Most states don’t have laws that effectively require flood damages to be disclosed in real estate transactions. Homes that have been flooded in the past are more likely to experience flooding in the future, leaving buyers unaware of increased risks. Less than 4% of homeowners in the United States have flood insurance coverage, so unsuspecting home buyers could likely lack awareness of their increased risk. And those who do buy insurance could face higher-than-anticipated premiums.

This report was commissioned by Natural Resources Defence Council (NRDC).

About the Author(s)

David D. Evans
San Francisco | Tel: 1 415 3943752

Larry Baeder
San Francisco

ABOUT MILLIMAN

For 75 years, we have combined technical expertise with business acumen to create elegant solutions for our clients.

Today, we are helping organizations take on some of the world’s most critical and complex issues, including retirement funding and healthcare financing, risk management and regulatory compliance, data analytics and business transformation.