this act, but not after the employee may become employed by another employer following termination of employment to which the plan relates.

An employee who so elects may later revoke his election, in writing, and such revocation shall become effective at the end of the calendar quarter next succeeding the calendar quarter in which the employer receives such written revocation. An employee who does not elect to be covered under an approved private plan when first eligible may later make such election, in writing, and such election shall become effective at the end of the calendar quarter next succeeding the calendar quarter in which the employer receives such written election if, on that date, the employee is in a class of employees to which such approved private plan then applies.

"From and after the effective date of an approved private plan and during the continuance thereof, the employees who are covered by such plan shall not be liable for the contributions required by this act to be paid into the State disability benefits fund with respect to wages paid by the employer, but they shall pay only in accordance with the terms and provisions of the approved private plan by which they are covered. In such case the employer shall notify the commission of the circumstances. During the continuance of such private plan the employees covered thereunder shall not be liable for any contributions to the State disability benefits fund upon wages paid after December 31, 1947, and such employees shall not be entitled to any benefits under the State plan with respect to any period of disability commencing while they are covered under such private plan. "The commission may after notice and hearing withdraw its approval of any approved private plan if it finds that there is danger that the benefits accrued or to accrue will not be paid, that the security for such payment is insufficient, or for other good cause shown.

"No employer, and no union or association representing employees, shall so administer or apply the provisions of an approved private plan as to derive any profit therefrom. The commission may withdraw its approval from any private plan established by an employer, union or association which violates this provision.

"(b) The commission may after notice and hearing withdraw approval of any private plan if it finds that the approval of such plan has resulted in a substantial and uncompensated selection of risks adverse to the State disability benefits fund; for the purposes of which finding all private plans insured by a single carrier shall be considered together in determining their effect upon the State fund.

"(c) No such termination shall affect the payment of benefits, in accordance with the provisions of the plan, to disabled employees whose period of disability commenced prior to the date of termination. Employees who have ceased to be covered by an approved private plan because of its termination shall, subject to the provisions of sections 7 and 8, become eligible forthwith for benefits from the State disability benefits fund for disability commencing after such cessation, and contributions with respect to their wages shall immediately become payable. Any withdrwal of approval of a private plan pursuant to this section shall be reviewable by writ of certiorari."
