Trenton, NJ – Lt. Governor Kim Guadagno is encouraging residents and visitors to attend the New Jersey Day Celebration, this Friday, June 24th, at the Department of State, located on the first floor of 225 West State Street, Trenton.

“The Department of State has done a tremendous job preserving the rich history of our state through creating dynamic and educational programs,” Lt. Governor Guadagno said. “The New Jersey Day Celebration will be a continuation of the department’s great work.”

Several cultural agencies within the Department of State have coordinated a series of exhibits and programs to commemorate this anniversary celebration. Exhibitions will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., while opening remarks and programs will begin at 12 p.m.

“New Jersey Day is an annual reminder of the profound contributions the state and its residents have made in every aspect of the American experience,” said Sara Cureton, Director of the New Jersey Historical Commission. “For over 350 years, New Jersey has been at the forefront of promoting liberty, embracing diversity, and spurring innovations that have improved the lives of people around the world. New Jersey Day is all about telling this remarkable story.”
